THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 30

OREGON, ILLINOIS, OCTOBER 1, 1940

NUMBER 1

THIRTY YEARS AGO AT WATERLOO, IOWA

August 30, 1910

Inasmuch as The Restitution Herald today begins its thirtieth volume and its thirtieth year as a faithful minister to the brotherhood at large, it is particularly interesting to glance backward thirty years to the Iowa Conference to recall the names of a goodly number of our ministers then active throughout our national field.

We are grateful to Brother O. J. Allard, 2203 Washington Street, Cedar Falls, Iowa, for the picture here reproduced. According to our best knowledge, only eight of these ministers are living—those whose names are followed with a check (*) in the following list: (standing, left to right) Peter Jeffries, Illinois; G. E. Marsh*, Iowa; J. W. Williams*, Indiana; John Williams, Missouri; James A. Patrick*, Minnesota; L. E. Conner*, Ohio; O. J. Allard*, Iowa; R. G. Huggins*, Ohio; W. L. Crowe, Iowa; M. D. Newell*, Nebraska; A. R. Underwood, Indiana; John Garton, Iowa; (seated, left to right) J. B. Morse, Missouri; A. J. Eychaner, Iowa; J. H. Willey, Indiana; Mrs. N. D. Titchenal and Mr. N. D. Titchenal*, Washington; Almus Adams, Nebraska; and D. C. Robison, Ohio.

There are today better facilities for proclaiming the gospel than there were thirty years ago, yet the message is dormant. Oh, God, raise up ministers today!

“Ye Should Follow His Steps”

Quoth he: “Will you kindly, through your paper, The Restitution Herald, tell me where in the Holy Word you find a word against card-playing, smoking, or dancing?”

Let us make a longer list! Where in the Holy Word, for instance, can be found a word against throwing carpet tacks in the highway, fishing a little while after having caught one’s limit, snoring in accompaniment to the sermon, slamming the door when the wife Jezebels, or hiding grandma’s teeth at 11:00 a.m., Thanksgiving Day?

The Apostle Paul said, “All things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient: all things are lawful for me, but all things edify not” (1 Cor. 10:23), and “All things are lawful for me, but I will not be brought under the power of any. Meats for the belly, and the belly for meats: but God shall destroy both it and them” (1 Cor. 6:12, 13).

In reference to card-playing, smoking, and dancing, the Bible at least suggests words of warning:

CARD-PLAYING. Shuffling Pur (Esther 3:7) was “the pleasures of sin for a season” to Haman, but his best cards were finally trumped. His two best “tricks” were to lead the horse upon which rode Mordecai and to hang upon the gallows, fifty cubits high, which he had erected for the Jew.

SMOKING. “Tail to tail,” with “a firebrand in the midst between two tails,” three hundred foxes once smoked Samson’s brand in the Philistines’ corn. It probably made the foxes short of breath, and the corn was destroyed by fire. Only Samson, the manufacturer, enjoyed any profit. In these modern days, of course, an insurance policy might save the loss and salve the pain.

DANCING. There is warning, too, against dancing—beautiful and health-building dancing:

No greater man of woman born,
 No brighter dress by dancer worn,
 No shame or penance from the King,
 No head on John!—Lust’s fatal sting!

Did Jesus waste any time with either dice or cards?
 Did Jesus puff and spit and chew—skillfully, of course, for “He hath done all things well”? Did any disciple of Jesus—either in public pavilion or private porch—ever hug and waltz the woman which God betrothed and wedded to another man?

Yes, the Word of God has a word or two to say of “any thing whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak” (Rom. 14:21), and the casual drink of wine is definitely mentioned in this verse. Paul plainly charged those who would be Christian: “Abstain from all appearance of evil” (1 Thess. 5:22). Peter plainly charged: “Abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul” (1 Peter 2:11), he spoke of Jesus as being our Example, and said, “Ye should follow his steps” (2:21).

Instructors and Students Are Thankful

The instructors of the Bible Training School, Brother L. E. Conner, Sister Leila Mae Doeden, and the writer are glad to report, by the goodness of the Lord, that all the students are working with interest and zeal. Brother Alan McLain, little supposing his words would be quoted, today said, “I have surely received many blessings since coming to the Bible Training School.” This appreciative spirit is felt throughout the School.

Bound Volumes

Few of our readers know the pleasure of having bound volumes of The Restitution Herald. We can supply a limited number of bound volumes of No. 29, just completed, for $3.50. Furthermore, we should be glad to receive orders for bound volumes of No. 30 which begins with this issue, that the required copies might be reserved until the volume is completed. Also, for $2.00, we shall gladly bind your own copies into one volume, in case you may have saved all the numbers for any given volume. Mail them to us.

Heart of the Gospel

By Arlen Marsh

NO OTHER single act of Christianity so clearly points to belief in the natural mortality of man and the necessity for a resurrection from the dead as baptism.

There is, indeed, no reason for the rite unless one does accept the view, Biblically expressed, that man is mortal and that his only hope for eternal life of any kind and under any circumstances rests in a bodily resurrection. Paul, in Romans 6, declared bluntly that those who "were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death" and that "we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead . . . even so we also should walk in newness of life."

It may be argued, of course, that "baptism into death" refers, as far as we are concerned, to a sloughing off of sin and a resurrection to a life of righteousness. But it cannot be argued that this was the implication in the case of Jesus Himself. Jesus committed no sin; He had no need to be resurrected to a life of righteousness. The death which took Him was as literal as the death which takes any animal—and the only means by which the Christ could reobtain life was a resurrection.

So baptism necessitates, if we are to accept the Apostle's teaching, that we believe in the literal death of Jesus, that we believe that literal death is possible.

With this necessity goes another: that we accept Paul's statement in 1 Corinthians 15 that unless there is a resurrection from the dead, and unless the Christ was resurrected from the dead, there is no purpose in Christianity and no hope for immortality for men. This second requirement follows logically upon the first; indeed, it may safely be said to be an integral part of the first, inasmuch as it would be absurd to believe that Jesus, the Son of God, could die and that ordinary, human men could not die.

As a matter of fact, these two necessities lead back to the definite institution of baptism as an invariable requirement for membership in the Christian church. In the Great Commission, Jesus observed that "he that believeth not shall be damned," that only those who believe and are baptized "shall be saved" (Mark 16:15, 16). In short, Jesus taught that belief and baptism go together, that one without the other is meaningless. Philip emphasized this when he told the Ethiopian eunuch (Acts 8) that if the eunuch believed he might be baptized.

(It is because of this requirement that belief and baptism accompany each other that infant baptism is at once unscriptural and ineffective. Certainly, the infant has no power to believe, no power to repent, no real reason to do either; yet until repentance, induced by belief, occurs, baptism has no significance.)

Now just what is salvation? If baptism is a road to it, we must confess that it would be more than a little strange to engage in the rite without learning first—not afterward, but first—precisely where the road is leading. If men have salvation already, there obviously is no cause for undertaking baptism; if, on the other hand, salvation as represented by baptism is undesirable, there still is no cause for undertaking it.

Jesus Himself held His mission to be that of seeking and saving that which was lost (Luke 19:10). Lost from what? The Nazarene gave the answer in John 10:10: "The thief cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."

Jesus did not regard the more abundant life in the same light in which it is regarded by New Dealers, liberal Republicans, California ham-and-egggers, and Townsendites. Jesus regarded life as the essence of existence, and not as a method of conducting that essence. So when Jesus declared His purpose to be that of giving men life "more abundantly," He implied, first, that they did not have life so abundantly as they might have it and, second, that the only way by which they could secure life more abundantly was belief in and action upon His teachings.

Men were lost from life, the more abundant life which Jesus came into the world to give them. Belief and baptism, combined into a faith that worked, were the only path to securing that more abundant life—or, in brief, a life without end, without sorrow, without trouble. If men already possessed life as abundantly as they could have it—and certainly no one, even God, could improve upon immortality!—the entire purpose of Jesus' mission was destroyed; His own death, burial, and resurrection were meaningless—and baptism into them became one of the emptiest ceremonies since Israelitish sacrifice of children on the brazen arms of Moloch.

Here, then, is another of the "essential truths," the prerequisites for baptism: that man is mortal, a single entity, dying because of his own sins (Rom. 6:23); and that the only hope man has for eternal life on any basis whatsoever lies in a resurrection of the body. The wages of sin are death; but the gift of God is eternal life—and why should any man be baptized to express faith in a gift which no man needs and which no man can receive because it already belongs to him and cannot be increased?

The Seed of the Serpent

Part Two

By S. G. Elton

THERE is sufficient evidence in the Scriptures to show that the first Adam was the progenitor of an animal progeny, for Jesus Himself said: "That which is born of the flesh (animal seed) is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit" (John 3:6). Jesus had just said to Nicodemus, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." Nicodemus asked, "How can a man be born when he is old?" and Jesus answered, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God" (John 3:3-5). When God created the woman in the Garden of Eden, only bone and flesh (without blood) were obtained from the side of the man for the purpose of creating a woman worthy to be the mother of a Son of God. Nevertheless, she was not immune to the beguiling voice of her Lord, and soon conformed her mind to his desire. The woman, having submitted her mind to the will of the Serpent, became his bond servant for as long as he might live. The seed of the Serpent and the seed of the woman are represented in their offspring as flesh and blood. The body represented the woman's seed, and the blood, with the life therein, represented the Serpent's seed, of which Paul declares: "This I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption" (1 Cor. 15:50). It is very evident that the seed of the Serpent is the corrupting factor in the life history of the natural man, and Jesus has said very emphatically: "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God" (John 3:3). It must be a birth of water and Spirit to qualify one to behold the Kingdom of God.

We know much about the physical animal birth, but the spiritual birth is a mystery to many people. We do know that the animal body is begotten by the animal seed; likewise, the spiritual body is begotten by a spiritual seed: "being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible (seed), by the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever," and "the word of the Lord endureth for ever" (1 Peter 1:23, 25). "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead" (1 Peter 1:3).

The corruptible seed emanated from the loins of Adam, the one man by whom sin entered into the world (Gen.

4:1-8; 1 John 3:12). It is sown in a field prepared for the good seed: "The field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are the children of the wicked one; the enemy that sowed them is the devil" (Matt. 13:38, 39).

The Abrahamic Promises

Because of the mortal defect in the person of Adam, he was rejected as the progenitor of a holy nation. Therefore, God turned from Adam and called Abram out of Ur of the Chaldees, saying unto him: "Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will shew thee: and I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing: and I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed" (Gen. 12:1-3). "I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth: so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered" (Gen. 13:16).

"Abram said, Behold, to me thou hast given no seed: and, lo, one born in my house is mine heir. And, behold, the word of the Lord came unto him, saying, This shall not be thine heir; but he that shall come forth out of thine own bowels shall be thine heir" (Gen. 15:3, 4). God also said, "Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son indeed; and thou shalt call his name Isaac: and I will establish my covenant with him for an everlasting covenant, and with his seed after him" (17:19).

"The angel of the Lord called unto Abraham out of heaven the second time, and said, By myself have I sworn, saith the Lord, for because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son: that in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice" (22:15-18). The Apostle Paul explained, "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ" (Gal. 3:16):

It has been stated in this article that the fruit produced from the seed of the Serpent and the seed of the woman is a flesh and blood creature. The flesh represented the body, and the blood represented the life force that vivifies the body, and makes it perform the will of the carnal mind. That is, the body is the servant of the animal life.

Paul wrote, "Even so we, when we were children, were in bondage under the elements of the world: but when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under (Please turn to page 11)

Work Now!

THE world is rapidly taking on new colors—colors that were predicted by inspired prophet in the long ago. These predicted colors that are making distinct appearances are: red, black, and pale. These colors and their meanings are detailed in Revelation 6:1-6. In this word picture, war, famine, pestilence, and death are portrayed. Other Bible pictures which harmonize in this world color scheme are apostasy in the church and persecution of the worshipers of God. These last two end-time developments are what we desire to call attention to in this article.

Apostasy

On nearly every hand the appearance of apostasy is to be seen. For example, the daily press recently carried an article in which it was stated that only five per cent of the people of London were regular attendants of church, and twenty per cent of the population attended occasionally. If this report is accurate, it means that eighty per cent of the population are non-churchgoers. This condition is not an isolated case. It can be multiplied by the number of cities and towns throughout the world. Old London is a typical city!

The alarming thing about the pagan condition of the world is that the church is not in the least disturbed over the "falling away." Christ's searching question, "Will ye also go away?" has no particular present-day meaning. The prolific "lusts of the flesh" have become so abundant that conscience is practically smothered out. "Seared consciences" are not being pricked by the terrors of the Antichrist or moved by the nearness of Armageddon. If a person hasn't any wrought-up spiritual feelings over these days, and if not moved to more enthusiastic and faithful service to Christ and His church, then a thorough overhauling of the spiritual machine is needed!

Religious Freedom

Another country has placed a ban on the freedom of worship. Antonescu, Iron Guard Premier of Rumania, has issued a proclamation curtailing worship by Jews, except in towns and cities where there are two hundred or more Jewish families, and then a special permit must be secured. Adventist and Baptists are outlawed and considered as having no religion. The majority of the people of the world is having religion rationed to it. The tidbits which people get are rationed to them by political demagogues, who give out that which will further their particular "ism."

We still have the right of free worship, but have no positive assurance that this freedom will be preserved to us for all time. If we fail to use this freedom now, there will be no moral grounds of complaint if it is lost in the future. All who are familiar with the Word know that the day is coming when all living on the earth will be compelled to worship the Beast or be slain (Rev. 13). People then will begin to value the freedom of worship—not that they will have it, but because they desire it and are unable to attain it. As free people, with desire for the things of God, full advantage (full advantage) should be made of our access to the grace of God. If we do not choose to come willingly and regularly unto the throne of mercy in this time of unrestricted opportunity, then the alternate course will be opened to us. This course will be the hasty and fruitless search for the "way of life" and the "word of God"; but alas, search will be made in vain. "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord God, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the word of the Lord; and they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east, they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the Lord, and shall not find it" (Amos 8:11, 12).

To our readers, we urge each one to take stock of the times and his or her service to God and His church. If you find you are not using every ounce of energy and each facility at your command to further promote the cause of truth and righteousness, we prayerfully urge you in the name of Jesus and for your own interest and security to find your place in the ranks of the church and move forward unto the day of redemption now drawing very near. Don't allow anyone, petty or material matters, to hinder you in the immediate discharge of your whole duty. It will be you, and you alone, who must carry re-duty. It will be you alone who must carry responsibility for neglect of duty in the day of judgment. Work now!

How Do You Treat Yourself?

By Mary Richardson

"WHAT a peculiar question!" you say. But have you ever thought seriously about this matter? Probably you observe how the other person is treated, or you may worry about how other people treat you. It would be profitable if one spent a little time, now and then, checking up to see if he were treating himself honestly and justly.

How do you treat your body? Are you intemperate in your eating? Sometimes persons eat too much, and the consequences are not so pleasant. Drinking is another habit that some acquire, and it is very detrimental to the body. The effect of alcohol is so deceitful and insidious that, before one is aware of it, the will power is weakened and he becomes the victim of appetite. The wise man, Solomon, said that "wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging: and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise" (Prov. 20:1). There is probably no greater self-deception than that resulting from the use of strong drink. Our physical bodies are the temples of the Holy Spirit. These temples must be clean. This necessitates temperance in all things, both thought and act. It is a recognized fact that one can do much more if his health is good. Therefore, with strong bodies we can do much more for the Lord, even though many who are handicapped by poor health may be striving to serve the Lord. The person who is a victim of drink does not have good reasoning; he is more reckless, more abrupt, and doesn't give enough thought to his manners, dress, and reputation. Some have the mistaken idea that drink makes them stronger, braver, better, and more competent physically and mentally. Alcohol is evil; it creates evil, destroys peace, happiness, homes, and lives. A drunken person has no respect for himself or anyone else. He often stoops to the vilest of acts. Paul says, "It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor any thing whereby thy brother stumbleth" (Rom. 14:21). Our influence is always felt by others. Moreover, it should be a good influence, for we never know how far it will go. We need to be clean and temperate for the sake of others, if not for self.

How do you treat your mind? Some people choose to read only the cheap, trashy magazines which frequently have a bad influence on individuals' lives. Then, there are persons who exercise care in choosing reading material which causes concentration and develops a disciplined mind. The Bible furnishes excellent reading material; it supplies an element that all the books in the world cannot supply. Some individuals cannot carry on a conversation without cursing, using cheap, filthy sayings or a slangy vocabulary. Slang is characteristic of an ill-bred person who never gives thought to his language. Such a person can never achieve much success, if any, for "as he thinketh in his heart, so is he" (Prov. 23:7). If our thoughts are evil, our lives will be governed accordingly.

On the other hand, if our thoughts are pure and clean, others will take notice of the beautiful lives we live. Our influence will be greatly felt, and it may even serve to bring others to Christ. What is the promise to the "pure in heart"? (See Matt. 5:8.) "Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth." Our thoughts should ever be to glorify God in our every deed and act. We should not let our minds be cluttered with evil thoughts, for then we can never be happy. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh" (Matt. 12:34).

A person is judged by his speech. One never hears a Christian using vulgar or profane language. Such things are not in a good man's heart; therefore, it does not come forth in his conversation. To be pure-minded and pleasing to the Father, one must avoid all evil and corrupt communications, and use language becoming to the Christian. True, honest, just, pure, lovely things, and things of good report (Phil. 4:8) afford us a sufficiently wide circle of thought so that all evil thoughts, thoughts contrary to this Scriptural list, may be banished. If there are peace, love, longsuffering, gentleness, faith, meekness, and temperance in our thoughts, our actions will correspond (Gal. 5:19-26). Words reveal thoughts. They are the outward signs of what we are thinking. Our behavior is the result of our thoughts. If our thoughts are Christ-like, our words and actions will correspond. Our prayer should be: "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my redeemer" (Psalm 19:14). Christ's words are a perfect pattern for us. They were the words of His Father (John 3:34; 14:10); they were words of power for good (Luke 4:32); they were words of truth (Matt. 7:28, 29; John 17:17).

How do you treat the spiritual side of your life? Do you attend church with the thought that it is beneficial to you? Paul said, "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is" (Heb. 10:25). Some people are neglecting to supply this spiritual food to their bodies. When you go to church, do you have a sense of reverence? The atmosphere of a church should be one of quiet, peace, and reverence; but during many sermons there are a few people who insist on whispering. How can they gain any good from the sermon? How much of a sermon do you remember after reaching home? Do you take time out to meditate upon some excellent points in the sermon? It may be the purpose of some who attend church to see the latest in wearing apparel, or to hear the latest gossip. When we go to church, we should shut out all else and concentrate on the lesson or sermon, that we may gain something to help us be better Christian men and women.

How many of us take time to pray—really pray, not merely repeat prayers? One of the greatest privileges the Christian enjoys is that of prayer. There are some people who profess to be Christians, but who in reality neglect this sacred part of their lives. If only they could realize the beauty, the feeling of contentment, and the blessings that come from God through the medium of prayer! Prayer puts the Christian in harmony with God. If he is in harmony with God, his will becomes more and more in accord with the will of God. If a person is in harmony with God, he does not have worldly ambitions, but his thoughts run in channels of Christian duty. Happy is the Christian who puts his trust in God and goes to Him daily in prayer.

How did you score after checking up to see if you were treating yourself wisely and justly?

Have You Heard?

By D. G. Harvey

"Have ye not known? have ye not heard? hath it not been told you from the beginning? have ye not understood from the foundations of the earth?"

ISAIAH, in the words of our text, seems to express wonder by his questions. It was hard for him to understand how Israel could be so blind. We of the Church of God often wonder at the millions who seem to be blind to the teaching of the Word of God. Can it be, we ask ourselves, that they have not heard?

You have heard that God created the heavens and the earth, but have you heard that God had a purpose in that creation? A popular theory is that God has created this earth and then man, because of sin, is to be removed—let us say—to bliss or blister, then the earth destroyed. Is such a theory within the bounds of reason?

Why would an all-wise Creator make such a mistake? Would God have created the earth, knowing it was of no use? Would he not have placed man in the proper place in the beginning? Let us consider just what this would mean. First, it would show the all-powerful God to be weak; and, second, the earth would not be eternally inhabited. In fact, it would not even exist. Yet, we read in Ecclesiastes 1:4: "One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh: but the earth abideth forever." In Isaiah 45:18 we read: "Thus saith the Lord that created the heavens; God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited: I am the Lord; and there is none else."

These words are the words of God; I can quote no higher authority. If God, the Creator of the earth, has planned it to be inhabited and to abide forever, no other view could be reasonable. Peter tells us to "be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you" (1 Peter 3:15).

Since it is God's plan that the earth abide forever and be inhabited, and considering that Jesus, God's Son, has said that the meek "shall inherit the earth" (Matt. 5:5), my hope is that my future life will be upon this earth.

"Has God a plan?" some may ask. We believe He has, for God "formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul" (Gen. 2:7). After man's failure, God sentenced him not to torture, but to death. "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return" (Gen. 3:19). At that point man had no hope of future life. But God had made a promise that the seed of the woman should bruise the Serpent's head (Gen. 3:15). That promise was renewed as the Seed of Abraham, and identified as Christ in Galatians 3:8, 16: "The scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed. . . . Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ."

Yes, God had planned in the beginning that His begotten Son Jesus would buy, or redeem, the children of His created son Adam. "Ye are bought with a price" (1

WHEN Balaam prophesied, "I shall see him, but not now: I shall behold him, but not nigh: there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel," he most assuredly foresaw Jesus who said, "I am the root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning STAR" (Rev. 22:16). Well did Peter say, "We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day STAR arise" (2 Peter 1:19).

"The Sun of Righteousness"

Isaiah prophesied of Christ's birth and Kingdom, saying: "The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light: they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined. . . . The government shall be upon his shoulder. . . . Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever" (Isa. 9:2, 6, 7).

Though Malachi's prophecy, "The Sun of righteousness (shall) arise with healing in his wings" refers to Christ's work in the great "day of the Lord," Israel's Sun shone for a short while during the ministry of Jesus—this being a type and pledge of the better and eternal day. Luke recorded that Jesus "went throughout every city and village, preaching and shewing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God: (when) the twelve were with him" (8:1).

What darkness and despair are now in the world! What need is there today "in the land of the shadow of death" for the "Great Light" to shine forth in all His glory!

How did Jesus show the "glad tidings of the kingdom of God"? Matthew reported: "Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people. . . . They brought unto him all sick people . . . and he healed them" (Matt. 4:23, 24).

We know, moreover, that the Light penetrated throughout Palestine. "There followed him great multitudes of people from Galilee, and from Decapolis, and from Jerusalem, and from Judaea, and from beyond Jordan" (v. 25). In all this work wherein Jesus blessed the sick and lowly—the common people hearing Him gladly—He well typified the work of the coming Kingdom. Jesus showed the Kingdom in miniature.

Jesus prophesied, however, "The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force" (Matt. 11:12). "The kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together against the Lord, and against his Christ. For of a truth against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together" (Acts 4:26, 27). What a cloud were the sins of the carnal Israelites—blotting the "Great Light" that blessed the people!

"His Visage Was So Marred"

The Israelites as a nation were very concerned about the restoration of the Kingdom. In this they were not so much at fault as is so commonly taught, for they well understood and believed the prophecies concerning the Kingdom. They miserably failed, however, in correctly interpreting the prophecies of the Lamb to be slain for their sins.

The prophecy which said, "Behold, my servant shall deal prudently, he shall be exalted and extolled, and be very high" also said, "Many were astonished at thee; his visage was so marred more than any man, and his form more than the sons of men" (Isa. 52:13, 14). That Isaiah foresaw the rejection of Jesus is further indicated in His cry, "Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?" (53:1). The Jews had been quick to study such writings as the Seventy-second Psalm, but they must never have read: "He hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him. He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised, and we esteemed him not. Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities . . . with his stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all. He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth: he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth" (Isa. 53:2-7).

What a spectacle!—He who had so graciously befriended the lost sheep of Israel was now the Lamb trampled to death by His own flock! Herein is seen the carnality of flesh! Herein is seen the price of redemption! "Ye were not redeemed," says Peter, "with corruptible things as silver and gold . . . but with the precious blood of Christ as of a Lamb without blemish and without spot"—the Lamb whose "visage was so marred more than any man."

"Thy Kingdom Come"

It is peculiarly interesting to notice that when the disciples asked Jesus how to pray, He taught them not a word about praying for miraculous healing of the sick, but He did teach them, among other things, to pray: "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven" (Matt. 6:10).

Throughout the ministry of Jesus, the Jews desired to see Jesus reestablish the Davidic rule. Sensing, however, that He "must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day," Jesus repeatedly taught that the Kingdom could not immediately appear. We read, for instance, "Because he was nigh to Jerusalem, and because they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear," He said concerning Himself: "A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return" (Luke 19: 11, 12). Until the Savior returns, there can be no Kingdom of God upon the earth, and until the Savior returns, every servant is charged: "Occupy till I come."

In John 14:3, Jesus plainly promised, "I will come again," and His last message to the church was, "Surely I come quickly"—to which the aching heart of John responded, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus" (Rev. 22:20).

"Keep Your Lamp Trimmed and Burning"

Christ's consecration and steadfastness were reflected in the lives of His apostles. They, too, pressed faithfully forward with the cross. The church grew rapidly. From "about an hundred and twenty" members dwelling in Jerusalem after the Ascension (Acts 1:15), "there were added unto them about three thousand souls" on the Day of Pentecost (2:41), a few days later "the number of the men was about five thousand" (4:4), and in Acts 5:14 we read that "believers were . . . added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women."

Today, the church is little persecuted and little blessed. Because of long waiting for the King's return, many disciples have lost their zeal. "The night is far spent, the day is at hand" (Rom. 13:12). While many sleep, let every wise "virgin" trim and fill the gospel lamp, and keep it burning brightly until Jesus comes. Let every true Christian radiate the "Light" that inspired Stephen!

one should, first of all, be happy when he has gained people's confidence and trust, when he has accomplished the task of helping people walk by faith, and when the members take active parts in the church.

The students had their first business meeting under the guidance of the dean and matron, Monday evening, September 23. A Student Senate was formed and the officers chosen were: Terry Ferrell, Richard Smith, and Alan McLain. The writer was appointed as School reporter.

Tuesday morning the students and faculty were favored by an address by Bro. G. E. Marsh, formerly of Grand Rapids, Mich., en route to California where he has accepted a pastorate in one of our churches.

The principal text used was taken from 1 Timothy 4:11, 12. He told the students that when a people are at peace and tranquility with universal activity, it is very easy to enlarge memberships of churches, to strengthen Christianity, to keep people in a worshipful attitude. But at times such as we are experiencing today, with wholesale slaughter such as we find in Europe and Asia; with rivers of blood running to the sea, when there is famine, depressions, and pestilences such as we find all over the world; it is hard to get people to turn to God and put faith in the true teachings of the Bible. Yet, now is the time when teachers and ministers of the gospel are needed. We have the greatest opportunity afforded us for which any student could wish.

In reading from the Text, he simplified and elaborated on thoughts contained therein. "Let no man undervalue or debase you." He planted the idea in us that we should always look for the good qualities in an individual, primarily, those characteristics which make up godliness and those qualities which show forth Christ.

We should be examples to those about us. The way in which we impress people will win more for Christ than all the sermons we can ever deliver from the pulpit. Bro Marsh stated that we should watch our language, those unmeaningful words that would prevent purity of thought and purpose. We are judged by people, according to what we know.

Continuing, he said, we all must have entertainment, but select the kind which will be helpful; that which will be "true, noble, or good in our lives." That which would foster constructive thinking and acting. In word, he explained, does not just mean in slang usage, but in all speaking, as Spurgeon once said, "Stories that I heard in my youth come to my mind even at the sacred desk." "Never plant any word in anyone that you would not want perpetuated, something to grow, and fester, and pain in somebody's heart and mind and spirit."

Christ was a reflection of God. Christ brought God down to a human level. He made us to see God in His glory, in His magnificence, and in His infinite mercy and kindness. Likewise, we should remember to be kind, gentle, and above all to be pure.

Bro. Marsh, in conclusion, encouraged the students in their chosen profession. He said he was glad he chose the ministry, rather than any other vocation in the world—president of the United States, a great scientist (although he added that he was much interested in science). He also stated that he enjoyed music, loved beautiful singing, but he would not give up his position to become the world's first tenor, the world's greatest legislator, or the wisest judge that ever lived, other than Christ. The physician of medicine heals the ills of man for a few years, but we, as spokesmen for Christ, administer those truths unto people that will cure them for eternity.

My only comment on the lecture is: I'm sorry space would not permit many other fine thoughts of his.

SWANSON - ANLIKER

At a simple but impressive ceremony at the country home of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Swanson of near Sae City, Iowa, at 3:00 o'clock, Sunday afternoon, September 22, Miss M. Elaine Swanson became the bride of Mr. Arnold J. Anliker, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Anliker of Primghar, Iowa.

The bridal couple left on a honeymoon trip through the Ozark Mountains and other points in the South. About October 1 they will return to a new home which Mr. Anliker has just completed for his bride in Primghar.

The bride is a member of the Church of God, and a graduate of the Sutherland High School class of 1937. She was employed for nearly two years in the office of the Sutherland Creamery and last year was a student in the home economics department at Iowa State College at Ames. The groom, following his high school graduation in 1935, took a business training course at AIB in Des Moines, and is a member of the Phi Theta Pi fraternity. He is a prominent young business man, and for the past four years has been in partnership with his father in the grocery business in Primghar.

HILLISBURG, INDIANA

The Hillisburg Church of God closed a successful meeting with the Sunday evening service, Sunday, September 22. Bro. J. H. Anderson began the meetings preceding the homecoming day, and held two services on homecoming day. Bro. William Huffer spoke to the homecoming congregation in the afternoon of September 15. Then Bro. C. E. Lapp of Illinois conducted meetings every evening during the week of September 16-22. His meetings were well attended and his messages very much appreciated. Bro. Lapp was a welcome speaker at the Seireville High School on Friday, September 20.

HAVE YOU HEARD?

Cor. 6:20). That price was the life of Jesus upon the cross. He arose the third day and after forty days with His disciples ascended to His Father—but He will come again.

Jesus said, "I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also" (John 14:3). We have, too, the statement of angels as recorded in Acts 1:11: "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

The Church of God has a great work during Christ's absence, for He said, "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations" (Matt. 24:14). What kingdom? The Kingdom Jesus will establish on the earth with His church as co-rulers over the nations. "Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth" (Rev. 5:9, 10). "All nations shall come and worship before thee" (Rev. 15:4). "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever" (Rev. 11: 15).

Have you heard this good news? Is there reason to doubt God's Word? When He said that the earth was formed to be inhabited, He had a perfect plan. If you have heard and understand, why fail to obey? If you obey in baptism, you become by adoption an heir of Abraham (Gal. 3:27-29). If faithful, you, too, will have a part in this Kingdom of God. That is our hope; let us carry this good news to others who have no hope.

the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons" (Gal. 4:3-6).

When the Lord presented to the man in the Garden of Eden, the woman that was made from the rib taken from the man, Adam said: "This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of Man. Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh" (Gen. 2:23, 24). This is the law that bound the husband and wife together as one.

Sin denotes animal life in mortal man: and sinners are the servants of sin, who receive death as wages for their service. Paul exhorts: "Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof. Neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin: but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God. For sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace" (Rom. 6:12-14).

BUILDING YOUR LIBRARY

Book Reviews

By Arlen Marsh

Whoever conceived of the John A. Dickson Publishing Company's New Analytical Bible has given the Bible student a debt which never can be repaid.

The New Analytical presents both the King James and the American Standard Versions, through the use of footnotes, parenthetical remarks, and bracketed fill-ins. It presents a thorough concordance. It carries an excellent, carefully indexed Bible atlas. It outlines every book of the Bible. It has a superb system of cross-references better than anything yet produced for other Bibles. Graphs, charts, and diagrams help in analyzing the composition and significance of all the Bible books. A subject index, combined with a brief, but effective, Bible dictionary, covers the first 220 pages of the book. Type is large, self-pronouncing, unusually readable. All told, the New Analytical is considerably more help than most Bible encyclopedias that have been much more widely advertised.

Several editions are available, ranging in price from $7.50 to $19.50, and in binding from divinity circuit artificial leather to tan library buckram.

Primarily, Warren Choate Shaw's The Art of Debate would be valuable for the public speaker. But it also has its values for anyone who wants to teach or write or simply study.

As a textbook for university classes in debating, the volume has proved itself in all the forty-eight States. It presents the clearest system for analyzing arguments, for preparing logical and well-organized speeches and sermons, for finding the flaws in any type of logic, that has, as far as we know, been evolved. Certainly, as a guide for preparing sermons and articles, The Art of Debate is infinitely superior to any book we've seen on sermonizing and feature writing.

Stories Told by Luke

Before we begin our lesson in Luke for the beginning of this new quarter, let us learn something about him.

Luke was a Gentile. He is the only Gentile to write a book in the Bible, unless Job was a Gentile.

Luke was a physician. He went with Paul on some of his missionary trips. He saw the human and heart-stirring side of the stories he wrote. His is the Gospel of love, hope, pity, and faith.

Luke tells us how he came to write his Gospel. He did his work in an orderly way, for he traced the stories back to their beginning; then he wrote the book to a man of high rank in the Christian church. We read that Luke was born and lived in Antioch in Syria, where the disciples were first called Christians. Luke also wrote the Book of Acts.

Here are a few more of Luke's ideas:

The Language God Understands

"Luke's urge to present Christ as the Christ of all peoples, the Savior alike of the rich Zacchaeus and the thief on the cross, comes home to us in the fact that as we preach Jesus . . . they at once understand Him as being of their race and tongue."—Hig. Com.

Let us each study harder this quarter. Why not learn the golden text at the top of the page?

We Endeavor

To endeavor means to try. Here you need your Bibles to look up the complete verses. Read, then say the thought in your own words:

1. "Abhor that which is evil" (Rom. 12:9).

2. "Abstain from all appearance of evil" (1 Thess. 5:22).

3. Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved" (Acts 16:31).

4. "Bless the Lord, O my soul" (Psalm 103:2).

5. "In every thing give thanks" (1 Thess. 5:18).

6. "O clap your hands, all ye people" (Psalm 47:1).

7. "Pray without ceasing" (1 Thess. 5:17).

8. "Repent, and be baptized every one of you" (Acts 2:38).

It Takes Two to Quarrel

Two boys who lived near each other were such good friends that they never quarreled. The other boys tried to persuade them to do so.

"But we cannot," they replied, "we do not know how."

"Very well," said one boy, "we will show you how. I'll lay this stone here between you, and you (turning to one boy) must say that it is yours. Then you (turning to the other) will declare it is yours. Now begin!"

"This is my stone," said the first boy.

"No, it is mine," said the other mildly.

"Very well," replied the first boy, "you may have it."

It always takes two to make a quarrel.—Selected.

How to Give

"Give pennies, if pennies are all you have;

Give dimes, if dimes you possess;

But if you have dollars, give dollars, my child,

And your gift the dear Lord will bless.

"But if you have dollars, and give only dimes,

Or pennies, as some people do,

You cannot expect the blessings

The Lord has in store for you."

Cooperate for Building

* * *

By Arlen Marsh, Los Angeles, Calif.

Jesus, throughout the period of His ministry, laid stress on the need for watchfulness, for being prepared for His return, for keeping others prepared for His return.

Bereans took their name from ancient Berea, whose citizens "received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so" (Acts 17:11).

These two obvious facts may be very simply combined. The combination represents the hope that the National Berean Board has for the coming year, namely, that the Bereans, like their predecessors, may search the Scriptures daily, and that the Bereans will keep themselves prepared and will prepare others for the coming of Christ.

To this end, the Publishing Committee (James Watkins, chairman) is issuing, in cooperation with the National Bible Institution, a "Christian Workers' Kit," consisting of carefully selected tracts on the essential doctrines of Christianity. To help all Bereans to accomplish their primary objective of teaching and living the gospel, a special committee (Arlen Marsh, chairman) has been set up to try to establish new Berean groups, to recommend ways for organization and operation of local societies, and to act in general as an advisory council on work with young people "and their associates" (as the National Berean Constitution puts it).

Only the cooperation of every individual Berean can make a local society a genuine success. Only the cooperation—financial and moral—of every local society and of every state society can make a genuine success of the national effort. Finally, only cooperation on the part of the national society with local and state societies can make the national effort worth continuing.

So, tell the national officers what you need—what sort of tracts, what sort of books, what sort of specialized solutions to specialized problems. Tell them whether or not your experience with shifting teachers from week to week, with having an adult superintendent, with maintaining the same teacher week after week, with staging attendance contests, has been successful. The national officers will pass your information on, through the Berean Echo, through the Berean page, through personal letters, to others, so that they, too, may have the benefit of what you have learned—and so that you may have the benefit of what they have learned.

The time for Christian work, if world events are a criterion, is short. It is not your work—it is our work to see that that time is utilized in the most effective way possible for the service of God!

Cooperation

You have a dollar. I have a dollar. We swap. Now you have my dollar—I have your dollar. We are no better off.

You have an idea. I have an idea. We swap. Now you have two ideas and I have two ideas—both are richer.

What you gave you have; what I received you did not lose.

Land Ho!

Assume that you have a letter which states that there is a quantity of diamonds in an isolated part of the country. You even have a map locating the exact spot. To recover these gems will require the efforts of ten men. Will it take you long to find the required ten men? Will you have to say to them, "Now we'll have to have cooperation if this expedition is going to be a success, and so forth?" By reading your letter and studying the map they will know that nine men cannot be successful. Therefore, each man will dig in and do his share despite hardship, for the reward is great.

Does the word "cooperation" appear in the Bible? "Unity," "together," and others appear a few times. God's plan is revealed to man, and man is told what he must do to gain entrance into the Kingdom. The great reward is described and the individual work required is given in detail. The firmer the believer, the harder the worker!

The Bible is the letter and map to the Berean societies. Those who study it diligently, who find out where they are going and the kind of road they will have to travel, will not need to be asked to cooperate. (Did you ever hear, though, of a man going on a treasure-hunting expedition without first poring over a map?)

"Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid" (Matt. 5:14).

KOSZTA, IOWA

On Saturday evening, September 7, Bro. C. E. Lapp started evangelistic services at the Church of God near Koszta, Iowa. Bro. Celaine Randall of the Bible Training School of Oregon, Ill., came with Bro. Lapp and led the song services which made the meetings very interesting.

On Sunday, September 8, baptismal services were held at the Iowa River north of Koszta, at which time Mrs. Pauline Bowers of Macrengo, Iowa, was baptized.

There was good attendance each evening. Bro. and Sr. Charles Netts of Springfield, Ohio, and Sr. Edna Brewer of Oregon, Ill., were with us one evening, and left a miniature Golden-Rule-Home bank for our Sunday school to fill. We are glad to report a goodly sum in it already.

The meeting closed Sunday, September 15. A basket dinner was held at noon, then an afternoon service, after which Bro. Lapp left for Macomb, Ill., and Bro. Randall for Oregon, Ill.

We feel the meetings were a great success, and that others will soon be baptized into the body of Christ as a result of the good seed sown at this time.

Mrs. Fern Cronhaugh, Secy.

BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL NEWS

The Church of God Training School officially opened September 17, but, the final student which is yet to arrive did not arrive until September 23.

At present we are all working hard trying to keep up with what is dished out to us by the matron and the instructors.

Among the new students, this year, we find Francis Burnett, Ripley, Ill.; Terry Ferrell, Pomona, Calif.; Barbara Fish, Colo, Iowa; and Orris Mills, Eden Valley, Minn. The students who returned are: Alan McLain, Ripley, Ill.; Celaine Randall, Fonthill, Ont.; Ellsworth Routson, West Milton, Ohio; Richard Smith, Dayton, Ohio; and Muriel Randall, Braham, Minn.

I was given a note (including notes on talk) by one of the students who was here last week and was fortunate to have heard an address by Bro. S. J. Lindsay. His talk was on the joys and sorrows of a minister's life. He stated that many of the sorrows and discouragements come to ministers because of the lack of money, and the inability to foster church growth the way he thinks it should be done. He concluded with the thought that (Please turn to page 10 for continuation and more news.)

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

Bro. and Sr. S. J. Lindsay, having spent most of the summer in Oregon, Ill., are now en route to Arizona to resume their work among the Tempe brethren. Bro. Lindsay assisted the editor in pulpit work several times during the summer, and shortly before leaving Oregon, delivered an address to the Bible Training School students. Bro. and Sr. Lindsay's friends are legion; their enemies, if any, few.

Bro. and Sr. G. E. Marsh and son Arlen are now en route to Los Angeles, Calif., where Bro. Marsh will begin pastoral duties the first Sunday in October. While visiting with Sr. Marsh's parents, Bro. and Sr. J. I. Williams of Rochelle, Ill., Bro. Marsh, accompanied by Bro. Williams and Arlen, came to Oregon, Ill., for a brief visit and to address the students of the Bible Training School. The Marsh family will visit our brethren at Omaha, Nebr., September 25, and those at Arkansas City, Kan., September 26-30. May the Lord direct and bless them in all their journey and work.

Bro. and Sr. Lewis Romine, Oregon, Ill., took their daughter Jeannette to Chicago, September 23, where she entered nurses' training at the Cook County Hospital. Bro. and Sr. Romine also visited their son Danon, who resides in Riverside.

Bro. L. E. Conner preached for the brethren at Casey, Ill., September 22. He reports that there was a good interest, especially among the young people.

Bros. Grover Gordon and Harvey U. Krogh, Jr., pastors of two of our Ohio churches, exchanged pulpit services, Sunday, September 22.

Through the kindness of Sr. Orpha LeMasurier, treasurer of the National Bible Institution, Mrs. Magaw and the editor will, D.V., accompany her and her daughter, Diane, to the Minnesota Conference at St. Cloud—October 10-13.

So is a mustache! A talent has been defused as "something that must be developed."

"Our conference this year was the best, I think, that we have yet had. There was good interest throughout, and ten were baptized."—Mrs. Ella Carpenter, 3705 Ames Ave., Omaha, Nebr.

"We must be firm, but friendly."—Harvey U. Krogh, Jr., Tipp City, Ohio.

The correct address of Bro. and Sr. James Hendren, who were recently baptized, is Skelton, W. Va.

"Don't complain about the weather or other matters over which you have no control, but thank God that you are not suffering the horrors of bombing raids or the plight of an enslaved nation. Praise God for what you have and where you are, and be therewith content."—C. E. Randall, Fonthill, Ont.

"Sr. Netts and I expect to leave for Ashland and Cleveland, Ohio, Niagara Falls, N. Y., and Fonthill, Ont., September 24. Sr. Grover Gordon plans to go with us. . . . Our slogan for the model Golden Rule banks is: 'A penny within, puts a preacher in.'"—C. L. Netts, Springfield, Ohio.

Defying superstition: we have heard of no casualties from the recent church election of officers held on a Friday 13.

— Tracts and Books —

"This gospel must first be published among all nations" (Mark 13:10).

The gospel of the Kingdom must be preached in all nations before Jesus will return from heaven. Every member of the Church of God can help to evangelize the world. Order a good supply of tracts; then send them to your friends. It costs nothing to slip a tract into a letter, and it may "save a soul from death."

The following tracts and books, most of them written by men prominent at some time in the Church of God, are for sale by the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Illinois. Send a self-addressed envelope or postage for tracts not priced. How many can you use?

An Open Letter to Our Sunday Schools

By James W. McLain

TO THOSE superintendents, teachers, and workers of our Sunday schools who by their faithfulness are contributing so largely to the welfare of the Church of God, we pay tribute. Your constancy in being "on the job" every Sunday, calling on the sick, seeking new pupils, planning the work for spiritual values, sacrificing personal time, are important factors in the development of the Sunday schools of the Church of God. Yours is the spirit of progress.

Your responsibility is great. Our children are committed to you for spiritual instruction to prepare them for the Kingdom of God. Your building is for eternity. Into your hands is given a vital work that we often neglect in our homes. It is your task to provide the church with its greatest source of material in human lives. Probably, the greatest force for righteousness in your community is your labor in the Sunday school. Youth is being saved. Adults are being reclaimed for Christ. It is comforting to know that your sense of responsibility in these matters is in no way diminishing.

Much of your work in the past has been done under handicap. Sunday schools were started in the homes of the instructors. Others were organized in vacant store buildings. You have struggled on, in many instances, without benefit of counsel, or pastoral guidance, being isolated from other groups. Some toiled on without adequate training or knowledge of teaching material. Yet, in the face of adversity the work has grown and is progressing. The standards are high.

It must be apparent to a progressive leadership that we are approaching a new step in the development of our Sunday schools. Early sacrifice has made possible a better circumstance under which the work may now be carried on without many of the serious disadvantages of the past. Our schools need no longer be out of touch with one another. Benefit of counsel and exchange of material should be the common possession of every Sunday school.

To make it easy for the Sunday schools to communicate with one another, the General Conference, this year, named a committee, consisting of Leland T. Hanson, Harry Sheets, and Arlen Marsh, secretary, to form an association of our Sunday schools. Naturally, the members of this committee are your servants to help you in the perfection of this organization. They will need the benefit of your experience in the field to intelligently do this work. In the near future the secretary of this committee will contact your school. They solicit your whole-hearted cooperation. May progress continue to be a watchword of our Sunday school leadership.

Of Two Evils, Choose the Lesser

Many zealous saints who expected to live until the Second Coming are dead, and the Lord has not yet come. Consequently, many Christians are today ultraconservative in speaking or even meditating about the time for the coming of the Lord. The consequence is worse than the cause! Of the two evils, we would choose the lesser.

It must be recognized that the zealous Christians who were mistaken in their views about the time of Christ's return were, as we are today, most interested in the certainty of His coming. Their lives were beautified by the hope, and they were inspired by the hope to sacrifice their very souls upon the altar of service. We may no more dare to think they were all radicals than to think all politicians are conservatives.

There is a tendency to feign a superior wisdom by lifting the brow or twinkling the eye when some faithful watchman dares to preach about such Scriptural subjects as: "Signs of the Times," "The Time of the End," "The Day Is at Hand," or "Behold, the Bridegroom Cometh." In short, the Church of God is in danger of so seriously criticizing its founders for a minor error as to fall into the deeper pit of lukewarmness concerning the Second Coming. It was "that evil servant" who said, "My lord delayeth his coming" (Matt. 24:48). It would be better to be wrong about the time, yet prepared, than to be correct about the time, yet unprepared.

"In Such an Hour As Ye Think Not"

Certain prophecies about the nations may require considerable time for fulfillment, and careless students may too quickly conclude that the coming of Christ is, therefore, far in the future. It must not be overlooked, however, that the overcomers, who are "not appointed . . . to wrath" (1 Thess. 5:9), may be "caught up . . . to meet the Lord in the air" (4:17) before all the prophecies concerning the sinful nations are fulfilled.

Jesus said, "In such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh" (Matt. 24:44). Instead of watching Hitler, we would do well to watch for Jesus. Do you "think" Christ will not come soon? Will all Ten Virgins go to sleep? Jesus foretold, "Behold, I come quickly."

Isaiah, Jesus, and Paul Agree

Isaiah prophesied, "Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast" (Isa. 26:20). What is this indignation of which the Prophet spoke, and when is it to occur? The preceding verse (v. 19) indicates that the indignation will occur after "dead men" who "dwell in the dust" "awake," "arise and sing," and the verse following (v. 21) indicates that this indignation will occur when "the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity." Obviously, the nations are to receive the wrath of the Lord, to which wrath the Apostle Paul says the church is "not appointed."

Jesus taught His disciples, saying: "Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth. Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to ESCAPE ALL THESE THINGS that shall come to pass, and to STAND BEFORE THE SON OF MAN" (Luke 21:34-36).

Not only do Jesus and Isaiah agree in these prophecies that some are to "hide" and "to escape" from that which will come "as a snare" upon the world, but Paul, too, seems to speak of the same truth in saying that Christians are "not appointed . . . to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Thess. 5:9).

Therefore, let all Christians prepare for the appearing of the Savior, and all the more "as ye see the day approaching" (Heb. 10:25). The nations are rampaging toward judgment; do you "think" His coming cannot be soon?

Gaining Experience

Bible Training School students are beginning to sow the good seed. Sunday, October 6, Richard Smith preached at Dixon, Illinois, Alan McLain preached at Grand Rapids, Michigan, Celaine Randall preached at Koszta, Iowa, and we surmise that Orris Mills may have assisted Brother C. E. Lapp at Macomb, Illinois.

"Nobody Cares"

By Verna Thayer

"Whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward" (Matthew 10:42).

FOR the past four years it has been my privilege to have under my direct supervision some boys who, according to the laws of our land, were bad boys. These boys were not yet developed in their paths of crime to the extent that they could be sent to a state institution, but had to be placed in a different environment to stop their criminal tendencies. I say "privilege," and mean it.

Unless one comes in close contact with such persons, he cannot appreciate the lives of wayward youth. It is a most interesting study, and makes us want more and more to try to put into the lives of these young ones the love and privileges they have been forced to miss.

After associating with these boys for some time, and doing everything possible to restore their faith in mankind, one may find it possible to win their confidence. And "may" is the correct word to use, as it is no small matter to win the confidence of boys who have lost all faith in those about them. After one does win their confidence, they are very willing to tell the reason they are living their lives in such a manner. Of course, the first question to which you will wish an answer is, "Why did you do these things when you knew they were wrong?" In ninety per cent of the cases they reply, "What makes the difference? Nobody cares."

Upon investigation of the home life of these boys, we found a large percentage of the boys were from broken homes. In many instances, the parents were both remarried, and all interest in the child and his welfare was gone. He was permitted to do as he pleased—using the boy's own words: "Nobody cares." It would make anyone's heart ache to hear these boys use these two words. How quickly they respond to affection, when it is proved to them that there is someone who cares!

Not all these children are from broken homes. Some come from homes where there is plenty of time and money to make them ideal places. The parents, though, are too busy having a good time to show the boy or girl that they "care."

May I tell you of one of these interesting cases? This particular child had started on his life of crime at the age of nine years. When asked to tell how he first started to do wrong, he told the following verified story:

Verna Thayer

"My father and mother went away on a fishing trip, about four hundred miles from home. They left me at home, alone. There was nothing prepared for me to eat, and nothing for me to do. After thinking about it for sometime, I decided I wanted to go fishing, too. (His home was near a river.) The next thing I thought was, 'How am I to get the line and, especially, the hooks with which to fish?' I wandered downtown to a store where such things are kept in the open. I laid down my handkerchief on the pile of hooks and walked away. When I came back, I asked the clerk if I had left my handkerchief there. She saw it, and said it was just where I had left it. I picked it up, and of course several hoops stuck fast, thus I had the things I needed most with which to fish. I continued, without being caught, until I had obtained all the things I needed. It seemed so easy, and I was surprised at my own success.

That led to worse things for which I was later caught."

Was this child to blame? His parents were financially able to provide for his care while gone; or better yet, to have taken him with them. Is it any wonder he said, "Nobody cares"? Many of the stories told by these boys would not bear printing in this paper.

Then, how are we going to teach these boys and girls that there is One who cares? First, show them that we care, that we are anxious and willing to help make life worth living for them. When we have shown them this, we may then tell about the love of God and Jesus, who were and are great lovers of boys and girls. Teach them that "somebody cares," then show them that "somebody cares."

I wish that everyone who reads this article would pledge himself or herself to find some such child, and spend some time teaching and showing the child that there is someone who cares, and that person is you. When you have accomplished this, tell about Jesus and how He cares.

I am not so sure that if we wished, we might find many grown-ups as much in need of the message that "Jesus cares" as there are children who need to hear it.

"Whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones . . . shall in no wise lose his reward."

The Seed of the Serpent

Part Three

By S. G. Elton

IT IS important to be able to distinguish between sin and sinners. It was by man that sin entered into the world, and it was by him that sin was manifested. He induced the woman to accept his word, instead of the word of the Lord God with which she was familiar. Thus, the woman became the sinner by her act of obedience to sin. Sin had her in its possession; sin was the master and she was the slave. For that reason, God provided a Redeemer that would pay the price of redemption demanded, which, in this case, was an uncorrupted Life.

When the Lord Jesus ascended into the heavenlies, there were three active seeds at work in the world: (1) the seed of the Serpent; (2) the seed of the woman; (3) the seed of Abraham in the person of Christ, the Son of God. The first Adam was made for a special purpose, and in the image and likeness of the Creator. He was destined to exercise authority over all the creatures formed of the dust of the earth. The law of sin and death was invoked upon him, that his animal nature might be made manifest to all the world. By avoiding the tree of life and eating of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, his final extinction was assured. When God removed a rib from the side of the man, it was for the purpose of providing the way for a Son of His own to be born into the world; therefore, she was made with a spiritual nature, and was spiritually minded, until the Serpent beguiled her to see the tree as he did. By yielding to his will, she became the subject of his power, and the propagator of his seed, all of whom are under the same decree of death, which aggravates the sorrow imposed upon the woman. It was God who said that a man should leave father and mother, and cleave unto his wife, and the two should be one flesh. Instead of the man cleaving to the woman and becoming one flesh with her, of a spiritual nature, the woman listened to his lie and accepted it for truth: thus becoming one with him with an animal nature, as attested by their discovering their own nakedness.

Thus, the woman that God had so carefully made, to be the mother of all living, had become corrupted by sin, and brought forth fruit unto death. (See Matt. 13:37-39.) The world, as represented in the person of the woman, then stood in need of a redeemer to rescue her from the bondage of sin, by restoring in her the spiritual mind. Thus, Paul was moved to exclaim: "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God" (Rom. 12:1, 2).

Paul expressed his fear for the church at Corinth: "I am jealous over you with godly jealousy: for I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ. But I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ. For if he that cometh preacheth another Jesus, whom we have not preached, or if ye receive another spirit, which ye have not received, or another gospel, which ye have not accepted, ye might well bear with him" (2 Cor. 11:2-4). Because of strangers that had come into the church, he says: "Such are false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ. And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light" (vv. 13-15). (See 2 Peter 2:1-3.)

Listen to the Apostle John: "He that committeth sin is of the devil; for the devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil. Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is born of God. In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil: whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother" (1 John 3:8-10).

John continued by describing the first child born to Adam and Eve: "This is the message that ye heard from the beginning, that we (the children of God) should love one another. Not as Cain, who was of that wicked one, and slew his brother. And wherefore slew he him? Because his own works were evil, and his brother's righteous" (1 John 3:11, 12). Thus, evil prevailed over righteousness and assumed dominion over the earth, and the children of the Devil have multiplied beyond computation.

To the first Adam, God gave no promise that would inspire in him a hope of life beyond the day of his present life. The only assurance given to him was that he should return to the ground from which he was taken:

"for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." God said to Abraham: "In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice" (Gen. 22:18). Jesus said, "No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon" (Matt. 6:24). "The first man (of this order) is of the earth, earthy: the second man (of a superior order) is the Lord from heaven" (1 Cor. 15:47). "He that cometh from above is above all: he that is of the earth is earthly, and speaketh of the earth: he that cometh from heaven is above all. And what he hath seen and heard, that he testifieth; and no man

The Power of the Tongue

By Mrs. Mae Nedrow

"The tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison" (James 3:8).

I WONDER how many of us take the time to consider the effect that idly spoken words have on others. Words reveal what is in one's heart. Jesus said, "Every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment" (Matt. 12:36). He told His disciples: "Out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts" (Mark 7:21).

David the Psalmist (the man after God's own heart) had this to say: "What man is he that desireth life and loveth many days that he may see good? Keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from speaking guile" (Psalm 34:13). It is confirmed by Peter in 1 Peter 3:10.

Words can be sweet—sweet as the honey from the bee. They can also be like the sting of the bee—as an open twoedged sword. One too often magnifies his own goodness and points out the faults in others, especially in the young folks. Many of these boys and girls of the faith have dedicated their lives to the service of the Master; they are giving of their best to the Lord. Why not let us make it a point to encourage them? If they are working in our local church, let us tell them we are pleased with the work they are doing. A few kind words will inspire them to greater service. If they are away from home, at the Bible Training School perhaps, where they are learning a systematic study of the Bible, we could take time to write them letters, telling them we are watching their progress and are interested in them.

Please, dear brethren, do not criticize the young folks. Remember, we, too, were once their age and just starting out in life. If the older ones had criticized our every effort, we might have become discouraged, and the whole course of our lives would have been changed. It takes a strong heart to withstand continual criticism.

*Each kind word is a jewel,
Strung on a golden thread.
Let us never add an unkind word,
For they are best unsaid.*

—By the author of this article.

Of course, the children make mistakes, but so did we when we were their age. I am sure that all will agree with me that we have not changed much in that respect.

In the Apostle Paul's letters to two of his early converts, Timothy and Titus, he gave only kind words of advice. Paul never said anything to discourage his converts. We need only to read his epistles to these two men, to realize how tactful he was. In his first letter to Timothy, instructing him in his pastoral charge, Paul said, "Let no man despise thy youth; but be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity" (1 Tim. 4:12).

Solomon believed and taught, "A soft answer turneth away wrath: but grievous words stir up anger" (Prov. 15:1). James, the brother of our Lord, admonishes us: "Speak not evil one of another," further explaining, "The tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison" (James 3:8).

I think we ought always to avoid rash censuring and reviling of one another. An unbridled tongue is not in keeping with a true Christian. We should make every effort to govern our tongues. How dare any of us make of ourselves judges—that we may judge and condemn another when one is accountable only to God? James brings this out very clearly in his Epistle.

Since we are all guilty of transgression, let us not be quick to judge one another. Jesus had much to say in His denunciation of the self-righteous scribes and Pharisees. (See Matt. 23.)

Let us feed and meditate upon God's Word from day to day. May we be Christians in deed as well as in name, helping those who are discouraged to go forth joyfully.

God, Conscription, and You

By Harvey Krogh, Jr.

WE ARE living in days that bring questions to the minds of Christians as to what should be their attitude toward the government. Since all men between the ages of twenty-one and thirty-five years are to register for possible military service, it is fitting that we understand our position before God and our nation.

There may be Christians who feel that it is right to support the nation in anything that one may be commanded to do, but there are many who firmly believe that a Christian must keep himself free from being entangled with political affairs or warlike activity, if he would have a reward of God in the higher calling. Without entering into a discussion as to whether military service is right or wrong for the Christian, though we strongly hold to the latter, we wish to speak to those who are conscientious objectors to military service.

Paul said, "Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God. Whoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation" (Rom. 13: 1, 2). If the government should command you to do something that you believe to be wrong in the sight of God, you have a right according to the Scriptures to refuse to do that thing. "We ought to obey God rather than men" (Acts 5:29). HOWEVER, if you resist the government you shall receive to yourself damnation or judgment. We shall explain the word "resist" as used in Romans 13:2. The word is defined in Young's Concordance: "To set over against." It carries the thought of active opposition rather than a refusing to do what one may believe to be wrong.

The reason why we have no right in God's sight to set ourselves against the government is explained in Romans 13:3, 4: "Rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same: for he is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil." By this we understand that it is the nation's duty to God to protect the individuals from evildoers from without and within because the ruler is God's minister for this very purpose, though the ruler may not be conscious of it.

It is for this reason, also, that you and I have no right to oppose the government, though we may not like the government's methods. It may be right for our nation to prepare for war, as it will undoubtedly have a part in the great conflict that shall take place in Palestine when God gathers all nations to battle just before Christ is to again stand upon the Mount of Olives (Zech. 14:2).

To some it may seem to be inconsistent for a Christian to refuse to take part in certain national activities and still expect the protection and benefits of the nation. We have an example of one who was not considered inconsistent by our God. The Apostle Paul demanded the protection of the Roman government and received a free trip to Rome partly to further the interests of the gospel, although we doubt if Paul would have taken up arms in defense of the Roman government. Inconsistent, you say? No! Paul probably remembered that God had given the power of government to the Romans, that God caused the trees to grow from which the ships were made, that God made the sea, and caused the wind to blow, and made the food the sailors ate. Who took Paul to Rome? Who protected Paul? God did all this by His ministers for that purpose.

I am glad that our nation recognizes that God has servants that may be bringing a greater blessing on the nation as soldiers of the cross than as soldiers with firearms and weapons of destruction. There will be enough men to take up arms for the protection of the nation. If too many were Christian and the army were few, God could still save the nation, "for there is no restraint to the LORD to save by many or by few" (1 Sam. 14:6). Those who conscientiously object to military service will be respected by draft boards, but they may expect to give proof that they are conscientious objectors, and they may also expect to be used of the government in types of service that do not conflict with their service to God. I am certain that our government still holds enough to the principles upon which it was founded to know that Christians are the best citizens, and that they will do the nation more good working at things they can work at with a clear conscience and praying God's guidance for the nation, than if they are compelled to do that which some would rather die than do.

There are a few rules that we might well keep in mind. Copy them if you cannot remember them. Above all things be tactful and courteous and friendly but firm.

(1) Register when requested to do so by the government, and file a statement of your conscientious objection to military training and service.

(2) Report for physical examination when requested to do so by the government, and again file your conscientious objection to military training and service.

It might be well at this step to have the pastor or elder of the local church confirm your objection and appear before the draft board to certify to your standing in the church.

(3) Report to the commanding officer of the training camp when and if ordered to do so by the government, and again register your convictions and file the statement of your standing within the church.

At this time you should apply for alternative service under civilian direction, unless you have had an earlier opportunity to do so.

(4) It is consistent with the conscientious objection to military service and training to refuse to accept military uniform or weapons of warfare, or come under the authority of the military organization. At this point a conscientious objector should take his stand and refuse to move any further with the war machine.

(5) As creative citizens the following service is regarded as consistent with the position of the objector:

(a) Relief of war sufferers.

(b) Relief of refugees or evacuated civilian populations.

(c) Reconstruction of war-stricken areas.

(d) Resettlement of refugees.

(e) Reclamation of forestry service in the United States and elsewhere.

(f) Relief and reconstruction work in local communities in the United States.

(g) Medical and health services in connection with any of these projects.

(h) Farm service.

We cease not to praise our God for granting us a government that honors Him and His people. We may have to do many things in the near future that we may not like

Our Hearts—a Guidance to Our Lives

By Eunice Zollinger

---

WHAT is one's heart? What causes it to function? And what effect does it have on the other organs?

It is the most vital of our organs; it is our innermost part, that which is most essential in keeping our bodies in good working condition. The heart is the seat or center of life in our bodies; it is also the seat of our conscience. Some believe that when one's conscience interferes with his thoughts, it is God speaking to him. Maybe one's heart acts as God; it is in our temple; He resides in the innermost room. One's heart usually knows which is the right path to take. If we would only listen to its guidance, what worthy lives we would live!

Why cannot we heed its warning? We cannot, because our minds regard a seemingly important principle as less important. "Of these self-expressions of the substance, we mortals know only two. One is the material world, the other is the inner world of thought." Yes, the inner worlds, and what little regard the mind gives them!

"Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my redeemer" (Psalm 19:14). Would that this could be kept in our inner worlds of thought! The meditations of one's heart are to be acceptable to God. When one meditates about something, he has his mind centered on God and he watches and purposes to do right that which he may do wrong. Sometimes in church services, a few minutes are set aside for meditation. In these minutes one should put his heart and mind on God. We who are Christians should usher Him our greatest devotion. We ought not let our minds become carnal; we ought, rather, to let them reflect spirituality. One's mind cannot function in accord with His will, if he does not attune his heart also. The mind and the heart should be like a musical instrument—in harmony with one another.

The mind dictates to the heart—will the heart always listen? The heart is warm and tender; it is the seat of affections; thus, when love comes to one, it affects the heart, it affects one's life as a whole—every little action, every kindness, even one's eccentricities. The mind is a cold intellect; it listens to the worldly call. As someone has so perfectly stated it, "The heart and head disagree." Let us be mindful of our heart's choice.

"Turn not aside from following the Lord, but serve the Lord with all your heart" (1 Sam. 12:20). If our hearts be with Him now, O, what a place we will have in the Kingdom!

"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service" (Rom. 12:1). If we are to live holy lives, we must abide by the principles established by the Christ, our Savior; we

CHRIST so thoroughly persuaded His disciples by word and by deed that there is a "hope set before us . . . both sure and steadfast," that the first Christians were steeled to endure hardships and afflictions that would have defeated the efforts and obliterated the footprints of any army built on other foundation.

"They Stoned Stephen"

As Jesus, on the cross, had committed His life unto the Father, Stephen, too, bravely, trustingly, and unflinchingly endured unto the end, then in humble prayer "fell asleep." The stones were little less cruel than the nails.

The onslaught of men, though, served only to reveal God, for Stephen exclaimed, "Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of man standing on the right hand of God" (Acts 7:56). Seeing his Lord, and remembering his Lord's "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do," Stephen was strengthened to likewise pray: "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge" (v. 60).

If Christians today thoroughly believed Jesus' words, "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free," if Christians today truly hoped to be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God," there would never be murmur nor falter before any attack of infidelity or sin. Temporal life is bargain price for immortality.

Martyrs Prayed While Lions Roared

The crucifixion of Jesus and the stoning of Stephen instilled faith and zeal into the hearts of the early Christians that sermons alone could never have accomplished. This unconquerable determination, like a ghost of the slain risen to haunt the murderer, moved throughout Jewry and quickly forced its way straight to Rome.

In Old Testament times, the saints had "trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover of bonds and imprisonment: they were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword: they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented; (of whom the world was not worthy:) they wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth." Likewise, in the first part of the Christian dispensation, saints of God were again sorely and shamefully persecuted. Well did Reginald Heber write:

"They met the tyrant's brandished steel,
The lion's gory mane;
They bowed their necks the stroke to feel;
Who follows in their train?"

Then was praying and singing mingled with the roars of lions and the laughter of pagans! Six hundred acres of catacombs testify that there is no grave large enough in which to bury the religion of Jesus Christ. What heroes were the martyrs of Jesus! How carnal and wicked was Nero, ashamed of his villainy, to further accuse the Christians of burning Rome!

The Great Commission

Said Jesus: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned" (Mark 16:15, 16). The first Christians, sensing the import of this command, "went every where preaching the word." In these last days of the church dispensation, there is a "falling away" from the ideals and zeal of the first Christians, but the commission of Christ has never been revoked!

Jesus plainly promised: "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all nations; and THEN shall the end come" (Matt. 24:14). That Jesus has not yet returned is His announcement that the true gospel of the Kingdom has not been preached in all nations to the extent that He ordains it shall be preached. Because Jesus has not yet returned, the Church of God is duty-bound to evangelize.

 "Yet There Is Room"

In the Parable of the Great Supper, Jesus represented Himself as "being angry" (Luke 14:21), because of the selfish excuses of those who rejected His invitation. He then charged His faithful servant: "Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor, and the maimed, and the halt" (v. 21). When the servant reported that this was done, the Lord further commanded: "Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled."

The Church of God has not finished its work. There is yet room to labor both at home and in the highways and hedges of seven continents. There is, in fact, so much room to work that we hardly know where to begin!

"Many Are Called, but Few Are Chosen"

That the number of those who accept Christ's invitation is small, in comparison to the number of those who are invited, is no discouragement to informed servants. Peter declared: "God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his (God's) name" (Acts 15:14). Ministers may, in fact, be encouraged by the sin and indifference in the world, for the silly excuses of doubters are made in accord with unfulfilling prophecy.

Though only a relative few today accept Christ's call, the day will come when God will "build again the tabernacle of David . . . that the residue of men might seek after the Lord" (Acts 15:17). It is, however, those who are now called out from the Gentiles into "the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth" (1 Tim. 3:15), who will be chosen to reign with Christ when the Davidic rule is re-established. Christ calls today for men to hear, to believe, to repent, to be baptized, to walk in newness of life—all in preparation for the coming King.

"I Stand at the Door, and Knock"

Christ, the compassionate Shepherd, continues to call earth's lost ones to His fold. Or, like a friend wishing to enter into personal and abiding companionship, He continues to rap at the door of every heart—waiting, waiting, waiting! Though men bolt the door against Him, Jesus pleads: "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me" (Rev. 3:17-20).

A prophet might today cry: "This people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing . . . lest at any time they . . . should be converted!"

A Greater Than Noah Is Here

Jesus said, "As it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man. They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and the flood came, and destroyed (not 'converted') them all. . . . Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed" (Luke 17:26-30). Those who rejected the message of Noah perished in the Flood, and, behold, a greater than Noah is here!

A greater than Noah was "perfect in his generations." A greater than Noah "walked with God." A greater than Noah is today's "preacher of righteousness." A greater than Noah pleads with men: "Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction" (Matt. 7:13).

Men who today despise the cross of Jesus would surely have perished in the Flood, had they lived in Noah's day. Behold, a greater than Noah is here! Faithful Christians may rest assured that Jesus "shall comfort us concerning our work and toil of our hands" (Gen. 5:29), but "where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?" (1 Peter 4:18).

CONSCRIPTION ?

By A. T. Johns

TO the men in the Church of God who may be required to do military service: Salvation may be at stake, unless we now make our stand clear. This is no time for "fence-straddling." The time has come when we must make our own decisions. Are we going to serve the true and living God with Jesus His Son as our pattern, who gave His life for our sins that we might obtain salvation? Or, are we going to cast God's great and precious promises aside to be a servant of destruction? Preparation for war, either defensive or offensive, has but one motive: destruction of the enemy.

"He that leadeth into captivity shall go into captivity: he that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword. Here is the patience and the faith of the saints" (Rev. 13:10).

We are told that we are facing a peacetime draft for training purposes only, but what one of us knows what tomorrow may bring forth—peace or war? Will the "conscientious objector's" clause in the Constitution become a Christian's "empty dream"? Strict refusal will not be easy.

Let us put ourselves as examples to our brothers, and not as stumbling blocks to them, so that they also may zealously cherish the "hope" for which the saints have died.

"Ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake: but he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved" (Mark 13:13). "He that findeth his life shall lose it: and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it" (Matt. 10:39). These are the teachings of Jesus Christ whose name is the only name whereby man can be saved (Acts 4:12).

GOD, CONSCRIPTION, AND YOU

to do, but I do not believe that we will be compelled to do things that we cannot do to the glory of God and as unto Him.

Be very true to God, and you will not find it hard to "Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honour to whom honour" (Rom. 13:7).

BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL NEWS

We find that we have two schools of thought here at the Bible Training School, namely, the realists and the romanticists. The realist would write:

"The students are hard at work preparing their lessons for the oncoming classes. In the classroom, we find interest running high with much discussion by the students under the guidance of the instructor in charge. . . . The students enjoyed an outing at 'the Pines,' which is an Illinois State Park, last Sunday afternoon. Almost everyone enjoyed the afternoon activities; we all 'loved' the afternoon luncheon."

On the other hand, the romanticist would scroll: "Activity is high, business is rushing in the halls toward the bathroom, as the students make the final effort to get 'cleaned up' before the sizz of the breakfast buzzer. Dick Smith, the ladies' man of the School, finds difficulty in making it. He has resolved, however, to be a bachelor, since 'she' said, 'Let's just be friends.' . . . Celaine finds it difficult to get by the door of The Herald office to and from classes. . . . Terry Ferrell has shortened his dull moments by allying himself with our only full-time girl student. He says, 'she can cook and iron clothes, what more can one want?' . . . Of course, we can't overlook 'Elzie,' who has to put on his best dress outfit to write a letter for 'June' in October. . . . Francis has his worries, too: 'I can't understand why she doesn't write at least once a day.' . . . Alan has started saving coins for a trip to Washington. Let us remember it is for evangelistic work! . . . A picnic was 'pulled off' by the Training School at 'the Pines' last Sunday. A filling time was lunched by all, after which we rested."

Don't take stock, though, in those romanticists; they can't be trusted. Back to the realists, let's take a check on the courses and instructors.

"At nine-thirty in the morning, we might take a peek into Bro. L. E. Conner's class of 'Story of the Christian Church,' and look for the activity as we view the different students. Bro. Conner uses many good illustrations.

"Let's check on the ten-thirty class to see what Bro. S. E. Magaw is teaching. Oh, yes, 'Now, see, you should have been able to have gathered that out of the passage, yourselves.' The class sounds like, 'The Last Prophets of Israel' and 'Prophetical Applications From the Old Testament.' The other evening I walked into the schoolroom and saw a pile of books all around a desk. After checking closely, I found Alan McLain looking for prophetical applications from the story of Abraham. Of course, I remembered that Bro. Magaw had told us it would take about fifteen minutes, and he was right—for it took fifteen minutes plus about four hours.

"It is one o'clock, and Bro. Conner has just finished his daily joke. We are now engrossed in the text, 'Principles of Religious Education.' This course is designed for the purpose of teaching students the methods and use of psychology in teaching others.

"Don't go yet, we still have another class. Bro. Magaw is asking for volunteers to summarize the subject matter in chapter two—no response. The class is studying the 'Apostolic Age' or 'Acts of the Apostles.'

"Our music class, too, is progressing very well. Sr. Leila Mae Doeden is a good teacher, and we do like her breathing exercises."

See you next week in a more spiritual light.
Orris Mills, Reporter.

EDEN VALLEY, MINNESOTA

After spending two weeks in Oregon, Ill., at General Conference and two weeks in Eldorado, Ill., we returned to Eden Valley, September 1—glad to get back to the "Land 'o Lakes."

The first week of September, Bros. S. J. Lindsay, L. E. Conner, Delbert Dunbar, and Srs. Amy Dunbar Frye and Grace Johnson were with us fishing and visiting. We had the pleasure of having Bros. Lindsay and Conner speak for us on Saturday evening and Sunday morning and evening. These meetings were well attended. We feel so small when we hear these old soldiers of the Cross. Come again; we had a feast.

On Sunday, September 15, Orpha Hurd was received into the church at Eden Valley. We are glad to see young people with the courage to make this step. Orpha is teaching her first school this fall and winter.

We pray God's blessing upon the work here, and we shall have some very important events to report for the month of October.

Walter Wiggins, Pastor.

BOSWORTH, MISSOURI

Bro. F. L. Austin conducted a series of meetings at the Rockford church, Bosworth, Mo., which started September 10. The attendance was fairly good.

A meeting had not been held for a year. We had not even had a Bible-study gathering. After attending the meetings led by Bro. Austin, we found that we were sadly in need of Bible study. Bro. Austin also saw that we needed this, so he suggested that we devote our last Sunday to an all-day meeting to discuss this matter. This we did, and are now looking forward to the starting of a Sunday school next Sunday. The Lord willing, we will put forth every effort to have preaching the first Sunday in each month.

There were two young men, Bro. Charles Jennings and Bro. Doke Parsons, who were baptized and took on the name of Christ. We were all very glad to extend our hand of fellowship to these young men.

The meeting closed September 29. We know Bro. Austin will be far from us, but his grand sermons will ever be with us.

Roy Pancoast.

OUR HEARTS—A GUIDANCE TO OUR LIVES

must adhere to the teachings of the Scripture, always being willing to learn and receive more of that great knowledge of our Lord. If at any time we are tempted, let us consult our hearts, if we be of God; if not, we should read our Bibles and pray until our hearts become so pure as to be guides to us always, in all of our undertakings.

It is true, hearts do sometimes deceive, but not a true one; not one patterned after God. "He which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation; because it is written, Be ye holy; for I am holy" (1 Peter 1:15, 16). If we be temples of God and follow a true heart, we may help to guide someone else's fallen footstep.

THE SEED OF THE SERPENT

receiveth his testimony" (John 3:31, 32).

Yes, the first man, with the Serpent nature, did speak words that were believed by the woman, whereby sin and death came into the world. The second man, the Lord from heaven, having a nature like a lamb, came into the world to destroy sin and him whose power is death, "that is, the devil; and deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage" (Heb. 2:14, 15).

The use of animal names is frequently applied to men, indicative of their animal nature, or the course of life they follow. To Adam, the term "serpent" was an indication of the quality of mind that determined his actions concerning earthy things, in which he was more expert than any of the other animals. Not only evil natures are indicated by animal names, but the spiritual also. We read, for instance, "The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world" (John 1:29). He is also called "the Lion of the tribe of Judah" (Rev. 5:5).

"This I say then, Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh. For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other: so that ye cannot do the things that ye would. But if ye be led of the Spirit, ye are not under the law" (Gal. 5:16-18). (Concluded)

Book Reviews

By Arlen Marsh

Hilaire Belloc, biographer, poet, novelist, and historian, has given us a truly delightful study of Bible lands in his 327-page-and-index-volume, The Battleground: Syria and Palestine.

Belloc has a style that makes his books remarkably easy to read—and quite as remarkably interesting. Not more than a half dozen historians can even approach the attention-consuming qualities of the Belloc technique.

The Battleground covers Syria and Palestine from the days of the Phoenician sailors to the modern port of Haifa, but it stops short of the current war period, naturally. Its history is authentic; liberal fictionizing makes Mr. Belloc's descriptions of customs and ancient environments genuinely gripping, and not simply an encyclopedic report such as could be found in the nearest Britannica or Americana or International. A number of maps and full-page photographs enliven the book, too.

J. B. Lippencott Company, publishers: $4.00, and well worth every penny of it.

Fit companion for The Battleground is Harold Lamb's Crusades, now out in an inexpensive reprint edition at only $1.00 (Garden City Publishing Company). Lamb, like Belloc, has a writing style that makes his biographies and histories as entertaining as many pieces of fiction and a great deal more informative.

Lamb's Crusades is precisely what the name implies: the story of the crusades which swept Europeans out of Europe and into war in Palestine. Whether you're interested in general history or not, this book will give you an insight into one phase of Christianity—a phase, incidentally, which seriously influenced later churches and church work—which seldom is considered more than casually. And there's action enough in the Crusades to satisfy even the lovers of Deadeye Dick!

One-word review of Torrey's Four Gospels (A. J. Holman Company; $3.00): Phut! Supposedly taken from Aramaic texts by a Syrian, this translation deviates remarkably from all other versions. Some people seem to like it, however—it's had a good sale, and has received excellent notices from other reviewers.

"Give attendance to reading" (1 Tim. 4:13).

Order all books listed in this column from the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Illinois, thereby building your library and at the same time helping to support the General Conference activities.

A Lost Boy

Not long ago there was a boy who had been lost. The radios and newspapers told us about it.

Our Bibles tell us of a lost boy, too. Do you know the story?

Joseph and Mary went to Jerusalem every year to keep the feast of the Passover. We remember what happened when the Israelites put the blood upon the doors, just as God told them to do. Then the death angel "passed over" those homes. The Egyptian people who lived there lost their first-born that night. The Israelites continued to keep the Passover feast.

Now, when Jesus was twelve years old, He was old enough to go to this Feast in Jerusalem with Joseph and His mother.

When Joseph and Mary and the others started home, there was a large number who went the same way. Their Feast was over; they were walking home. They had gone one whole day toward home before they knew that Jesus was missing. It was three days before they found Jesus. Where was He? They found Him in their church, the Temple, talking to the teachers and older men, "both hearing them, and asking them questions" (Luke 2:46).

How happy Joseph and Mary must have been! Jesus was surprised to learn that they had been searching for Him. He said, "Why were you looking for me? Didn't you know I'd be about my Father's business?" Afterward, Jesus went home with His parents and continued obeying them as He had always done.

So the lost boy was found! He was where they had left Him, wasn't He?

Sometimes, people lose sight of Jesus today. In our hurry and bustle, with no time to pray or even to pause to have a moment of quiet, Christ is pushed far into the background. Sometimes we have gone a whole day's journey before realizing that we have lost track of our Master. But He is always where we have left Him. He never goes away from us. We must remember not to draw away from Him.

By prayer, dwelling upon God's Word, and right living, Christ can be found again.

Here is a song to sing for Jesus. The tune is one we all know. It is the tune to which we sing "America, the Beautiful."

"O, master Workman of the race,
Thou Man of Galilee,
Who with the eyes of early youth,
Eternal things did see;
We thank Thee for Thy boyhood faith
That shone Thy whole life through;
'Did ye not know it is My work
My Father's work to do?"

"O, Carpenter of Nazareth,
Builder of life divine;
Who shapest men to God's own law,
Thyself the fair design,
Build us a tower of Christlike height
That we the land may view,
And see like Thee our noblest work
Our Father's work to do.

"O, Thou who dost the vision send
And gives to each his task,
And with the task sufficient strength,
Show us Thy will, we ask;
Give us a conscience bold and good,
Give us a purpose true,
That it may be our highest joy,
Our Father's work to do."

Express Christ in Music

By Thelma Richardson

"Music is a sacred, a divine, a godlike thing and was given to man by Christ to lift our hearts up to God, and make us feel something of the glory and beauty of God, and of all which God has made."—Charles Kingsley.

We can keep our lives from becoming a humdrum of everyday joys and sorrows, successes and failures, and eating and sleeping. These would seem to make us puppets of fate by developing the musical abilities that we possess. In each one of us there is something deep and "fine" that is constantly demanding expression. This inner quality that vibrates through each of our hearts is our appreciation of music. We should allow ourselves to express it, because it will enable us to live more beautiful lives.

Nature has her own music which we all readily recognize. The innumerable things we hear in everyday life—the song of the bird, the rippling brook, the sighing breeze—are all her melodies. As we sit and listen to good music, we are stirred with a deeper, divine feeling which only music can give. It gives us inspiration to live closer to Jesus, and to let Him shine forth in our lives every day.

Music strengthens the bonds of friendship, and helps us to acquire more friends. All lovers of music can find Christian expression through it. Music's most ideal place is in church and in the home. It is at church that we go to worship in spirit and in truth, and there music draws us closer to God. Here, it gives us a feeling of greater love for Him.

Whether singing, or playing some instrument, we can make self-expression of music a part of our lives, every day. Hymns can inspire us and give us endless pleasure. They create a sense of reverence to God; they express His plans in a beautiful manner.

Brisbane has said, "The greatest, noblest inspiration is that of good music. The one stimulant that has no reaction, no bad effect, is the stimulating effect of music upon the mind, the heart, and the imagination." It creates in each of us higher ideals and morals; it helps us to tell of Christ a little more beautifully. Let us seek out better music, and through it express our love of Christ and His teachings.

Dues

By Lorna Macy

Article I of the Berean Constitution, outlines the manner in which the National Berean Society shall be financed. It provides that every affiliated state society shall send to the treasurer of the National Society one half of the state dues. Isolated members joining by direct application shall pay one dollar per year into the National treasury. Local societies having no state affiliation shall send one half of their dues to the treasurer of the National Society, providing such dues are ten cents or less than ten cents a month. Any amount over ten cents a month shall be retained in the local treasury. All dues from state and local societies shall be sent semi-annually, on the first of January and the first of July, to the National treasurer.

From the treasurer's report which was published in a recent issue, you find that the work of our organization entails considerable expense. At the beginning of last year we had $139.92 on hand. $30.00 was required for the publication of the Echo in 1939-1940. By a unanimous vote, at the Berean Day meeting during General Conference, it was decided to continue the Echo for another year. Those who are to publish this paper plan to issue it more frequently this year. This will require more money.

Last year we published a new Berean book, costing $130.86. We could not do that so far this year. There would not be enough money in the treasury—only $42.89.

In the past, the Bereans have paid their dues very faithfully. We have made progress. If the faithfulness continues, we shall continue to make still more progress.

We don't believe, however, that you have become unfaithful. Perhaps you have just forgotten the rules. A person has to brush up every now and then. That's why we practically reprinted a portion of the Constitution.

Are any of you members a little behind in your part of the upkeep? Any little bit you can do to get "squared away" will be greatly appreciated. Have any of your state and local treasurers neglected to get the books in order, and send in the required fifty per cent? It takes only a few minutes. When our various committees get their ideas formulated, we shall have ample funds to finance further Christian work.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALENDAR OF EVANGELISM

October 6-20—Special fall meetings at Golden Rule Church of God, Cleveland, Ohio.
 October 18-20—The Northwest Conference of Oregon and Washington at Felida, Wash.
 October 21—Ten-days' evangelistic meetings in Sae City, Iowa, at the home of Mrs. Augusta Roose.
 October 24-27—Minnesota Fall Conference at St. Cloud.

EASTERN NEBRASKA CONFERENCE

The Eastern Nebraska Conference held its Fifty-fourth Conference at the Church of God, in Omaha, August 25 to September 1. As speakers throughout the week, we had with us Bro. S. J. Lindsay and Bro. J. W. McLain. Bible classes were held each day at 10:00 a.m., and again at 2:30 p.m. with song service in the evening at 7:30, followed with preaching at 8:00. Bro. Harvey Krogh spoke to us on the opening Sunday.

No greater proof is necessary of the success of our conference than to say that the following ten accepted the faith and asked for baptism. Those baptized August 31 were: William D. Lawrence, Jack R. Harper, Shirley Meth, Betty West, and Loramae Karnett. The following were baptized September 1: Gilbert A. White, Floyd Appleby, Ruth Grawet, J. F. Paustian, and Gaynell Paustian.

A business meeting was held after evening services August 31, and the following officers elected: Bro. Howard Appleby, pres.; Bro. Russell Johns, vice pres.; Bro. Joe Lawrence, secy-treas., and Sr. Edna Kjargaard, cor. secy. Edna Kjargaard, Cor. Secy.

A NEW BIBLE CLASS

Cheerful news greets me in the morning mail! In the beautiful mountains of South Carolina, a new Bible class has been organized. The new class, in Greenville, will be known as the "Guthrie Grove Bible Class." Officers elected were: president, Mrs. Mellie J. Lockaby; vice president, Mr. Jones Henson; secretary, Miss Bernice Burgess; treasurer, Mrs. Gertrude H. Henson; and corresponding secretary, Miss Wynona Burgess.

The president of this new Bible class will be remembered by many Restitution Herald readers as Miss Mellie James. May God richly bless this effort put forth in His name. May many there come to a better knowledge of the truth and accept Jesus as their Savior.

"Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord" (1 Cor. 15:58).

Emily Fyfe, Jericho Springs, Mo.

MACOMB, ILLINOIS

Since Bro. C. E. Lapp has been gone from Macomb, we have had several sermons and sermonettes from local brethren. Those who have contributed are: Charles Croxton, Leo Wilson, Walter Croxton, and Billy Stookey. It encourages us a great deal to see the interest that is being taken by these young men.

Bro. Lapp plans to be back with us next Sunday, October 6.

Gladys Mercer, Secy.

ST. CLOUD, MINNESOTA

The choir and congregation had their singing recorded Sunday, September 29. This recording will be broadcast over WCCO some Tuesday or Thursday at 6:30 a.m. At this time the Minneapolis Star-Journal will present the singing of various small church choirs from throughout the Northwest.

Our Bereans were quite successful with their garden. They have redecorated their classroom with some of the proceeds.

We are looking forward to meeting many of the brethren at the fall conference which will be held here, in St. Cloud, from October 24-27. We are having lovely fall weather which we hope will hold through conference time.

Grace Skinner, Reporter.

LOUISIANA CHURCH NOTES

It was our privilege Sunday afternoon, September 29, to baptize Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Phillips into the saving name of Jesus. They had been considering this step for some time and, having come to understand the teachings of the gospel, they obeyed its call. They are members of the Blood River church, and may be addressed at Springfield, La.

We are planning to have a series of meetings during the month of November. Elder M. W. Lyon of Cleveland, Ohio, will be the evangelist. He will hold a two-weeks' meeting at each church. Six years ago Bro. Lyon was here and held a successful series of meetings, and we are looking forward to his return.

The Happy Woods church recently held a business meeting and elected the following officers: elders, Albert Siple and Gus Landry; deacons, Warren Landry, George Halverson, Gilbert Bottolf, and Martin Bankston; treasurer, Ella Siple; and secretary, Mrs. John Williams. Harry Gockler, Pastor.

ARKANSAS CITY, KANSAS

We are happy to report that a five-day series of meetings conducted in Arkansas City, September 26-30, by Bro. G. E. Marsh, evangelist, were very inspiring and filled with the truth from the Word of God for which we all hunger. It was indeed a pleasure to have Bro. and Sr. Marsh and son Arlen, who were on their way to California, with us again, as many years have elapsed since their first visit here. Many of our isolated members were in attendance for part or all of the meetings, and many drove several miles each evening to attend. These included the Leonard Peltons of Caldwell who attended all services, and the Claude Rineharts of Riverdale, who missed only one service.

The Sunday services were well attended, and at noon a basket dinner was spread in the basement of the church where a social get-together was enjoyed by all. Bro. G. E. Marsh brought the Sunday morning and evening messages, and Bro. Arlen Marsh spoke at the afternoon service on "Americanism Now."

The Sunday morning service was one of the most beautiful and impressive services ever held in the church, for a young couple, who a few weeks ago had been united in the holy bonds of matrimony and who had requested baptism, at this service accepted Christ as their personal Savior and dedicated their lives to His work. Baptismal services were held on Monday afternoon, September 30. Bro. T. A. Drinkard of Handley, Tex., assisted Bro. Marsh in this service. We are happy to present to members of like precious faith Bro. and Sr. Everett Reed, Attica, Kan. Bro. Everett is the youngest son of Bro. and Sr. Mandes Reed of Attica.

Bro. and Sr. Drinkard were also with us for the closing service, Monday evening. Bro. Drinkard had just closed a series of meetings at Bowling, Okla. Florence Griffith, Secy.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

"Sunday afternoon, September 29, we had the pleasure of baptizing Miss Byrnee Thompson, Browntown, Va. Byrnee is a young lady of high school age, daughter of Bro. Aubrey Thompson, and sister to Dennis, whom we baptized a short time ago."—J. R. LeCrone, Woodstock, Va.

"In reporting those baptized by Bro. H. Scott Smith at Mt. Olive Church of God, September 8, Sr. Maxine Cox's name failed to get into the list. She is a young lady that we are looking forward to for a lot of good work in the church."—W. G. Moffet, Magazine, Ark.

Sunday, October 13, will be Rally Day for the Brush Creek, Ohio, Sunday School.

Bro. Ben Carpenter, Oregon, Ill., is visiting his parents and other relatives at Perryville, Ky.

"We shall begin a ten-days' evangelistic meeting in Sae City, Iowa, October 21, at the home of Mrs. Augusta Roose."—J. W. Williams, Gladbrook, Iowa.

Mrs. A. Forsberg, a Herald reader in Minneapolis, Minn., pleasantly surprised us with a visit, October 4-6, while en route from Chicago to her home. She plans to attend General Conference next summer.

Bro. and Sr. L. E. Conner, Oregon, Ill., motored to Rensselaer, Ind., October 5, to spend Saturday and Sunday with friends.

"Of necessity, the Minnesota Fall Conference dates have been changed from October 10-13 to October 24-27."—John Denchfield, St. Cloud, Minn.

"The little Golden-Rule-Home banks are going strong; everybody thinks they are 'fine.'"—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Netts, 1013 Pine St., Springfield, Ohio.

"We greatly appreciated the articles written by Mrs. William Stine and T. A. Drinkard which appeared in The Herald of September 24."—Lyle Rankin, Cashmere, Wash.

BUCHE - MATTISON

On Sunday evening, September 22, 1940, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Robert V. Mattison and Miss Eileen Buche at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Buche, Lanark, Ill. It was just one of those pretty home affairs in which joy was written upon the faces of all present. The pair was attended by Mr. and Mrs. Keith Krause, Mrs. Krause being sister to the bride. The single ring service was used, and we were assisted by the pastor of the local Lutheran Church, Pastor Koepf, who offered the prayer and gave the benediction.

Only the members of the immediate families with a very few friends of the contracting parties were present. After congratulations and refreshments the younger members of the party, who had planned an unusual reception, invited the pair out to the street where an open, two-wheeled trailer awaited them. When all was set, the cavalcade started and many of the streets of the town saw the group of a half dozen cars with the music of a cow bell and sleigh bell accompaniment as they passed.

Robert is our oldest grandson and we rejoice with him in this new relationship. We are glad to receive into the family the worthy young woman whom he has chosen for a life companion. Both have been brought up under religious influence, and we hope to see them continue as worthy servants of the Son of God. May His richest blessings be upon them.
S. J. Lindsay.

KJARGAARD - RASP

On Friday evening, September 20, 1940, occurred the marriage of Ardys D. Rasp and Miss Edna P. Kjargaard, both of Omaha, Nebr. The wedding was a church affair where better than two hundred of the friends of the contracting parties were present to hear the reading of the vows. Both were becomingly dressed for the occasion. Mrs. Elson, a friend of the bride, and the groom's brother accompanied them.

The writer has known these young people for some years and they are the pick of the crop of young people. Edna's home has been our home when in Omaha, and we have had plenty of opportunity to come to a right conclusion concerning her. Ardys is a young business man of sterling worth. At the Kjargaard home were stored the many and valuable gifts showered upon these young folks, showing the high esteem in which they are held by their friends. The bride was given away by her father, Bro. A. C. Kjargaard. The single ring service was used and the service was without a blemish for correctness and dispatch. Congratulations were profuse and from the heart on the part of those present.

The Church of the Brethren, being the church to which Ardys belongs, was the one used. It was splendidly decorated and accommodated the large audience in a fine manner. After the ceremony, a large number attended the reception which followed at the home of the bride. We are glad to add our testimony to the worth of these young people and to wish them a splendid walk through life. May God's choicest blessings attend them.

S. J. Lindsay.

TO OUR BROTHERHOOD

On account of necessity, I am coming to you again to urge heavier contributions to the National Bible Institution, that its work may be kept going. Our stock of paper is getting low and must be replenished, which means that we are in need of approximately three hundred dollars which we must raise within the next few weeks.

We also are far short of the amount necessary to provide the laundry needed in Golden Rule Home, which fund was started a year ago. As all housewives understand, doing such washings as must be done in such homes as Golden Rule Home with no place in which to do the work except the kitchen and a small, cold outbuilding in connection, and no facilities for drying the clothes except on outside lines, in stormy weather, great difficulties are encountered.

But just here we may be asked: "Why not dispose of some of the property we have and use the proceeds to provide these needed facilities? The answer to this question is that prices of properties of this kind have not yet come to the point where we feel that we would be justified in selling. It is our purpose to establish and build up a permanent institution that will become self-sustaining, and we feel that we should create a reserve fund, composed of safe, substantial properties and securities that will afford proper protection and assurance against bankruptcy, etc. This requires time and careful conservative management: and this purpose can best be accomplished by our people making liberal contributions in providing these supplies and facilities, that we may be able to add to and build up this reserve. We cannot, otherwise, hope to have a safe, sound, dependable, and enduring institution.

We are progressing, not rapidly, but steadily and surely, adding to our lines of activity, all of which requires more financial support, but which will bring rich returns later on. Such is our thought in considering and appraising the situation.

In reviewing our history of the twenty years, last past, I can see many mistakes we have made, but in spite of which we have made progress in establishing our Master's cause more firmly in the land, built churches and places of worship, provided more comfort for those in need, and broadened our conception and understanding of our responsibility to our Lord and our fellow man.

I am sure you will consider these matters as you have been doing, sincerely and prayerfully, and we believe you will agree with us and give us the support in this emergency as you may be able to do.

Contrary to what many of our people may think, it is not an easy and pleasant thing with me to solicit contributions from them, however worthy the cause. I do it from a sense of duty, knowing the situation as I do, according to the position I occupy, and my responsibility accordingly, and I am also sure that we share sympathy with each other accordingly.

ILLINOIS FALL CONFERENCE

The Illinois fall quarterly conference was held at the Salem church ten miles northwest of Marshall, September 27-29.

Every organized church in the state was represented excepting one. All state board members were present, raising the number of visitors to thirty-eight. We were glad to meet so many new friends, as well as to renew old friendships.

The Salem church is going forward. The building is "wearing" a new coat of paint and is also papered inside, making it a very inviting place for worship. The brethren there are very hospitable and our visit among them shall not be forgotten. Our prayers will go with them as they continue their work.

Three sessions of board meetings were held. The evangelists' reports show the state work is growing. There is no place to stop in the Master's service, so let us all work for the purpose of winning more people before it is too late.
Mrs. Frank Laning, Secy.

The Restitution Herald is the official organ of the General Conference of the Church of God. It is published by the National Bible Institution at Oregon, Illinois.

L. E. Conner Business Manager

Subscription Rate.—51 issues per annum, $2.00.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him, (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

"This gospel must first be published among all nations" (Mark 13:10).

The gospel of the Kingdom must be preached in all nations before Jesus will return from heaven. Every member of the Church of God can help to evangelize the world. Order a good supply of tracts; then send them to your friends. It costs nothing to slip a tract into a letter, and it may "save a soul from death."

The following tracts and books, most of them written by men prominent at some time in the Church of God, are for sale by the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Illinois. Send a self-addressed envelope or postage for tracts not priced. How many can you use?

GO TO CHURCH!

By J. R. LeCrone

WHEN you invite guests into your home, you spare no effort to make them feel welcome and at home during their stay. You arrange beforehand for their physical comfort, and plan your entertainment with a view to putting them at ease and making their visit as pleasant for them as you possibly can. Most important of all, you plan to be on hand to receive them when they arrive. Every wise host or hostess knows that an air of friendliness and hospitality surrounding the most simple entertainment goes much further toward insuring a guest of an enjoyable visit, than does the most elaborate and expensive entertainment when these indispensable elements are lacking.

To maintain such an atmosphere requires the full cooperation of every member of the family. Father's most cordial manner falls flat when Mother's "nerves" are out of control. Mother's prize cake loses its flavor when Sister is pouting because she must stay home and help entertain, and when Brother has a grouch because he must forego the use of the family automobile for the time being.

Are we any less hosts and hostesses when guests visit our church? Are we any the less obliged to provide for their comfort and convenience? Does the fact that they are visiting us in our church, rather than in our home, relieve us of the responsibility of being on hand to receive them and make them welcome when they arrive? Does this responsibility devolve only upon the pastor, or is it equally the duty of every member of the church family? Whenever a non-member enters our church, it immediately becomes the inescapable duty of every member to assist in the task of making him feel so welcome and at home that he will look forward with pleasure to visiting us again. He might be inclined, even, to seriously consider becoming one of us.

Imagine for a moment that you have been invited to attend services at a church to which you do not belong. When you arrive at the time designated for the service to begin, you find the pastor engaged in opening the shutters; and a fire, obviously just built, is roaring in the stove. The church itself is uncomfortably cold. The pastor bids you welcome, and urges you to be seated, assuring you that the church really heats up very quickly—once the fire gets going.

You sit shivering in your seat, feeling strange and embarrassed, as the pastor paces nervously about the room, looking at his watch at half-minute intervals, and glancing hopefully out of the window every time the sound of a passing automobile is heard. He remarks rather half-heartedly that everyone seems to be late for some reason. You attempt to appear friendly and sympathetic by suggesting that possibly his watch is fast, though you know perfectly well that it is two minutes slow.

After what seems an eternity, though only seven minutes by your watch, a few of the members drift in, chatting amiably among themselves. They glance at you, murmur "good morning," and then continue their conversation, which, you gather, has to do with the way the cold weather is affecting the way that the hens lay. As soon as they are seated, the pastor announces the opening hymn.

Following an opening service that is constantly interrupted by late arrivals and a fairish sermon by the pastor, who is plainly embarrassed by the conspicuous absence of many of his members, and during which the church becomes unbearably hot, the service is brought to a close. The pastor, pushing his way through the members who immediately collect in the aisle to visit, tells you that he is glad you came and that he hopes you will come again. The others ignore you.

How soon would you accept another invitation?

God, Too, Is Looking at You

If one looks directly into the lens of a camera when his picture is being taken, the result will show the one photographed as looking directly at the observer, regardless of the distance or angle from which the observer stands. This phenomenon of photography has evidently been employed by Uncle Sam in his posters soliciting recruits for the United States Army.

We recently saw, at some little distance, one of these army-recruiting posters. As we approached the poster, we noticed that Uncle Sam was looking and pointing directly toward us. We were somewhat surprised to see his finger seemingly move and the position of his eyes to seemingly change, as our position in relation to him changed. Then, wondering if our eyes had deceived us, we walked directly in front of the poster, from one side to the other, and "believe it or not," Uncle Sam's eyes and pointing finger followed us every inch of the way.

This interesting optical illusion caused us to immediately hum the song entitled, "There's an All-Seeing Eye Watching You." How certainly does one order his life in accord with the ones who look upon him—yet so seldom does one consider that God said, "The ways of man are before the eyes of the Lord, and he pondereth all his goings"! (Prov. 5:21.)

David, sensing that God's eyes were ever toward him, said, "Whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me. If I say, Surely the darkness shall cover me; even the night shall be light about me. Yea, the darkness hideth not from thee; but the night shineth as the day: the darkness and the light are both alike to thee. . . . My substance was not hid from thee, when I was made in secret, and curiously wrought in the lowest parts of the earth. Thine eyes did see my substance, yet being unperfect; and in thy book all my members were written . . . when as yet there was none of them" (Psalm 139:7-16).

Yes, God, too, is watching you, and it seems that He has a registration book. "Is your name written there?" Jesus said unto the Seventy: "Rejoice not, that the spirits are subject unto you; but rather rejoice, because your names are written in heaven" (Luke 10:20). Moreover James spoke of God as One whose eyes are ever upon His people calling God, "the Father of Lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning" (James 1:17).

To remember that God watches constantly over His people ought both to inspire us to enlist in every possible Christian service, and to have confidence at all times that our Protector will never allow us to be "tempted above that (we) are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that (we) may be able to bear it" (1 Cor. 10:13).

The Catholics Once Immersed

John F. Sullivan, author of A Text Book for Catholic Schools, acknowledges: "In early times baptism was given to adults on Holy Saturday only, and this is still indicated by the church's ritual by the blessing of baptismal water on that day. The sacrament was usually given by immersion—by putting the person entirely under water; but this was never considered essential. It was generally practiced until about the ninth century."

It is interesting to members of the Church of God who, after nineteen centuries, continue to practice the ordinance of baptism by immersion to know that the Catholic authorities confess that the so-called Mother Church also baptized by immersion for at least eight centuries. Although the authority above quoted says that immersion "was never considered essential," his other statement that immersion "was generally practiced until about the ninth century" rather refutes the non-essential idea. Are we to suppose that any church would for eight or nine centuries obey an ordinance of the Lord, without believing that to do so was most important?

Read It Again

The Apostle Paul's charge to "think soberly" may be well applied by those who will turn to page fifteen of last week's Herald, and again read the second column. The Manager hopefully awaits your reply; make him glad!

The Tabernacle

By C. E. Randall

THE subject of "The Tabernacle" is being studied by our three groups in this locality—Welland and Font-hill, Ontario, and Niagara Falls, New York. We are finding the work very interesting and helpful, and it has been suggested that perhaps the readers of The Restitution Herald would like to follow along with us in these studies. Of course, it will not be possible to relay the class spirit or transmit to you all the benefits of group discussion.

The studies are being illustrated with the use of a model of the Tabernacle. This is a great aid in getting the various lessons across to the members of the class—the eye is quicker than the ear. However, we shall do our very best in bringing to you the message of the Lord from this picture house of worship, and trust that you will in a small degree be blessed with us in the effort.

Value of Study

One of the first questions to which attention is given, is, What is the value in studying the Tabernacle? Take your Bible, turn to Hebrews 8:5, and read what Paul has to say about the Tabernacle. If you are to get much value out of these studies, you will have to read all the scriptures from the Bible, even though they are printed in part or full in the articles. This will also serve to familiarize you with your Book of books. The Twentieth Century Translation renders the verse thus: "(These priests, it is true, are engaged in a service which is only a copy and shadow of the heavenly realities, as is shown by the directions given to Moses when he was about to construct the Tabernacle. 'Look to it,' are the words, 'that thou make every part in accordance with the pattern shown thee on the mountain.')" Thus, it will be seen that the Tabernacle was a "copy and shadow" of realities to come. The Emphatic Diaglott says it was a "symbol," while Moffatt's Translation defines it as a "mere outline."

Passing on to the last verse of this chapter and the first eleven verses of the ninth chapter, it will be found that the Old Covenant had a sanctuary with a divine service, all of which was, according to wording of the Diaglott, a "figurative representation for that season which was then present" (v. 9). This representation was of "future good things, by means of the greater and more perfect Tabernacle, not made by hands, that is, not of this creation."

If one is to get an accurate understanding of these "future good things," he must first look at the copy, or outline, of these "good things," and the copy is the Tabernacle. The Tabernacle is a miniature model of the "holiest of all."

Primary Reason for the Tabernacle

The primary reason for the Tabernacle can best be stated in the words of God, "Let them make me a sanctuary; that I may dwell among them" (Ex. 25:7). It was not that God needed a building made with hands for a dwelling place, but that the Israelites needed a place where they could meet God. It was Israel that needed God's presence. God promised the Israelites, if they would build Him a sanctuary, that He would dwell among them and that they would know that "he was the Lord their God" (Ex. 29:45, 46). It is only as God indwells in an individual that he really knows Him as God.

This Tabernacle made with hands was a picture of a temple not made with hands, that is, the new creation. We are told in 2 Corinthians 6:16, that "ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people." As God manifested His presence in the Tabernacle of the Old Covenant, so will He reveal Himself in the temple of the New and better Covenant. Of the old, it is written: "Then a cloud covered the tent of the congregation, and the glory of the Lord filled the tabernacle" (Ex. 40:34). Concerning the new temple, it is stated: "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?" (1 Cor. 3:16.)

Must Not Be Defiled

The Tabernacle was built by command of God and according to the pattern given Moses. "See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount" (Heb. 8:5). Being of God and for service to God, it was a holy building. The sanctity of the Tabernacle, and the sacredness of the furniture that was used in the service therein, had to at all times be regarded and used in strict compliance with the instructions of God, else the blessing became a curse. Examples: Nadab and Abihu "offered strange fire before the Lord, which he commanded them not" (Lev. 10:1, 2), and were destroyed by the fire from heaven for which they should have waited. When the Philistines overcame the sinful Israelites, captured the ark, and took it to Beth-shemesh, some of the men opened the ark and looked in—and were immediately smitten—they had defiled the ark. Not only the violators, but over (Please turn to page 11)

Census Report for 1940

IN THIS year's report there have been included two new items of information which should make it more valuable and significant.

One is a column showing the amount of regular preaching at each church. It is surprising how many of our large churches have no regular pastor and how many have so little preaching. Surely this is a condition that ought to be remedied. We hope this report, by showing how some of the smaller churches are supporting a full-time work, will encourage others to go and do likewise. We have ninety churches in our denomination, but only thirteen have full-time pastors! Only twenty-one even have preaching every Sunday!

The summary showing frequency of preaching should be a very enlightening one.

The other new item is a column showing the active membership of the churches, which, compared with the book membership, also reveals some surprising situations. You will notice that the average percentage of inactive members for all the churches reporting is 25 per cent. How does this compare with the percentage in your church? Are you under the average or over? The Church of God, as compared with other denominations, is far in the lead in percentage of active members, but even so, 25 per cent inactive is too heavy for those who count themselves as the Church of God.

Fewer churches reported this year than previously, for some reason. However, the total figure shows the highest membership that has yet been recorded. Only about two thirds of the churches reported. We especially urge that those churches which have not reported make an effort to send in a report next year. Where there was no report for this year, the last previous report was used in compiling the totals.

Again we thank all those who did cooperate to make this report possible.

M. W. Lyon, Statistician.

REPORTS OF INDIVIDUAL CHURCHES

In order to conserve space, and make room for additional data, the columns showing the previous year's figures are not listed, as they are not essential.

The new "P" column shows the frequency of pastoral service. "F" signifies churches with full-time pastors, "4" those who have preaching every Sunday, but not a full-time pastor, other figures show the number of Sundays a month regular preaching.

"Tot. Mem." means the total membership of a church. "Act. Mem." those who are active members, and the number of inactive would be the difference.

Only such churches are listed as reported this year.

IN MY class of about twenty-four persons, men and women, there is a variety of types: from the critical college-bred person to the junior-minded adult, from the slightly cynical through the various degrees of Christian growth, to the deeply consecrated, zealous workers for Christ. This class is to me a liberal education. Not only do I get various angles on each lesson, but I am vigorously disciplined by them as well.

To anyone who wishes to become an earnest Christian, to grow more perfect as time goes on, I heartily recommend becoming a member of an active class of adult Bible students.

Here you will have your conscience kept tender. It will prick you considerably if you are self-indulgent, when you have your quarterly temperance lesson, and you are frankly told that a glutton fares sentence with the drunkard. It will squirm again if you've been using "too much work" as an excuse to avoid church duties when they tell you that "be temperate in all things" covers even work. If one works temperately, there will be sufficient time for special work for the Lord. You fairly tremble when the class gives examples of the text "Judge not, lest ye be judged," and if you've ever been inclined to think, "I live a moral life, and have no very bad habits; I give liberally, attend church, and come of a very respectable family, so what more do I need?" they will prove to you that "God is no respecter of persons," and that only "by grace are ye saved through faith" in Christ Jesus. Sunday after Sunday, they will bring home to you in various ways that of faith, hope, and charity, these three, the greatest of these is charity.

They show that they are expecting perfection of you, and your struggle to live up to their expectations will bring you gradually closer to God. They are critical enough to bring you to your knees before God, seeking the solace of One who understands.

Then trouble may come to you, and they come lovingly, sympathetically, giving you encouragement, praying with and for you, sharing with you. It may be shame and disgrace that overtakes you. They then refrain from rebuke, they forgive and forget, and suddenly you realize that if anywhere on this earth 1 Corinthians 13 is being lived, it is by your Sunday school class, and you walk humbly before them.

Two dwelling places of God: "Thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity . . . I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones" (Isa. 57:15).

The Duty of Giving

By G. M. Siple

"Will a man rob God? yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation" (Malachi 3:8, 9).

WE ARE choosing, this time, a very unpopular subject, as many of us do not care to read or hear anything that might affect our pocketbooks, as the paying of a just portion of our income to God's work is sure to do.

The first record we have of the payment of tithes is found in Genesis 14:18-20, "Melchizedek king of Salem brought forth bread and wine: and he was the priest of the most high God. And he blessed him, and said, Blessed be Abram of the most high God, possessor of heaven and earth: and blessed be the most high God, which hath delivered thine enemies into thy hand. And he gave him tithes of all."

In chapter 28 are recorded the experiences of Jacob in his travels while seeking a wife. As night overtook him on his journey, he lay down to rest, using stones for pillows. Is it any wonder he had such a dream! Many of us would not have been able to sleep at all. He dreamed of a ladder set up to heaven, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon it. In this dream, God promised Jacob that his seed should be very great in number and that he would be heir of the land upon which he had slept, also Abraham's offspring would inhabit the land. In the morning, when Jacob awoke, he took the stone which he had used for a pillow, and set it up for a pillar. "This stone, which I have set for a pillar, shall be God's house: and of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee" (Gen. 28:22).

Nehemiah 13:10-12 reads, "I perceived that the portions of the Levites had not been given them: for the Levites and the singers, that did the work, were fled every one to his field. Then contended I with the rulers, and said, Why is the house of God forsaken? And I gathered them together, and set them in their place. Then brought all Judah the tithe of the corn and the new wine and the oil unto the treasuries." It seemed quite difficult to collect the tithe even when the law was so plain and positive. However, when they were reprov'd for not doing their plain duty, they proceeded to pay as required.

We often hear it said that this law does not apply to the Gentiles. This may be true. The definition of "Gentiles," as given in Smith's Bible Dictionary, is, "Any people not Hebrews and who do not worship Jehovah." When we are baptized into Christ we are no longer Gentiles. Galatians 3:27, 29 says, "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. . . . If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." "Whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus, made an high priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec" (Heb. 6:20).

Also let us read Hebrews 7:20, 21: "Inasmuch as not without an oath he was made priest: (for those priests were made without an oath; . . . by him that said unto him, The Lord sware and will not repent, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec)." If we are still under the Melchisedec priesthood, are we not still under obligation to pay our tithes to the Lord's work? Tithing was instituted under the Melchisedec priesthood long before the law was given.

Our Savior also taught the duty of giving. We read in Matthew 23:23, "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye pay tithe of mint and anise and cummim, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith." Christ did not condemn them for tithing but for omitting the other important matters. "This I say, He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully" (2 Cor. 9:6). Galatians 6:8 reads, "He that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting."

When our Lord returns, as we are sure he will soon, on which side would we like to be found? Would we not like to be named among those who contributed willingly to His cause?

Paul says, in 1 Corinthians 16:1, 2: "Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye. Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God has prospered him." Do you believe that God has left it entirely to the church members, today, to judge how much they should lay by, when He told the Jews so emphatically what was expected of them? Some object to the tithe, upon the grounds that the tithe is not enough to give for the Lord's work. We fully agree with them. After the Lord's tithe is paid, there is still plenty of room for freewill offerings.

A suggestion would be that we make these offerings just as large as we are able, and we will be blessed accordingly. "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it" (Mal. 3:10).

Baptism a Saving Ordinance

A Letter to a Friend on the Design of Baptism

Dear Friend:

I differ with you on the design of baptism. I believe if it is preceded by a correct faith and repentance, it will cancel one's past sins. As an introductory text, let me call your attention to Acts 2:38, which reads: "Repent, and be baptized (immersed) every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." Here we are told that baptism or immersion is for the remission of sins. If so, there can be no remission of sins until one is immersed. Hence, immersion is a saving ordinance.

You may say that "for the remission of sins" means "because of the remission of sins." Well, let us see: "Repent and be baptized because your sins are forgiven." Here, we are told to do two things: "repent" and "be baptized." Whatever may be affirmed of one may be equally affirmed of the other, as the copulative conjunction "and" connects "repent" and "baptize." Hence, we have "repent because your sins are forgiven," and "be baptized because your sins are forgiven"—or "repent and be baptized because your sins are forgiven." This would prove, as far as the text is concerned, that baptism is not a saving ordinance, but it would also prove that repentance is not a necessity. What proves too much, proves nothing.

"This is the blood of the new covenant which is shed for the remission of your sins." Read "because of" here in place of "for" and see the results: "This is the blood of the new covenant which is shed because of the remission of your sins." So Christ was killed because God had forgiven you your sins! Here you will have to admit "for remission of your sins" means "in order to receive remission of your sins." If it means it here, then it means it in Acts 2:38, for the expressions are the same in Greek.

But, it is said Acts 2:38 refers strictly to the Jews, and has no reference to the Gentiles. Well, let us see. Romans 10:11-14 says, "The scripture saith, Whoso believeth on him shall not be ashamed. For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek: for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him. For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved." God says that there is no difference between "Jew and Greek," as far as He is concerned. "Whosoever" he be, "Jew" or "Greek," who "shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved"—for "God hath concluded them all in unbelief that he might have mercy upon all." Hence, all are sinners, whether Jew or Greek; and inasmuch as "there is no difference between Jew and Gentile," Acts 2:38 also applies to Gentiles.

These same remarks hold good for Acts 22:16: "Be baptized, and wash away thy sins." It is not that water actually washes away sin in itself, but it is the obedience that counts. Naaman was told to dip himself seven times in the River Jordan to be cured of leprosy. Now, would the water in itself cure him? Would it? No! It was the obedience that counted. If God had told him to break a straw seven times, the result would have been the same. So with Acts 22:16, water in itself will never wash away sins, but it is the act of obedience that counts. Whoever obeys God in the act of baptism will then secure remission of sins.

There is no other way. "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12). Here we are told there is "salvation" in the "name of the Lord Jesus." Anything, whether it is faith, repentance, or baptism separately, or all these combined, that can put us "into" that "name"—so that we may be "in" it—becomes to us a saving ordinance.

Now, what will do that? "They were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus" (Acts 19:5). So the baptism or immersion is the thing that places us in Christ, for can one be in Christ and yet not "in" His name? "In Christ" and yet not His name-bearer? Impossible! So to be immersed into His name is to be immersed into Christ. Paul speaks of this in Romans 6:3: "Or know ye not, that we as many as were immersed into Christ Jesus into his death were immersed" (Rotherham). Being immersed into Christ transfers us from a place outside of Him to a place "in" Him; and "in him is our redemption, the forgiveness of sins" (Col. 1:14). Out of Christ there is no salvation: in Him there is. Inasmuch as immersion is the thing that transfers us from being without Christ to a state of being within Him, it clearly follows that it is a saving ordinance.

THOUGH, many of the promises of Scripture are conditional, there are also many promises which are unconditional. The promise of Christ's return will be fulfilled, irrespective of man's faith or doubts.

"At Midnight"

If, as some Bible students teach, the world must be converted before the coming of Christ, the present trend of ever-increasing sin and the diminishing of missionary opportunities would lead one to think that the coming of the Lord is most distant. It is, however, when "darkness shall cover the earth and gross darkness the people," when there has been "a falling away first," and when "perilous times shall come," that the Savior is to return. Plainly, Jesus asked, "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" (Luke 18:8). In short, it will be when people are least expectant and least ready for His coming, and when nothing other than His coming could solve earth's problems, that Jesus will return. Surely, there is some significance in the word "midnight" in the Savior's saying: "At midnight there was a cry made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh" (Matt. 25:6).

"He Shall Send Jesus Christ"

As God, in the beginning ordained that there should be day and night and seasons, as God ordained that there should be both life and food to sustain life, as He ordained that there should be blessing for the obedient and chastisement for the disobedient, that surely He ordains that His Son, Jesus of Nazareth, shall return to rule as King of kings and Lord of lords. The Apostle Peter said that God "shall send Jesus Christ . . . whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution" (Acts 3:21). Now, if God purposes to "send" Jesus, neither faith nor infidelity of men can thwart this plan and promise of God. The promise is, therefore, unconditional.

According to David, "The kings of the earth (will) set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together, against the Lord, and against his anointed, saying, Let us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us" (Psalm 2:2, 3). Obviously, war-mongering rulers of the earth will be reluctant to forfeit their thrones to the King of kings. It is not difficult to perceive that the nations of the earth will not be converted before the Lord's return. Nevertheless, "he that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh: the Lord shall have them in derision" (Psalm 2:4).

Christ Ordained of God to Rule

The second coming of Christ is closely linked in the Scriptures with the establishment of the Kingdom of God upon the earth. The Apostle Peter not only said that God would "send Jesus Christ," but in the very next verse said that He would be retained in heaven until "the times of restitution" (Acts 3:21)—indicating that the return of Christ will inaugurate "the times of restitution." Further, "the times of restitution" are mentioned as being synonymous with "the times of refreshing (which) shall come from the presence of the Lord" (v. 19).

The Apostle Paul most emphatically linked the appearing of Christ with the Kingdom, when he said that the Lord Jesus Christ "shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom" (2 Tim. 4:1). This statement, moreover, shows that the judgment does not take place, as Orthodoxy teaches, at death; but Christ will "judge" the living and the dead when He appears, and when the Kingdom comes.

Acts 17:31 reveals that God "hath appointed a day, in the which He will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained." Who is this man? Who is this man ordained of God to righteously judge the world in an appointed day? These questions are clearly answered in the last part of the verse, saying: "Whereof he (God) hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him (Christ) from the dead." Wherever the gospel has been preached men have heard about the resurrection of Jesus, and the Apostle Paul declared that the resurrection of Christ is God's assurance, or proof, unto all people that the One resurrected, even Christ, is to judge or rule the world.

"Nothing Can Be Put to It"

Theories of men notwithstanding, God's will will be done in earth. When Jesus taught His disciples to pray, "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven," He taught them a prayer that not only could be answered, but one which will most certainly be answered—answered when the Savior comes!

Solomon recognized that God "hath made every thing beautiful in its time" (Eccl. 3:11), which rule will yet apply to the crucified Lamb. God ordains that in fullness of time, Christ shall appear in "power and great glory." Consider what exquisite beauty will attend the Messiah, as it is written: "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth! . . . Break forth into joy, sing together, ye waste places of Jerusalem: for the Lord hath comforted his people, he hath redeemed Jerusalem. The Lord hath made bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations; and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God" (Isa. 52:7, 9, 10).

Who dares to becloud the importance and beauty of the coming of the Lord? Solomon said, "I know that, whatsoever God doeth, it shall be for ever: nothing can be put to it, nor any thing taken from it: and God doeth it, that men should fear before him" (Eccl. 3:14). Thus, the return of Jesus is as certain as the Word of God is true. God's decree will stand!

"As the Waters Cover the Sea"

Paul taught the church of God at Corinth that Christ "must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet," and that "when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all" (1 Cor. 15:25, 28). This period, wherein Christ will subjugate all enemies, is commonly called the Millennium. Faithful Christians raised in the first resurrection will, according to John the Revelator, "be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years" (Rev. 20:6; cp. vv. 4, 5).

In Revelation 5:9, 10, John prophesied about the saints' rule with Christ, saying that the redeemed "out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation" are to become "kings and priests" who "shall reign on the earth." Likewise, Paul wrote unto Timothy, saying: "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him: if we deny him, he also will deny us" (2 Tim. 2:12).

Isaiah prophesied of Christ's peaceable Kingdom in these words: "Righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins. The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together: and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice' den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea" (Isa. 11:5-9).

War is sweeping the nations. The church is, in some respects, a relic. Earth is parched of love and hope, but soon, we believe, Christ "shall come down like rain upon the mown grass: as showers that cover the earth"!

A SEARCHLIGHT ON THE 1940 GENERAL CONFERENCE

By David Blyth

THE Conference I had heard about, in my younger days, was a place where the heretics of the Church of God met to expound their doctrinal "queriousities." Although I'm from Ohio, not Missouri, I wanted to find out for myself how the Conference thinks; and I did. I asked the question, "What do you consider to be the requirements for entrance into the Kingdom of God?"—asking this question of nearly all of the elders and many other leaders present. Their answers represented the views of our people at the four points of the compass, and were remarkably consistent. The only differences were in wording and emphasis. I think every member of the Church of God would find the same consistency, if he restricted his question as I did. There were many different interpretations given to non-essential phases of our religion which would not affect the individual so far as to exclude him from the Kingdom.

If I were a doctor diagnosing the situation, I would pronounce the Church of God in a quite healthy state. It is consistent in its fundamentals, yet has a sufficient number of different interpretations of the non-essentials to keep us in search of the truth of the matter. I believe we are learning how to discuss differences without creating two churches where one stood before. The Ministerial Conference deserves a pat on the back for showing us how to discuss without cussing. I have heard of churches splitting and of men becoming enemies over interpretations. That is unhealthy. We need to learn how to argue, not for the safe-keeping of our point of view, but for further truths. We may understand the broad essentials of doctrine necessary for winning eternal life, but we must keep searching for more light to the end we may live and teach more nearly as our Lord would have us live and teach.

Let us search for light and, when we find it, spread it to our brethren. If our light returns battered by the light of others, let us search again with our brother's light as a tool, until at last the brilliance of truth is found.

BAPTISM A SAVING ORDINANCE

"The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sins." How can we get into this blood so that it can cleanse us from all sins? "Immersed into his death"—blood. So, it is through immersion that we get "into" His blood. Hence, immersion is clearly a saving ordinance.

Remission of sins is to be gained through His name by everyone that believes on Him. (See Acts 10:43.) Here we are told that remission of sins is to be "through his name." What, then, will place us "into" that name so we may secure remission of sins? Acts 19:5 answers the question. It is immersion. So, we find that immersion is the thing that secures the "remission of sins"—a saving ordinance to us. Notice, too, it is intended for "every one that believeth" on Him, and is not limited to the Jew. Galatians 3:27 states: "As many of you as have been baptized (immersed) into Christ have put on Christ." Out of Christ there is no salvation; in Christ there is. Whatever transfers us from being outside of Him to being within Him becomes to us a saving agency. Paul here says it is "baptism"—"baptized into Christ."

"Baptism" here, as well as in Romans 6:13, means immersion in water, for this reason: Acts 19:5, 8:16, and other texts teach that to be the way we get "into" the name wherein there is salvation. Inasmuch as one cannot be "in" the name of the Lord Jesus without being in His body, it necessarily follows that when one is baptized into His name one is baptized into Christ. Hence, Galatians 3:27 and Romans 6:3 refer to water baptism.

He commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord" (Acts 10:48). He "commanded" them. Think of it. Can one disobey the command? "Blessed are they who do his commandments that they may have right to the tree of life."

1 Peter 3:21 says, "Which water in manner corresponding doth now save you also—even immersion—not a putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the request unto God for a good conscience" (Rotherham). Here we are told that immersion, and that, too, of water, doth "now save you also." The word "also" shows it "saves" us just as much as the ark saved Noah and his family. If immersion "doth now save us," is it not then a saving ordinance? It appears thus to me. If it "now" saves us, then whoever "now" ignores it cannot be saved.

"He that hath believed and been immersed shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned" (Mark 16:16, Rotherham). Here, two conditions for salvation are laid down; "belief" and "immersion." They stand and fall together. Whoever believes, though not immersed, shall not be saved. But whoever complies with the conditions named—belief and immersion—shall be saved. Woe to that person who omits either!

John 3:5 says, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God." "Water" means water as much as "Spirit" means spirit. If one is used in a figurative sense, then so is the other. Inasmuch as there is nothing in the text or context to cause one to think these words "water" and "Spirit" are not used in their literal sense, it follows they must be accepted literally.

"Born of water and of the Spirit." Here is a birth produced by two things: water and Spirit. This birth is a new birth, and takes place at the resurrection, but, as we have stated, is produced by two things—water and Spirit. Water gets in its work at baptism, when we are immersed in water for the remission of sins, and the process of begetting is completed. Thus, by it, one becomes a begotten son or daughter of God. Being begotten, he is, as it were, an embryo awaiting birth so as to have life within himself, as God his Father has. The birth is then the next step, for the embryo is “born of the Spirit,” and it then becomes a “spiritual body.”

Hence, we can see there can be no completion of begetting without immersion in water; no birth of the Spirit without a prior begetting. Therefore, the new birth depends upon two things: water and the Spirit.

Titus 3:5 reads, “He saved us, by the washing of regeneration.” Saved by what? Washing! Naaman was told to wash himself seven times. Hence, to have a “washing” means to have a “dipping” or an “immersion.” This text harmonizes nicely with what Peter said, “Baptism doth also now save us.” Now, if He saved us by the washing, can we be saved without this washing? It is not possible. Then, whoever has not received this washing cannot be saved.

“Washing of regeneration.” Here this washing is said to belong to regeneration—the new birth. Yes, without it the new birth is impossible, for this washing establishes the begotten state, so that the regeneration can take place at the appointed time—the resurrection. Hence, the “washing of regeneration” is necessary unto salvation.

Respectfully your friend,
John R. Fiske, Jr.

THE TABERNACLE

fifty thousand of the people, died because of the presence of the ark in a non-consecrated resting place and in the midst of desecrators (1 Sam. 6).

The spiritual house, or temple of the New Testament, is also sacred to the Lord, and any defilement of it will bring a corresponding measure of punishment. “If any man defile the temple of God, him will God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are” (1 Cor. 3:17).

As parents, which would you prefer, a well kept and nicely furnished house, or, a pure, clean family of unquestioned character? Of course, you would rather have clean, moral children than dirt-free houses. Likewise, Scripture reveals that God has much more concern over His New Testament temple made up of “living stones” (1 Peter 2:5), than ever He did of the Old Testament Tabernacle which was covered with curtains made from goats’ hair, rams’ skins, and badgers’ skins.

BUILDING YOUR LIBRARY

Book Reviews

By Arlen Marsh

Probably the most up-to-date Bible encyclopedia now on the market is the five-volume International Standard Bible Encyclopedia, edited by a corps headed by Dr. James Orr, and now published by William B. Eerdmans.

The set was “thoroughly revised,” according to the publishers, in 1929; but careful study will convince any reader that the revision was not so thorough as the advertising would lead him to believe. Articles on Jerusalem, for example, stop with the period of 1914, when the first edition of the set was issued, and consequently are almost worthless as far as anything but history is concerned.

On the whole, however, the set is fairly modern. The archeological discoveries of 1920-1929 are given fair attention, although by no means exhaustive attention—but it must be remembered that discoveries of 1930-39 have in many cases powerfully augmented or completely invalidated earlier findings. The International, in spite of its defects, still stands as the most nearly up-to-date work of its type now available.

Interesting from the standpoint of a member of the Church of God is the fact that the International is conservative, untinged by the modernism that damages or completely destroys the value of many other Bible reference works. Editors boast that the International gives every side of every disputed religious question; but nevertheless, all mention of such heresies as “soul-sleeping” is conspicuous by its absence.

More than eight hundred illustrations, principally photographs, go into the five volumes. There is a complete, carefully indexed Bible atlas at the close of the set. Six other indexes—of Bible texts, of subjects, of Hebrew and Greek words, and of still other items, make the work unusually easy to use. The subject index alone, the publishers contend, has twenty-five thousand items.

There are two editions: three-quarter Morocco at $39.50; and the more durable and (in this reviewer’s opinion) more attractive black library buckram, at only $29.50. The price, incidentally, is approximately $10.00 below what the books cost prior to 1939.

In summary, the International Standard may be described as not living up to its notices, but as being the best material of its kind, nonetheless.

"Bring forth therefore fruits worthy of repentance" (Luke 3:8).

One Mightier Cometh

John the Baptist went into all the country around Jordan preaching. He told the people to repent. They were to turn from their sins, but that wasn't all. They were to turn about—to do good.

If we know we have wronged anyone, we must go to him and make it right. If we have any hatred in our hearts, God's Holy Spirit cannot dwell with us. That is what John told about. After the different ones repented, John baptized them with water.

John the Baptist told the people that every person who didn't do good deeds, and live for the Lord, would be destroyed by fire. This caused the people to say, "What shall we do then?"

To some, John said they weren't to be selfish. To others, he said they were to steal no more. He told the soldiers to "do violence to no man."

The people wondered at his wisdom and good advice. They asked each other, "Can this be the Christ that is to come?"

John's answer was that Christ, the Mighty One, was yet to come.

Desert Training

When John the Baptist was born, his father, Zacharias, could not speak (Luke 1:61-64). After he had written that his son's name was to be John, he could speak. He praised God. He told of some future happenings. We call it prophesying. (See verses 68-79.) His son, John, he said, was to be the prophet of Jesus, the Highest One. We read of John's childhood in Luke 1:80, "The child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, and was in the deserts till the day of his shewing unto Israel."

Today, boys and girls need to grow "in the desert"; or, where it is quiet. There is usually so much noise and action in and around our homes that there is no time to think! Children need to be quiet so they may learn to pray and study God's Word.

We read: "Study to be quiet, and to do your own business, and to work with your own hands, as we commanded you; that ye may walk honestly toward them that are without, and that ye may have lack of nothing" (1 Thess. 4:11, 12).

In Romans 12:3 we read that we are to think soberly. Also, in Titus 2:11-14, we read, "The grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ; who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works."

ECE Club

Let's study! Wintertime is study-time.

This week let us learn the first five books of the Bible. They are books of early history. They are: Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy.

Learn to spell and write them, too. Also, learn that there are sixty-six books in our Bible. ("66," when you write it, looks like "two pig tails." That is what a minister told me when I was learning these facts. Perhaps it will help you remember them, too.) There are thirty-nine books in the Old Testament. There are twenty-seven books in the New Testament.

A Child's Creed

"I believe in God above,
I believe in His great love;
In our hearts He loves to live,
All we need He loves to give.

"I believe that Jesus sent
When to heaven above He went,
His own Spirit for our Guide,
To draw us closer to His side."

Take Heed Lest You Fall

* * *

By Mary Richardson

"Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." Stop, and take notice of this verse.

The scribes and Pharisees of old were self-righteous, and uttered long prayers in public to be seen of men. Do you recall the prayers of the publican and the Pharisee as recorded in Luke 18? The Pharisee was so sure of himself, thinking that he had committed no sins, but the publican "smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner." In verse 14 of this same chapter Christ said, "I tell you, this man (the publican) went down to his house justified rather than the other; for everyone that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted." The moment one becomes so sure of himself—that moment he will fall. We are safe only when we keep close to Jesus, for this close relationship makes us strong to resist the many temptations of life. The strong and true Christian will make the obstacles of life stepping stones to greater success in the field of service. When Daniel was in the lion's den, never once did his faith waver. In fact, it increased his courage, for he realized that God would not forsake him.

The three friends of Job ceased talking to him "because he was righteous in his own eyes." Pity the man who reaches such a state of mind! Job's life was for a little while an example of the sinfulness and uselessness of a self-righteous life.

Peter was rather self-confident when he said, "Lord, I am ready to go with thee" (Luke 22:33). Peter was an impulsive character at times. This seems to have been one of those times. Later Peter said, "Man, I am not." Servants and bystanders frightened the self-confident Peter into denying his Master. We are safe only when we are true and brave. Had Peter acknowledged his discipleship, the maid and others may have left him alone, but constant evasion led to direct lying.

In trying to reach a destination in a hurry, we sometimes walk a little too rapidly. Consequently, we stumble over a stone. It is well to be brave and confident, but at the same time we should be careful. When we are most confident that we will never lose our tempers, or tell untruths, we must take care lest, like Peter, we stumble, too.

Practice Makes Perfect

"The young people's class is sponsoring a skating party on Thursday evening of this week." Now, here is good, clean entertainment that is healthful. Fun, too! The more one skates, the more fun he can have. "Practice makes perfect" applies. When we organize a skating party, we don't want the entire party composed of people who cannot stand on their feet. We can include some beginners, of course, because the experienced skaters will keep the party alive, and as the beginners practice, they can contribute to the fun.

This might be a good way to get young people to come to Berean meeting. You know, get them out with a good clean crowd of Christian young people, and they will probably consent to going to Berean class once or twice.

What, though, are we going to do with them when we get them in our class. They went skating with us because our crowd looked alive and progressive. Are we going to let them down when they get inside our church? They know we believe in religion because we attend church regularly. We must have a good reason.

Are we prepared for their interest, or is our class composed of people who are beginners, and who have been for years, because they have not practiced enough? When we are confronted with the questions, "Does the soul go to heaven when a person dies?" "Why do you believe in baptism?" and "Why must one attend church so regularly?" do you say, "Well, now over here in Matthew it says . . .," and continue with many other scriptures, or are you forced to say: "Well, I haven't had much time to study lately—meetings and skating have kept me pretty busy. I used to know where to find these things. If you'll ask our minister, I'm sure he would know"?

If your answer is the latter, you have just lost a possible church worker, pal. You had him on your side when you skated backwards in that swell figure eight the other night, but you spread a thick blanket of water on his spark of religious enthusiasm when you failed to follow the teaching of Peter who said, "Be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you" (1 Peter 3:15). Sometime we are going to have to find time to get the stiffness out of the Bibles we own. We do need practice!

FONTHILL CHURCH OF GOD Fonthill, Ontario

On Sunday night, September 22, the right hand of fellowship was extended to Bro. Archie Beemer of Hamilton, Ont. He is a brother of our esteemed secretary, Bro. Howard Beemer of St. Catharines. It may be interesting, especially to older members of the faith, to know that the mother of these brothers, the late Sr. Beemer, was baptized many years ago by Bro. R. V. Lyon. My own mother, who was a personal friend of Sr. Beemer's, told me that when Sr. Beemer was immersed, it was necessary to cut the ice on a near-by pond in order to fulfill her wishes, and she suffered no ill effects from this. How glad we would be, if some of the younger members coming into the faith would show such zeal and desire! Then no excuse would be made to put off this important step until a "more convenient season."

Bro. C. E. Randall's Truth Seekers' Class, and my True Blue Class, recently planned for a weiner roast. The weatherman failed to cooperate, yet the buses and weiners were ready for use, so the young people went to the home of our elder, Bro. Joseph Fletcher, where an indoor roast was held. How important it is to join together to make a success of doing the next best thing, if the intended plans fail! I believe such cooperation could and should be displayed in our church work.

The recent visit of Bro. and Sr. Charles Netts and Sr. Grover Gordon of the Lawrenceville, Ohio, church was greatly enjoyed by all. At the Sunday school hour, Sr. Netts spoke to us about their plan of contributing toward a fund for aiding our retired ministers to enter the Golden Rule Home. The bank, modeled after the Home, was accepted from Sr. Netts with thanks by our assistant superintendent, Bro. Joseph Fletcher.

Another, Bro. Jones, was given the right hand of fellowship after services Sunday night. His brother George and sister Ruth were received into the church a short time ago. We know their mother, Mrs. Andrew Jones, is filled with joy over this step which has been taken by her family—her only regret being, that their father did not live to see the event.

Last Monday evening, after our Bible-study period, Bro. Netts gave us a treat with his moving pictures, collected from his various trips. We especially appreciated seeing many pictures of the different Churches of God throughout the United States. Some others will, perhaps, have the chance of seeing the only church of our faith in Canada, situated at Fonthill, Ont., as Bro. Netts snapped some views of it while here.

NOTICE

The publishing committee of the National Berean Society is co-operating in a tract-a-day campaign for the distribution of tracts in accordance with the command to "publish the gospel." Each individual is asked to obligate himself to distribute one tract a day between October 28 and December 16—or, an equivalent fifty tracts at any time during this same period.

Many ingenious ways have been devised to accomplish this. Some leave them on stands or tables where they may be found after you have called. Others have done them up with an attractive bit of ribbon and dropped them along city streets where they will attract attention. Who knows?—a single throw from an airplane might do it all at once in the midst of a city.

Either Berean or National Bible Institution tracts are available for this purpose ranging in price from fifteen cents for fifty in the single page tracts to sixty cents for fifty in any eight-page tract. It will cost each individual only from one third cent to one cent per day to assist in this wholesale attempt to spread the gospel.

To make this campaign more attractive, we are making this special offer. If you are among the first fifteen to order your supply of fifty tracts for this campaign, and if your order is received within ten days after you see this notice, your money will be returned to you. The National Berean Society will furnish you with your fifty-day supply of tracts, absolutely free of charge. This supply will include: 10 "Pleasures of Youth," by J. R. LeCrone; 10 "Resurrection," by S. E. Magaw; 10 "Kingdom of God," by Harry Goekler; 10 "What Must I Do to Be Saved?" by J. F. Waggoner; 10 "Fundamental Bible Teachings of the Church of God," by James M. Watkins.

At the close of this campaign, those who complete distribution and notify the undersigned will be eligible for a chance at a special award that will be made to the individual who, in the opinion of the committee, used the most novel and effective means in distributing his or her tracts. Your methods should be included in your final letter at the close of the campaign. Orders must be mailed at once to the National Bible Institution. This is the Lord's campaign; let's go over the top.

James M. Watkins, Chairman Publishing Committee.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

"I shall, D.V., preach at Driggs, Ark., over the second Sunday in November; at Cleveland, Ark., over the third Sunday; then I begin a series of special meetings, Monday night, November 18, at McGintytown, Ark."—T. A. Drinkard.

Sr. F. M. Cawly, Franklin, Ind., has recently been under a physician's care, but is now recovering. She may be addressed in care of the Masonic Home.

"Each kind word is a jewel, strung on a golden thread."—Mrs. Mae Nedrow, Oregon, Ill.

Sr. Ray Adams reports that she and her husband, formerly of Omaha, Nebr., are now residing at Salem, Ore.

An idea not patented: The executive board of the Fonthill, Ont., church has appointed Sr. Irene Holland as reporter and subscription solicitor for The Restitution Herald. We are reasonably sure that the Fonthill idea is not patented.

"One ought to be thankful that he can be busy for the Lord in these trying times."—James A. Patrick, Ashland, Ohio.

Sr. Olive Stephenson, Beaumont, Texas, reports: "Mrs. K. C. Humphreys of Royal, Ark., is enjoying a visit at the home of her daughter, Mrs. G. B. Sprinkle, Cheyenne, Wyo. Mrs. E. M. Morris and the writer are expecting to see their mother, Mrs. Humphreys, also Mrs. Sprinkle and family, at their homes in Beaumont, Texas, during the Christmas season."

Do nothing, write nothing, be nothing, if you fear criticism.

Iowa Fall Conference at Koszta, begins Friday, October 18, and ends Sunday, October 20, in the new church building.

The brethren at Niagara Falls, N. Y., are laying a new floor in their house of worship.

"There are bright prospects for the work here; everyone seems anxious to go forward. Several of the young people are thinking seriously of being baptized, and we are talking of starting a Berean class."—Virginia Smith, Russellville, Ark.

"Please accept these testimonials of our children's quarterlies. I hope they will open the way to others to use this splendid material. It has certainly filled a need in our school."—H. W. Stadden, superintendent of Golden Rule Sunday School, Cleveland, Ohio.

"We are glad to know that Bros. Austin and Siple are again in charge of congregations. Our prayers are for them and for all our preachers, that they may not only "preach the word," but that the Word may be heard and heeded."—Arthur Gilbey, Winona, Ont.

Bro. L. E. Conner was called to Delta, Ohio, October 12, to conduct a funeral service.

At this writing, plans are being made for students of the Bible Training School, Sr. Orpha LeMasurier, Margaret Magaw, and the editor to visit the brethren at Graytown, Wis., Saturday and Sunday, October 19 and 20.

"We are greatly pleased to have the G. E. Marsh family with us again, after an absence of nine years. They are all splendid workers."—J. Bradley Crundwell, 4631 Saturn St., Los Angeles, Calif.

BOWRING, OKLAHOMA

Bro. T. A. Drinkard conducted a series of meetings beginning September 19 and ending September 29. The attendance was fairly good.

The sermons were very inspiring, and we were sorry to see Bro. and Sr. Drinkard leave. Mrs. W. J. Fine.

BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL NEWS

Don't expect too much from your writer this week, as he is just recovering from bruises and breaks received from schoolmates, who misunderstood him in last week's column.

Ellsworth Routson spent last Sunday, October 13, officiating at Rockford, Ill., Richard Smith at Grand Rapids, Mich., Alan McLain at Dixon, Ill., and Celaine Randall at Koszta, Iowa. The remaining students occupied themselves with studies, church, and odd jobs.

The Bible Training School is rich in spiritual upbuild. It is a place where one can really grasp the meaning of the truth and the realization of the world's need for it. We put in plenty of conscientious study, and have the right atmosphere for one to "settle down" to work. Members of the Church of God, or any others interested, should see that their children, or those young people near them, be encouraged to enter the School. We need leaders in all fields of Christian activity.

On Monday, October 7, the student body had the pleasure of having a class led by Bro. C. E. Lapp. Although Bro. Lapp was somewhat taken by surprise, his message was very much appreciated. He expressed that the world had great need of spiritual food. Even when Christ taught (see Matt. 9:24), the multitude was in such need of this food, that He was moved with compassion toward them. They are even now more destitute in this respect. As we look about us, we see a great need for something; there is a lack of something that the world cannot give. The need is Christ. Bro. Lapp stated that when he began in the ministry, he was of the opinion that people were not ministering to him in the way they should. However, he assured us that he had changed his idea. Continuing, he said that he realized, now, that he was to minister unto them.

In a study of the life of Christ, we can easily see that Christ saw a need as He went about. His main reason for ministering was, of course, to preach, but He ministered to the people's physical needs as well as their spiritual needs. He fed them, He healed them, and He cleansed them. We do not like to picture Christ as one having only one view in mind, but to look at Him as a companion, as a teacher, as a helpmate, and as a counselor. He had a word of sympathy, a word of encouragement, and above all a word of love. We, likewise, must be as Christ was, truly seeing a need and ministering according to that need. We must administer to the physical to gain the spiritual. Christ said that He came that we might have life more abundantly. He was not only speaking of the life to come, but of our temporal lives, for what life is fuller than a true Christian life?

The harvest is plenteous, the laborers few.

We should encourage others to live the Christian life and to work, for we know that we, as Christians, are to present our bodies a living sacrifice. We can believe everything, but unless we are willing to help financially, unless we are willing to take active part, we might as well be in the world, for it will profit nothing unless we are a peculiar people, zealous of good works. We know that "faith without works is dead." It is our duty to teach people to give, so they might receive the blessings that God has intended for them. We should encourage young people to give their lives to the Lord, for there is nothing better. After all, life's journey is only a few years, but our reign with Christ will be eternal. Wouldn't it pay to give up a few things for a short time, to gain something for eternity? God requires so little for such a great reward, which we will have in due season if we are faithful. (See Gal. 6:9.)

Christ, in His few years of ministry, influenced more people than anyone in history. His influence did not end with His ascension, for He still has influence, both in spirit and in teaching. May we influence a few by our lives! We must sell ourselves. Our duty is to turn people from the world, to turn men's lives from sin to Christ. We should be co-workers with God, laborers together. We must minister, help, have compassion and sympathy, and ask God to help and direct us.

Now is our opportunity, may we take advantage of it—study hard and benefit greatly.

OVERMYER - FEECE

At a ceremony in the Burr Oak, Ind., Church of God, Saturday morning, September 14, 1940, Miss Margaret Overmyer, Culver, Ind., daughter of Bro. and Sr. Dewey Overmyer, Culver, Ind., became the bride of Burton Feece, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Feece, Rochester, Ind. The wedding vows were exchanged before an improvised altar of fern and gladioli, with Elder J. W. McLain officiating. Mrs. Albert Overmyer, accompanied by Mrs. Elgie Good, sang "Because," and "I Love You Truly." Mrs. Good played the wedding march and the recessional. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

After the ceremony, a reception and luncheon were held in the home of the bride's parents for the attendants and the immediate families of the bride and groom. After a short trip, the couple will be at home at 409 Nursery Street, Plymouth, Ind.

DR. SYLVIA MORRON

Sylvia C. Morron, daughter of Richard and Malissa Cole, was born June 10, 1880, in Salem, Ohio, and died September 26, in the Salem City Hospital. Both she and her husband, Dr. Roy Morron, practiced for a few years in Salem. She was a member of the Church of God.

Surviving are: her husband, now of Columbus, Ohio; one son, Wayne, of Columbus; and a sister, Mrs. Ora Thompson, of Buffalo, N. Y.

Funeral services were conducted at the Stark Memorial, September 28, Bro. Clarence Bower delivering the address. All pallbearers were members of the Church of God. Burial was made in Hope Cemetery.

Roy Morron.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by National Bible Institution
Oregon, Illinois

The Restitution Herald is the official organ of the General Conference of the Church of God. It is published by the National Bible Institution at Oregon, Illinois.

L. E. Conner Business Manager
Subscription Rate.—51 issues per annum, $2.00.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him, (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

"When the Church Builds Evangelism, Evangelism Will Build the Church."

Illinois Quarterly Conference

For those who attended the Quarterly Conference at Marshall, September 27-29, there was real inspiration. Every church in the State was represented, except one, and we hope the next Conference will have representatives from every church. The very fact that so many were able to be there from the different churches made the Conference intensely interesting and uplifting.

Another thing that was very noticeable was a full attendance of the members of the Conference Board. The church people of this State may well be proud of those to whom they have entrusted the Conference work. Numerous items of business were discussed, and plans are already being formulated for the betterment of our work.

The weather was ideal, the attendance good, the hospitality of the Marshall brethren one hundred per cent, and the Lord blessed our fellowship. Put a circle around the next quarterly conference date—March 29, 30, 1940, at Ripley—and plan to attend. You will receive a welcome!

Can You Can?

It has been suggested that the ladies of the different churches will do good work if they will can some foodstuffs for our next annual conference. All sorts of fruits, berries, or vegetables will be very acceptable. Two-quart jars will save time and expense.

An extra row of beans, carrots, or potatoes in your garden next spring will help supply the Conference menu with a greater variety of foodstuffs than heretofore.

A Pastor for Every Church

Statistics reveal some very startling things, and especially about churches with pastors. The thing we are interested in is that the churches are stronger spiritually, and increase in numbers more rapidly when regular services are being conducted. For all churches in this State, we are working that they may have full-time pastors.

Kindness

Kindness is one of the fruits of the Spirit of God working in the human heart. It is called gentleness, but we can see they are synonymous in meaning. "Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you" (Eph. 4:32). There is a saying that one can never fool dogs or children. Many a dog runs down the back alley because of the unkind treatment he may receive from some thoughtless boy, and many a child's life is ruined because he has never had a home where the Spirit of the Lord is the prevailing rule—but both respond to kindness.

Kindness bears the other fellow's burden, and helps to lift the load instead of making it heavier. It takes strength to be kind, but anyone can criticize and find fault. It takes the will to do right, even in spite of the inborn desire to cut and slash the other fellow to the bone when he makes a mistake. Kindness forgives, and when we walk by the Spirit of Christ we find forgiveness is easy, for He has forgiven us so much.

Kindness, when genuine, is shown to all, regardless of whether they are friend or stranger. "If ye do good to them which do good to you, what thank have ye? for sinners also do even the same" (Luke 6:33).

It was because of Jesus' kindly attitude toward all men that the multitude followed Him. This same loving position won for Him followers that were willing to die, rather than to deny Him. What force and power of soldiers could not do, He did through His sympathetic, understanding touch. Millions have been influenced by Jesus and His teachings, and the kind word, the kind act, the kind thought were all a part of His life.

Hardness of heart and sharpness of tongue can in no way reveal the Savior to the world, but only when we are kind and tenderhearted do we manifest to others the Savior who loved us so much.

May God, who is over all, give us the greatness to be kind and tenderhearted, forgiving one another as He forgave us.

THE GOLDEN-RULE-HOME BANK

In accord with action taken at the last General Conference, Sister Charles Netts, chairman of the committee to provide means whereby our aged ministers and their wives might receive care in Golden Rule Home, here presents a replica of the Golden Rule Home. It is a bank (see the slot on the roof) which this committee hopes to place in all our Sunday schools.

Brother Charles Netts, who is assisting his wife in the making and distributing of these banks, writes: "Milton said, 'They also serve who only stand and wait,' but the Golden Rule Home is standing and waiting for those who serve, if Sister Netts' benevolent plan succeeds. She hopes to place in each Sunday school of the Church of God one of these miniature Golden-Rule-Home banks.

"The accumulated funds from these banks will be used to insure a home for our aged preachers and their wives when they can no more serve. Each church or Sunday school is urged to participate in this much needed program. If you have not received your Golden-Rule-Home bank, write to C. L. Netts, 1013 Pine Street, Springfield, Ohio, and it will be mailed immediately."

For further information about this project, please turn to the "Among-the-Churches" section, where Sister Netts writes under the heading of "The Golden-Rule-Home Bank."

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March, 1879.

It Can Be Done

Many small churches, discouraged by having so few or scattered members, have pitied themselves into the undertaker's parlor. Following the funeral, it is sometimes difficult to find even a marker.

Three years ago, for instance, we attempted to find a certain church in Cortland, Illinois, where we had preached our first sermon. Though the town is small, we were unable to find the building, and at last inquired of a citizen as to where the church was. Studying for a moment and peering over the spectacles slid well down his nose, he answered, "It used to be right over thar, but I guess the people got discouraged and quit." Something gouging at the heart forbade other than our nod to his explanation, and we drove away. . . . Other ministers, too, and in all denominations, have or may yet experience similar circumstances. When ritual supplants the Spirit, when cathedral supplants the monastery, when a thousand worldly interests cut short the preaching of the Word and the praying to God, what else can be expected than God's permission, at least, for the members to "got discouraged and quit"?

Sensing this trend among the smaller congregations to become discouraged and to disband, we are especially glad to hear, now and then, of some small congregation that is faithfully forging ahead.

The church at Los Angeles, California, for instance, made a way to erect a house of worship. The following quotation from a letter written by one of the zealous members of the Los Angeles congregation fully proves what can be done: "We have paid off all bills against our PARSONAGE, and are starting with a clean slate, with Brother G. E. Marsh as our pastor. An eight-thousand-dollar equipment in four years by a small group with its members greatly scattered—how is that for a record?" Moreover, though any minister should be able to sing like the miller: "I envy no one, no, not I; and no one envies me," he might casually mention that it inspires him a little to learn that the Los Angeles congregation is supporting its pastor fully as well as any other church in the denomination.

Whenever one says that any good work to exalt the cause of Christ cannot be done, he may be reasonably sure of soon hearing that somebody with Gideon faith is doing it! God requires His children to do only those things that can be done. Why get discouraged? Why disband?

A Short Story of Three Dogs

A mongrel yapped at the heels of a great Dane. The Dane, little disturbed by so nearly nothing, trotted leisurely on his way. Not daring to bark at lesser dogs, the yapper awaited the return of the great Dane, which he knew had neither time nor inclination to shake the gizzard out of him. However, becoming impatient to bark some more, the mongrel made a mistake. Later, the great Dane returned, trotting leisurely along, and was a little puzzled to notice that all the noise there was—was silence.

Bible Training School Afield

"All work, and no play, makes Jack a dull boy," though not quoted from the Book, well merits the title of a proverb. Lest this saying should become fulfilled in our Bible Training School, a trip was planned for the students to visit the "little flock" at Graytown, Wisconsin, Saturday and Sunday, October 19, 20.

Fifteen years ago, when the editor entered into full-time service in the ministry, the church at Graytown was his first appointment. This meeting had been scheduled for us by Brother C. E. Randall. A few months later, both Mrs. Magaw and the writer went to live and work with these brethren. Thus, the recent journey of the Bible Training School was of particular interest and joy to us, for in the group was Brother Randall's son, Celaine, and Mrs. Magaw, witnesses with us of the ever-expanding joys of laboring in the gospel fields.

The brethren at Graytown will be among our lifelong friends. Because they are few in number, their faith shines all the brighter. We trust that when the Lord returns, He will find loyal workers where we first put our hand to the plow. (Cp. Luke 9:62.) See the Bible Training School news for further report of the trip into Wisconsin, a trip to be long remembered by those who went.

The Kingdom of Heaven

By H. B. Hathaway

WHAT the Bible says about the Kingdom of heaven is vastly different from what is taught in many of today's churches. It is popularly believed, for instance, that the Kingdom of heaven will be up in the sky, but the Bible locates it here upon the earth.

There are always rulers who manage the affairs of a kingdom. Likewise, there will be those who rule with Christ in the Kingdom of God. In this present age, the church dispensation, God is selecting those who qualify for positions of such rulership. There are many called through the gospel, but there are few of those called who will be chosen. According to Revelation 5:9, 10, the chosen ones will be "kings and priests" who "shall reign on the earth."

This company of faithful ones will, we believe, escape the terrible tribulation that is coming upon the earth. They will be caught up in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and though they will "ever be with the Lord" (1 Thess. 4:17), it does not necessarily follow that they will be eternally in the sky. According to Zechariah 14:4, 5, when the Lord returns from heaven to "stand . . . upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem," the saints will come with Him. Though there will be many in this company, they will be few in comparison to the many more who were called by the gospel.

Next, let us consider another company, mentioned in Revelation 7, which will also be in the Kingdom of heaven. John saw "a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues." Concerning this group, a certain elder asked, "What are these which are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they?" The answer was, "These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." The present conditions of the world are well described in Matthew 24:6-8, where Jesus says, "Ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars . . . but the end is not yet. For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places. All these are the beginning of sorrows." It seems that the company of Revelation 7 will be composed of those who come out of the tribulation mentioned in Matthew 24, which tribulation is fast approaching.

Thus far we have been considering those who will have some office in the Kingdom. Let us now consider a third party which will be largest of all the groups. It will be composed of the citizens of the Kingdom. Isaiah prophesied, "It shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains . . . and all nations shall flow unto it. And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem" (Isa. 2:2, 3). Likewise, Revelation 15:4 says, "All nations shall come and worship before thee; for thy judgments are made manifest," and we read in Zechariah 2:11: "Many nations shall be joined to the Lord in that day, and shall be my people." David, too, prophesied, "All kings shall fall down before him: all nations shall serve him" (Psalm 72:11), and "All nations whom thou hast made shall come and worship before thee, O Lord; and shall glorify thy name" (85:9).

H. B. Hathaway

The following notes will further help the student to discern that the Kingdom of heaven is to be upon the earth:

(1) The Kingdom of God was taken from the Jews (Matt. 21:43).

(2) The Kingdom of heaven suffered violence, and the violent took it by force (Matt. 11:12).

(3) Jesus promised that in the "regeneration" the twelve apostles would reign upon thrones over the twelve tribes of Israel (Matt. 19:28).

(4) Solomon sat on the throne of the Lord before God's ancient Kingdom was overturned (1 Chron. 28:5; 29:23).

(5) David's throne was promised to Jesus, forever (Luke 1:30-34).

(6) The overcomers are to sit with Christ in His throne (Rev. 3:21).

(7) Christ will reign on David's throne (Acts 2:29-32).

(8) The ancient Kingdom of God is to continue in its overturned condition until Christ returns (Ezek. 21:25-27).

(9) In the last days the Lord's house is to be established in the top of the mountain at Jerusalem (Isa. 2:1-6; Micah 4:1-9).

(10) The Kingdom of heaven, though starting small, will grow until it includes (Please turn to page 11)

Our First Line of Offense

By Otto Dick

AS A NEWLY elected member of the Board of Religious Education, I feel more free to express my convictions as to our urgent need for trained ministers for our several churches and of the wisdom of maintaining a good school to provide the kind of training needed. I trust that my remarks upon this subject will be understood as an honest effort to be constructive. I have no thought of bringing any discredit upon any of our ministers of the past or present who have served us well without benefit of organized ministerial education. If anyone is to be censured, it is we who have neglected to provide the means for such education.

It should not be necessary to defend the present nine-months' School, but in the following paragraphs are a few facts that to me are so self-evident that I should like to set them before our members. If you agree with me, perhaps you will lend your constructive support to a good cause by helping to inform our people about the School and about our need for its product; namely, well-trained ministers.

Perhaps many things that were good enough for our fathers are good enough for us, but we are in a revolutionary era in which conditions are changing rapidly. Stronger forces are competing with the church for souls that are precious. The church is faced with more trying days to come; thus, we need in our ministers the best skill, education, and special training that we can afford. We shall be derelict in our duty to ourselves, to our nation, and to God, if we do not give our religious leaders the kind of training that will equip them for the task ahead of them.

You have probably heard the expression, that one learns to do by doing, that one learns to teach by teaching, or that one learns to preach by preaching. This is fundamentally true, but one should not forget that knowledge of subject matter is one of the first essentials for the successful teacher or preacher, and that practice in doing a thing under guidance or supervision is better than unsupervised study or practice. Self-educated or self-trained men are few. They often get their education the hard or long way, and lose the many social values of organized education. The self-made minister is to be admired for his initiative and industry, but the nature of his education is such that he is in danger of narrowness. He learns how to preach in the hard school of experience which is expensive and often discouraging. There was a time when industry, business, and the general public were more tolerant with the beginner than now. A boy or girl seeking work today should be pretty well prepared for the position which he is seeking.

A minister should be just as well prepared for his position as should any other professional man, because he must serve a congregation that is fairly well educated. He speaks to a more critical congregation than did the ministers of fifty years ago; therefore, it is imperative that he have a kind of spiritual and academic education that will enable him to command the respect and admiration of the community in which he works. The successful minister of today is a good organizer; he has a good command of English, and has had effective training in the art of speech; he has cultivated the art of getting along with people, and has a genuine interest in saving souls. He has learned the art of leadership and cooperation, and has a thorough working knowledge of the essential truths of Christianity. These things are not learned by accident.

If we had no teacher-training institutions, we would have many natural teachers, of course; but few people would contend that special training is not essential for teachers. We are willing for our state to spend millions to train specialists in other vocations, but we are not so eager that our minister be a specialist in his field. We want a trained veterinarian when our hogs get sick, and we want a college-trained agriculturist to advise us on better farming methods. Shouldn't we insist that our spiritual advisors and leaders have a comparable amount of education!

Our fieldmen report many fertile fields for promising young ministers who are able to produce results. Many of our churches have only one preaching service each month, and a few have no minister. Nearly all of these could support full-time ministers, if those ministers were capable and available. Our people in many places are hungry for the gospel and will gladly pay for good ministers.

Another problem that will soon face us is that of vacancies left by retiring ministers. Many of our older ministers will soon be retiring from active service. They have had the advantage of years of valuable experience and faithful service; consequently, they will leave vacancies that will be difficult to fill unless we are well prepared to meet the demand.

One of the most highly commendable features of the present practice of training ministers in the Bible Training School sponsored by our General Conference is that it promotes unity and cooperation. The School program promotes loyalty and interest in the national work of our church, because our spiritual leaders will be trained in the environment of our national headquarters. They will be receiving their education under conditions that will acquaint them with both state and national work and that will inspire them to lead our several churches to a better understanding of the several activities of our national organization. The School itself is a project which should be a strong force in uniting us more closely, in that we are sponsoring one more common program.

With the continued loyal support of our churches and with an anticipated growth in enrollment, we may look forward to brighter days for the Church of God. We should look forward to the time when we shall certify all ministers through our national organization, and on the basis of training and experience. We should unite in earnest prayer that our School may enjoy a growth that will result in a great spiritual growth among our churches. Through our united effort, new congregations should be added to us and others saved that are now near death for lack of leadership. "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel" is a definite command. To have a share, as a church, in obeying the command is a privilege that brings satisfaction and joy.

The Lord's Throne

By T. A. Drinkard

SOLOMON was not in heaven while seated on the throne of David and the throne of the Lord, as He reigned only while living on the earth. We read, "Then sat Solomon upon the throne of David his father; and his kingdom was established greatly" (1 Kings 2:12). "Then Solomon sat on the throne of the Lord as king instead of David his father, and prospered; and all Israel obeyed him" (1 Chron. 29:23). If Solomon could reign on the throne of the Lord, and be on the earth at the same time, the Lord's throne could not have been in heaven. Our critics, though, cite us to Psalm 11:4, saying: "The Lord is in his holy temple, the Lord's throne is in heaven: his eyes behold, his eyelids try, the children of men." David was at this very time reigning on his own throne. Hence, there was a throne of the Lord in heaven, and a throne of the Lord on the earth—David's throne being the "throne of the Lord."

This would prove one of two things: either the Lord had two thrones, or there were two separate and distinct beings being called Lord. That there were two personal beings called "Lord" is proved by the Scriptures. We note that "The Lord God shall give" (Luke 1:32). Here we read of the Lord God. Let us read Luke 2:11, which says: "Unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." Here is one born who is Christ the Lord, and the Lord God will give Him the throne of His father David.

Again we read, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne" (Rev. 3:21). Here it is clearly shown that Christ made a distinction between His throne and that of His Father. Hence, this establishes the fact that there are two thrones. Therefore, we submit that the throne of the Lord upon which Solomon and David sat was the throne that the Lord God promised our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and was on earth; not in heaven.

The throne upon which Jesus Christ is seated with the Father is the Father's throne in heaven. He has been thereon since His ascension, and has promised His faithful people a place with Him on His own throne when He ascends it at His second coming.

It is written, "The seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever" (Rev. 11:15). This will take place or be fulfilled at the sounding of the seventh and last trumpet mentioned in the Scriptures. As that is future, it makes the reign of Jesus Christ also future. The Spirit of God directed Isaiah to say, "In mercy shall the throne be established: and he shall sit upon it in truth in the tabernacle of David, judging, and seeking judgment, and hastening righteousness" (Isa. 16:5). This puts the throne in the Tabernacle of David. Christ will be seated thereon, according to the Spirit of God. To affirm that this tabernacle of David is now in heaven is nothing short of human theology, by which men and women are blinded to the truth.

Again, the Spirit led James to say, "Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name. And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written (see Amos 9), After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen (Please turn to page 10)

LIKE the prodigal son who "would fain have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat," multitudes of both men and maidens have today estranged themselves from the heavenly Father, and, though hopelessly, they are trying nonetheless to fatten themselves with the pleasure and passion husks of the mire.

666 — "The Number of (a) Man"

Since the day that Nebuchadnezzar pillaged the Holy City, God has permitted Babylonian confusion to trample, permeate, and dominate the world. Man is having his day! He continues to boast: "Is not this great Babylon, that I have built?" The beast, the beast! Let him "eat grass as oxen" (Dan. 4:32).

Revelation 13:11 prophetically speaks of the arising of a beast which "had two horns like a lamb," though it "spake as a dragon." Lamb? Dragon? Opposites indeed, yet combined into one! Let us study: Revelation 5:6, 12; 6:1; 7:17; 14:1, 4, 10, and various other texts most emphatically identify "the Lamb" as Jesus Christ. Obviously, then, this "beast" which is to arise, having "horns like a lamb," will feign a resemblance to Christ, yet the inspired Revelator foretold that this "beast" would speak "as a dragon." Plainly, Revelation 12:9 identifies "the great dragon" as "that old serpent called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world." Thus, the "beast" will pose as Christ, though he is actually Devilized! The drippings from his poison fangs will betray him as not being Him of whom it is written, "Neither was any deceit in his mouth" (Isa. 53:9).

This "beast" deceiver, professing to be a savior, will cause "all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads . . . that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark of the beast, or the number of his name. . . . Count the number of the beast: for it is the number of a man; and his number is Six hundred threescore and six" (Rev. 13:16-18). We are informed that the Greeks used no indefinite article in their language. Hence, "the number of a man" might be more correctly read by omitting the word "a"; that is, "The number of the beast . . . is the number of man." If it can be shown that a single six is man's number, it would be altogether possible that 6, 6, 6 would indicate man at his acme of success and power, sort of a "Nebuchadnezzarized" Hitler.

Man was created on the sixth day. Six days were appointed unto man wherein to do his work. One of the Philistine giants who, in brute strength defied Israel, was so created, it seems, as to indicate his carnal characteristics, for he "had on every hand six fingers, and on every foot six toes" (2 Sam. 21:20). Might it not be that the number "six" is Scripturally symbolical of man? Thus, when the world so surely needs the return of Christ, may it not be that the bestial Antichrist will arise to usurp all worship and fealty? Needing Christ, men will be easy prey for the counterfeit Antichrist.

Like Nimrod of old, mighty hunters again hunt their prey throughout the earth. Like the giants who were before the Flood, six-cubits-and-a-span dictators again flirt with "the daughters of men," and again plan and plot "only evil continually." When the dictator of dictators is fully revealed, we may be sure the earth will be "filled with violence" (Gen. 6:13).

The foretold number of man being 666 indicates that this last-day "fling" of carnal flesh will be the final, most desperate, and most mannish effort of man to rule the world in Babylonish style. It is, so to speak, man intensified, man self-exalted to the third power. If one says, "Fire," there is nothing especially alarming in the word. If, however, one repeats the word, saying, "Fire, fire!" a considerably more emphatic impression is made upon the mind; and if one cries aloud, "Fire — Fire — Fire!" ev-everyone who has ears to hear understands that it is time to be moving—time to “escape all these things that shall come to pass.” Likewise, when the dragon-lamb Antichrist arises, his number of 6!—6!—6! will sound the alarm of terrible disaster.

“Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for it is the number of man.” This beast, the Lamb-pretending Antichrist, will not only be a man, but there will be in him such a total absence of God that he is prophetically and inspirationally called: Man—Man—Man! . . . Let him read of Nebuchadnezzar’s claws! Let him feel the dew of heaven. Let him cease to mark the hand and head of every man for commercial gain; and dine, instead, seven years with the oxen. Mighty man, even though Satan epitomized, is only flesh! Only God is God!

“Then Shall Be Great Tribulation”

Jesus told His disciples, “Then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be” (Matt. 24:21). Moreover, Jesus foretold, in connection with His prophecy about the tribulation, that there would “arise false Christs.” Yet, He warned true believers to not be deceived, even though the antichrists would “shew great signs and wonders; inasmuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect” (Matt. 24:24).

Jesus promised, “Immediately after the tribulation . . . the powers of the heavens shall be shaken: and then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven . . . and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory” (Matt. 24:29, 30). Let the Antichrist persecute the woman (Israel) “which brought forth the man child (Jesus)” (Rev. 12:13). Let this dragon also “make war with the remnant of her seed (the church), which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ” (v. 17). Let him rip in “great wrath,” for “he hath but a short time” (v. 12).

Why should saints of God be alarmed by the night cries of any monster who will not dare to walk to and fro in the earth when the Day dawns? In fact, the Apostle Paul assures us that at the coming of Christ “shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming: even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders” (2 Thess. 2:8, 9). Christian, “Watch and pray,” “the night cometh, when no man can work”!

Chased by a Lion; Met by a Bear

The tribulation, however, will not be limited to the sins of an arrogant Beast; God’s plagues will drive sinners “into the holes of the rocks . . . when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth” (Isa. 2:19). “Alas for the day! . . . As a destruction from the Almighty shall it come. . . . How do the BEASTS GROAN!” (Joel 1:15.) “Let all the inhabitants of the land tremble: for the day of the Lord cometh” (2:1). “It is even the time of Jacob’s trouble; but he shall be saved out of it” (Jer. 30:7). “Woe unto you that desire the day of the Lord! To what end is it for you? the day of the Lord is darkness and not light. As if a man did flee from a lion, and a bear met him” (Amos 5:18, 19). Hitler, beware!

“When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory: and before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats” (Matt. 25: 31, 32). The goats shall gnaw “everlasting punishment.”

Chased by a lion (England?), met by a bear (Russia?), another Beast may “groan” and flee for the “gnashing of teeth” at the bar of God and the judgment seat of Christ.

S T R E N G T H

By Harvey Krogh, Jr.

I thought, by practice day by day,
 My sin I'd overcome;
 And when I'd practiced long enough,
 By practice, strength would come.
 To my regret, my scheme has failed,
 For I was tempted sore.
 And when I trusted in my strength,
 I found, I'd sinned the more.
 Now, I have come to this belief:
 The power that keeps me right
 Is not my practice or my strength,
 But God's great power and might.
 So trust in God always, my friend;
 Forsake Him not one day.
 There's power in fellowship with God
 To keep you in His way.

down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up: that the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things" (Acts 15:14-17). The Lord God will give unto the Lord Jesus Christ the throne upon which David ruled—but David reigned upon earth, therefore Christ will also reign upon the earth. The unscriptural practice of applying the many passages of Scripture relating to the Kingdom, to the church and her work in this age, is contrary to the Scriptures, and God will yet punish those who so teach.

Those who teach the one-throne theology to sustain the theory that Jesus Christ established His Kingdom upon the first Pentecost after His resurrection, offer such texts as Isaiah 2:1-4; Micah 4:1-3, and Daniel 2:44, as positive proof that such happened at that time. But facts will not permit such wresting of Scripture. Herein reference is made to judgment, but judgment is to come when the Lord comes (1 Cor. 4:5). The Kingdom, likewise, is to come when the Lord comes (2 Tim. 4:1), and the Lord will not ascend His throne until He comes (Matt. 25:31).

The one-throne theory teaches that while Saul and others who followed him reigned on God's throne on the earth, God did not have a throne to rule on until He transferred it back to heaven after the last earthly king ceased to reign. This unscriptural effort is made to disprove the teaching that Jesus Christ will yet reign upon the earth upon the restored throne of David. God's Word teaches that Christ will do so, and that should be enough authority for us who believe.

SELECTED FOR BIBLE AND AUTO BUYERS

A story is circulating about a farmer who bought a new car twenty years ago, but it was never seen on the road after he got it home. Following his recent death the car's cyclometer showed that it had been driven only the distance from the salesroom where it was purchased to the barn where it had been stored. On this The Evangelical Messenger remarks: "Such treatment of a purchased automobile is rare enough to make news; but to inventory the Bibles that have met such a fate would take many newspaper pages. Though the Bible is every year's "best seller," yet there are many long after purchase that show little signs of use."

BUILDING THE TABERNACLE

Like the Tabernacle, the response was greater than expected, and the people had to be restrained in their giving. In verse 9, the joy of freehearted giving is expressed: "Then the people rejoiced, for that they offered willingly, because with perfect heart they offered willingly to the Lord: and David the king also rejoiced with great joy."

No matter what portion of our substance is given, whether it be a tithe or a double tithe as Israel regularly gave to the Lord, still one must be persuaded in his own heart what he is going to give and give it cheerfully, if there is to come any blessing and joy from the giving. Giving "grudgingly or of necessity" is not in harmony with the desire of the Lord. "This I say, He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully. Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver" (2 Cor. 9:6, 7).

The spirit of voluntary giving which was employed in the building of the Tabernacle and Temple, must also be the guiding spirit in the building of that spiritual temple composed of our bodies. "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?" (See 1 Cor. 3:16.)

When a man in Israel brought his sacrifice of burnt offering, he was to "offer it of his own voluntary will at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the Lord" (Lev. 1:3). It was this same freewill, voluntary motive that moved the Christ to offer Himself as our pass-over Lamb. "As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father: and I lay down my life for the sheep. . . . Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of my Father" (John 10:15, 17, 18).

Every person has received this same permission from the Creator, the choice of deciding whether he will walk in the broad way or follow the Christ in the narrow path that "leadeth unto life." The call, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest" (Matt. 11:28), now waits at the portals of our hearts, and "whosoever will" (Rev. 22:18) can accept or reject this mercy. If you accept Christ, it must be through your own free action. "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service" (Rom. 12:1).

the whole world (Matt. 13:31, 32; Dan. 7:27).

(11) Psalm 72 presents a splendid description of the future reign of Christ upon the earth.

(12) The kingdoms of this world are to become the kingdoms of our Lord who shall reign forever (Rev. 11:15).

(13) Christ's glorious reign will be in Jerusalem (Isa. 25:6-9; Matt. 5:35).

(14) The Kingdom was postponed (Luke 19:11-13) until Christ's return (Acts 1:10, 11).

(15) Christ will judge the living and the dead at His appearing and Kingdom (2 Tim. 4:1-3).

(16) A river will proceed out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb (Rev. 22:1-6; Ezek. 47).

(17) The redeemed "out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation" are to "reign on the earth" (Rev. 5:9, 10).

(18) The "little flock" is promised the Kingdom (Luke 12:32).

(19) The apostles asked Christ if He would restore the Kingdom at their time (Acts 1:6).

(20) The earth is intended for the children of men (Psalm 115:15, 16).

(21) The saints will possess the Kingdom (Dan. 7:22) when Christ returns (Hosea 3:4, 5; Amos 9:11).

(22) Consider the house of "many mansions" (John 14:2, 3) in the light of the following scriptures: Acts 15:15-17; Isaiah 60; 9:6, 7).

(23) The prayer "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth" will be answered when the throne of the Lord is established in Jerusalem (Jer. 3:14-19).

BUILDING YOUR LIBRARY

Book Reviews

By Arlen Marsh

Meador Publishing Company of Boston, Massachusetts, has contributed the best volume on one of the more perplexing questions of Christianity that these eyes have yet beheld.

The book is entitled, What Is the Unpardonable Sin?—and, with the exception that it occasionally alludes to the Holy Spirit as "He," it should be acceptable to almost any member of the Church of God. Its argument is good, its Biblical reasoning sound; it does, in short, offer the plainest and most satisfactory solution to the problem presented by Jesus' mention of a sin against the Holy Ghost.

The last chapter is comforting, although there is a certain weakness in the conclusions. It concerns how we can tell that we have not committed the unpardonable sin. This last chapter alone, however, despite its weaknesses, should be well worth the $1.00 the book costs to many conscience-trouble readers.

Not so good as the more expensive Rand McNally Bible Atlas, but plenty good enough for all practical purposes, is the Student's Historical Geography of the Holy Land. It's rather out-of-date now, to be sure; but what atlas-and-geography isn't, whether Biblical or otherwise?

It is planned for a textbook, but is so written as to be valuable as an ordinary reference work or for private lesson study. Illustrations—principally photographs—are numerous, and are supplemented by full-color maps in the back of the book. Text covers practically every geographical location mentioned in the Bible—briefly, it is true, but informatively. Any teacher would find the book worth buying.

Published by Doubleday, Doran; $2.00.

Rather off the line of strictly religious books is the Executive's Desk Book (John C. Winston; $5.95). It combines an excellent abridged dictionary, a comprehensive treatment of English grammar, an indexed world atlas, chronology and history, business practices, commercial law and forms, and a vast quantity of miscellaneous information valuable to any speaker, teacher, or writer. It's liberally illustrated, too.

"Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding" (Proverbs 3:5).

"The kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost."

Christian Example

Last week we studied about some facts in the life of John the Baptist. This week we shall consider some thoughts about his father, Zacharias.

Zacharias was a priest. His wife, Elisabeth, was the daughter of a priest. There are some interesting facts told us in Higley's Commentary. I shall try to tell you some of them.

The priesthood was divided into twenty-four groups, or courses. Each group served for eight days in the Temple, during a year. The priest who was to offer the incense was chosen by lot each week. This was the very highest honor a priest could have. What is so interesting is that a priest could perform this service only once during his lifetime. There were as many as fifty priests serving at one time in the Temple.

Now, Elisabeth had no children. This must have made Zacharias sad, but he was not thinking of that when he went to serve in the Temple! He was, for the first and last time during his life, to burn incense, when he went into the Temple of God. (See Luke 1:9.)

The angel of the Lord appeared to Zacharias, and told him he was to have a son—a son called John. The angel said John was not to drink wine or strong drink.

John did not use wine or strong drink. His parents must have taught him of the evils of such drinking. Our parents, today, point out the evils of drink, too. Any of us who read the daily papers can tell of the harm strong drink causes.

Our lesson, today, is for those of us who are Christians. We are told to be "temperate in all things."

Temperate in All Things

We know we must let some things entirely alone, as John did—strong drink, for example.

There are many things, in fact all things, are to be under control, if we want to shed forth God's light. We are not to do, or say, anything that might appear to be evil. We must not eat too much, talk harmfully about anyone, be selfish, or proud.

People who eat too much are called "gluttons" (Prov.

23:21). People who tell tales of others are called "tale-bearers" (Prov. 11:13). People who are selfish and care more for themselves than for God are called "idolaters" (1 Cor. 6:9). God resists the proud, but He gives grace to the humble (James 4:6). "Love thy neighbour as thyself."

ECE Club

Let us learn some known facts: There are sixty-six books in the Bible. "Bible" means "the books."

There are thirty-nine books in the Old Testament. The names of the first five books in order in the Bible are: Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy. These books are on early history.

New facts: The New Testament has twenty-seven books. ( $3 \times 9 = 27$ .) By using the number of books in the Old Testament and putting a "times" sign between them, we can remember the number in the New Testament.

The next twelve books of the Old Testament, in order, are of later history. They are: Joshua, Judges, Ruth, 1 Samuel, 2 Samuel, 1 Kings, 2 Kings, 1 Chronicles, 2 Chronicles, Ezra, Nehemiah, Esther.

Learn these this week. Let me know if you enjoy this.

"This is our part as Christians: to climb on,
With faces kindled from the heavenly light.
And ours to lift with us some weaker one
Who else might fall, and fail to reach the height.
No self-indulgence must our vision dim;
We must keep fit, both for ourselves and Him."

It Happened

Smith and Jones went to Alaska to prospect for gold, hiring some natives as guides. After several days of fairly decent weather, a real warm wave swept over the vicinity. Smith and Jones decided to get out and get a lot of work done in the good weather. The natives objected. They would not go any great distance from their huts. Smith pondered the situation, and decided that perhaps the natives had a good reason for their firm stand. Jones scoffed at them, and set out on a lone expedition. In a short time the cold wave struck, and Jones was found later—a human icicle.

Bereans, are you going to follow the example of Christ who said, "I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work"? Are you heeding the warnings of those who have studied before you? Are you putting forth every effort to find for yourselves the truth about the Kingdom of God? Smith didn't know for sure what was up, but he made a sincere effort to find out. Jones may have had a fleeting apprehension, but it was quickly dispelled by the vision of the possibilities ahead. Are you making your position in this world more secure, now, during the warm wave of business upturn, or are you, first, thoroughly investigating the warnings of the Scriptures? (See 1 Tim. 6:19.) An icicle is a useless thing.

Hear and Obey God's Word

By Mary Richardson

"If ye love me, keep my commandments." These words were spoken by our Savior, and they are a command that demands obedience. True love for Christ will manifest itself in obedience. "If any man love me, he will keep my words," said Jesus.

You recall the incident of Peter's declaration of his love for the Master. Christ questioned Peter three times about his love for the Master. Each time Peter assured Christ of his love, but the third questioning really hurt Peter, as it well reminded him of his third denial. Christ finally told Peter, "Follow me," which meant that Peter would have many trials and sufferings to undergo. Each would be a testing for Peter, and truly he came through with flying colors.

David, who was a man after God's own heart, uttered these very inspiring words, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." He recognized that the Word of God was in every sense a lamp, that therein was contained the way of the righteous and the wicked, and that principles were laid down which everyone must follow, if they were to have eternal life. David was very obedient to God; although he did sin, he kept God's law as nearly as could any mortal man.

Our love for Christ is reflected in proportion to our service, and should grow with each Christian experience. Love is always made manifest by the things we say and do. It is not enough to say, "I love Jesus," and then fail to keep His commandments. (See John 15:12.) The life we live reveals our love for Christ, or the lack of our love. Another way to prove our love for Christ is summed up in this verse, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God . . . and all these things shall be added unto you."

It was not only for Peter to show his love by doing the things that Christ told him, but it is necessary and wise for every Christian to do the Father's bidding. Love knows no bounds. "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." Christ is the perfect illustration of this verse, for truly He gave His life on Calvary that the world might be redeemed through His blood. To show that we really are sincere in our love for Christ, we should be more obedient to His commands. Do not be like the Pharisees of old—worshiping with the lips, while the heart is far from the Lord.

It is a common observation that love does not grow unless it is exercised. The church is a medium through which splendid opportunities are afforded for us to express our love in kind and thoughtful deeds. In every phase of life there are opportunities to help our fellow man, and we must ever strive to do good.

We should not neglect to tell to the world the "good news," for Christ said, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." Surely, we realize that the world is in serious need of the truth, and God holds us responsible for that which we could do and do not perform.

How many of us can say as did David, "I delight to do thy will, O God"? Let us obey God!

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALENDAR OF EVANGELISM

THE GOLDEN-RULE-HOME BANK

To the members of our beloved faith in these United States and Canada, we present this little bank (see front page), a replica of our Golden Rule Home for the housing and caring for the aged. It is our aim and hope to place one of these in every Sunday school to provide for a home for our retired ministers and their wives or widows, after they have given their best years to the Master's service and brought us to the knowledge of the truth and labored to keep us in the path of righteousness. They have not accumulated much worldly goods, for the joy of saving souls from death has been more than bread and meat to them.

When our ministers and their wives have reached the time which should be their rest, we hope to have a fund available which will provide their entrance fee to the Golden Rule Home, that they may not want for the necessities of this life. We are not asking for large donations, but we do hope that the good work will live as long as this little bank is before you. Just a penny a Sunday from every member of our faith will make it possible. Through our efforts, may we also get a vision of the joy that will come to those to whom the Master will say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: for I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: . . . naked, and ye clothed me. . . . Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Mrs. Charles Netts.

WESTERN IOWA

Our hearts were made very happy on a sunny Sunday in September, when five young people were baptized into Christ, in the Little Sioux River in western Iowa. These were: Harold and Frances Klindt of Lake View, Boyd and Bonnie Boyanovsky of Marathon, and Marcia Mae Carlson of Laurens. Elder A. M. Jones officiated, assisted by Elder J. Arthur Johnson. All these young people have grown up "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord," and it is a pleasure to see them take this step into full fellowship. May God guide their footsteps always.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Jones.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Mrs. Ida Orem; Levi Coffin; Leonard Pelton; Mrs. S. T. Stantial; Ella Randall (for another); F. O. Sapp; William Platts (self and others); Wayne Yows; Mrs. Mae Magnus (for others); Mrs. Bessie Hoag; A. M. Foreman (for another); Muriel Randall (for another); A. M. Jones (for another); Mrs. A. C. Mock (for another); Mrs. Fannie Knight; Mrs. John Long; William H. Boyer.

CALIFORNIA CHURCHES OF GOD CONFERENCE

The California Conference was held at Los Angeles for three days, beginning Friday evening, October 4, continuing through Sunday evening, October 6. On Friday evening, Sr. E. C. Railsback gave the address, "Workers Together With God." Bro. N. J. Macleod, president of the conference board, welcomed the Marshes back into our church. Classes were held in the church Saturday morning and afternoon; in the evening Bro. Arlen Marsh gave a sermon entitled "Baptism, the Heart of the Gospel."

There was Sunday school at 10:00 a.m., Sunday, and at 11:00 a.m. Bro. G. E. Marsh gave a sermon on the "Kingdom of God." Special music was rendered by the Pomona choir, also solos. Bro. Macleod presided at the Communion table. Picnic lunch was served in the pergola. At 2:00 p.m., the business session was held. The same officers were re-elected. A motion was made to adopt the following resolution: "Whereas our government has granted us freedom of speech and worship, and has assured us civil and religious liberties under the Constitution, therefore, be it resolved that we reaffirm our devotion to the flag of the United States of America and to the principles for which it stands."

Bro. J. E. Adamson had charge of the sermons which followed the business meeting. Sr. Bernice Carruthers, Bros. Robert Johns, Arlen Marsh, Dr. S. Phillip Meyers, and Wayne Thompson presented interesting talks.

At 7:00 p.m., following a song service, Bro. Marsh gave a sermon on "Thy Kingdom Come."

At the Sunday morning service, the church was filled to capacity, which seats one hundred thirty-five people. The meetings were very inspirational and instructive, and all were happy to have the Marsh family back again, after an absence of nine years.

OTISCO, INDIANA

Due to the condition of his eyes, which makes writing hard for him, Bro. O. J. Parker has asked me to send this report of his recent work at Otisco, Ind., a small village four miles north of Charleston. Bro. Parker believes this to be a good field of labor, as the Dupont Powder Company is locating a new plant at Charlestown, which will add some seven hundred families to this town in the near future.

A temporary building was obtained for one week. Bro. Parker and Bro. Henry Martin drove there with a truckload of chairs, organ, pulpit desk, etc., from the church in Kokomo. With but little time to advertise, they started their series of meetings, September 23-29. Bro. Parker delivered eight sermons. The average attendance was fifty-five, and the interest was excellent. There is not a member of the Church of God located in this field, but many are interested and hungry for the truth.

The building in which the meetings were held, had been rented, so Bro. Parker could have it for only one week. Because interested ones desire more services at Otisco, they plan to obtain another building soon. Bro. Parker hopes to establish a Sunday school and Berean class there, then he may call for the help of the State evangelist. It is our prayer that this labor of love may bear much fruit.

D. G. Harvey.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

Did you forget? Treasurer Orpha LeMasurier reports that several of the pledges made at General Conference for the deficit on last year's Bible Training School have not yet been paid. Thank you.

Bro. S. J. Lindsay reports a good interest in the work at Tempe, Ariz.

Bro. James McLain will be the guest speaker for the annual fall series of meetings at the Brush Creek Church of God near Tipp City, Ohio. Dates for the meeting are November 17-30.

"A welcome party will be given the new students of the Bible Training School, also Sr. Orpha LeMasurier and Diane, by the Oregon, Ill., church, Thursday evening, October 24."—Mrs. Lewis Lindsay.

Having completed the trip to Ashland and Cleveland, Ohio, Niagara Falls, N. Y., and Fonthill, Ont., Bro. Charles Netts of Springfield, Ohio, who with his wife is busy distributing the Golden-Rule-Home banks, writes: "I have been busy getting some more of the banks ready, and expect to start soon on another trip to Michigan and Indiana."

In reference to the tract-distribution program as announced last week by Bro. James M. Watkins, he writes: "It could be dynamite, if half the people would get the spirit of the thing. . . . We hope to start a mild whirlwind."

"The average of our Sunday evening Berean class the past two months has been twenty-one, and our midweek average twenty-two. Each member of the class is well pleased with the new Berean book."—Mrs. O. J. Parker, 725 S. Waugh St., Kokomo, Ind.

Bro. L. E. Conner preached for the Oregon, Ill., brethren, Sunday, October 20, so as to make it convenient for the editor to journey with the students, Sr. Orpha LeMasurier and daughter Diane, Bro. and Sr. Frederick Clausen, Mrs. Magaw, and son Malcolm, to Graytown, Wis.

"Mrs. A. P. Leamon, 1021 N. Thompson St., Kilgore, Texas, was baptized October 18."—T. A. Drinkard, Handley, Texas.

Bro. Otis Romine of Peru, Ind., youngest son of Bro. and Sr. Lewis Romine, Oregon, Ill., and his wife visited with his parents Sunday, October 13.

KOKOMO, INDIANA

I am pleased to announce that Miss Myrtle Wood from Bloomington, Ill., has been visiting some of our church members here in our city the past two months, and has attended our Berean class and church services regularly. She became convinced that the only salvation for eternal life comes through faith, obedience, and baptism. She came forward at one of our Sunday evening services, manifesting her faith in a living Savior, and was baptized by the writer Tuesday, October 15. Our prayers go out to her in her new start in life.
O. J. Parker.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI

On the evening of October 13, a number of the St. Louis church group met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Graham of Overland, Mo., where a buffet supper was served, and a social evening spent. Miss Leota Hanson and Mrs. Lewis Lindsay of Oregon, Ill., were out-of-town guests. Those present besides Mr. and Mrs. Graham and their daughters Ada and Ruth included Mr. and Mrs. Roy Graham and son, Mr. and Mrs. Bailey and family, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Jennings, Mrs. Martha Wilson, Mrs. Maude Graham, Mr. Edwin Graham, Mr. Walter Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Crandall, and Mr. and Mrs. Cooper and son, all of St. Louis.
An evening spent with those of like faith is always a pleasure, and this applies especially to the hospitable group at St. Louis.
Mrs. Lewis Lindsay.

LAWRENCEVILLE, OHIO

During the month of September, the Lawrenceville brethren were privileged to have as visiting speakers Bros. C. E. Lapp and Ellsworth Routson. Also, Bro. Harvey U. Krogh and Bro. Grover Gordon exchanged pulpits.
We are happy to announce the baptism of Donald Ballentine, son of Bro. and Sr. Clark Ballentine, and grandson of Bro. and Sr. Charles Netts. He is a young lad, and would enjoy any word of encouragement from other young people. He may be addressed at 1007 Pine St., Springfield, Ohio.
Bro. and Sr. J. C. Howell plan to leave soon for Florida, to spend the winter.
Sr. Manie Kauffman is visiting friends in Cincinnati.
Sr. Belle Hartman is still on the sick list most of the time. She is up and about the house, but is still unable to attend church services.
Bro. and Sr. Netts are busy getting the miniature Golden-Rule-Home banks ready for distribution among the Sunday schools. Their intention is to place one in each Sunday school or church. Any group that doesn't receive one soon and wishes to have one, write to Bro. Charles Netts, 1007 Pine St., Springfield, Ohio.
The Sisters are meeting again after their summer vacation, and have chosen their officers: Sr. Manie Kauffman, president; Sr. Helen Overholser, vice president; and Sr. Margaret Ballentine, secretary-treasurer.
Inez Gordon, Reporter.

BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL NEWS

On the week end of October 12, 13, some of the Bible Training School members had the privilege of entertaining Ella Randall of Gary, Ind. Ella is a cousin of Muriel and Celaine Randall, and your reporter.
The student body was fortunate to have spent last week end, October 19, 20, at Graytown, Wis. However, your writer feels that the delegation was insufficient, lacking Muriel, Richard, and myself. (Mrs. Doeden says, "Don't ahem," so I guess I'll just yawn.) Good cooperation was shown by all members, with the program moving along very smoothly. "Elzie" was lead-off man, speaking Saturday evening. Celaine followed by preaching Sunday morning. In the afternoon Terry Ferrell and Alan McLain delivered messages relating to the Bible Training School. Sermonettes were also given by Barbara Fish and Francis Burnett. As I have been informed, Bro. S. E. Magaw was chosen for final "round-up" man, to close the session of the services. Special music was furnished throughout the meetings by the class. Solos were rendered by Terry, Francis, and Alan. The students report an exceptionally profitable time and are grateful to the brethren at Graytown for furnishing them this opportunity of enlarging their acquaintances, broadening their experiences, and feasting together on spiritual food. May God bless these Graytown folks, and may they grow in the grace and admonition of the Lord.
Muriel Randall conducted services at Rockford, Ill., and your writer spoke at Macomb, Ill., last Sunday, which accounts for their absence from the above mentioned expedition.
Orris J. Mills, Reporter.

BROSSARD - GASPAR

Wedding bells rang out at Eden Valley, Minn., October 8, when Miss Lorraine Brossard became the wife of Mr. Elmo Gaspar. The ceremony was performed at the Church of God in Eden Valley, with the local pastor performing the ceremony. The church was decorated with colored autumn leaves and fall flowers.
The services opened at exactly 2:00 p.m., with a solo, "At Dawning," sung by Miss Esther Hamon of St. Paul, Minn., a cousin of the groom. At the close of the marriage vows, she also sang "Because." Miss Ellen Coleman of Dassel, Minn., accompanied Miss Hamon at the piano, and played Wagner's Bridal Chorus as the processional and Mendelssohn's as the recessional.
Fern Brossard (sister of the bride) was junior bridesmaid. Lorraine Gaspar (sister of the groom) was maid of honor.
The bride was accompanied by her father, Mr. Earl Brossard, to the front of the church where she was met by the groom. Marvin Mohl was best man; Elton and Norman Ruhn were ushers.
A reception was given in the church basement after the wedding.
Immediately after the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Gaspar left for a trip to California. They will make their home in Eden Valley, where it is furnished and ready for their return.
The bride is the daughter of Earl and Blanche Brossard. The groom is the son of Joe B. and May Gaspar. Both the bride and groom are graduates of the Eden Valley High School—the groom having also finished a general business course at the Minnesota School of Business. Both are active in church work here in Eden Valley—the groom being our Sunday school superintendent at the present time. Mr. Gaspar is also in the grocery business with his father.
Walter Wiggins, Pastor.

HARRIET FISKE BABER

Harriet Fiske was born November 17, 1884, near Conway Springs, Kan., and died September 20, 1940, at her home in Arkansas City, Kan. At the age of nine years, she moved with her parents to a homestead in Oklahoma near Caldwell, Kan. Here she grew to young womanhood. On April 27, 1908, she was married to Bro. Luther Baber in Wellington, Kan. They resided near Caldwell for a number of years. In 1913, she and her husband moved to Arkansas City where she resided until her death.
She was baptized into the faith by Elder S. C. Oliver in January, 1900, and faithfully served her Master until death, although she had been in ill health for a number of years and an invalid for four years. In her death, her husband loses a loving wife, and her brothers and sister, a faithful sister. She died, being loved by all.
She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, six brothers: Frank, James, and Elliott, all of Caldwell; John of Milan; William of Sherwood, Ore.; Fred of Arkansas City; and one sister, Nora of Sherwood, Ore.
Funeral services were conducted from the Church of God in Arkansas City, September 24, 1940, with Bro. T. A. Drinkard of Handley, Tex., officiating. She was laid to rest in Spring Creek Cemetery, south of Caldwell in Oklahoma, to await the coming of her Master.

The Restitution Herald is the official organ of the General Conference of the Church of God. It is published by the National Bible Institution at Oregon, Illinois.
L. E. Conner Business Manager
Subscription Rate.—51 issues per annum, $2.00.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him, (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

Almost Here!

What? Haven't you heard? It is almost here now. Time to get ready! What are we referring to? This handbill. Haven't you seen it?

A T T E N T I O N !

WHO?

You are invited to—

WHAT?

The Michigan Fall Conference—

WHERE?

The Church of God, Blanchard, Michigan—

WHEN?

October 28 through November 3—

WHY?

To feast on the good things of God's Word.
Jeremiah 15:16—

THROUGH?

Brother Harvey U. Krogh, Jr., pastor of the Brush Creek church, Tipp City, Ohio.

"A workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

You Are Invited!

The Red Brick Church of God in Blanchard cordially invites everyone to come to receive the good things of God's Word which all will receive who come to hear Brother Harvey Krogh, Jr. Come for the first day! Come prepared to spend the entire week! One or two days will only whet the appetite, and make you dissatisfied. Prepare to feast the full seven days!

Services will begin at eight o'clock each evening during the week, and an all-day meeting will be held on Sunday, November 3, with the following program:

- 10:30— Sunday school
- 11:30— Morning worship
- 1:00— Potluck dinner in the basement
- 2:30— Afternoon service
- 3:30— Communion.
- 8:00— Evening worship

Southlawn Home-Coming Anniversary

The Southlawn Park Church of God in Grand Rapids is approaching its fourteenth birthday. On the week end of October 27, its members and friends will gather at the church to celebrate its fourteenth anniversary. A very cordial invitation is extended to all to worship with them, and help make the day a big one for Southlawn.

The order of worship to be followed is:

- 9:45— Sunday school
- 11:00— Morning worship
- 12:00— Potluck dinner in the annex
- 2:30— "Our Birthday"
- 7:30 Evening worship.

It is hoped that there will be a baptismal service in the afternoon.

Southlawn Park church is located in the south outskirts of Grand Rapids, and any visiting brethren or friends will find a cordial welcome. F. E. Siple is the pastor.

Church Notes

The Bible Training School at Oregon, Illinois, is supplying the pulpit at the Pennellwood church in Grand Rapids each Sunday for the time being. An invitation is extended to all to attend these services.

Fieldman James W. McLain was the speaker at both the morning and evening services last Sunday, October 20.

The fall program at the Southlawn Park church is getting under way, and all departments are manifesting a healthy activity. Mrs. Siple has recently been appointed superintendent of the Bereans, and is promoting a series of young people's meetings for the early Sunday evening hour. Interesting work and beneficial results are expected.

Several young people connected with the Southlawn church, directly or indirectly, have recently been united in marriage by the pastor of that church: Vernon Conrad, son of Brother and Sister Homer Conrad, was married to Ruth C. Huffman, September 21; Sister Frances Carpenter and Claude J. Weber were one of the couples of a double wedding, September 27; Robert Savage, son of Sister Lawrence Bridegam, was married to Arlene Brown, October 15. God's richest blessing is besought in behalf of these young people.

Sue DeWitt became the third one of the Blanchard young people to undergo an appendectomy within the past eight months, when she submitted to that operation on September 30. She recovered quickly—was at home October 8, and back in school, October 14.

THE NEW CHURCH OF GOD, KOSZTA, IOWA

Through the kindness of Sister J. M. Kiger, we are glad to present the above picture of the new house of worship near Koszta, Iowa. Sister Kiger writes: "Our first meetings were held in 1872. The early ministers were: Houston, Ramsey, Kilgare, Marsh, Crowe, Allard, and Eychaner. For many years, services were held in the Koszta schoolhouse. A Dorcas Society was organized twelve years ago for the purpose of building a church, which we accomplished the past year. The church is located in a beautiful grove on highway 212, midway between Belle Plaine and Marengo. Brother J. W. Williams, our pastor during the past twenty-five years, preached the dedication sermon June 16, 1940. We have forty-two baptized members, and a very large following of interested persons."

The Belle Plaine, Iowa, newspaper recently commented: "It is not news to hear in these days that a country church has closed its doors, but when a country group, after holding services many years in a schoolhouse, decides to build a church of its own, and does, well—that is news in anybody's language."

Any of our brethren passing through Iowa will make no mistake in visiting the Koszta church. Sunday school services are conducted each Sunday, and there has been preaching each Sunday thus far during the present year. May the Lord continue to bless and direct.

The Beavers

While recently visiting at the home of Brother and Sister Ora Hillman, Downing, Wisconsin, we were interested in seeing the work of beavers. A creek flows through the Hillman farm, and, about two years ago, two adventurous beavers—much in love—decided to start house-keeping in this creek. Brother Hillman estimates that there are now about twenty-five beavers in the colony, and they are most enthusiastically keeping house. Solomon might have said, "Go to the beaver, thou sluggard."

Within easy walking distance, there are now three dams across the creek. The two first constructed have already been tested by a flood that swept several feet above them; yet, when the flood abated, the dams were still there and little harmed. Each dam elevates the water about two and a half feet, one dam raising the water above it a full three feet.

Most interesting is the third dam, where the beavers are now working. A certain little stream, almost dry, flows from the foot of a hill (upon which is a grove of poplars) to the main stream. Though the beavers have with their razor teeth cut down white oak trees at least ten inches in diameter, they seem to be especially fond of poplar. It so happens that the mentioned grove of poplars is several hundred yards from the creek, but the beavers were both ingenious and industrious. This third dam was built only a few yards below the entrance of the almost dry rivulet. The result? The water was raised and backed up the rivulet to the foot of the hill upon which stand the poplars!

Further ingenuity of the beavers can be seen in their "dredging" certain places in the rivulet, where the backed-up water from the creek was too shallow to permit free and easy swimming to and from the poplar hill. Mud taken from the bottom of the little stream is in places packed and padded neatly in walls along the sides of the stream, the beavers' flat tails obviously having been used as trowels!

Many of the poplars in an area of more than an acre have already been cut down by the beavers. When a tree falls, it is further cut into three-foot lengths or more, slid down the hill to the edge of the rivulet, and then floated down the beaver-made canal to the feeding grounds just above the dam. Though Brother Hillman is not positive, he believes the beaver are "sinking" these poplar cuttings into the mud at the bottom of the creek, or into holes along the sides of the creek, where they will be served for the beavers' dinners when ice covers the creek this winter, and when millions of the educated creation are wondering how to get something to eat and how to pay the grocer after it is eaten.

Finger-to-the-temple meditations:

(1) The beavers evidently premeditated the purpose of this dam, though they had no surveying apparatus with which to fondly tickle their sense of science.

(2) When nature was against the beavers, they zealously toiled to overcome nature, and by cooperation not at all forced by written commandment they made nature serve them.

(3) The beavers will this winter have no famine; not because they religiously loved one another enough to work in unison and cooperation as civilized and Christianized brothers and sisters should, but because they did not hate one another wickedly enough to blitzkrieg and "retaliate"—nor did they grumble about the weather, or "tell" on each other, or "gossipociously" surmise scandal among their youths, or ignorantly complain about their leaders, or waste any time in emotional debate about political campaigns and the radio harangue.

The beavers looked ahead. They toiled together. They will eat in peace when Old Man Winter lets loose in all his fury. Moreover, who would care to "Armageddonize" all these industrious workers into oblivion when the trapping season opens up next March?

A Complete Ministerial List

Local churches and State Conferences are requested to report the names and addresses of their ministers to the Secretary of the General Conference of the Church of God, Oregon, Illinois, to enable him to publish a complete list of our ministers in good standing, and to submit this list to the Railway Clergy Bureaus, that Church-of-God ministers might readily obtain clergy-fare certificates.

The Kingdom of God

Article Three

By James A. Patrick

HE is the LORD our God: his judgments are in all the earth. He hath remembered his covenant for ever, the word which he commanded to a thousand generations. Which covenant he made with Abraham, and his oath unto Isaac; and confirmed the same unto Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant: saying, Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, the lot of your inheritance" (Psalm 105:7-11).

Speaking to Isaac, as recorded in Genesis 26:3, God said, "Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee; for unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I swear unto Abraham thy father."

It will be noticed, in the verses quoted at the beginning of this article, that Abraham is promised the land of Canaan, but in the promise to Isaac it is, "all these countries," and in Genesis 28:13, 14 we read, "Behold, the LORD stood above it (the ladder which Jacob saw, the top of which reached to heaven), and said, I am the LORD God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac: the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed; and thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south: and in thee and in thy seed shall all families of the earth be blessed." Here, Jacob is told to spread abroad to the four points of the compass, and Paul tells us, "The promise, that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith" (Rom. 4:13). Here, too, Paul broadens the promise to include the world.

The history of the Israelites, from the time of Jacob until they were settled in the Promised Land, will not be dealt with here, because most of it, especially the Tabernacle service in the wilderness, was a type of the church.

Referring to the time of Gideon, we find these words in Judges 8:22, 23, "The men of Israel said unto Gideon, Rule thou over us, both thou, and thy son, and thy son's son also: for thou hast delivered us from the hand of Midian. And Gideon said unto them, I will not rule over you . . . the LORD shall rule over you." Notice, Gideon said, "The LORD shall rule over you." Bear this in mind as we go on, for it plays a very important part in the history of Israel.

Now, let us go on till the time when the Israelites asked Samuel to set a king over them. "The thing displeased Samuel, when they said, Give us a king to judge us. And Samuel prayed unto the LORD. And the LORD said unto Samuel, Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee: for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, that I should not reign over them" (1 Sam. 8:6, 7). Again we read in 1 Samuel 12:12, Samuel saying to the children of Israel, "When ye saw that Nahash the king of the children of Ammon came against you, ye said unto me, Nay; but a king shall reign over us: when the LORD your God was your king." Samuel made it very clear that the LORD was their King.

At the insistence of the children of Israel, Samuel anointed Saul as their king. Saul proved to be a failure.

The Davidic Covenant

In 2 Samuel 7:12-16, the LORD said to David, "When thy days be fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build an house for my name, and I will stablish the throne of his kingdom for ever. I will be his father, and he shall be my son. If he commit iniquity, I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men: but my mercy shall not depart from him, as I took it from Saul, whom I put away before thee. And thine house and thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee: thy throne shall be established for ever." Language of like import with the foregoing is found in 1 Kings 2:45 and 1 Chronicles 17:11, 12.

We notice, from the foregoing scriptures, that the throne and kingdom of Solomon were to be established forever. Why, then, are they not in existence now? "Now the days of David drew nigh that he should die; and he charged Solomon his son, saying, I go the way of all the earth: be thou strong therefore, and shew thyself a man . . . That the LORD may continue his word which he spake concerning me, saying, If thy children take heed to their way, to walk before me in truth with all their heart and with all their soul, there shall not fail thee (said he) a man on the throne of Israel" (1 Kings 2:1-4). In 1 Kings 8:25, we hear Solomon saying to the LORD, "Therefore now, LORD God of Israel, keep with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him, saying, There shall not fail thee a man in my sight to (Please turn to page 10)

A Consecrated Priesthood

By C. E. Randall

IN SPEAKING of the Aaronic priests, Paul said they "serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things" (Heb. 8:5). That Aaron was a very profound type of the Lord Jesus Christ is evident from the Word, especially Paul's letter to the Hebrews. The relationship between the two, as type to Antitype, becomes very apparent as study is made of the two priesthoods, and both are made beautiful in their orbits of service.

The consecration of Aaron and his sons is recorded in Exodus 29. Read this entire chapter, so that you will be familiar with the order of consecration. In verse 1, it is stated, "This is the thing that thou shalt do unto them to hallow them, to minister unto me in the priest's office." Before anyone can minister about holy things, he must be hallowed, that is, he must be consecrated—set apart wholly to the Lord. The first act in this work of consecration was to bring Aaron and his sons to the door of the Tabernacle, and there wash them with clean water. Following the washing, they were clothed upon with the garments—the official garments—of their office. It appears that Aaron was first clothed after his washing and then anointed with the anointing oil. At a following time, his sons were set apart in the same manner. This order is not without significance.

The next step in this work of preparation was the offering of a bullock. Aaron and his sons were to place their hands upon the head of the animal and confess their sins, and literally take hold of their sin offering. After this, came the sacrifice of the burnt offering, which was a "sweet savour." Of this sacrifice, they were to take hold of it in the same manner, by the laying on of hands. The third ram became the final consecrating sacrifice of life in this setting-apart service. Upon the head of this ram, they must place their hands. Of this animal, the blood was taken and applied to the tip of the right ear and the thumb of the right hand and the great toe of the right foot (v. 20). From the head that directs to the feet that walk, and the utmost stretch of the arm, must there be consecration. The whole body had to be consecrated.

In summing up the order of consecration, we find (1) They were washed; (2) clothed upon; (3) anointed; (4) they took hold of their sin offering, which was to die in their stead for their sins; (5) burnt offering which was a sweet savor; (6) sacrifice of consecrating ram, and application of the blood to the ear, thumb, and toe; and (7) partaking of the wave offering.

It will not be difficult to discover the same order of consecration in the life of Christ as He prepared Himself for the work of the priesthood, of which Aaron was a type. The first step in Christ's preparation and for redemption came when He went to John "to be baptized" (Matt. 3:13-17). He needed this washing to "fulfil all righteousness." From this moment on, He was clothed upon with power, and the grace of God was upon Him. Here, too, He was anointed with the Holy Spirit. It came upon Him in the form of a dove. In Acts 10:37, 38, it is stated: "That word, I say, ye know, which was published throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached; how God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and with power."

As with Aaron, so with Christ: first came the washing, then the anointing. The type was washed; the Antitype was baptized. The type was anointed with oil; the Antitype was anointed with the Holy Spirit. The anointing of Aaron was a very definite part of the work of consecration. The anointing of Jesus was evidence to the fact that: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." It was a separating factor, the same as the Spirit became a separating force in the selection of Barnabas and Saul. "As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them" (Acts 13:2).

Before going too far with the work of consecration, let us not lose sight of the fact that Aaron's sons, who were to assist him in his priestly work, were to be fully consecrated, and in the same manner as the chief priest. So it is with the sons of God, we must be set apart in the same manner as our great High Priest. Let it be remembered that we are "an holy priesthood" (1 Peter 2:5), and if we are to be admitted into the service of God, we must approach Him with "clean hands, and a pure heart" (Psalm 24:3, 4), for it is written: "Be ye clean, that bear the vessels of the Lord" (Isa. 52:11).

Our work of consecration starts right where Christ's did—at baptism. Ye must be born of water! Before we can enjoy the blessings and perform the labors of a "new creature" in Christ Jesus, we must die to the old and be raised from baptism to walk a new life (2 Cor. 5:17; Rom. 6:1-6). After this cleansing by water, we are clothed upon with "the righteousness which is of God by faith" (Phil. 3:9). This garment is "clean and white" (Rev. 19:8).

The third step which has been observed in the type and fulfilled in Christ must also be completed in us, namely, the anointing. In response to the question, "What shall we do?" Peter replied, "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call" (Acts 2:38, 39). In writing to the Corinthians, Paul said, "Now he which stablisheth us with you in Christ, and hath anointed us, is God" (2 Cor. 1:21). Without this phase of the consecration, we cannot be the sons of God. "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God" (Rom. 8:14).

Spiritual and Mental Balance

By David Blyth

---

THE pathway that every member of the Church of God treads is more hazardous than the rope a circus acrobat walks. When he falls he knows it, but we may lean far and in many directions and yet think we are walking upright. Too great a leaning or too many leanings may yield eternal death.

Scriptural Perspective

In exercising preferences in our study of the Bible, care must be used to maintain balance. Many churches and individuals profess to accept the whole Bible, but practice proves that one part of their Bible is worn while another is yet new. God gave us the whole Book. Special studies are fine, but let us keep a proper perspective so that our lives and teachings are in accord with the entire Book.

How Shall We Increase Church Membership?

As our church embarks further in the realm of evangelism, another balance becomes increasingly important. God made man logically minded, yet emotional. He also gave us a religion based on one Book. This Book is every day receiving more collaboration from the scientific world giving it logic, yet emotion is a necessary part of our faith. The easy road to the conversion of many people is to prey upon their emotions. The sound way to evangelize is to lay a foundation of solid doctrine and encourage the natural emotions to bring about the desired action. Undoubtedly, we should be expanding our membership, but let us be careful not to let our religion take on the characteristics commonly associated with other evangelistic movements. The balance between emotion and logic is delicate and varies with occasions and individuals; however, I would be surprised if we did not find that value of a new member is somewhat inversely proportional to the amount of induced emotion necessary to make him take the first step. It is better to make slow, sure progress than to baptize many and have few receive the words, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant," when the Master comes. Is it not possible that our Lord will place at least part of the blame for baptismal failure on the person responsible for motivating the baptism?

Participation

Lest our churches and our members sink deep in a rut, we have another balance to maintain. This involves many factors and concerns the division of church work and leadership. Too often our leadership is centered in a few hands and minds, and the weak excuse that "there is no one else capable of handling the situation," is given. God wants us to study His Book and worship Him, but not to study a few men's interpretations of the Bible, exclusively. He wants no man to rise up so high in the estimation of his congregation that he obtains a part of the worship rightfully God's. (See 1 Cor. 3:7.) Ministers and church leaders do not want such situations to develop. Instead of heaping responsibility on the capable individuals, wide-awake ministers insist that the capable leader develop another leader as each new job is developed. Instead of centralizing work, they divide and spread it far and wide according to the ability of each individual.

Teaching is handled in the same way. It is the wise minister that is able to transfer his ego to other persons whom he has developed into able laymen preachers. A minister should be more proud to sit back in the congregation and hear the sermon of one of these whom he has taught, than to preach it himself. Modern education tells us that we learn best by doing—the teacher always learns more than the pupil; therefore, we must spread out our leading opportunities.

In all phases of church leadership, we must maintain a proper balance between the sexes and the ages. A church run by one sex or one age group is bound to be weak. We cannot expect progress if our church is run entirely by old men, nor can we expect a group of young men to wisely run a church. If every church member believes himself to be a vital unit of his church, he will work harder, attend more regularly, and learn more than if he was only the usual listening (Please turn to page 10)

"The Wicked Shall Be Turned Into Hell"

By Rufus A. Curtis

"The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God" (Psalm 9:17).

EARLY in my school days, over eighty years ago, I was taught the inherent immateriality and immortality of our race by my schoolteachers, as well as by men in pulpits. Like Albert Barnes, I could not find any satisfactory solution as to why our race was brought into being with such immaterial, and deathless personalities that fire cannot burn, frosts cannot freeze, waters cannot drown, knives cannot cut, and death cannot intercept in their endless and boundless careers. Mr. Barnes could not give any satisfactory answer as to why any of his neighbors or kin "should suffer to all eternity." This was my perplexity until I had the opportunity of listening to thirty lectures by James F. Waggoner on Bible Prophecy and kindred themes, which opened "mine eyes" to behold "wondrous things" out of God's law of pardon, which was able to make me "free from the law of sin and death" (Psalm 119:17, 18; Rom. 8:1-4). It also makes us "free indeed," from the "vain deceit," and "tradition of men" (John 8:36; Col. 2:8). For these "great things" done for us "we are glad" (Psalm 126:3-6).

It has been through God's providence that I have been led to "know the truth," and enter the "strait" gate, and "narrow" way, "which leadeth unto life" (John 8:32; Matt. 7:13, 14). "Life" for "length of days for ever and ever" will not be forced upon anyone, but will have to be "asked" and sought by giving all "diligence to make your calling and election sure" (Psalm 21:4; 2 Peter 1:5-11). The Bible doctrine of conditional immortality solves the problem of "life through his (Jesus') name" as the "gift of God" (John 20:31; Rom. 6:23; Psalm 91:14-16). "Pardon" for repentant rebels is a "joyful sound" (Isa. 55: 6, 7; Psalm 89:15). Since having come "unto the knowledge of the truth," that God has given His Son "power over all flesh, and that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him," my mind has been freed from its perplexity caused by "false prophets," "teaching for doctrines the commandments of men" (1 Tim. 2:4; John 17:2; 1 John 4:1; Mark 7:7).

During the sixty-seven years of my release from these strange "doctrines," which should merit contempt (Heb. 13:9; 1 Tim. 4:1; John 8:44; Gen. 3:1-4), I have been "earnestly contending for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints" (Jude 3), both in personal conversation, and public debate. "The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds; casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ" (2 Cor. 10:4, 5). When taking a broad perspective of our race today, what do we behold, but the brutality of the jungle? We see whole nations, like Russia, given over to atheism. This is the direct antithesis to Christianity. This shows the morals of the world when atheism is substituted for Christianity, and is graphically portrayed on God's prophetic page (Jer. 17:9; Gen. 6:5; 2 Tim. 3:1-7; Isa. 29:13, 14). I purposely omit quoting the texts cited, as I want you to "search the scriptures," and "understand" their "testimony" (John 5:39; Luke 24:45; Isa. 8:20; 1 Thess. 5:21). Earnestly desiring that "stumblingblocks" be taken "out of the way," and being searchers for truth, we should be assured that Jesus is "the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me" (John 14:6).

In conversing with my neighbors who hold to the untenable doctrine of the present "immortality of the soul" and "eternal misery" for the finally impenitent of our race, they refer me to the text that heads this article as proof for their contention against conditional immortality. Stop and think! These are opportune questions for my opponents: Why expect "the wicked" to have entered upon their retributive punishment before they have been "brought forth to the day of wrath" (Job 21:30)? How could "an immortal soul" ever have its "wages" inflicted upon it? The Bible declares that "the wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23). How could an "immortal" or deathless soul "die"? The Bible declares: "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." Twice in a single chapter, that statement is made, "for our admonition." (See Ezek. 18:4, 20; 1 Cor. 10:11.) How could an "immaterial soul" be smitten "with the edge of the sword," and "utterly destroyed"? (See Joshua 10:28-39; 11:11.) Can an imperishable "life," be lost or found? (Matt. 10:39; 16:25; Rev. 2:10.) Can a soul, person, or creature (Biblical equivalents) with endless duration of existence, be "appointed to utter destruction"? (1 Kings 20:42; Prov. 29:1.) How could even a wicked immortal soul be destroyed?

How can anyone of our race, possessing an interminable existence, be of "few days," or wither like a flower "cut down," or flee "as a shadow," and continue not? (See Job 14:1, 2; James 4:14; Psalm 103:13-16.)

"As shadows cast by cloud and sun
Flit o'er the summer's grass,
So in Thy sight, Almighty One,
Earth's generations pass." (See Eccl. 1:4.)

To elucidate the text (Psalm 9:17), Hebrew scholars claim that the word "turned" (in the Hebrew dialect) conveys the thought of being turned back, turned again, or "return," as properly given in Genesis 3:19. Sheol, the Hebrew word translated "hell" in the Old Testament, occurs sixty-five times, and is rendered "grave" thirty-one times. The still, quiet, sleepers in sheol are portrayed in the following graphic language, "Why died I not from the womb? why did I not give up the ghost when I came out of the belly? Why did the knees prevent me? or why the breasts that I should suck? For now should I have lain still and been quiet, I should have slept: then had I been at rest, with kings and counsellors of the earth, which built desolate places for themselves; or with princes that had gold, who filled their houses with silver: or as an hidden untimely birth I had not been; as infants which never saw light. . . . There the prisoners rest together; they hear not the voice of the oppressor. The small and great are there; and the servant is free from his master" (Job 3:11-19). (Please turn to page 10)

How May We Prepare for a Home in God's Kingdom?

By A. Weldon McCoy

HAVING been a student of the Bible for a number of years, we have become acquainted with the fact that God in the distant past had a kingdom on earth, and that He will in the very near future, we believe, establish His Kingdom on earth again; and that in this Kingdom there will be a class of people who will not be subject to death, sorrow, crying, pain, or anything that can hurt or destroy. (See Rev. 21:4; Isa. 11:9; 65:20.) Then, comparing the present with the foregoing conditions, it is desirable that we should inquire, "How may we prepare for this happy and eternal home?"

This home will be located on the earth. (See Psalm 37:11, 29, 34; Matt. 5:5; Dan. 2:44; 7:27.) This Kingdom of God, when established on the earth, will be the fulfillment of God's covenant with Abraham and his seed, as recorded in Genesis 17:8, 18:17-18, Galatians 3:14-17, 26-29, and other supporting texts.

Then, what must we do in order to qualify ourselves for such a home? First, we must believe, or have faith. Jesus said in Mark 4:24, "Take heed what ye hear." What then must we believe? "Without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him" (Heb. 11:6). "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God" (Rom. 10:17). "The word of the Lord endureth for ever. And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you" (1 Peter 1:25). The Apostle Paul adds in Romans 1:16, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."

If the gospel is "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth," it is absolutely necessary that we acquaint ourselves with the gospel, to take a firm stand on the side of the truths taught in the Bible, and accept nothing short of those truths.

What follows the learning of faith in His Word? Having heard the Word expounded, and having understood the same, "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:16). Before taking the second step we have mentioned, we must not overlook the important step of repentance. (Acts 2:38; Matt. 3:2-8; Luke 24:47; 2 Cor. 7:10). "Repentance," according to Dr. Robert Young in his Analytical Concordance to the Bible, is: "To have another mind, and a change of mind." A fair lesson of repentance, by way of example, is found in Ephesians 4:28.

A. Weldon McCoy

After we have heard the gospel, repented, changed our minds, refrained from doing the evil deeds, doing the things that God requires of us, and having obeyed in baptism, what then should we do? To observe some church members, we would be led to believe that baptism is the act that puts one in a position to do as he chooses ever after. If we read our Bibles correctly, a godly life is due to follow one's immersion into Christ. We especially request all of our younger folk to read the fourth and fifth chapters of the Ephesian letter, to find out how one is to live and conduct himself after baptism.

As can be clearly seen by all Bible scholars, we are living in the closing days of this age. As we near the approaching "day of the Lord," we should be very careful that we may be found in Him, "not having spot, or wrinkle . . . but . . . holy and without blemish" (Eph. 5:27).

ISRAEL RESTORED

In Two Parts—Part One

By Sadie Skeels

PAUL wrote, "I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits; that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. And so all Israel shall be saved: as it is written, There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob: for this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins" (Rom. 11:25-27). Paul does not give his mere opinion, but shows us what is written and where we can, even now, search and find these truths.

Let us first consider Isaiah's writings: "They shall be ashamed, and also confounded, all of them: they shall go to confusion together that are makers of idols. But Israel shall be saved in the Lord with an everlasting salvation: ye shall not be ashamed nor confounded world without end. . . . I have not spoken in secret, in a dark place of the earth: I said not unto . . . Jacob, Seek ye me in vain: I the Lord speak righteousness, I declare things that are right. . . . I have sworn by myself, the word is gone out of my mouth in righteousness, and shall not return. . . . In the Lord shall all the seed of Israel be justified, and shall glory" (Isa. 45:16-25).

"Thou, Israel, art my servant, Jacob whom I have chosen, the seed of Abraham my friend. Thou whom I have taken from the ends of the earth, and called thee from the chief men thereof, and said unto thee, thou art my servant; I have chosen thee, and not cast thee away. Fear thou not; for I am with thee: be not dismayed; for I am thy God: I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness. Behold, all they that were incensed against thee shall be ashamed and confounded: they shall be as nothing; and they that strive with thee shall perish. . . . For I the Lord thy God will hold thy right hand, saying unto thee, Fear not; I will help thee. Fear not, thou worm Jacob, and ye men of Israel; I will help thee, saith the Lord, and thy redeemer, the Holy One of Israel" (Isa. 41:8-14). Also, we read, "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God. Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned: for she hath received of the Lord's hand double for all her sins" (40:1, 2).

When Jeremiah foretold the Israelites of their punishment, and pardon of their sins, what did they say? Jeremiah said, "It shall come to pass, when thou shalt shew this people all these words, and they shall say unto thee, Wherefore hath the Lord pronounced all this great evil against us? or what is our iniquity? or what is our sin that we have committed against the Lord our God? Then shalt thou say unto them, Because your fathers have forsaken me, saith the Lord, and have walked after other gods, and have served them, and have worshipped them, and have forsaken me, and have not kept my law; and ye have done worse than your fathers; for, behold, ye walk every one after the imagination of his evil heart, that they may not hearken unto me: therefore will I cast you out of this land into a land that ye know not, neither ye nor your fathers; and there shall ye serve other gods day and night; where I will not shew you favour" (Jer. 16:10-13).

Jeremiah continued, saying: "I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers . . . For mine eyes are upon all their ways: they are not hid from my face, neither is their iniquity hid from mine eyes. And first I will recompense their iniquity and their sin double; because they have defiled my land, they have filled mine inheritance with the carcasses of their detestable and abominable things" (vv. 15, 17).

Where their sins and iniquities are recompensed double, this is written: "Behold, I will gather them out of all countries, whither I have driven them in mine anger, and in my fury, and in great wrath; and I will bring them again unto this place, and I will cause them to dwell safely: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God: and I will give them one heart, and one way, that they may fear me for ever, for the good of them, and of their children after them . . . Yea, I will rejoice over them to do them good, and I will plant them in this land assuredly with my whole heart and with my whole soul. For thus saith the Lord; Like as I have brought all this great evil upon this people, so will I bring upon them all the good that I have promised them" (Jer. 32:37-42).

"I will cause the captivity of Judah and the captivity of Israel to return, and will build them, as at the first. And I will cleanse them from all their iniquity, whereby they have sinned against me; and I will pardon all their iniquities, whereby they have sinned, and whereby they have transgressed against me. And it shall be to me a name of joy, a praise and an honour before all the nations of the earth, which shall hear all the good that I do unto them: and they shall fear and tremble for all the goodness and for all the prosperity that I procure unto it" (Jer. 33:7-9). "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will perform that good thing which I have promised unto the house of Israel and to the house of Judah" (v. 14).

A L O N E !

By D. G. Harvey

"Woe to him that is alone when he falleth" (Eccl. 4:10).

YEARS ago, I spent a long day, awaiting train connections in one of our large cities. Never will I forget that day. In a city boasting a population of millions of fellow men, I was alone. While men and women rushed past, there was no smile of welcome, there was not a clasp of hands, not a friendly word spoken. Alone! Never will I forget that helpless feeling.

We remember that in the beginning God created the heavens and the earth, the animals, the birds, the fish of the sea, and the beautiful Garden of Eden into which the image of God was placed. Yes, Adam lived in a place of beauty and peace, but Adam was alone. God then saw that it was not good that the man should be alone (Gen. 2:18), and created the woman for a helpmate; thereby came marriage and the foundations of the home companionship. "Two are better than one; because they have a good reward for their labour" (Eccl. 4:9).

Elijah thought he was alone, for we hear his cry, "I, even I only, am left" (1 Kings 19:14). To think oneself alone is just as unpleasant as the actual fact. Elijah suffered from loneliness. No doubt, many today suffer so, as they see the need of evangelism by the Church of God. They probably feel weak and alone. But, as God spoke to Elijah, saying, "I have left me seven thousand in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal" (1 Kings 19:18), so, also, by the cooperation of the brethren will the minister now find that he is not alone in his vision.

Jesus, our Lord, often found Himself alone. It was in the Garden of Gethsemane, where Jesus so earnestly prayed, that He was alone. On the cross, Jesus, the Son of God, hung alone. True, the thieves were present, the Romans and the Pharisees were there, but at the hour when death was at hand, Jesus was alone. Even His heavenly Father turned from Him. Remember His words, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Jesus died alone.

At the hour of ascension, again Jesus was alone. It was Jesus, alone, who ascended into the heavens; no one could go with Him; no one could follow Him to the throne of God, His Father. John said, "No man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven" (John 3:13), and Jesus said, "Whither I go, ye cannot come" (John 13:33). Jesus had to suffer alone; Jesus alone could pay the price for sin. Jesus alone could ascend unto His Father, for as Moses went up alone on Sinai to receive the law, so Jesus must go up alone to the throne of His Father—a Nobleman gone into a far country to receive His Kingdom.

Nevertheless, the Church of God, like Elijah of old, is not really alone. If the church is faithful to her duties, He will be faithful who has promised: "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world" (Matt. 28:20). There is no need to wander in the wilderness alone, in darkness, or in fear. The command of our Leader is before us, saying: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations" (Matt. 28:19). "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature" (Mark 16:15). We are not alone. There is One to hold us up; we cannot fall, if we obey. "Two are better than one; because they have a good reward for their labour. For if they fall, the one will lift up his fellow: but woe to him that is alone when he falleth; for he hath not another to lift him up."

Why attempt to stand alone? We have only to obey and rejoice in the promise: "Lo, I am with you always."

Because one man God's law forgot. (Gen. 3:17.)

Dead! Will he ever live again? (Job 14:14, 15.)
See the sunshine and the rain? (Eccl. 9:10.)
Will ever be removed the stain (Isa. 1:18.)
Of sin? Shall we see him again? (Luke 13:28.)

Dead! And shall he ever live? (John 14:19.)
But Christ His life did give (1 Cor. 15:3.)
For him. God will forgive. (Luke 6:37.)
Believe! He again shall live. (John 11:25.)

In the resurrection morn (John 5:28, 29.)
The power of death is shorn (1 Cor. 15:54.)
When Gabriel blows his horn (1 Cor. 15:52.)
We'll to new life be born. (John 3:6; 1 Cor. 15:42-49.)

With Jesus then we'll reign (Rev. 3:21.)
Where death comes not again. (Rev. 20:6.)
Sing, then, a glad refrain, (1 Peter 1:3-6.)
For he shall live again! (1 Cor. 15:22.)

TALK HAPPINESS

"Talk happiness. The world is sad enough
Without your woe. No path is wholly rough.
Look for the places that are smooth and clear,
And speak of them to rest the weary ear
Of earth; so hurt by one continuous strain
Of mortal discontent and grief and pain.

"Talk faith. The world is better off without Your uttered ignorance and morbid doubt—
If you have faith in God, or man, or self,
Say so; if not, push back upon the shelf
Of silence all your thoughts till faith shall come;
No one will grieve because your lips are dumb.

"Talk health. The dreary, never-ending tale
Of mortal maladies is worn and stale.
You cannot charm, or interest, or please
By harping on that minor chord, disease.
Say you are well, or all is well with you,
And God shall hear your words, and make them true."

A. J. Eychaner.

participator. Praise and encouragement cost little, but yield much.

Let us all put ourselves and our church on a fine balance, and carefully watch which way we and the church lean, then adjust the weights so that when the Master comes He will say to all, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

"THE WICKED SHALL BE TURNED INTO HELL"

The death "appointed unto men once to die" (Heb. 9:27) includes "both the just and unjust" (Acts 24:15), "they that have done good . . . and they that have done evil" (John 5:29).

This is comprehensive enough to include "all that are in the graves" of "earth" or "sea." (John 5:28; Isa. 26:19-21; Rev. 20:13.) The Bible describes their condition, but it does not harmonize with the statements of modern pulpits, who have departed "from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron; forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth" (1 Tim. 4:1-3). Adam's race is now "mortal," "corruptible," and "all" liable to "perish," in "the second death," without divine intervention "to open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God." (Job 4:17; Rom. 1:23; Luke 13:1-5; Rev. 20:6; 21:8; Acts 26:18, 20).

Eternal life for Christ's followers, who had "forsaken all" in order to fill the test of discipleship, will have to wait until "the regeneration," or "world to come" for its bestowal in "the kingdom of God," for which they, with other "good" and "just" men, also "waited." (See Matt. 19:27-29; Luke 23:50, 51.) The wicked in sheol, from the first one to commit murder (Gen. 4:8) down through "this adulterous and sinful generation," are reserved to "the day of destruction," "they shall be brought forth to the day of wrath" (Job 21:30; Mark 8:38). "He will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire" (Matt. 3:12), "and they shall be as though they had not been" (Obad. 16). This will include "all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly" (Mal. 4:1). From that time onward, "the wicked shall not be," "for our God is a consuming fire." (See Psalm 37:10; Prov. 10:25; Heb. 12:29.)

Life and death are placed before us, "therefore choose life" (Deut. 30:15, 19). "Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord God: and not that he should return from his ways, and live?" (Ezek. 18:23; 2 Peter 3:9.) Those who judge themselves "unworthy of everlasting life" by refusing to do the necessary things that they "may have eternal life," "are worthy of death." (Acts 13:46; Matt. 19:16; Rom. 1:25, 32; 6:16, 20-23.) In the language of Simpson,

"It is strange we trust each other,
And only doubt our Lord.
We take the word of mortals
And yet distrust His Word;
But, oh, what a light and glory
Would shine o'er all our days,
If we always would remember
God means just what He says!"

Please read 1 John 5:9-12.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD

sit on the throne of Israel; so that thy children take heed to their way, that they walk before me as thou hast walked before me." Many scriptures of like import could be given, but time and space forbid.

So Israel started in the direction the Lord had laid out.

Hear David saying, "Of all thy sons, (for the LORD hath given me many sons,) he hath chosen Solomon my son to sit upon the throne of the kingdom of the LORD over Israel" (1 Chron. 28:5). "Then Solomon sat on the throne of the LORD as king instead of David his father" (1 Chron. 29:23).

At this time God had two thrones. According to Psalm 11:4, "The LORD's throne is in heaven."

It will be noticed, from the foregoing scriptures, that the kingdom of Israel was God's Kingdom, the throne of Israel was God's throne, and the kings of Israel ruled for God. As long as the kings remembered this arrangement, everything went along in an orderly way, and the nation prospered. When they forgot God and began to rule for themselves, things began to go wrong at once, and the nation began to retrograde. God withdrew His protecting power from them, and they could do nothing by themselves.

We enjoy a greater privilege than those kings of Israel. "We are labourers together with God" (1 Cor. 3:9) not laborers for Him. When we forget, and try to work for ourselves and not with God, the same thing happens to us that happened to those ancient kings. Things do not go right at all. The world of today must have about forgotten God, considering the terrible condition it is in.

Getting back to Israel's kings, we find that David was "a man after God's own heart," and Israel became a great nation under his rule. Solomon began well, and it is said that he "was beloved of his God . . . nevertheless even him did outlandish women cause to sin" (Neh. 13:26).

From this time on, Israel had a very checkered career till we come to the rule of Zedekiah, who was the last and one of the very worst kings Israel ever had. Then we have this pronouncement from God: "Thou profane wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end, thus saith the Lord God; Remove the diadem, and take off the crown: this shall not be the same: exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn, it: and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him" (Ezek. 21:25-27).

There is a prophecy in Ezekiel 12:13 regarding Zedekiah which, I presume, he thought foolish. Let us read it: "My net also will I spread upon him, and he shall be taken in my snare: and I will bring him to Babylon to the land of the Chaldeans; yet shall he not see it, though he shall die there." He might have argued that this was impossible of fulfillment. How could he die in Babylon without seeing it? Let us see. "Then the king of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah in Riblah before his eyes. . . . Moreover he put out Zedekiah's eyes, and bound him with chains, to carry him to Babylon" (Jer. 39:6, 7).

It isn't safe to flout God's prophecies, no matter how impossible of fulfillment they may seem to be.

BUILDING YOUR LIBRARY

Book Reviews

By Arlen Marsh

Dr. G. B. F. Hallock has given us a good many books on religion, but perhaps the most valuable for the minister is his annual version of Doran's Ministerial Manual (Harper & Brothers; $2.00).

There are other books out which fill approximately the same purpose as Doran's, but none of them seems quite so complete—or quite so usable—as this Harper-Hallock annual. The 1941 edition of Doran's, published October 1, is no exception to the general rule of quality.

Dr. Hallock has tried to supply just about everything a pastor might need. There are sermon outlines for morning and evening services, based on the 1941 calendar (including the new Thanksgiving); there are extra outlines for special occasions as Easter, Washington's Birthday, July 4, Christmas.

Obviously, the Church of God minister—or the minister of any other denomination—hardly could follow the Hallock outlines to the exclusion of his own thinking; but the doctor has provided suggestions that easily could be made into Church of God sermons—and suggestions are far from being a glut on the ministerial market!

Aside from the sermon outlines, Doran's supplies illustrative anecdotes which are usually humorless, sentences for church bulletin boards, outlines of the 1941 International Sunday school lessons, topics and outlines for midweek meetings. There isn't much, as a matter of fact, that Doran's doesn't have.

Those with a yen for writing—and for original Christianity—will enjoy the fuss kicked up by Channing Pollock, playwright, lecturer, author, in the October American Mercury, and Reader's Digest. Mr. Pollock violently washes his hands of formal Christianity; the clergy, he says bluntly, is given to platitudes, living in ivory palaces, and complete lack of thinking. Combined, the Mercury and the Digest are offering heavy cash prizes (up to $1,200) for manuscripts the editors feel best answer—or agree with—the Pollock ideas. One set of prizes goes to a layman, another set to a minister. And what minister couldn't use $1,200?

In the Synagogue

The last story we read about Jesus was when He was twelve years of age. Then John the Baptist went forth, telling of the One who was to come. Jesus came to John and was baptized by him. Jesus was then about thirty years of age. After His baptism, He was led into the wilderness where He prayed and fasted, and endured temptation. After the Devil had left Him, Jesus "returned in the power of the Spirit into Galilee." Jesus taught in the different synagogues about the country. He became famous. People glorified Him; then He went back home.

In Nazareth, Jesus' home town, He went into the synagogue, as was His custom.

Here are some interesting facts to learn about Jewish children and the synagogues:

When a child was five years of age, he was able to attend the services in the synagogue. When he was thirteen, he was given some special tokens or signs to wear at daily prayers. These were called "phylacteries." (Ask someone to pronounce that big word.) It means "strips of parchment, on which were written Scripture verses." These strips of parchment were something like paper, except they did not tear as easily as paper. The children of thirteen wore these strips around their foreheads and on their hands at their daily prayers. Their parents were really living up to Deuteronomy 6:7, 8, weren't they? Part of these verses read: "Thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes." The words they wrote on these signs are stated in Deuteronomy 6:4, 5. Get your Bibles and read them. If you are thirteen years of age, you would be wearing these signs at your daily devotions—that is—if you were a Jewish boy or girl.

A Blessing Refused

When Jesus went into the synagogue, He read from Isaiah 61, verses 1 and 2. He was reading about Himself. He said, "This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears." He could not have said that, had He read the third verse, for that verse is yet to be fulfilled.

These people, with whom Jesus had grown up, did not believe He could do miracles. Their hearts were so hardened that Jesus said, "No prophet is accepted in his own country." He also told them that there were many widows in Israel, yet only one, a Gentile, was helped by Elijah. Only one leper was healed, who also was a Gentile. Faith not race, was that upon which divine blessings and help depended, then, as well as now.

These facts that Jesus told made the people even harder hearted. They rose up and led Him out of the city, thus losing all chance of His wonderful blessing.

We, today, must not close our hearts to Him, lest we, too, lose the blessings He has for us who love Him and have faith in Him.

Is Pleasure a Problem?

• • • By Robert Hardesty, Oregon, Ill.

One of the most often discussed problems of Christian youth is that of pleasure and entertainment. It is a natural thing for young people to be energetic and active, and the Christian's problem is to direct that energy and activity into the proper channels. Undoubtedly, this is a greater problem in larger cities than in small towns and rural communities, due to the larger number of amusement houses, clubs, and other forms of entertainment. No matter where one lives, he constantly must make decisions between right and wrong pleasures.

In what things does he find his greatest pleasure? If he likes the pleasures of the world and really wants a good time, he might attend parties and dances where he can let himself go and have a "high old time," and where he can indulge to the limit in strong drinks. What matter if he awakens the next morning with a terrific headache and feels as if he had gone through the wringer! What if he is unable to go to work, or to attend church services, because of too high spirits the night before; it was surely a lot of fun. After all, this life is pretty short, so if he is living for the pleasures which the world affords, he will not stint himself in them.

Yet, on the other hand, our joy may be found in serving the Lord. Without doubt, service to God is a fuller, more satisfying, and more lasting pleasure. "Thou wilt shew me the path of life: in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore" (Psalm 16:11). In addition to the hope of a future, much brighter than any this world presents, Christian service affords peace of mind, contentment, and happiness in this present life.

If one gives all the time he can to the service of the Lord, he will have no time left for the pleasures of the world. In Mark 12:30, we read the first commandment of Jesus: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength." If we fully obey this commandment, how much room will we have for the love of sinful pleasure?

Growing in Christ

• • • By Lois Randall, Braham, Minn.

Recently, the following true story was brought to my attention. A visiting pastor was holding meetings in a small church in western Minnesota. Night after night, he noticed the presence of a small Greek boy in his audience. The pastor made it his deliberate aim to become acquainted with the boy, Lester. After he closed his meetings, he did not see Lester until several years later. While walking down Roberts Street in Saint Paul, he heard a familiar voice calling, "Papers." Sure enough, it was his friend, Lester! The pastor saw Lester several times after that. Then he was called to a church in Chicago. One evening it was his privilege to attend a father-son banquet at a neighboring church. As he entered the church, one of the members said, "Just think, Dr. Shouman has brought his whole Sunday school class. See, they're all over there." The pastor looked in the direction the man had mentioned, and there in the midst of a group of fine looking boys was Lester. The pastor could hardly believe his eyes. When Lester saw the pastor, he arose in all his six-foot splendor. The pastor was surprised to see how the small boy had grown, and remarked about his height. Quick as a flash Lester came back with, "And I want you to know, Pastor, that I've grown in Christ, too."

How often we are guilty of speaking of the physical growth and entirely leaving out the spiritual growth! We too, like Lester, should tell the world of our growth in Christ. No one likes to be called a runt in stature, and neither should we like to be called a runt in Christian service. Let us all work diligently that we may grow.

Dead Cat

Remember the Correspondence Committee financial report difficulty? There was absolutely no fraud involved, and no one person was responsible. This minor incident merely emphasizes a need for standardization of reports for all departments of Berean activity. Such standard report forms would greatly assist a new local officer to determine what was expected of him, would probably lessen the amount of work required of his office, and, at the same time, would increase the efficiency of our organization.

RALLY DAY AT BLAIR, NEBRASKA

The Blair church observed Rally Day in an all-day meeting October 6, with an attendance of about seventy from Arlington, Kenard, Bennington, and Omaha, Nebr., and Little Sioux, Iowa.

Sunday school was called at the usual hour. Sr. Lucille Appleby gave the sermon, which was followed by Communion service. Basket dinner was served at the home of Sr. Peck, it being too cold to go to the park.

At 2:00 p.m., all gathered at the church for the afternoon services. There were a song service and a talk by Bro. Leslie LeCrone, after which Sr. Appleby delivered the sermon. There was music for both morning and afternoon services. We received greetings from Sr. Eva Grimsley of Little Sioux, Iowa, as she was unable to be with us.

A vote was taken stating that we have these all-day meetings more often and in turn with the Omaha church. At the close of the day, all departed for their homes, being much benefited by the day's services. We hope that we may be able to assemble ourselves together more often for such meetings.

Bessie Jenkins, Secy.

OREGON, ILLINOIS

To enable the pastor, Mrs. Magaw, and others, to accompany Sr. Orpha LeMasurier to the Minnesota State Conference, Bros. Charles Lindsay and Ben Carpenter preached at the morning and evening services, respectively, Sunday, October 27.

Our Sunday school superintendent, Bro. Paul C. Johnson, recently preached for the Dixon, Ill., brethren.

The Dorcas Society recently canned forty-two quarts of pears contributed by Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Marsh, Mount Morris, Ill., to be used next summer at the Illinois and General Conferences.

Interest in the midweek devotional services is encouraging.

Following are the names and addresses of our members who are in hospitals: Roy Blanchard, Veterans' Hospital, Hines, Ill., Room F-245; and Hazel Reed, Illinois Research Hospital, 1819 W. Polk St., Chicago, Ill.

BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL NEWS

Starting in the next issue of The Restitution Herald, there will appear weekly a column, on page 11, which will present our Bible Training School work more fully than space permits in these news columns.

As these days gather about us, we fully realize somewhat with dismay the passing of summer. With expectant optimism, however, we view the days ahead filled with ice skating, sliding, and sleigh riding. Now, as we scan our surroundings, we can see the beautiful handiwork of God in His creation of fall and all its array of colors. Last Sunday as I strolled somewhat leisurely along the river, I surveyed with amazement the way our omniscient God had tinted the leaves, and I wondered, "From whence sprang atheists?" I believe there is no way to get closer to our Father than by contact with His natural creation.

Our Maker truly was gracious to have placed such creatures as men in this glorious environment of ours. Very seldom does man figure in beautification, but always does he cause deterioration. Man has never created a Yellowstone Park, but he has created the slums and the menacing looking buildings of our cities. God has formed what was good, man has devised with these remarkable goods, things that cause destruction of other goods. The guns, tanks, airplanes, and bombs are used to displace our lovely landscapes and the good in a partially civilized world.

Thursday evening the new members of the Bible Training School and Orpha and Diane LeMasurier were the honored guests at a welcome party, sponsored by the local church. A well-rounded program of entertainment was enjoyed by all under the leadership of Sr. Leila Mae Doeden. A delectable lunch climaxed the evening's social.

The students going into the field this week are: Ellsworth Routson to Grand Rapids, Mich.; Alan McLain to Rockford, Ill.; and Celine Randall to Dixon, Ill. Your reporter is planning on a trip to the Minnesota State Conference with the Dean, S. E. Magaw, Sr. Margaret Magaw, Orpha LeMasurier, and her daughter Diane.

Last week we learned that a marriage is the uniting of two into one. We are wondering which one . . . Alan McLain having "pun" in music class, as we were speaking of sharps and flats, said, "It would B# if we could get it." We might add, if he continues to be as sharp as he now is, he had better take a staff with him, or he'll fall down and stick up. In our music class we bar no one. We require everyone to be on time, and no passing of notes is allowed. Please! I'll never do it again.

SOPHIA J. GILL

Sophia Jane Reighard was born on a farm in Swan Creek Township, Fulton County, Ohio, October 6, 1873, where she grew to womanhood, and on August 13, 1896, she was united in marriage with Delmar E. Gill, to which union two daughters were born.

On October 22, 1923, her husband, with whom she had walked and labored in sweet devotion for twenty-seven years, died; and later on she moved to Wauseon. Fourteen years ago she and her widowed mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Reighard, now in the ninety-third year of her age, established their home in that city, where she lived and gave unlimited devotion in caring for her mother until the time of her death, which occurred October 12, 1940.

Of her immediate family, she leaves surviving: her two daughters, Mrs. Howard Andrew and Miss Georgia Gill of Wauseon; her aged mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Reighard of Wauseon; one sister, Mrs. Roscoe Dunbar of Delta, Ohio; and three brothers, Frank H. Reighard, of Wauseon, Royal C. and Bert A. Reighard, both of Delta.

Some twenty-eight years ago Sr. Gill was baptized into Christ, and from which time hers was a life of true and faithful devotion to her Lord, and her duty in every respect in life. She was gentle, kind, and sweet in her contacts with others, and she fought a good fight. She finished her course and kept the faith, and now sleeps in Jesus.

Funeral services were conducted in Raker church, after which she was tenderly laid to rest beside her late husband to await the call of the Master.

L. E. Conner.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

"We thank all the dear brothers and sisters who remembered us with cards and letters in honor of our sixtieth wedding anniversary and Bro. Newell's eighty-fifth birthday. May God's blessings be with you."—Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Newell, Blair, Nebr.

"The Lawrenceville, Ohio, Church of God is expecting Bro. McLain today (October 21) to start a series of meetings. He will work with us until November 3."—Inez Gordon, Springfield, Ohio, Rt. 2.

"Even him (Solomon) did outlandish women cause to sin" (Neh. 13:26).

Bro. and Sr. L. E. Conner motored to Casey, Ill., October 26, where Bro. Conner conducted services for our brethren Sunday, October 27.

"We have organized a Bible class of my neighbors."—Mrs. L. M. Kiger, Marengo, Iowa.

The Bible Training School students and others who recently motored to Graytown, Wis., visited, en route, with Bro. and Sr. H. S. Bell of LaCrosse, Wis.

THE MASTER'S WORK

The writer and his wife returned home, October 2, after an absence of three months of service in the Master's work, during which every effort possible was put forth to honor God and His Son in the teaching of His gospel. We met brethren that we had never met before. It was a real joy to serve the Lord with these of like faith, and we pray that the "tie that binds" will continue to bind us in Christian love and fellowship in the service of our Lord. The Lord knows the good that has been done, and will reward accordingly.

We did not seek our own glory, but glorified the Master who did so much for us. Our path has not been filled with flowers, altogether. There has been some criticism, but through it all our faith still abides in the Word of God! A young brother, not so long ago, said to me, "Brother Drinkard, I would give anything if I had a work like you, and could go out in faith knowing that God would see me through." Yes, it takes faith to make all things work for the good. The field needs many workers that will share in the sacrifice that brethren have to make to carry on in gospel work.

I know that "for our sakes, no doubt, this is written: that he that ploweth should plow in hope; and that he that thresheth in hope should be partaker of his hope. . . . If we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things? If others be partaker of this power over you, are not we rather? Nevertheless we have not used this power; but suffer all things, lest we should hinder the gospel of Christ. Do ye not know that they which minister about holy things live of the things of the temple? and they which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar? Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel" (1 Cor. 9:10-14). I know, too, that it was Paul who said, "Though I preach the gospel, I have nothing to glory of: for necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel" (v. 16).

Under the burden of this great responsibility of preaching the gospel, Paul further said, "What is my reward then? Verily that, when I preach the gospel, I may make the gospel of Christ without charge, that I abuse not my power in the gospel" (v. 18). It is the duty of every minister of the gospel to answer every call to preach the gospel; it is the duty of believers of the gospel to use their material means to support that effort—"the Lord ordained" that such should be done. Never before in its history has the Church of God had such an opportunity as it has today, if it will but realize the opportunity and act accordingly in preaching the gospel. Are we doing our part?

Are we doing our duty? Well, in addition to our ministerial work, we have the editorship of The Gospel Trumpet that was started over fifty years ago as a means of helping to preach the gospel. If you are not a reader of it, but would like to have a copy, write me and you shall receive one immediately. It stands for the faith, doctrine, and practice (Scriptural) of the Church of God, only. Not only do we have all this to do, but we are going to help Bro. S. E. Magaw by sending him more articles for publication in The Restitution Herald. If any of you do not happen to agree with me, just write me how egotistical you think I am, as a brother did recently in so many words, and if I don't think you are right you will hear from me.

Remember this, brethren, I am in the service of the Lord; making no charge for preaching the gospel of our risen Lord. I know this, that He will cause the hearts of our brethren to understand that means are needed to pay expenses in our efforts, and the needed help will come. God is still on His throne, and He knows from day to day our every need. May God open our eyes to the opportunities NOW.

ELEVEN

By Mrs. Mae Nedrow

It seems as though 'twas just a day
Since you were only seven;
And now, today's your birthday,
You say you are eleven!

I'm glad you are my very own,
Not someone else's lad,
For, if I didn't have you now,
My heart would feel so sad.

So we will laugh and sing today,
Since you've just turned eleven,
As we did in the days of old,
When you were only seven.

NELLIE MAE RAHN

Nellie Mae Rice, daughter of John and Sarah Rice, was born September 13, 1881, at Elkhart, Ind., where she grew to maturity. In 1901 she was married to L. W. Rahn. To them were born five children: Mrs. Grace Aaron of Sacramento, Mrs. Mildred Carothers, Lyle, Raymond, and Arthur all of Los Angeles. Besides her husband and children, she is survived by one sister and one brother, Martha and Ray Rice. In 1918, the family moved from Elkhart to Los Angeles where they have since resided. In 1922, she identified herself with the Church of God, being baptized into the Name of Christ by Elder S. J. Lindsay.

For the past two and one half years, she has been a very patient sufferer from the ravages of cancer. Everything that kind hearts and loving hands could do to relieve her suffering, was done by the members of her family, but on September 29, she quietly fell asleep. Her faith in the promises of the return of Christ to raise the dead and establish God's Kingdom, gave her courage for her trials and sufferings.

Services were conducted by the writer, October 2, in the Edwards' Bro. Colonial Mortuary, and she was laid to rest in Valhalla Cemetery in San Fernando Valley.

Emma C. Railsback.

MRS. SHERMAN BENNETT

Mrs. Sherman Bennett died at her home in Paynesville, Minn., Thursday, October 3. She leaves ten children, eleven grandchildren, and a host of friends to mourn her death. Her husband preceded her in death in 1928. This was the sixth death in this family within two years.

Mr. and Mrs. Bennett were lifelong residents of this community. Their home was blessed with thirteen children, ten living.

The writer was called to conduct the funeral, at which time we spoke on the uncertainty of life and the hope of living again through the resurrection—which she now awaits. Funeral services were conducted at the Church of God, Eden Valley, Minn.

Walter Wiggins.

FRANCIS MARION TITUS

Francis Marion Titus was born in Polk County, Iowa, November 14, 1872, and died in the hospital at Mitchell, S. D., October 11, 1940, from an injury received by a fall at his home near Letcher, where he had lived for thirty-eight years.

October 14, 1896, he married Inez May Garton of Varina, Iowa. For the first six years of their married life, they lived at Elm Grove, now Yetter, Iowa, before coming to South Dakota.

Three children were born to them: Mrs. Bessie Kistler of Hermosa, S. D.; Howard Titus of Letcher; and Mrs. Hazel Adams of Salem, Ore., who with Bro. Titus' widow are left to mourn his death. He is also survived by four grandchildren, four brothers, and two sisters.

Mr. Titus was baptized into the faith when a young man, and was a man of sterling uprightness, being industrious, honest, and honorable. He will be remembered with great respect and esteem by his many friends and neighbors.

Funeral services were held in Noble's Funeral Home in Mitchell, October 14, by the writer, after which the deceased was buried in Butler Cemetery near his home.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him, (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

Christian Preparedness

By A. B. Wilson

THE Church of God is now living in a most wonderful age. What can be more wonderful than to witness the fulfillment of the prophecies of the last days! It is a wonderful age, but it is also an age in which God's people are going to have to make their stand before the world, and make clear to the authorities of their government exactly where they stand in regard to God and the nations.

The nations of the world have for many years been doing the very things which God said they would do in the last days. Joel 3:9, 10 is certainly being fulfilled, for it reads: "Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles (nations); Prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near; let them come up: beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruninghooks into spears: let the weak say, I am strong." Does the bride of Christ want to be in this preparedness? I think not.

In Zechariah 14:1, 2 we read: "Behold, the day of the Lord cometh, and thy spoil shall be divided in the midst of thee. For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle; and the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the women ravished; and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city." I am certain that God's people do not want to be in any part of this company when the Lord comes to call His bride.

In Revelation 6:7, 8 John says: "When he (the Lamb, v. 1) had opened the fourth seal, I heard the voice of the fourth beast say, Come and see. And I looked, and, behold, a pale horse: and his name that sat on him was Death, and Hell followed with him. And power was given unto them over the fourth part of the earth, to kill with sword, and with hunger, and with death, and with the beasts of the earth." Does the bride of Christ want to be in this group?

At this time when we see so much preparation—preparation which can only lead to destruction—for what should the bride of Christ be preparing? For war and destruction? Never! She should be preparing for the coming of the Bridegroom. Christ is coming to restore, and not to destroy. The bride must be as pure as the Bridegroom, and we know He would take no part in such preparations.

The leaders of the church cannot prepare for its members. Each member must do that for himself. The time has come when we, as members of Christ's body, must make our own decisions. Whether we stand or fall depends upon us. Are we going to serve God and prepare ourselves to have a part in the great restoration, or are we going to serve war and have a part in its great destruction?

We cannot be of the body of Christ and of the body of Caesar. "Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's" (Matt. 22:21). The stamps, the seals, the deeds to our property belong to Caesar, but the members of the body of Christ—their lives—"the earth . . . and the fulness thereof" belong to God. We have no right to destroy any part of this. We must prepare ourselves to restore mankind, and not to destroy mankind.

True, Paul said, "Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers." So, let us be subject unto our government, but do all with love and kindness. Above all, let us put our whole trust in our heavenly Father, and I believe that we shall not be compelled to do those things which are against His will. God will be with His people.

After much thought and prayer, I have found this to be the answer to the problem, for myself. Each individual Christian must find the answer to his own problem by going to God for guidance. There is no other reliable source of help. Anyone who sincerely seeks Divine guidance will receive it.

Therefore, in this time of preparation, let us not be looking to material things, such as guns, bombs, and warplanes, as our means of

The Suicide Torpedo

British naval authorities report that the Italians are probably using the so-called "suicide torpedo." This device is propelled by a motor, and a steering apparatus is operated by a man stationed within the projectile. The rider practically forfeits his life at the time he enters the torpedo, for he meets instant death when his coffin hits the side of a ship.

The student of prophecy, though not surprised, marvels somewhat at the carnal craftiness of this militaristic generation. Daniel, prophesying of the "time of the end," said: "Knowledge shall be increased" (Dan. 12:4). Jesus said, "The children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light" (Luke 16:8). Surely our Savior's words apply also to the present generation, for while the nations show such determined and unfailing skill in destroying life, property, and happiness, the church of the living God meekly and drowsily dreams of evangelism.

The Apostle Paul, likewise prophesying of "the last days" (2 Tim. 3:1), foretold that men would be "ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth . . . men of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith" (3:7, 8).

The suicide torpedo, as novel and uniquely fatal as it first seems to be, really betrays the whole plan, purpose, and end of warfare. Jesus said—and surely it is not a sin to believe Jesus—"All they that take the sword shall perish with the sword" (Matt. 26:52), and "He that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword" (Rev. 13:10). In contrast, the Savior also said, "Whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it" (Matt. 16:25). The torpedo and its rider in their mission of death should challenge the Christian's loyalty in his mission of life.

"Home, Sweet Home"

After a four-years' absence, we were recently privileged to visit our parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Magaw, at their home in Lester Prairie, Minnesota, in the same house where we were born. With a little more difficulty than in the days of our slender youth, we again climbed up through the small opening into the attic to browse through souvenirs of childhood days. Years flew backward.

Being privileged, too, to visit other homes and other friends of our home State, many interesting and almost sacred experiences came to mind. It was encouraging to witness the continued faith of former friends, and to see the very fields of the Lord in which we were formerly employed bearing fruitage.

Reading an exciting novel, eating peanuts at a circus, or vacationing in the Rockies may indeed help one to forget the petty problems of routine duties, but there is nothing that will so enable one to get a new lease on life as to return for a few days to his boyhood home.

The Days of Your Campaign

After long reserve on the part of our Chief Executive, challenger Wendell Willkie has at last succeeded in getting President Roosevelt out on the campaign carpet. The campaign is, after all, most seriously contested. Many voters who favor one candidate fear the other may win. It is the most interesting and significant political campaign in the history of our great nation; each speech is made with the utmost preparation, caution, and care. The right words will bring victory; the wrong words will mean certain defeat. The election draws near.

The Christian is waging a more important campaign. He, too, must be careful in his message and daily life. The Apostle Peter, chairman of the Christians' Party, counsels his every candidate to be strong in faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, and charity. He challenges that "these things be in you and abound," that you may make your "calling and election sure" (2 Peter 1:5-10). Further, Peter definitely promises victory, saying: "So an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ" (v. 11).

When we take into consideration that politicians make so much ado for lip honor, flesh power, and monetary reward for four years, we should be able to sense the wisdom and importance of zealously working to make our calling and election sure to the Kingdom of God forever.

The Sign of the Cross

By C. E. Randall

IN ORDER that the Sign of the Cross might become visible to us in the arrangement of the Tabernacle furniture, it will be necessary to arrange in our minds the various pieces of furniture in their proper location in the Tabernacle. Beginning in the outer court, the first piece of furniture to place is the altar of burnt offerings, called the brazen altar. This altar was overlaid with brass. In direct line with this altar, but nearer to the Tabernacle, let us set the laver. Like the brazen altar, this laver is also of brass. Proceeding into the Tabernacle, or the Holy Place, to our right we place the table of shewbread. Just across the Holy Place in direct line, we set the seven-pointed candelabra. Going to the center of the room, but directly in front of the veil leading to the Holy Place and in line with the laver and brazen altar, we place the golden altar or altar of incense. Stepping inside the Holy of Holies, we now place the ark of the covenant in line with the golden altar, laver, and brazen altar. Thus, this arrangement which God detailed to Moses formed a perfect cross. The priests, in their daily ministrations of sacrifice and atonement, labored around and in the midst of the Sign of the Cross. Their sacrifices pointed to the Christ, and the furniture, upon which they sacrificed, foreshadowed the cross.

It was not possible for the priests or the people to see the full view of the Sign of the Cross, as it was separated in three distinct sections, being divided by two veils. This was no accident, but divinely arranged in accordance with the plan of redemption. There being three separate phases of redemption, there needed to be three distinct parts in the work of atonement in the Tabernacle. These three were: (1) The brazen. This is where the natural or sinful man confessed his sins upon the head of his lamb of atonement; (2) the overlaid wood. This place was where the table of shewbread and candelabra and altar of incense were placed. These were made of wood overlaid with pure gold. In this place there were light, bread, and fragrance; and (3) the pure gold with drawn-out parts of the same piece, covered by the presence of God. Each of these three states or conditions of the work of atonement was separate. Each was partitioned from the other.

The work of the cross and the benefits of the sacrifice of Christ are likewise divided. The first step is: the natural man in his "brazen" condition, unable to see the full and complete work of the cross, must, by faith, take hold of his atonement Lamb, which is Christ Jesus, and upon Him confess his sins. From this brazen or natural condition, man is led forth into a spiritual relationship where he is overlaid with "righteousness which is of God by faith" (Phil. 3:9). In this second stage of his redemptive process, he comes into an atmosphere of "new light." It is the light of life that comes from the Word of God. (Psalm 119:105). In this light he works and walks and lives. In this new division of atonement, he finds the shewbread. He lives upon it and keeps replacing it regularly. It is manna; it is the living Word of God; it is the written Word of God. "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God" (Matt. 4:4). Then, too, there is the ascending incense. This incense represents the prayers of those who are overlaid with the righteousness of God (Rev. 5:8, margin). This incense was to be kept ascending continually. Our prayers, too, are to rise without ceasing (1 Thess. 5:17).

In the third room or division, we find the work of redemption completed and the cross finished. Here is the ark of the covenant with its mercy seat, out of which is drawn the cherubim overshadowing the mercy seat. This suggests to me that the third step in our completed redemption will be when we are drawn out of the same material as our Mercy Seat, which is Christ. In Romans 3:24, 25 the Emphatic Diaglott renders the following version: "Being justified freely by his favor, through that redemption which is by Christ Jesus; whom God has set forth to be a Mercy-seat, by his own blood." The last step in our redemption will be taken when we are made like our Mercy Seat. "Our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself." (Phil. 3:20, 21; also see 1 John 3:2; 1 Cor. 15:49.)

In observing the Sign of the Cross, we do not feel that type or language has been extended. The Sign of the Cross can readily be observed in the sacrifice of the Passover lambs. A "spit" was extended through the entire length of the animal's body. Between the hind legs a gambrel was placed; thus, the Passover lamb was placed on a perfect cross to be roasted. Was this method of sacrifice accidental, or was it as Paul affirms "a shadow of good things to come"? The sacrifices of Israel were made around the Sign of the Cross and pointed forward to the time when the Son of (Please turn to page 10)

"JESUS WEPT"

By Omer J. Parker

WE KNOW these two words, "Jesus wept," to be the shortest verse in the Bible. Is it not also the sweetest? Thousands and thousands of Christians have blessed God for these two words. Next to the comfort of knowing that Jesus shed His blood comes the knowledge that He shed tears.

On the day when Jesus, hailed with hosannas, rode in lowly guise into Jerusalem, we are told that as He came nigh the city He lifted His voice and wept over it, saying: "If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes" (Luke 19:41, 42). These were tears of grief and compassion, indeed; tears wept for enemies that would not be friends.

On two other occasions we are told of Jesus weeping. A few days later than the incident mentioned, down in a garden at the foot of the same hill of Olivet, He wept by night in that agony of His which brought the bloody sweat in great drops from His body to the ground. He "offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears unto him that was able to save him from death, and was heard in that he feared" (Heb. 5:7).

The other occasion was that to which our text relates—when Jesus wept in sympathy for Martha and Mary whose brother had died. The scene was near the Mount of Olives, too, for the village of Bethany stood on the back of the hill. We shall especially consider Jesus' weeping.

Before proceeding, however, let us notice the different character of those three weepings of Christ. In Gethsemane, His own anguish, endured indeed for us, wrung the bitter drops from His eyes. On Olivet, He wept for foes resolved and doomed to perish. Near the grave of Lazarus, He wept in sympathy with loved friends. Those tears of Jesus speak to us of four things: (1) of pain—Jesus suffered; (2) of pity—Jesus sympathized; (3) in pledge—Jesus showed how all may find Him; (4) an example—Jesus set an example.

Here are tears of pain. Tears are not always tears of pain—laughter itself at times runs over into tears. Nevertheless, tears are generally the sign of grief. These tears of Jesus were signs of internal pain. A great deal of Christ's suffering was within. His worst pain was not when men scourged Him, or when the nails went through His flesh, or when He said, "I thirst." The pain of crucifixion was very dreadful, but He had endured worse anguish than the bodily torture.

The worst suffering of man generally is not what can be seen. Perhaps there are persons of good health walking the streets or sitting in our worshiping assemblies, without a sign of woe, persons whose bosoms are full of grief that is worse than bodily pain. God only knows the bitterness and the burden of stricken hearts. Never did anyone suffer so much as Jesus suffered in His heart, surrounded as He was with sin and its awful fruits. Think of the constant burdens that must have pressed His heart, seeing clearly all the vice and woe that surrounded Him! To see the bitter wages of sin, to see the sad workings of sin in unbelief and slowness to learn, to see this in both enemies and friends bowed down His soul in grief. This sorrow was borne for us. It was part of the burden Jesus bore for us that we might be relieved. When He wept, as well as when He bled, He was suffering for us.

Secondly, we have mentioned Christ's infinite sympathy and pity. It is beautiful to see Jesus' tears mingling themselves with those of the sorrowing sisters. He felt that Lazarus was His friend and brother, too, and He wept to think he had been sick unto death and now lay in the grave. Jesus must have been especially fond of Lazarus. You remember the sisters' message when their brother was ill: "Lord, he whom thou lovest is sick." Yes, the Jews were right when they said, "Behold how he loved him!" Love shed those tears, love for both the dead brother and the living sisters. If only we could get our own names into that verse, and have the Savior's love applied to us as it was to the three in Bethany!

Someone will ask, "Why should Jesus shed tears of sympathy with Martha and Mary, when He knew very well that Lazarus was to be raised from the dead?" Such a one is quite right in thinking that Jesus knew that He would soon recall Lazarus; but in His weeping, Jesus' sympathy was interwoven into the feelings of others.

In the third place, Jesus' tears were a pledge. These tears speak about the future—showing us what Jesus will always be. Everything Christ did on earth was done for all time. Christ's deeds stand out as parables to teach the world. When Jesus wept with Martha and Mary, His tears promised that all His suffering followers to the end of time should have His pitying regard. His tears dropped to the earth for us.

It is true, though, that we must not think of Jesus now shedding tears in heaven. If God is to wipe away all the tears of Christ's people, they cannot remain in the eyes of Christ Himself. Tears belong to the time of His weakness and humiliation. Nevertheless, His heart is as tender and as full of love as ever. It is because this truth may be read in the tears Jesus shed at Lazarus' grave, that so many thousands of Christians have blessed God for the words of the text.

Finally, with His tears, the Savior set an example for Christians. It is a woeful thing to have a hard, unpitying heart. Should any of us be already selfish and stony, woe for us in this suffering world. If one's heart is not warmed and softened by Jesus' grace, it will get like flint or steel.

There is so much to pity all about us, that the tears within us will turn to gall if not shed.

The teachings of Christ's tears to us may be given in Paul's words: "Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep" (Rom. 12:15). Sympathize with real distress as you find it about you, then let your sympathy become practical. He who every day dries some tears is in training for the companionship of angels, and of Jesus, and of God.

ISRAEL RESTORED

In Two Parts—Part Two

EZEKIEL 36:17-36 reads: "Son of man, when the house of Israel dwelt in their own land, they defiled it by their own way and by their doings. . . . Wherefore I poured my fury upon them for the blood that they had shed upon the land, and for their idols wherewith they had polluted it: and I scattered them among the heathen, and they were dispersed through the countries: according to their way and according to their doings I judged them. And when they entered unto the heathen, whither they went, they profaned my holy name, when they said to them, These are the people of the Lord, and are gone forth out of his land.

"But I had pity for mine holy name, which the house of Israel had profaned among the heathen, whither they went. Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God; I do not this for your sakes, O house of Israel, but for mine holy name's sake, which ye have profaned among the heathen, whither ye went. And I will sanctify my great name, which was profaned among the heathen, which ye have profaned in the midst of them; and the heathen shall know that I am the Lord, saith the Lord God, when I shall be sanctified in you before their eyes. For I will take you from among the heathen, and gather you out of all countries, and will bring you into your own land.

"Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you. A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. And I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them. And shall dwell in the land that I gave unto your fathers; and ye shall be my people and I will be your God. Then shall ye remember your own evil ways, and your doings that were not good, and shall loathe yourselves in your own sight for your iniquities and for your abominations. Not for your sakes do I this, saith the Lord God, be it known unto you: be ashamed and confounded for your own ways, O house of Israel. Thus saith the Lord God; In the day that I shall have cleansed you from all your iniquities I will also cause you to dwell in the cities, and the wastes shall be builded. . . . And they shall say, This land that was desolate is become like the garden of Eden. . . . Then the heathen that are left round about you shall know that I the Lord build the ruined places, and plant that that was desolate: I the Lord have spoken it, and I will do it."

Continuing in chapter 39:21-29, we read: "I will set my glory among the heathen, and all the heathen shall see my judgment that I have executed, and my hand that I have laid upon them. So the house of Israel shall know that I am the Lord their God from that day and forward.

"And the heathen shall know that the house of Israel went into captivity for their iniquity: because they trespassed against me, therefore hid I my face from them, and gave them into the hand of their enemies: so fell they all by the sword. According to their uncleanness and according to their transgressions have I done unto them. . . . Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Now will I bring again the captivity of Jacob, and have mercy upon the whole house of Israel, and will be jealous for my holy name; after that they have borne their shame, and all trespasses whereby they have trespassed against me, when they dwelt safely in their land, and none made them afraid. When I have brought them again from the people,

OUR TRACTS

By James M. Watkins
Chairman, Berean Publishing Committee

SINCE many are planning to participate in our "tract-a-day" campaign from October 28 to December 16, as recently announced in The Restitution Herald, we are assisting in their planning with this brief review of our tracts with our personal recommendations for their use.

Essential Truths, a National Bible Institution tract, is a single leaflet tract covering six of the important points of our doctrine by references, rather than comment. Complete references are listed on such subjects as, "The Kingdom on Earth," "Joint-Heirs With Christ," "Restoration of Israel," "Repentance and Baptism," and so forth. We highly recommend it as a general distribution tract, but only among those who are already Bible readers and who will dig out references. Your campaign supply of fifty costs only fifteen cents.

First Principles by Brother G. E. Marsh, a National Bible Institution tract, is one of our larger tracts—consisting of twenty pages. It contains a series of twelve complete lessons on the essentials of the Church of God doctrine. This tract is recommended only for distribution among the more studious types of people, or among those of the more advanced interests in our doctrines. Although listed among our tracts, we commend this tract highly as a basis of class study with a teacher of almost any qualifications, while even the home-study student may regard it as one of his "must haves." The price of your campaign supply of fifty is one dollar.

Fundamental Bible Teachings of the Church of God by the writer, a ten-page Berean tract, has endeavored to boil all of the essence of Church of God teaching down to seven simple fundamentals, some not exceeding fifty words, in each case not giving over one or two simple references to encourage a beginning in Bible study. It is the basis of our Christian Worker's Kit, which we expect to offer in the near future. It is recommended for wholesale distribution among any of newspaper-reader comprehension or better. After each section, space has been provided for the addition of special references that the reader may add, as he reads other tracts, or the giver may add as interest is shown when the tract is given out. We believe you will find this tract most useful for all purposes of any offered for reaching the complete newcomer to Christian study, or the individual confused by opinions and counter opinions. Your campaign supply of fifty costs sixty cents.

Can You Believe? by H. V. Reed is a National Bible Institution tract of six pages. Any thought expressed and kept alive since 1861 has to be good. If you want a tract for general distribution that will set any thinking man back on his haunches, and make him think, this is your tract. It contains thirty thought-provoking questions such as: "Can you believe dead men remember God, when David said, 'In death there is no remembrance of thee?'" It is unreservedly recommended for wholesale distribution among thinking people the world over. Your campaign supply of fifty costs only forty-five cents.

The Kingdom of God by Brother Harry Goekler is a Berean tract. It is eight pages of the most complete coverage we have concerning the practical aspects on the Kingdom of God, location, extent, duration, ruler, citizens, and so forth. This is a special subject tract, and, as such, it is recommended only to those who want to stress this subject in their distribution. It is well written, easily understood, and very complete. If you want to give something that covers the Kingdom of God, this is the tract. Your campaign supply of fifty costs only sixty cents.

Resurrection by S. E. Magaw. It is an eight-page Berean tract. This is another complete and very worthwhile, special subject tract, that can also be recommended very highly for regular distribution. It is written in an easy-to-read, fast-moving style; it handles nothing but its subject, and wastes no time on that. It establishes the certainty of the resurrection, the time of the resurrection, and characteristics of the resurrection. If you want to cover this subject in your distribution, this tract will be a credit to your interest and will require no apologies afterwards. Your campaign supply of fifty costs only sixty cents.

What Must I Do to Be Saved? by J. F. Waggoner, a National Bible Institution tract, is a very worthwhile four-page tract on the elements of salvation. It covers very simply and completely the steps in the process of salvation, from belief to the coming of Christ. We like it, especially, because it calls no man saved until the coming of Christ, and then only if he has continued faithful until that time. It is recommended for general distribution. Your campaign supply of fifty costs only thirty cents.

Pleasures of Youth by J. R. LeCrone is a National Bible Institution tract. This tract is coming to the front as one of our most popular tracts. This tract we rate as outstanding in its dealing with the problems of the Christian youth of today—a very challenging tract, well written in a modern manner. For instance, note these thoughts: "You find such a difference between what older people tell you is right and what the 'best people' are actually doing that you find yourself so confused that you don't know which way to turn," and then, "Gambling . . . will, in all probability, leave in its wake crimes and broken lives. But when he goes to the church bazaar, he is asked to buy a chance on this rug . . . All this . . . in the name of Christ." It is unreservedly recommended for distribution among young people's organizations, particularly the Christian-thinking class. It contains eight pages. Your campaign supply of fifty costs only sixty cents.

Many other very worth-while, but more highly specialized tracts, are offered at similar prices.

What Shall We Sing?

By Mrs. Sue E. Stuart

---

"HEAR, O ye kings; give ear, O ye princes; I, even I, will sing unto the Lord; I will sing praise to the Lord God of Israel" (Judges 5:3). It seems to me that there is quite a controversy between singing praise unto the Lord, and singing in accordance with the lie that the Serpent told Eve in the Garden of Eden.

The Lord doesn't get any praise out of songs such as, "There Is a Beautiful Home Far Beyond the Sky," and several others. The Devil gets praise out of them, for they are in accordance with his statement. John said, "When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it" (8:44). The Devil is the one that disputed God's Word, and said, "Ye shall not surely die" (Gen. 3:4). God had said, "Ye shall surely die." People are still believing the Devil's statement, but we may be sure that "the soul that sinneth, it shall die" (Ezek. 18:4).

People love the darkness that Satan brought into the world; therefore, they will not try to see the light. "This is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil" (John 3:19). I often wonder why people are so fond of the Devil's lie, and won't believe God's truth. Consider these words of the Apostle Paul: "With all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness" (2 Thess. 2:10-12). Paul also said in Romans 9:1, "I say the truth in Christ, I lie not, my conscience also bearing me witness in the Holy Ghost." Do you believe that Paul would then sing a lie? We should also be very careful to always sing the truth, lest we sing praise unto Satan. We should not sing, "I have friends who have gone to that home on high," for John 3:13 says, "No man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven."

Solomon said, "That which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath; so that a man hath no preeminence above a beast. . . . All go unto one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again" (Eccl. 3:19, 20). Solomon taught, moreover, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest" (9:10).

People should not sing of going to heaven, for there is no promise of going to heaven, but Matthew 5:5 says, "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth." "Ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of hosts" (Mal. 4:3). Where will the ashes of the wicked be, in heaven or on the earth? If the righteous go to heaven, then the wicked will have to be taken there to be burned, for they are to be ashes under the soles of the righteous' feet.

Said David: "I will sing of the mercies of the Lord for ever: with my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness to all generations" (Psalm 89:1). This kind of singing must be full of truth, and understanding. We should be as careful to always sing the truth, as we are to tell the truth. It is very important that we always tell the truth. "All liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death" (Rev. 21:8). The Lord meant for us to be truthful in song just the same as in word, otherwise we cannot sing praise unto the Lord. We must worship God in spirit and in truth, and to do this we must sing praise unto Him in accordance with His Word. John 4:24 says, "God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." Therefore, we cannot worship Him unless we obey His Word in everything. We should not praise Him in word and deed, and praise Satan in song. "Doth a fountain send forth at the same place sweet water and bitter?" (James 3:11.)

THE SABBATH

By S. J. Lindsay

IT IS WELL to look to the meaning of a word quite critically when it has become of such vast importance as to make us feel that books and tracts should be written to place it properly before the minds of thinkers.

In common usage, the word "Sabbath" includes the thought of weariness, which calls for rest, and often this is its true meaning. In Exodus 35:2, 3, we read: "Six days shall work be done, but on the seventh day there shall be to you an holy day, a sabbath of rest to the Lord: whosoever doeth work therein shall be put to death."

This text shows that the object of the day was to give rest from weariness arising from the labor of the previous six days. But with God this need cannot exist, for we read: "Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary?" (Isa. 40:28.) Yet, we learn from Genesis 2:2 that "on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made; and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made." Surely He did not rest because He was weary, for our God grows not weary. He could not well be our God, should we be convinced that He could be made weary and fatigued. Therefore, we must regard this word "rest" in the sense of "ceasing" from His labors, not to rest from weariness, but to accomplish His divine purpose.

It is in this sense that the attorney, having presented to the court all the evidence bearing on the case, states to the court that he now "rests" his case.

Evidently, with reference to man, the thought of the word "rest" is that of overcoming fatigue by cessation from labor, while, with reference to God, it must mean only His cessation of effort because He has accomplished His purpose up to the time of which He has spoken. If this understanding of the word be true, then the first we read in Scripture concerning a day of rest for man is found in connection with the house of Israel soon after the Israelites' crossing of the Red Sea, which, according to our best chronologists, must have been as much as twenty-five hundred years from the creation of man at which time God rested.

The word "sabbath" occurs first in the Scriptures in Exodus 16:23, where it is said:

"This is that which the Lord hath said, To morrow is the rest of the holy sabbath unto the Lord: bake that which ye will bake to day." This commandment was given a short time before the Israelites reached Sinai and just before the giving of the law on tables of stone.

Brother S. J. Lindsay, faithful teacher and preacher of the Church of God and now the pastor of our church at Tempe, Arizona, here presents a revision of one of his tracts. We recommend it to all our readers for both personal study and distribution. We plan soon to offer this revision in tract form, and to include a goodly number of the new tract in an order of ten thousand of our leading tracts to be sent this fall to England.

Read to the best advantage you may, all Scripture given before this date, and you will not find the Sabbath mentioned in connection with man's need for rest. While cycles of seven years are mentioned, as in connection with Jacob's seven years of labor for Rachel, at the end of which time Leah was imposed upon him, and another seven years of labor for Rachel in addition to the seven that had gone before, yet, there is not even a hint that a rest period was thought of in all that time.

In Galatians 3:8, we find this language: "The scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed." It is through faith in the covenant that God made with Abraham that we have hope in Christ at this time. Go back to find out what was preached to Abraham in this gospel and you will find nothing said about the Sabbath.

Add to this fact the following testimony of Scripture, and you will see that prior to the giving of the Sabbath, as recorded in Exodus 16:23, men had not known the Sabbath: "Thou camest down also upon mount Sinai, and spakest with them from heaven, and gavest them right judgments, and true laws, good statutes and commandments: and madest known unto them thy holy sabbath" (Neh. 9:13, 14). If, at the time of the giving of the law, God "made known" to them His holy Sabbath, it is evident they had not known it before.

Again: "The Lord our God made a covenant (what covenant?) with us in Horeb. The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day" (Deut. 5:2, 3). The covenant given on Sinai included the Sabbath commandment, and it certainly must have been included among those things not made known to their fathers.

Paul says this law was "added" to the covenant confirmed before of God in Christ. It was added to the covenant made with Abraham (Gal. 3) some four hundred thirty years before. If the law, or any part of it, was added, then it was not a part of the covenant made with Abraham.

We believe this testimony is sufficient to show that the Sabbath, as given to man, was not in existence prior to its being given to the Israelites in the wilderness.

Why Was It Then Given?

Israel had been for a long time under a hard and cruel bondage in Egypt from which they could not extricate themselves. So great was that bondage that it is likened unto a furnace (Deut. 4:20). God's mercy stooped down to them, and His hand relieved them and gave them rest from their bondmasters at the hands of Moses and Aaron. After their deliverance from bondage, God gave them a memorial by which they might remember His mercy. Accordingly we read as follows: "Remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand, and by a stretched out arm: therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee (Israel—no one else) to keep the sabbath day" (Deut. 5:15).

That this memorial was given to the Israelites and no other, we read in Ezekiel 20:12: "Moreover also I gave them (Israelites) my sabbaths, to be a sign between me and them, that they might know that I am the Lord that sanctify them." Again: "Speak thou also unto the children of Israel, saying, Verily my sabbaths ye shall keep: for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the Lord that doth sanctify you" (Ex. 31:13).

The Type Value of the Sabbath

The sabbaths were a shadow of better things to come to them who are in Christ. "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holyday, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days: which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ" (Col. 2:16, 17).

The writer of the Hebrews gives us some light on the type feature of the Sabbath: "Let us therefore fear, lest, a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it. . . . For we which have believed do enter into rest, as he said, As I have sworn in my wrath, if they shall enter into my rest: although the works were finished from the foundation of the world. . . . There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God. For he that is entered into his rest, he also hath ceased from his own works, as God did from his" (Heb. 4:1-10).

As Moses was a type or shadow of Christ, the Deliverer; as Egypt, a type of the world and its bondage of sin; as Israel, a type of the people of God; the Red Sea, a type of death and resurrection; so the Sabbath was a type of that rest which is to come to the people of God after their Deliverer has come and taken them out of the land of their bondage (of sin). In figure and by faith we are now entered into that rest. (Hebrews 3 and 4.) In coming into Christ we cease from our works, and rest in the promises of God.

Israel's observance of the Sabbath was the observance of only a shadow of something better to come. Paul said the body that cast the shadow was Christ. Though the people of Israel professed to be such strict observers of the Sabbath, they had not learned, through the observance of that shadow, to recognize the body that cast it when He came, which leads us to the conclusion that, though men may observe the Sabbath strictly, it is not necessarily an evidence that they are near Christ. In other words, they may know the Sabbath law perfectly and observe it critically, mentally at least, and know nothing of Christ, as was the case with the Jews when Christ came among them.

One may be strict in his Sabbath observance and yet fall far short of Christ and His salvation. Such was the case with the Jews when Christ came into the world. They thought they were righteous because they had kept the law. Yet when Christ came, all were concluded under sin, both Jew and Gentile, that God might have mercy upon all. (See Gal. 3:21, 22.)

Life Cannot Come by Keeping the Law

Galatians 3:21 reads, "Is the law then against the promises of God? God forbid: for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law." Verse 22 states, "The scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe."

The foregoing scripture should settle the law question at once. The law could not give life, not that the law was not virtuous, but because the flesh was too weak to meet its requirements. "What the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh" (Rom. 8:3).

Civil laws do not make good citizens. Only those who have the disposition to do the right are righteous. If you are really in Christ, you need no handwritten law, for the love of God that has taken possession of you puts you beyond the desire to do unrighteous things.

Instead of one day of rest a week, we have entered into a continual rest, of which the Sabbath was only a shadow.

Time and Place Elements in Faith

It occurs to us, as we study the New Testament Scriptures, that faith in Christ does away with the idea of time and place in the matter of service toward God.

The Jews thought that Jerusalem was the place where God should be worshiped, while others, the Samaritans, thought the tops of the mountains the proper place. We learn this from the Master's conversation with the woman of Samaria, as recorded in John 4:19-26. She said to Him, "Sir, I perceive that thou art a prophet. Our fathers worshipped in this mountain; and ye say, that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship." The Master answered, "Woman, believe me, the hour cometh, when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father. . . . The hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship him."

This seems to do away with the idea that in Christ one place is more holy than another. Then, we have Paul's testimony as to the time idea: "Now, after that ye have known God, or rather are known of God, how turn ye again to the weak and beggarly elements, whereunto ye desire again to be in bondage? Ye observe days, and months, and times, and years. I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed upon you labour in vain" (Gal. 4:9-11).

Here Paul places the idea of time worship among "the weak and beggarly elements" to which they must turn again, or turn back (margin), if they desire to observe them. So we view the time and place elements in religious service. Many are sticklers for the first day of the week as the proper time to observe the Communion. Others contend for yearly observance, and so forth. Where the time element enters, we fear the spirit goes out. The person who makes Sunday an especially holy day labors under the same trouble. All days are alike to the true Christian. Did not Christ do on the Sabbath all the works He did through the week?

We fear that there is much error about us in our religious services. Many hold to Thanksgiving Day, Christmas Day, and like days, as though there were ample Bible evidence to sustain them in regarding these days as holy days; whereas the spirit of appointing definite times and seasons for worship, whether of thanksgiving or otherwise, is wholly unscriptural. Think of the idea of a man's saving up the expression of his thankfulness to one certain day in the year, when every day should see his heart melting in its emotions of thankfulness! It is easy to measure that man's love who waits for Decoration Day to come that he may go to the loved one's grave to pay his love and respect to the one who lies beneath the mound. Yet this is the spirit of observing times and places.

Christ's Observance of the Sabbath

The Jews came to Christ and asked Him: "Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath days? (This they did that they might successfully accuse Him before their law.) And he said unto them, What man shall there be among you, that shall have one sheep, and if it fall into the pit on the sabbath day, will he not lay hold on it, and lift it out? How much then is a man better than a sheep? Wherefore it is lawful to do well on the sabbath days" (Matt. 12:10-12).

In Matthew 12:1, we learn that Jesus, with His disciples, went through the corn on the Sabbath day, and His disciples, because they were hungry, began to pluck the corn and to eat. Again the Jews found fault, for the disciples were breaking the letter of that law. In Exodus 16:23, the Israelites were strictly instructed to prepare their entables the day before the Sabbath, and in gathering manna, enough must be gathered the day before.

Paul teaches (2 Cor. 3:6) the distinction between observing the letter and the spirit of the law. The observance of the spirit quickens, but the observance of the letter kills. The law called Israel to holiness on the Sabbath days. The Spirit of Christ calls us to holiness always. Therefore, all days to the true Christian are alike—days in which he may do good and not evil.

Paul teaches (Rom. 7:6) that "we should serve in the newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter." The newness of the spirit on this Sabbath question is that we should do good, always.

"Jesus worked the same on the Sabbath as He did on other days."—Exchange. An examination of this statement will show it to be true. Attention is called to the fact that Jesus went up to the Temple on the Sabbath, as was His custom. True, He went there because He found people there. He found it as convenient to worship on one day as on another. He was worshipful all the time.

Various Items

It is contended that the law of Moses is one thing and the law of God quite another; that the Ten Commandment law was the law of God and the ceremonial law the law of Moses. The fact is that both are referred to as the law of God. And why not? Both were given from God on Sinai, and both were received and delivered by Moses to the people. The principles governing the one were as strict as those governing the other. Let us see what the Scriptures say on the matter.

"When the days of her (Mary's) purification according to the law of Moses were accomplished, they brought him (Jesus) to Jerusalem, to present him to the Lord; (As it is written in the law of the Lord, Every male that openeth the womb shall be called holy to the Lord;) and to offer a sacrifice according to that which is said in the law of the Lord, a pair of turtledoves, or two young pigeons" (Luke 2:22-24). Here an item of the ceremonial law is spoken of both as the law of Moses and the law of the Lord. It may be well to read in this connection also from Joshua 8:32-35 and Nehemiah 8.

"Ye are not come unto the mount that might be touched, and that burned with fire, nor unto blackness, and darkness, and tempest, and the sound of a trumpet, and the voice of words; which voice they that heard intreated that the word should not be spoken to them any more. . . . Ye are come unto mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem" (Heb. 12:18, 22). In Exodus 20, this language depicts the scene that followed the giving of the Ten Commandments.

Comment by Mauro: "In this scripture not only are we taught to distinguish between the new covenant and the old; but we are expressly told that we are not to come to 'the voice of words.' These 'words,' uttered by the 'Voice' of Jehovah Himself, were the Ten Commandments. (Ex. 20:1-22; Deut. 4:10, 12, 33, 30.) Hence we have here the plainest possible statement that Christ has not put His people under the Ten Commandments. This scripture in effect says, 'We are not to come to the Ten Commandments.'"

Briefly Stated

(1) There was no law given which could give life. (Gal. 3:21.)

(2) None could keep it because of the weakness of the flesh. (Rom. 8:3.)

(3) The gospel to Abraham said nothing about keeping a Sabbath.

(4) Jesus never commanded the keeping of a Sabbath.

(5) Under the law, Sabbath breaking was punishable by death. If that law is still in force, why is the penalty neglected?

(6) The "feasts of the Lord" under the law became the "feasts of the Jews" under the gospel. (See John 5:1; 6:4; 7:2.)

(7) From the conference at Jerusalem, it was written to Gentile brethren: "It seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things; that ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well" (Acts 15:28, 29).

(8) Observance of the Sabbath was not included in the foregoing instructions.

(9) Righteousness could not come by the law. (Gal. 3:21.)

(10) The Ten Commandments are called the law of Moses. (Deut. 17:2, 6, 7; Heb. 10:28.)

SIGNS IN THE HEAVENS

Selected by R. H. Judd

COMMANDER R. G. Studd, R.N., recently delivered a most interesting address on the above subject. His particular remarks on the signs in the sun, moon, and stars as predicted in Luke's Gospel, indicating that the Second Advent is near at hand, are in perfect agreement with the latest scientific information published by the Admiralty on the Admiralty charts as well as in the Nautical Almanack mentioned by Commander Studd.

The lecturer said that recently the Astronomer Royal, who always predicted years ahead for the Nautical Almanack the times of the high and low water of the tides in all parts of the world, has observed that the moon has by some means or other "got out of gear," and accordingly it has been necessary to recalculate the tide tables for future years for the first time in history. All nature seems to be out of joint, all over the world.

"I have been a deep sea chart publisher for thirty-five years for the deep sea fishermen, in cooperation with the Admiralty," said Commander Studd. "When I bring out a new chart I always set the compasses ten years ahead for magnetic variation, so that they do not get out of date so soon. I may explain to those not acquainted with nautical terms that Magnetic North at Greenwich is about eleven degrees to the west of True North, and that the magnetic needle for over one hundred years (in fact, for over three hundred years, it has moved east and west) has been moving towards True North at the rate of about five minutes annually. Since the last war the rate has more than doubled annually, and according to the present order of things, in about another seventy-five years the magnetic needle of the compasses around Britain should point True North. Today the rate of decrease is about eleven to twelve minutes annually, for the first time in history. No man can explain why; all the Admiralty can do is to register the change and alter the compasses on the charts to agree with the change. If they did not alter the compasses, a navigator would be many miles out on a long voyage.

In 1925 I set the compasses on my new North Sea chart ten years ahead, for 1935, allowing for the usual five minutes annually of decrease in variation. To everybody's surprise this mysterious increase in speed since the last war had, by 1930, put my chart five years out, so that it was only five years in advance instead of ten years. It really looks as if the increase in speed of life has extended to the very laws of nature."

Truly there are signs in the sun, moon, and stars, such as there is no record in history.

THE SIGN OF THE CROSS

God would fulfill the Scripture, "Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree."

In the presentation of our bodies as living sacrifices, let the type be fulfilled and the Sign of the Cross be manifested, that others seeing our good works may glorify the God of heaven.

and gathered them out of their enemies' lands, and am sanctified in them in the sight of many nations; then shall they know that I am the Lord their God, which caused them to be led into captivity among the heathen: but I have gathered them unto their own land, and have left none of them any more there. Neither will I hide my face any more from them: for I have poured out my spirit upon the house of Israel, saith the Lord God."

salvation; but let us be looking to Christ. Let us be preparing for the coming of the Bridegroom, for in Him is eternal life.

SCHOOL LIGHTS

By "Chuck" Mills

We are introducing to you a column prepared for your serious consideration and for your enjoyment. We shall try to implant a worth-while thought, or a challenge, or an inspiration that will be of value to all. I hope this "colyum" will meet your approval. Any thoughts for improvement or direct contributions will be appreciated.

From the amusement standpoint, I realize there are many angles to take into cogitation. I realize, first of all, that my jokes are not often appreciated because of their originality and their deepness of thought. I have always said that, although my jokes are not understood now, the next generation may grasp the meaning of them, tell others of the world, and then laugh with them. Consequently, if you don't perceive anything that might be meant as an anecdote, save it. Who knows? Perhaps even your grandchildren may be advanced to the place where they will "get the drift."

"Who sir? I sir; No sir, not I sir . . . bla blah alab O.K., O.K., I'll take the foot." "My grandmother likes," etc., etc., and on into the evening moved the activities of last Thursday's welcome party. On behalf of the honored guests, I wish to thank all those who co-operated in making the party a success. We hope we can justify the good time and encouraging speeches that were made for our benefit.

"Here, have a pickle."

"Oh, yeah! You know I can't eat such things."

"I am sure you would care for a high-class caramel."

"Quit teasing me; my jaws wouldn't allow for soft butter."

So runs the usual conversation between a mump victim and an admirer. But not so with Orpha LeMasurier. Orpha had the mumps, and was fully on the road to recovery before she knew it.

Exceedingly profitable meetings were enjoyed by large crowds at the Minnesota State Fall Conference. The guest speaker was Brother S. E. Magaw. Brother Magaw was especially appreciated because Minnesota is his home state. He was four years pastor of the Eden Valley, Minnesota, Church of God.

On our return trip from Minnesota, we had many thrilling experiences. Those listerine hills (they take your breath away) and corkscrew twists cannot be omitted.

I received a note yesterday inviting me to a masquerade party. Being inquisitive, I looked up the word and found it meant what many so-called Christians do from day to day: that of "acting or living under false pretense, to frolic in disguise; to make a show of being what one is not."

Hoping to have something of more interest next week, written from a more intellectual point of view, au revoir.

BUILDING YOUR LIBRARY

Book Reviews

By Arlen Marsh

Until some years after its initial circulation, the King James Version of 1611 contained all the so-called apocryphal books of the Old Testament, the same books that had been included in the Jewish Canon for many centuries.

But by 1600 the Puritan influence, which was steadily growing, had eliminated the Apocrypha from the Geneva Bible; and consequently, as early as 1629 the King James, too, began to omit these extra books. Now, both the King James and English Revised editions occasionally carry the Apocrypha; the American Standard Version never.

To supply, in modern, readable language, a really accurate translation of the Apocrypha, Edgar J. Goodspeed, co-author of An American Translation, finally has produced An American Translation of the disputed Old Testament books (University of Chicago Press; $3.00). It is the first English translation of the Apocrypha to be based on original, or at least very ancient, manuscripts; other translations have been drawn almost exclusively from the Latin Vulgate.

The Apocryphal books obviously carry no divine inspiration; but they are valuable for discovering Jewish thought and practice prior to and immediately following the coming of the Christ. Although they found a place in the Greek version of the Jewish Bible, they never were in the Hebrew version as it was known in the B. C.'s.

Professor Goodspeed's translation presents a simple, pleasant, and accurate means of learning what the Apocrypha is about. He has given each book a brief introduction, narrating its time of writing, general contents, and historical significance.

More usable than Hartrampf's Vocabularies and less expensive than other reprint editions, the Grosset & Dunlap version of Roget's Thesaurus ($1.00) is perhaps the most practical desk reference work, next to a good dictionary, the speaker or writer could buy.

Thoroughly indexed and classified, the Thesaurus supplements the normal dictionary by providing an almost limitless alphabetizing of synonyms. Dictionaries are to define; the Thesaurus is to refine, by supplying the exact appropriate word wherever it is needed.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY MADGE SAVAGE

Waite Park, Minnesota

"As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise" (Luke 6:31).

Dear Children

"Open your hearts, dear children,
Let love and joy and praise
Fill all your lives with gladness,
In songs your voices raise.

"Open your hands, dear children,
Drop blessings everywhere,
With words and deeds of kindness
Your mercies freely share.

"Open your lives, dear children,
Make Jesus welcome there;
He'll bring you peace and sunshine
And gladness all the year."—Selected.

The Golden Rule

Sometimes we forget how the Golden Rule is stated. Look at the verse at the top of the page: "As ye would"—not as they do.

This verse, called the Golden Rule, is one that we can put to use in our schools, in our homes, on the streets, in the stores, post offices, and other places—in fact, anywhere! One person can use this rule toward another person. Nations could use this rule.

There is another verse that we can consider along with Luke 6:31. It is, "Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin" (James 4:17). For those of us who know what is good and right, it gives us more responsibility to obey the teachings we have received, than those who do not know.

We are told to be sober minded. Let us follow the Golden Rule toward everyone. If it were followed more, we would have a better world. As with every other good teaching, we are not forced to obey it. We don't go to church because we have to go, but because we want to go! It doesn't help a person to be baptized, if he does so only because he thinks he has to be or ought to be. The real Christians who study their Bibles know that "ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service" (Rom. 12:1). We notice that our bodies are living bodies that we offer. In other words, one's whole being is to become a holy life for God. If we try to follow the Golden Rule, it will help us to present our bodies "a living sacrifice," for it is written, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." So, when we are kind and forgiving to our friends and schoolmates, we are also being kind to God. Another verse is, "Whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men" (Col. 3:23). Therefore, adjust yourself into the habit of keeping the Golden Rule in your everyday life.

"Someone needs a friend; be one.
Someone needs a lift; give one.
Someone needs a prayer; pray one."

ECE Bible Study

Boys and girls, let me know if you have learned the books of the Bible as far as we have given them. If you have, you know seventeen books! Review them, this week.

ECE Membership

Two new members! Mrs. L. C. Anthon of Hammond, Louisiana, sends her daughter's name for our cradle roll. Her name is Eliska Ellen Anthon. Mrs. R. A. Robinson of Clyde, North Carolina, sends us her granddaughter's name: Doris Ray Robinson.

Favorite Bible Verses

Doris Robinson sends us John 8:28, 29: "Then said Jesus unto them, When ye have lifted up the Son of man, then shall ye know that I am he, and that I do nothing of myself; but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things. And he that sent me is with me: the Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please him." . . . Send me your favorite Bible verse.

Toast to America

By Arlen Marsh

A recent decision of the Florida Supreme Court held that religious freedom, although guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States, did not involve unlimited license, that freedom could be extended individual sects only as long as the rights and privileges of others were not infringed.

This decision, based both upon law and upon common sense, has a far-reaching effect on the church. During the last few years, it has become one of the favorite indoor sports for young people to pledge, as Columbia University students pledged as long ago as 1934, not to support the Constitution and the Government in the event of war.

Now military service has little to do with patriotism. One may salute the flag, pay respect to the Government, and deliver his taxes to the county collector without believing that the Christian should take up arms in defense of his country. But, in the eyes of far too many church workers, military service and patriotism have come to be synonymous—and this is the reason that the Florida Supreme Court was obliged to rule as it did.

Under the terms of religious freedom demanded by those who insist that there should be no limitations of any kind placed upon church doctrine, the Mormons could still exercise polygamy, the Kentucky mountaineers could still sacrifice their children as "blood offerings" to God, and the one-man cultists could still cling to the bodies of their dead leaders until the decadent flesh rotted into dust.

The general good, as the Florida court declared, must govern in any democracy. Restrictions upon religious freedom must be made, just as the freedom of the press is limited by copyright and libel laws, and as the freedom of speech is partially checked by the laws against slander. No government could long exist which permitted its subjects unbridled liberty.

Yet those who would have us believe that patriotism and Christianity are at opposite poles, and that neither can have anything to do with the other, are, in the final analysis, teaching that no one should ally himself with the government. Are these earnest seekers after truth not trying to convert the world? If they convert the world, will the world not hold, en masse to their convictions—and will not human governments be relinquished to anarchy and chaos? Such a contingency is impossible, of course; but nevertheless, it represents the ultimate teaching of many churchmen.

Paul expressly commanded that Christians give allegiance and obedience to their governments. The Christ never once was apprehended by His enemies in an act of treason against Rome, despite numerous efforts to find Him guilty of such treason; yet there must have been many occasions when He passed or was passed by parades of Roman soldiery and officialdom, all of which would have required genuflections far deeper than any demanded as a courtesy by the United States today. Indeed, Jesus went so far as to advise His followers to give tribute to Caesar when tribute is Caesar's due.

Christianity's essence is found in the Golden Rule, and in the saying that it is more blessed to give than to receive. But Christianity has been given a lasting blow in the eyes of the world at large by the many who demand everything the government will give and who will give nothing in return.

A toast, then, to America: "To the one nation that grants its citizens freedom of thought, worship, and expression—loyalty, reverence, and Christian allegiance; and may its policies continue to be ruled by righteous practices!"

Dear Bereans:

As this issue goes to press, there is sufficient material to fill one more page—no more. In the past nine weeks we have had only ten contributors to this page. Ten Bereans did a little extra thinking and put their thoughts on paper. Your ideas and your opinions are respected by every Berean in the country. If you have Scripture on which to base your ideas, other members will consider your suggestions. Conclusions are a personal matter. By finding a Biblical solution of an everyday problem, you will help others to think—think of earthly problems in terms of Christian teaching.

Surely, in your Bible study you are constantly finding new truths, or new applications of old ones. If you are not studying, please do. There is every reason to believe you might learn something. As you learn, write.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALENDAR OF EVANGELISM

November 18-—Special meetings at McGintytown, Ark.

November 17-30—Annual Fall Meeting at the Brush Creek Church of God near Tipp City, Ohio.

BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL NEWS

Our motto is to work hard and to play likewise, with Ecclesiastes 3:1-8 as our text. Last Thursday evening was an example of hard play. The sophomores worked diligently to enjoy the victimizing of their freshmen school-mates. It was a masquerade initiation, with everyone in costume and spirit for the occasion.

The students in practice preaching this week are: Celsine Randall at Koszta, Iowa, Richard Smith at Rockford, Ill., and Ellsworth Roulson at Dixon, Ill.

Alan McLain and Francis Burnett finally yielded to their desires and spent the week end at their homes in Ripley, Ill.

Orris J. Mills, Reporter.

LAWRENCEVILLE, OHIO

At the quarterly business meeting the first of October, it was decided to hold a series of evangelistic meetings. On writing to Bro. McLain, it was learned that he could begin services October 21. The time was short, but everyone began to "talk it up," and the result is that we are now just beginning what we hope will be the largest attendance we have yet had.

We are having a contest between the families of the church to see who can bring the largest number of their relatives, neighbors, and friends. It is proving not only interesting, but I think surprising as well, showing how attendance can be increased by the aid of the membership. The minister can preach to only those who come; the members can help by bringing and inviting others.

The first night there were thirty-one, and the third night there were forty-eight in attendance, with prospects of increase as the meetings progress.

Bro. McLain is giving us very interesting and instructive sermons. The first week's sermons concern "The Church"; next week's will be about "The Kingdom of God." Arrangement was made for Bro. McLain to give a short entertainment at the grade school one day the first of this week. The result was that he received an invitation to come back at noon on Thursday. This he did, and at that time he was asked to come to the high school the first of the following week.

We feel that slow, but steady advancement is being made for the cause of Christ in this community, and that the Church of God is creating a much more favorable impression because of the increased effort and the improvement of the church building and grounds.

Our prayer is that God will have His eyes on this building which has been dedicated for His name, and that His ears will be attentive to our prayers from this place. (See 2 Chron. 6:15-21; 7:14-16.) If so, we need not fear, for He will add to the church such "as should be saved" (Acts 2:47).

Grover Gordon, Pastor.

PERRYVILLE, KENTUCKY

On Sunday, October 6, the Church of God at Perryville, Ky., had the pleasure of having, as speaker, our brother, Ben Carpenter, of Oregon, Ill., who was visiting his parents and relatives.

On Sunday, October 13, Bro. and Sr. Magdanz, and daughter, Joyce of Lexington, Ky., surprised us by driving about fifty miles to attend services.

October 27, we had sixteen in Sunday school which was eight above the average. We hope this good attendance will continue.

We are planning for a meeting to be conducted by Bro. Drabenstott, if weather permits.

IOWA FALL CONFERENCE

The Iowa Fall Conference was held at the Church of God near Koszta on Sunday, October 20. It was an ideal fall day, and a large crowd attended.

There was a sermon in the morning by Bro. O. J. Allard of Cedar Falls, Bros. H. S. Hunt of Clarksville, Charles W. Howe of Waterloo, and J. W. Williams of Gladbrook, gave short sermons in the afternoon. Mariland and Esther Cronbaugh sang a duet in the morning.

Bro. and Sr. Oscar Jenkins of Stanhope, presented the church with a pulpit which Mr. Jenkins made. It is very beautiful, and adds much to the appearance of the interior of the church. We are very proud of the pulpit and thank Bro. and Sr. Jenkins very much for it.

It being a warm day, everyone enjoyed a basket dinner on the church lawn at noon.

A winter conference is being planned. As yet, no place or date has been set.

DIXON, ILLINOIS

In August, Bro. L. E. Conner baptized into the all saving name of Jesus, the following: Mrs. Ruth Myers and Miss Shirley Myers of 704 N. Galena Ave.; Mrs. Floyd Smyers, Rt. 3; Mrs. Elwyn Drew, 240 Lincoln Way; Mrs. Lloyd Wagner, S. Okawa Ave.; Miss Leona Blaya and Miss Jean Wagner, 914 N. Hennepin Ave. May God guide and protect these new ones in the faith.

Each Sunday morning a sermon is given by one of the students from the Bible Training School in Oregon, Ill. We enjoy these services, and are thankful that we can hear these young people.

Rally Day was observed in our Sunday school October 27. Recitations and songs were offered by the junior classes. The attendance was good.

Bro. Celsine Randall delivered a good sermon Sunday, October 27, to an attentive congregation.

The Truth Seekers' class enjoyed a Halloween party in the church basement. All reported a pleasant time.

Mrs. William Ford, Secy.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

"I would like very much to get more subscriptions to The Restitution Herald, and shall be glad to send sample copies to anyone who may be interested."—Mrs. J. W. Donaldson, Baldwin, N. Y.

Sr. Clinton Appleby, a student of the former Bible Training School, is now preaching every Sunday morning at our church in Blair, Nebr., and Sunday evenings in a country school nearby. She writes, "My earnest desire is to someday see a regular Church of God evangelist come here to water the seed I am sowing."

"Behold, I and the children whom the Lord hath given me" (Isa. 8:18).

"I appreciate the many good articles in our paper. When we see the turmoil and the preparation for war, we should look up, and lift up (our) heads; for (our) redemption draweth nigh."—Mrs. Allen Claypool, Marshall, Ill.

"We are expecting Bro. Celsine Randall of Oregon, Ill., to preach for us again on Sunday, November 3. He has given us Bible lessons on Saturday evenings, and two sermons each Sunday he has been with us. We enjoyed them very much and look forward to his coming again in November."—Mrs. Fern Cronbaugh, Belle Plaine, Iowa.

"We are thankful to all that remembered us with cards or letters during our recent sorrow. They were greatly appreciated."—Mr. and Mrs. William G. Ford, Dixon, Ill.

"If the righteous go to heaven, then the wicked will have to be taken there to be burned, for they are to be ashes under the soles of the righteous' feet. (Mal. 4:3)"—Mrs. Sue E. Stuart, author of "What Shall We Sing?" on page seven if this Herald.

"There is so much to pity about us, that the tears within us turn to gall, if not shed."—O. J. Parker, Kokomo, Ind.

NORTHWEST CONFERENCE REPORT

The Northwest Conference was held at Felida, Wash., October 18-20. The address of welcome was given by Sr. Minnie Rogers, vice president, of Eugene, Ore. Seven meetings were held. Ministers present were: A. W. Darby, John Eagleston, and Alfred Anthon. We had twenty-five visitors. Sunday dinner was at the church.

A purse was sent to H. J. Prosser, a loved minister, who was prevented from attending because of the illness of his dear wife.

President Carl W. Barber was present and called to order the business meeting. Vice-president Minnie Rogers, Treasurer Edward McIrvin, and Secretary Flora Anthon were present. Every member of the church at Felida, who was at home, attended. Sunday afternoon there was Communion, and an explanation of the service by John Eagleston.

Sr. Mary Clapp, ninety-two years of age, from Tacoma, Wash., was present at every meeting. During class discussion, she answered and questioned. Sr. Hazel Burk and Beth Hoganson gave sermonettes, songs, and summer Bible Training School reports. Sr. Burk and the writer made reports of the General Conference. Sr. Welles Kennedy read the minister's text (this young sister is granddaughter to Bro. and Sr. Wallace Wolf, both families living at Felida). All visitors thought that the Felida brethren attended, very well, to their every need.

F. O. Sapp, Troutdale, Ore., visited us Saturday.

The sermon topics were as follows: "Present and Near-Future Signs" by A. W. Darby; "Confidence" by John Eagleston; "How Much Did Peter Require His Converts to Know According to His Great Pentecostal Sermon?" by Alfred Anthon; and, "Is the Holy Ghost (Spirit) a Person As Is Jesus? As Is God?" also by Alfred Anthon. During Bible study, someone asked the question: "Where are the saints during the time between rapture and revelation?" which question Bro. Anthon answered in a sermon.

Mrs. Flora E. Anthon, Conf. Secy.

FREDERICKTOWN, MISSOURI

Bro. C. E. Lapp of Macomb, Ill., was here for our once-a-month services. Services began Friday night, October 18, and continued through Tuesday night, October 22. We had a good meeting, and Sr. Roy Thomas came out, on the Lord's side, at the Saturday evening service.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, a goodly number met at Thompson's Ford. Here Sr.

Thomas was baptized, after which we all gathered at the church for Communion.

We also had very interesting Bible classes on Monday and Tuesday mornings.

We believe our work is progressing nicely, as we have five new members, and we have good attendance at Sunday school. A few months ago we organized a Women's Missionary Society. Very good interest is being shown in these meetings. The women have met two Thursdays and have done some canning for the General Conference.

Sunday, October 27, Bro. Lloyd Cooper preached the morning service.

On November 3, the ladies of the missionary society will have charge of the morning service. We are hoping at this service that all may see the need of our new society.

Sunday, November 10, Bro. Roy Thomas will speak at the morning service. We will be glad to have anyone who can, come to these services. Come and encourage the young men in their work.

We were glad to welcome Bro. and Sr. John Beckler and daughter, Betty Lou, and Bro. Edward Williams from Hillsboro, at the Sunday morning services. We also enjoyed having Sr. Lapp and Elaine with us. We especially enjoyed the music by Sr. Lapp. Visitors are always welcome.

Mrs. J. C. Cooper, Reporter.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

National Bible Institution
Oregon, Illinois

The Restitution Herald is the official organ of the General Conference of the Church of God. It is published by the National Bible Institution at Oregon, Illinois.

L. E. Conner Business Manager

Subscription Rate.—51 issues per annum, $2.00.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him, (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

BAPTISM—

by S. J. Lindsay

This is a treatise on the significance, importance, and mode of baptism by one of the most able Bible teachers. The subject is presented in an interesting and logical manner, setting forth the biblical truth that baptism by immersion in water, following a definite belief in the gospel, is essential to salvation.

ESSENTIAL TRUTHS—

Anonymous

A brief arrangement of the necessary requirements of salvation as to faith and works. It provides copious Bible references showing that belief in the coming kingdom of God on the earth, the restoration of Palestine to Israel, the reign of Christ and His saints over all nations, the resurrection and immortalization of the dead in Christ, eternal life to be obtained only through Christ at His coming, the final destruction of the wicked, repentance and baptism for the remission of sins, followed by a holy life of Christian service, are included among the "Essential Truths" of the Bible.

Ambassadors for Christ

By Lyle Rankin

"Be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God" (Romans 12:2).

WAR is in the earth. Nation is set in array against nation, and kingdom against kingdom. Those engaged in conflict are desirous of overpowering their enemies, though it requires the destruction of the greater part of the enemy nations, both in life and property. The land is made desolate, the people suffer famine, pestilence, disease, and death; some are left cripples, some blind, some deaf, some insane.

The warfare of the Christian is to be waged, not with carnal weapons (2 Cor. 10:4), to the tearing down of property and destruction of life, but with the "whole armour of God" (Eph. 6:13; 1 Thess. 5:8). The children of God are to "fight the good fight of faith" (1 Tim. 6:12). They are to minister to that by which one may be built up, not in worldly things, but in heavenly things (Col. 3:1, 2). They are to minister, in love, the Word of God which teaches the putting off of the fleshly desires and deceitful lusts—the Word which also teaches that righteousness should be exalted in the lives of the people.

Paul wrote to the Corinthians, saying, "Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God" (2 Cor. 5:20). Obviously, Paul considered himself as the representative of Christ, pleading with the people in His "stead." Likewise, the work and message of a loyal Christian, today, is that of Christ's ambassador.

Truly, the church is living "in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation" (Phil. 2:15), though we esteem it to be the best in the world today. As ambassadors for Christ, we are to shine as lights in the dark world wherein we are strangers and pilgrims. (See Eph. 6:20; Phil. 2:15; 1 Peter 2:11.) Now, an ambassador is a stranger in the land to which he is sent. He is there to represent the ruler of the place of his true citizenship, and has no part in the governing of the land in which he is a stranger. Being converted to and baptized into Christ, "our citizenship is in heaven" (Phil. 3:20, R.V.). We are looking for the coming of the King of kings to rule the world in righteousness—at which time there will be real and lasting peace in the earth. The message of the Church of God is that of the coming of the King and His Kingdom, and to tell how one may prepare to have a part in the ruling of that great Kingdom which shall be "under the whole heaven" (Dan. 7:27).

If the ambassador of the United States to Germany had taken into his life and practice the things for which Hitler stands in the destruction of life and liberty for all, he no doubt would have been deemed a traitor to the principles of the ones he was to represent. Such is the case, too, when the children of God join hands with, or become partners in, an unequal yoke with the peoples of the land in which they are strangers. (2 Cor. 6:14-18; Eph. 5:14-20.) Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob "confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth" (Heb. 11:13). Therefore, let us who are of the Abrahamic faith present our bodies as living sacrifices, "holy (separate), acceptable unto God, which is (our) reasonable service" (Rom. 12:1).

The Apostle Paul further instructed Christians, saying: "Be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God" (Rom. 12:2), and pleaded, "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things" (Phil. 4:8).

“Libyans and the Ethiopians”

Daniel, prophesying of “the times appointed” (Dan. 11:29), when a king “shall do according to his will . . . shall exalt himself, and magnify himself above every god, and shall speak marvellous things against the God of gods, and shall prosper till the indignation be accomplished” (v. 36), prophesied, too, that this beastly power will “enter also into the glorious land” (v. 41), and that “he shall plant the tabernacles of his palace between the seas in the glorious holy mountain; yet he shall come to his end, and none shall help him” (v. 45).

Obviously, this wicked king will attempt to establish his “palace” (the seat of his authority) in Jerusalem, which is situated “between the seas” (between the Mediterranean Sea and the Dead Sea), and which is built upon “the glorious holy mountain” of Zion.

Any student of prophecy who tries to identify this unholy power should not overlook that Daniel foretold: “The Libyans and the Ethiopians shall be at his steps,” that is, these countries will be subordinate and servant nations to this prophesied monster. In verse 42, Daniel also prophesied that when this king stretches forth his hand upon the countries, “Egypt shall not escape.” Finally, “tidings out of the east and out of the north shall trouble him” (v. 44).

Whether or not our interpretation is correct, it is at least interesting to consider that Italy today controls “the Libyans and the Ethiopians.” Moreover, the outlook is that “Egypt shall not escape.”

Sensing the possibility of a breach between Mussolini and the Papacy, it is not incredible that one or the other might eventually choose to establish his headquarters in Jerusalem. Because of the religious aspect, it seems logical that the Papacy would be most interested in Jerusalem, if ever Italy’s conquests include Palestine. Already the Catholic Church has practically monopolized the religious work in Jerusalem and other places of historical and sacred interest to Christians. Somebody “who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God” will, before the coming of Christ, sit “in the temple of God, shewing himself that he is God” (2 Thess. 2:1-4).

Should Russia from the North, or Japan from the East, too zealously covet the wealth of the Dead Sea, we could expect Italy to “go forth with great fury” (Dan. 11:44).

Fall Flowers

Solomon, speaking of the works of God, said, “He hath made every thing beautiful in his time” (Eccl. 3:11).

Following a long winter, spring is always gladly welcomed; then all nature is at its best. It is well, however, to consider the beauty with which God blesses the seasons that are less esteemed. Fall, when the leaves are tenfold more gorgeous than in the spring, when the sky is fully as blue as in April (when Nature so sorely weeps), has also been blessed of God with flowers. Consider the asters, chrysanthemums, gaillardia, fall daisies, and phlox—and there is not a nuisance dandelion among them!

Fly in the Ointment

Said Solomon, “Dead flies cause the ointment of the apothecary to send forth a stinking savour,” and Solomon was a prophet.

From childhood days to the present, we have much enjoyed the so-called German bands. A few days ago, we were listening to a radio program in which one of these German bands was doing better than the usual zip. We turned the volume control a little to the right, and the room so resonated with music that pictures on the wall almost danced. At last, we were hearing more exciting entertainment than donkey-kick-the-elephant vote returns.

Presently, our attention was called to the fact that the band program we were so much enjoying was advertising beer. We then thought about the eleven thousand taverns in Chicago, about the licentious roadhouses, about an orphaned baby we recently buried, and the hilarious music quickly faded into the stink it advertised. Solomon was right!

Shall We Ignore It?

By Orris Mills

WHY is the Church of God, though of considerable age, a struggling, decrepit, dilapidated organization, comparable to an old man on the verge of death? Why does the Church of God, with its age, have but one school of only nine members? Why a school with limited facilities, lacking in equipment and finance? Why a National Bible Institution of a fighting spirit, but barely able to keep alive? Why a national paper, though excellent in construction and material, having only an outlet of seven subscriptions in lands other than the United States? None going to a next door neighbor, Mexico; none going to South America; none going to Alaska, Puerto Rico, or the Philippines; only two to England, two to Australia, and a few to Canada! Why a meager subsisting Berean organization that has a measly mimeographed sheet for a paper?

Though we believe we have the true interpretation of the Bible, we have not shared it with those who have not heard the gospel. We believe and teach that the gospel must be preached in all lands before the advent of Christ, yet we have not one foreign missionary; in fact, we have few if any evangelists who go to communities where the people are not already affiliated with our church. Let us not be guilty as was the servant in the Parable of the Talents. Let us not hide, as it were, our talent (the true doctrine) in the earth. Yes, you are right, the gospel is free (see Isa. 55:1), so is water, but it takes money to have it piped to where it is needed. Support is needed not only at your local church, there is a state organization, and a national organization, and there should be an international organization.

The answer to all of these "whys" is pointing to us and our fathers, to our grandfathers and our grandmothers, or to any others of our more or less remote ancestors—those earlier organizers in the church, those ministers and lay members who could have been more influential in its growth. Wherein have we failed? We have robbed God. How have we robbed God? "In tithes and offerings" (Mal. 3:8). Neither we nor our earlier members taught people how to give. In making offerings to God there is more to take into consideration than finances. Of course, lack of funds has contributed to the present appalling condition of the church, but there is more behind it than that. Paul said, "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service" (Rom. 12:1). We have failed to live up to that standard, we have failed to present ourselves as living sacrifices, we have failed to offer our whole beings to Christ. We have held back little things in our lives, we do not have the spirituality or the prayer life that all Christians should and must have, if they are to receive the blessings that God has intended that they should.

How do I know we have failed to live up to that standard? Because of the present condition of the church. When we give gladly, when we help to finance the church cheerfully, even to the extent that it hurts, then can we be sure that we are fully devoted to the Lord. As long, though, as we continue to do as we have in the past, as long as we continue to give according to what our poor neighbor has given, we shall not prosper. We claim to have the love of Christ, yet we find jealousies and hatreds and feuds and diversities and splits in our churches.

If we could realize, if we could grasp somewhat of the meaning of the privilege we have in being able to participate in spreading the gospel, if we could only see the reality of it all, we would most surely develop our gospel fields. We have a high calling in Christ Jesus. He is gathering a people for His name, a people to perform a work in the Kingdom. He is calling to get qualified workers. Will we be qualified? Let us not take any chances of failing to receive so great a salvation. Life is so short and eternity so long, how sad it would be to miss that call on resurrection morning!

How sad it would be, dear husband, to come home and miss your charitable wife—the one whom you loved devoutly, the one who had always urged you to support the church, the one who tithed her egg money—to find her gone, caught away to be with Christ forever! How painful it would be to find your church-working neighbor gone, and you left! Let us this day consecrate ourselves to Christ, let us pray more diligently, and let us study more.

Can you not see what I mean? What are we to do about this wretched, desperate condition of our church? Shall we ignore it? Well, we have been ignoring it for some time. Yes, we have done more than ignore it. We have caused strife and hatred, jealousy and contempt, separations and divisions. Shall we ignore it? No! Lest we forget our God has said, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature" (Mark 16:15). "It is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed" (Rom. 13:11).

A Letter From the Field

By C. E. Lapp

FOR some time I have been wanting to tell you about this picture. There is an old Chinese proverb that says, "One picture is worth ten thousand words." With this particular one, I am sure that all that could be said would exceed that figure.

As I see it, this baptism was a direct result of an evangelistic effort on a very small scale. We know that the great majority of people accept the Lord during some special service, and such was true in this case. This took place on one of my regular trips to Fredericktown, Missouri. Brother James McLain had written me that he had a couple of weeks not scheduled, so I invited him to go with me to get acquainted with the people. After this, we were to go down to the Arkansas-Oklahoma Conference. He preached a very convicting sermon, following which the father and son shown in the picture accepted the Lord. It had been a long time since I was in a service in which the hearts of the people were moved as at this time. Tears of joy flowed freely. The next day when we gathered to baptize these men, a large group of brethren and friends gathered to be witnesses to the occasion. I was very happy to see many who left everything to attend this service. Too often, there are so many who do not even have time to attend.

The older man in the picture is Brother William E. Thomas of Fredericktown, Missouri, and the other is his son, Lloyd Thomas. Brother Thomas, Senior, is past the threescore mark, which made this a very rare occasion. What is the ratio of those who accept the Lord when that age? Do you know? I read about it once, and think it is one in one thousand; so, of course, we felt it was a rare occasion.

We felt much the same as Paul felt in 1 Corinthians 3:9, when he said, "We are labourers together with God." There were many others who had been instrumental in winning these men to the Lord, just as much as we. It so happened that we were there on the day of the ingathering. Said Paul, "I have planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increase." After all, there is none of us that can convince a man of his need of the Lord, but when we present the gospel, the Lord makes the seed grow in that heart unto fruitfulness.

"If we have been planted together in the likeness of his (Christ's) death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection" (Rom. 6:5).

What do you think about evangelism in our church? Do you believe people are realizing more than ever before the need of such an effort? I believe almost all of our church people are trying to put forth a special effort at least once a year, using an outside evangelist, and it will mean progress for every church that makes that effort. It is unreasonable to think that any individual would be able to present the gospel to any particular church without missing some. Therein lies the value of having a change. You may be able to reach some, and I may be able to reach others, but none of us could expect to reach all of them.

This all makes me think of another phase of our evangelistic effort, and that has to do with going into fields where they do not have a regular pastor, or into entirely new fields. A number of the Sunday schools are interested in this work that the Evangelistic Board is sponsoring. When this Board was first organized, it was something new to everyone, but in a letter from the treasurer it was noticed that twelve Sunday schools have been sending in their birthday offerings for this special work. Here is a list of these Sunday schools who have contributed to this fund: Skelton, West Virginia; Burr Oak, Indiana; Hope Chapel, South Bend, Indiana; Brush Creek, Ohio; Dixon, Illinois; Macomb, Illinois; Arkansas City, Kansas; Ripley, Illinois; Oregon, Illinois; Blanchard, Michigan; Rockford, Illinois; and Los Angeles, California. I feel sure there are more Sunday schools who would co-operate in this effort, if they only knew what we were trying to do.

Last year we were able to conduct two meetings at Skelton, West Virginia, one in the fall, the last of October, and one in the spring. Five young people accepted the Lord as a result of these meetings. These people are not at present able to have a regular pastor, but need some outside help. We visited one mining camp where at least seven hundred people lived, and they said there had been no religious service in that camp during the year. What an opportunity to preach the gospel!

As a result of some assistance down in Missouri, there were ten or eleven who accepted the Lord and were baptized. The Board of Evangelism (Please turn to page 10)

Campaigning for Christ

By Mrs. Edna Brewer

DWAINE, ten years of age, getting politic wise at school, came home and asked Dallas, his younger brother, age four: "Who are you for, Roosevelt or Willkie?" Dallas said, "Neither one," but Dwaine with very much enthusiasm said, "Oh! you must be for one or the other! Roosevelt or Willkie?" Then Dallas replied, "I don't either. I'm for Jesus!"

Immediately, there came to my mind these words of Jesus: "Have ye never read, Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise?" (Matt. 21:16.) Then I fell into reverie, and this was the panorama I saw. First, two individuals, sheltered and protected by a mothers love, were being taught at her knee of the wonderful love of Jesus. That, too, was for a while uppermost in their minds, but how soon when away did they become involved in the affairs of the world! Then words of Jesus again came to me: "I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world, but that thou shouldst keep them from the evil. They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world" (John 17:15, 16).

Again, they were standing before me, and I saw the two campaigning: one for man, the other for Jesus. Then, this thought arose in my mind: What do these candidates have to offer?

Silently, I began to meditate on the qualifications of Jesus and His platform, and the man Jesus stood before me. Soon, I was carried back to the time of His birth. The song of the angels came clearly to my mind, "Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord" (Luke 2:10, 11). Then the shepherds came unto Bethlehem, and "found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger." Yes, indeed, here was a very lowly birth!

Next, I saw Him at the age of twelve in the Temple, "sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them, and asking them questions. And all that heard him were astonished at his understanding and answers" (Luke 2:46, 47). So, we see in Jesus a very brilliant young mind, one above the average youth, and deserving of our admiration.

Then I saw Him as He came "from Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him." John hesitated to perform that sacred rite, but Jesus said unto him, "Suffer it to be so now" (Matt. 4:15). "Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him: and lo a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased" (Matt. 3:16, 17). What greater recommendation could we ask than the approval of God?

Our interest increasing, we watch Jesus for the next three years in His ministry as He "went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil; for God was with him" (Matt. 10:38). Could any man have a better record?

Then, I see Him in the hall of Pilate, "leaving us an example, that (we) should follow his steps: who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth" (1 Peter 2:21, 22). Surely Christ's qualifications are unsurpassed. His are the highest standards and ideals.

Next, let us consider what Jesus offers to suffering mankind. We open the Book—yes, He has it on the printed page—and we read, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest" (Matt. 11:28). What a promise in these days of unrest, when "men's hearts (are) failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth"! (Luke 21:26.)

Forgiveness of my sins! Yes, "this is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners" (1 Tim. 1:15). What wondrous grace, and it reaches me! Amazed, I slowly turn to John 14:27 where I read: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you."

Jesus also said, "Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid" (John 14:27), for "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world" (Matt. 28:20). Such a promise of comfort and companionship!

Provision. Paul said, "God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus" (Phil. 4:19,) for "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him" (1 Cor. 2:9). Such an offer builds up hope, and "hope maketh not ashamed," "that being justified by his grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life" (Titus 3:7). Heirs with Christ? Yes! and I hear the song of the redeemed: "(Thou) hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth" (Rev. 4:10).

Suddenly, I am aroused from my reverie, as I hear voices shouting from my radio, "We want Willkie."

The Testimony of the Lord

By C. E. Randall

THOUGH it was not possible for the priests of Israel to enter behind the second veil into the holy of holies, and though Aaron, the high priest, could go in only on one occasion each year, it is possible for us to go behind the veil of this little room wherein the presence of God was manifested as it rested over the ark of the covenant, wherein was the "testimony of the Lord." We cannot go personally into this place which was long ago done away and superceded by that which it foreshadowed, but through the ever-refreshing Word of God, we can go behind the veil and view the sacred room with its contents.

There was only one piece of furniture in the holy of holies, this being the ark of the covenant. At times this was simply called "the Testimony" (Ex. 16:34). Some students think that originally the "tables of the covenant" were laid before the ark of the covenant, and at a later date placed within the ark. The evidence for this is wanting in many respects. Paul's account of the ark with its contents places three things within it: "the golden pot that had manna, and Aaron's rod that budded, and the tables of the covenant" (Heb. 9:4).

The Testimony

"In the ark thou shalt put the testimony that I shall give thee" (Ex. 25:21). The presence of God was round about the testimony. To have redeeming power, this testimony must have the manifested power or presence of God. When the Shekinah glory of the Lord was removed from this testimony, redemption ceased in Israel.

God's power and presence and work of redemption is being manifested through the church in this present time. When this presence is removed with the translation of the church, the means of redemption—the power of the testimony—will be gone. Will the world miss this lifted medium wherein was the "light of the world"? Will mankind desire the "salt of the earth" when it is removed? It is certain that when the cup of iniquity comes to a full, this presence will be removed as it was in Israel (1 Thess. 4:16, 17). Yes, when this presence of God is lifted from the earth, it will be missed. Men will search after it (Amos 8:11, 12), but they will not find it—like the ark of the covenant, it will be hid.

The testimony was contained in the ark of the covenant. God has always provided a container for the Word. Jesus held within Him the testimony of the Lord. He could say, "I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me" (John 17:8). Jesus was the fleshly embodiment of the spoken Word of God—"The Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us" (John 1:14). The church, also, is a container of the testimony. Jesus said, "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you" (John 15:7).

Manna

During their forty years of sojourn in the wilderness, the children of Israel lived on the manna which God provided for them. A memorial of this food was preserved in the ark of the covenant. This heaven-sent food was their only source of life. Jesus informs us that He is our manna. "I am that bread of life" (John 6:48). He continues in verses 50 and 51 to tell us that the bread which He gives us is His flesh. As the Israelites ate daily of the manna which God provided for them, so we must daily partake of Christ. He must be the source of our life. The Apostle Paul expressed the thought well when he said, "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me" (Gal. 2:20). How true the saying, "Man shall not live by bread alone"! To live a well-rounded life—a godly life—we need to live by feasting on the Word of God; yes, by "every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God" (Matt. 4:4). We need to store it away in our hearts (Psalm 119:11), not hide it there for safe keeping, but that it might create within us a light that "shineth more and more unto the perfect day" (Prov. 4:18).

Budding Rod

Aaron's rod that budded is a beautiful symbol of dead things made alive. Aaron's rod was a stick of dead wood. Like canes, it once lived, budded and brought forth leaves, but like all nature and all humanity—it died. The Lord made this dead stick live again—it budded. Buds are signs of life; this made-alive stick withered not.

Can you think of anything or anyone that died and was made alive for evermore? Oh, yes, there was One that God brought again from the dead—"our Lord Jesus, that great shepherd of the sheep" (Heb. 13:20). He is alive for evermore! Because He lives, we, too, shall live with Him—that is, if we live in Him now. This budding Rod—the ever-living Christ—will raise up those who sleep in Jesus at the last day, and clothe them with immortality and give them a nature like unto Himself. (John 11:24; 1 Cor. 15:51-55; Phil. 3:20, 21.)

Conditional Immortality

In Three Parts—Part One

By Arthur G. Young

THIS article is written in response to a certain question asked by one who was seeking for truth about immortality. To make the matter plain, I will restate the question: "I want a definite, life-building understanding of immortality to live and die with. Will you please tell me your idea of the next world, and what religious leaders are doing to prove that it exists, to give us faith in life after death?"

The first sentence of the question is a statement of what the inquirer wanted to find. Taking this sentence alone, it would indicate that he did not have the answer, or he would not have asked the question. His longing for assurance in this life, that there is to be a future for him personally after death, is human, understandable, and of long standing. If we now had immortal life in actual possession, we would know it, and not ask the question. Job asked the question, "If a man die, shall he live again?" He then went on in the succeeding verses to answer it in the affirmative, from his own belief and faith. We note carefully that his question pertained to living again after death, and not as to living continuously, without a break after death. He had faith, and the matter is still one of faith, as the questioner indicated in his question.

I see no evidence in history or in the world about me, except for the Bible record of Christ, where a human being has gone through the death state and has been raised to immortal life. Lazarus and the others that Christ raised from the dead, the boy Elijah raised, and the man Peter raised, were raised to the same mortal life they had previous to death. Moreover, they must have died again, as we do not see them living today. Truly, Christ is the "firstfruits of them that slept," or, in other words, the first one to be raised from death to immortal life. He subsequently declared He was alive for evermore, so His resurrection was to a different life than those He raised.

Here is where we may differ, and then again, we may agree, but I state plainly my belief in the natural mortality of man. I also believe an immortal man is promised, as a gift from God, upon complying with certain conditions which God lays down. This gift of immortality is still future for human beings, as it is not now in possession in actuality.

You will see very clearly from this article that I believe in immortality in personality in the future, but that it will be truly a gift from God. "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom. 6:23). We do not earn it, as it is through the sacrifice of Christ and His righteousness that the barrier has been broken down between man and God. The way opened for God to give immortality, which He will do under the conditions mentioned, through Jesus Christ, His Son, and who truly is our Savior. In a word, immortality is to be the possession of those who are to be in harmony with God in the age and world that are to come, but the sinner was never intended to be immortalized. That is why God drove the sinning pair out of the Garden and away from the tree of life. Neither is sin always to exist, as sin is to be done away with by God's almighty power. This is the only power capable of dealing with this fundamental problem of humanity. One should see, therefore, quite clearly, why I believe in conditional immortality, but not in universal, inherent, natural immortality.

Conditional immortality glorifies Christ and His sacrifice. Without this, death would end all for each individual. On the other hand, if we inherit immortality as a natural possession, through being born, we get it from Adam and not from Christ. Consequently, the text from Romans, quoted above, simply could not be true. Again on this basis, if judgment, as to future reward or punishment, occurs at death, just where does the necessity of Christ's death upon the cross come? We, as individuals, would on this basis be judged irrespective of Christ. If those who lived prior to Christ, for instance, have either gone to their reward or punishment at death, then how is Christ their Judge, and how is He the Savior of both the dead and the living? In all fairness and justice, there must be equality in judgment as to all the generations, and this is only accomplished, according to the Bible plan, through the resurrection of the dead at Christ's personal return to this earth, which I believe soon to be. Then will He judge both the resurrected dead and those living.

This gentleman certainly has asked a large question in his next sentence when he asks for my idea concerning the next world (it would be more correct to say "the next age") and, naturally, one can see it is impossible for me to answer this in detail within the scope of this article. However, I will make an attempt to answer his question in some essentials. Perhaps this will be a matter for subsequent discussion between us at a future time. Let me state, however, that the Bible says, speaking of the conditions of the future age, in 1 Corinthians 2:9: "As it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

That text makes me rightfully hesitant in trying to be too specific, as that which the Bible has not revealed, I cannot attempt to declare. Nevertheless, the Bible is perfectly plain on some points, and I attempt to summarize them. All these points come under the term "Kingdom of God." In order to have any idea of the future, it is necessary to think through from the Bible revelation what is planned, purposed, and will be brought about by God's power. This is summed up in the words "Kingdom of God."

"There has been a deplorable lack on the part of the churches, in presenting the Bible plan as to the Kingdom of God. The ministers have been not only neglectful of this topic, but extremely hazy, mainly giving the impression that the sum total of the Kingdom of God is "within one," meaning, of course, in the heart of the Christian. In the context of Luke 17:21, in which Christ refers to the Kingdom of God being "within you," it can easily be seen that Christ addressed the Pharisees, when He made this statement. Certainly the Kingdom of God was not in their hearts. (The text makes no reference by implication or otherwise to the Christian.) Of all the sects of the Jews, Christ condemned the Pharisees the most. It certainly would seem to be an instance of extreme twisting the Bible, to suit preconceived ideas, to sum up the Kingdom of God as being within the Pharisees.

Reprove and Rebuke

By T. A. Drinkard

"Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables" (2 Tim. 4:2-4).

WHY reprove and rebuke men and women? Because the Spirit of God commanded it. Is this not a dangerous act, considering that it might hurt their feelings? This reply has come to me, "Brother Drinkard, I have to live near those who teach error, and I can hardly risk the loss of their friendship." Shall we value the friendship of men above that of God? Did Jesus Christ consider what men and women thought of Him, personally, when He said, "Ye are of your father the devil" (John 8:44)?

Ever since the Devil told the lie of all lies, professed ministers have spent much of their time trying to twist and warp the teaching of the Word of God so that their theory of the duality of man might appear more plausible. Anyone who is able to read can soon reach the conclusion as to what he is, where he goes at death, and in what condition he is while in the death state. Only recently, I was informed that there is not so much of this teaching as heretofore, but it continues as bad as previously. Such is the foundation of sectarianism, the system that dishonors God and His Word.

There lately came to me a treatise entitled "Where are the dead?" written by one of these professed ministers to warn his brethren against the position that has been taught by the Church of God through the years. How any reasonable minded man or woman can read and endorse it is a puzzle to me, unless they have itching ears for that kind of teaching! It proves to me that the wine of Babylon is still being given, and is disastrous in its effect. In his hypothesis, he contends that Christ and the thief went to Paradise the same day they died, which Paradise was located in the heart of the earth. He continues, saying that since the death of Christ, Paradise has been removed from the heart of the earth to heaven above, and instead of these imaginary immortal, deathless, bodiless spirits going into the heart of the earth, they now go to heaven. Of course, that is only his theory, as he did not give any Bible evidence to prove it.

I submit that man of himself teaches his nature, aside from the Bible. Will you test it? There he is; behold him! Watch him in his ways, that result from his thinking. Could you tell me that all the putrifying thoughts that he has comes from the mind of immortal spirits, and that these spirits are the offspring of God? This fact alone should be all-sufficient to convince men and women that the duality-of-man theory is simply a religious fiction. How can one reach men and women with the gospel of truth when their minds are deceived with this theory? They are so set on going to heaven when their body dies, that they are blind to everything else, never stopping to think what such faith calls for, or how they would feel and act flying around without a body. Then, too, if such is possible, why be bothered with a body? Can you imagine a bodiless, immaterial entity with intelligence?

All man's thoughts are produced, or are the product of vitalized brain, whether good or bad. This fact is clearly sustained by the fact that if there is no brain there is no thought. If thought is produced by an immaterial spirit within the body independent of brain activity, tell me, please, why an injury to the brain stops the proper function of thoughts. Why do we have insane institutions? In the face of these commonly accepted facts, it is the height of human folly to believe and teach the immortality of the soul. It is the foundation of all error concerning Christian reward and the punishment of evildoers. There is not one passage of Scripture that directly or indirectly teaches the theory. If there were such a text, it could be easily found. Consider an advocate who teaches it: he is confused, as was Mr. C. T. Russell who said that he did not know what became of the body of Christ; it may have been dissolved into gases, or stored away somewhere, nor did he consider such knowledge necessary. He said, moreover, that the apostles could have believed in the resurrection of Christ, though they saw the body lying in the grave, had they already received the promise of the Holy Spirit as they later received it on Pentecost.

The Bible clearly teaches the nature of man in life as we know it, his condition in death, and that it will take a resurrection, backed by the power of God, to bring him to life again.

Who Hath Believed Our Report?

By D. G. Harvey

---

"They have not all obeyed the gospel. For Esaias saith, Lord, who hath believed our report?" (Rom. 10:16).

DAY after day, men of God have stood before you. These men have pleaded, reasoned, and prayed with you. Day after day, they saw the lack of interest in the faces before them. Yes, often they have been moved to cry out as did Isaiah, "Who hath believed our report?"

Take courage, brethren, not everyone will hear and understand. Only the called-out ones will hear. The all-wise Father knows best. He knows the man or woman that He can best use to carry on His work. The Son has said, "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him" (John 6:44). Drawn, because they were active and zealous like Saul of Tarsus! Saul was not idle; his nature was that of one having great zeal. He was drawn by the power of God to the right path.

In this day of boasted liberal minds, we should have pity for the so-called free thinkers. Man is not free, but, if we understand Paul's following words, man is under the power of Satan: "In whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them" (2 Cor. 4:4).

Our duty is clear; we must preach the gospel to every creature; it is our responsibility to give the opportunity to all. Paul reasoned: "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?" (Rom. 10:14.) All will not, however, believe the Word. "Unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them: but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it" (Heb. 4:2).

Only those worthy of the call will hear and understand. No man has power to add one member to God's church; God alone can add. "The Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved" (Acts 2:47).

"Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God" (2 Cor. 5:20). We, then, as ministers of God, can only invite you to come, we can only show you the way. If, through the preaching of the Word, you feel your need of God, it indicates that God is drawing you. He needs your talents. He has a work for you—a place in His plan. If you are not concerned, not even interested, boast not of a liberal mind! you are not free, but under bondage.

"Seeing we have this ministry, as we have received mercy, we faint not; but have renounced the hidden things of dishonesty, not walking in craftiness, nor handling the word of God deceitfully; but by manifestation of the truth commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God. But if our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost: in whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them" (2 Cor. 4:1-4).

"We then, as workers together with him, beseech you also that ye receive not the grace of God in vain" (2 Cor. 6:1).

THE GOD OF THIS WORLD

By Mrs. Willis McClelland

"If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost: in whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not" (2 Corinthians 4:4),

I HAVE read different articles on Satan, but no writer has made a comparison that I have in mind of his system and God's. "Devil," "Adversary," "Dragon," "Serpent" are other names for Satan who is the head of this satanic system. He "is the god of this world" (2 Cor. 4:4), and he tries to imitate God. As God sent His Son (Jesus) into the world to save mankind, so Satan shall send Antichrist into the world to destroy mankind. The "mystery of godliness" is God "manifest in the flesh" (1 Tim. 3:16). The "mystery of iniquity" will be Satan manifested in the flesh (2 Thess. 2:7). He is also called the "son of perdition" (2 Thess. 2:3), whereas Christ is called the "Son of God."

In Genesis 3:15, God said to the Serpent (Satan), "I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed." The woman's seed was Christ, then the Serpent's seed must be Antichrist. There are many antichrists or antichristians—any who deny that Jesus is the Christ are antichrist (1 John 2:22), just as those who acknowledge that Jesus is the Christ are Christians.

Daniel 9:26 speaks of the prince (Antichrist) that shall come. "He shall also stand up against the Prince of princes (Jesus)" (Dan. 8:25). The Apostle John's vision of the Antichrist on the Isle of Patmos in the "beast" of Revelation 13 says, "The dragon (Satan) gave him (Antichrist) his power, and his seat, and great authority." He (Antichrist) will accept the "kingdoms of this world" that Satan offered Christ, and which Christ refused (Matt. 4:8-10).

Daniel 11:36 says, "He shall exalt himself, and magnify himself above every god, and shall speak marvellous things against the God of gods." He (Antichrist) will have the gift of attracting men, will have versatile attainments, superhuman wisdom, great administrative and executive ability, along with his powers as a flatterer, a brilliant diplomatist, a superb strategist. These characteristics will make him the most conspicuous and prominent of men. All these gifts will be conferred on him by Satan, whose tool he will be, and who will thus make him the Superman.

He will pose as a great humanitarian, the friend of men, and the special friend of the Jewish race, and will persuade them that he is their Messiah and they will receive him (John 5:43).

Christ has a church—the ekklesia; Antichrist will have a church—the "synagogue of Satan" (Rev. 2:9; 3:9).

Christ will have a bride—the church (Eph. 5:25-27). Antichrist will have a bride—the mystic harlot church (Rev. 17:1-16). Christ's earthly ministry lasted for three and a half years, and Satan shall reign in Antichrist for the same length of time.

The "man of sin" will not be revealed in all his lawlessness until the Holy Spirit is taken out of the way, which will be when the church is caught out (2 Thess. 2:7, 8). No one has ever seen God, but He was revealed in the Man—Christ Jesus. No one has ever seen Satan, but he will be revealed in a man—Antichrist.

"Character is made by the Bible. Daily Bible readers are sure character builders. But they must read the Bible, not skim it, so many verses a day. To read one Beatitude, and keep it before the mind all day, is a wonderful aid in forming Christian character. When the Bible goes deep it builds high, and what it builds endures."—Selected.

CAMPAIGNING FOR CHRIST

Then, the last picture comes before me. I see Jesus a lone figure, out on the mountains overlooking Jerusalem. He has a heavy-laden heart, and I hear Him saying, "Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord" (Matt. 23:39).

Oh! Christian arouse! the election is over, and the people have their choice, but the campaign is still on for Christ. So, stand up for Jesus, unfurl the Christian banner, exalt His holy name, make known His mighty works, and proclaim aloud to all people until all shall know that in Christ is our only hope, our King, and we lift our voices with John, saying, "Come, Lord Jesus," and "come quickly" (Rev. 22:20).

A LETTER FROM THE FIELD

made it possible for Brother McLain and myself to go down to the Arkansas-Oklahoma Conference—that is, the Board paid for the gas. We found some very wonderful people in that section of the country, and I feel we are neglecting a wonderful opportunity if we do not try to help them in their work. They want to co-operate with the General Conference, and voted to do so from this time on. As in too many other places, there is a great need of workers. We found them very sincere in attending the services. The harvest truly is great!

May the Lord lead us into greater service of winning the lost.

SCHOOL LIGHTS

By "Chuck" Mills

MY FRIENDS! cheer up, we may not have elected Willkie, but we still have Christ. As we look about us and see sin on every hand accompanied by unrest, we can truly be thankful that we have the hope of Christ and His peace that passes all understanding. People are looking to world leaders for assistance from their impediments. Christ said, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you" (John 14:27). We must put our trust in Christ, for we can see it is vain to follow man. Can Roosevelt "save" the country? He has been trying for eight years, check the records.

Terry has been convinced that Illinois is somewhat cooler this time of the year than is California. He, as Father Time, attended the masquerade party barefooted, and spent the next day in bed.

Brother L. E. Conner stole the show and captured first prize by being the most clever in costume and speech.

"Follow the rope and no one will get hurt," were the instructions. For some, to obey was terror, the trail was one leading by corpses, ghosts, witches, screeching devils, and damp dungeons strewn with men's bones. The dormitory basement was the scene of the evening's games, after the "trip" through the whole of the building. The main attractions of the party were: a radio broadcast, the freshmen onion race, and hot water drinking contest (with teaspoons). Appropriately, choice doughnuts and popcorn balls were munched at refreshment time. The spotlight performance of the evening came when the corn used for decoration was husked by the "Freshies" in a thrilling contest.

Paul said, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation" (Rom. 1:16). Are we, as Christians, spreading the gospel, or do we when given a chance to exclaim for Christ, flush up and deny Him as did Peter? We can do noble service by winning souls, if we speak the Word. Let us ask ourselves this question, How many souls have I pointed to Christ? We read in James 5:20, that he that converteth a sinner, shall save a soul from death. In this age of high speed we hear of people saving a life by stopping his high-powered automobile in the "nick" of time. Which is greater: to save a soul from the first death, or to save one from the second death?

We as Christian young people have a sublime work to perform. Let us study so we may be able to give an answer to him that asketh us for a reason of the hope that is within us. (See 2 Peter 3:15.) May we never fail to take advantage of an opportunity to proclaim Christ.

Book Reviews

By Arlen Marsh

Outgrowth of the 1935 effort to distribute the New Testament more widely in English-speaking America, George T. B. Davis' Rebuilding Palestine According to Prophecy (Million Testaments Campaign; 25 cents) carries with it a good deal of Bible plus a good deal more information about Canaan as it was just before Italy started laying eggs at Tel-Aviv and Haifa.

One minor virtue of the book—unique virtue it is, too, among publications of the lesser religious houses!—is the fact that it is quite well written. Well written enough, indeed, to hold the interest of even a comparatively casual reader.

There are numerous photographs. In fact, all the illustrations are photographs, full-page half tones. They hardly are good enough photographs to bear out the old axiom that one picture is worth a thousand words, but they are good and they are informative.

So is the text. Despite the fact that the book is not large, it does succeed in packing a great deal of very solid material into its pages. The figures quoted are recent enough to be worth something, and Biblical predictions are given a fair amount of space by way of comparison. The purpose of the book is to be more factual than theoretical; so Davis makes no effort to engage in abstruse hypothesizing concerning the detailed future.

Not strictly in the religious field, but nevertheless of considerable interest to many students, is the Encyclopedia of Occult Sciences (Thomas McBride; $3.50).

Written anonymously, with an introduction by a Frenchman named Poinot, the Encyclopediu considers in detail, with numerous case histories, each phase of the various secret sciences, from voodoo to the kind of astrology practiced on suckers in every American city. Obviously, the book sympathizes with the bulk of the occult practices and teachings; but this very sympathy makes it more valuable for the student than strict lack of bias would make it. The arguments in favor of the occult are stronger, and the reader must think harder in order to set true religion and science against the writer's propositions. You'll inevitably disagree; but you'll find it interesting.

Morning Prayer

"Father dear, I wish to thank Thee
For my sweet refreshing sleep,
And the watch that Thou did'st keep,
While I slumbered soft and deep,
O'er Thy child so lovingly,
O, so lovingly.

"All that I today am doing,
Help me, Lord, to do for Thee;
May I kind and helpful be,
Only good in others see,
Try to serve Thee faithfully,
Serve Thee faithfully. Amen."

David Wins

David, the shepherd boy, came down from keeping his father's sheep, to the army camp of his people. He had two older brothers who were soldiers.

David heard Goliath ask for someone to fight with him. Although Goliath was a great big man, called a giant, David wanted to fight with him.

David must have looked funny in King Saul's armor, for it was far too large for him. He took it off, and went out to meet Goliath with only his staff in his hand.

Goliath laughed and scoffed when he saw David. That pleased David. When David was near enough, he quickly drew out his sling and hurled a stone aimed at Goliath's forehead. David had killed lions and bears in this manner, when they tried to kill his sheep.

The stone struck Goliath. He fell to the ground, stunned. David ran to him, drew out the giant's own sword, and cut off his head.

In that day David was known as the one who saved his people from their enemies.

In olden times, God fought or helped His people fight in battle.

Today, we, as Christians, are to obey the "royal law" of James 2:8.

"The eyes of the Lord are in every place, beholding the evil and the good" (Proverbs 15:3).

Christ Heals the Sick

A Roman army officer's servant was very sick. The officer loved this sick servant, but he could not help him.

When this officer heard of Jesus, he sent some of the Jewish elders to plead for him with Jesus. This officer had been kind to the Jewish elders, for he had built them a place of worship. These Jewish elders loved the army officer, too. Jesus went with the leaders. As they neared the centurion's home, some more people came to talk to Jesus. These were not rich, important people, but they were the officer's friends. The elders had brought their message to Christ with some praises of the centurion's good qualities to encourage Jesus to come to his home. However, his friends brought only the message, "I am not worthy to come to thee," from their centurion friend.

Isn't that the way we are today? We want a little extra help from the ones we think can give it to us. Then, when we sit down alone to think it all over, we realize we are unworthy, too, to go before our Lord.

Our faith in Christ enables us to pray to Him. Jesus marveled at this man's faith. He said, "I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel."

Jesus also raised a widow's son to life, in this lesson.

The Darkest Hour

By Mrs. William Stine

How true it is that the darkest hour precedes the dawn. The moon and stars make way for the greater light, the sun. Without an artificial light, we cannot find our way, and often stumble over objects in the dark. But with a small ray of light we are able to find our way.

The world is entering the early minutes of its darkest hour. The moon and stars, comparative of man's governments which include free religious worship, are swiftly fading; giving way to a time of darkness or great tribulation. Isaiah 62 bears out this statement, for there we read: "Behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people." Many times in the Bible, darkness represents sin, the result of ignorance of the Word. For proof, please read Psalm 18:28. Also, we have Ecclesiastes 2:13, "I saw that wisdom excelleth folly, as far as light excelleth darkness."

Because of these evil days, many people who live in darkness (or ignorance of the truth) are fearful. When conversation turns to war, people express themselves in this manner: "I don't read the newspapers any more. All one sees is war. It frightens me, so I don't read about it!" Well, this is one way to forget it. However, the Christian prays for these signs of Christ's coming, because he knows they must first come to pass. Our path "is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto a perfect day. The way of the wicked is as darkness: they know not at what they stumble" (Prov. 4:18, 19). A glorious dawning will follow the night of gross darkness. "The Sun of righteousness (will) arise with healing in his wings" (Mal. 4:2). The world will experience its darkest hour after the church has been caught up to meet the Lord in the air. The man of sin will at this time begin his bitter oppression against the Jewish people. War will have taken on a greater fury and will finally be concentrated around Jerusalem. After forty-two months of tribulation, the reign of the man of sin will be brought to an end.

Christian people, the clock is ticking away the minutes. The darkest hour is very near. Unless we trim our feeble lamps and fill them with oil, many will not find the light of gospel truth. Let us be as the wise virgins—ready ourselves, and helping others to prepare.

We Are Teachers

* * *

By Eunice Zollinger

"There were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you . . . even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction" (2 Peter 2:1). False teachers among us? No, that couldn't be! We believe the teachings given us to be most pure and uplifting. We should be proud to have them in our possession, but are we good examples ourselves?

Some do teach falsely; it is easier for them to do so. These should not be teachers, and certainly not teachers of a true faith.

We, as the young people of the Church of God, will someday be teachers of our little folks (some are now), and maybe older ones. Will we lead them to choose the correct path; the true faith? If we strive to do this, we must be living examples of a Christian character. We will teach our little boys and girls the evils of dancing, smoking, and other worldly habits, but can we teach them correctly if we do not become their models?

In a faith as strong as ours, it should be easy to choose the correct path, and to learn His Word. All we have to do is accept the truth, as it is written.

"Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it" (Prov. 22:6). That which a child learns when young, will be with him always. It is difficult to break a child of a habit to which he has become accustomed. Now, if we, as true teachers, will lead our younger people correctly, what a worthy task we will have accomplished! Maybe, some will never be teachers, but a little one will mimic us. We are teachers.

Progress

The public school teacher goes to summer school and takes post-graduate work and becomes a better teacher. The doctor reads books and papers on medicine and attends clinics periodically and becomes a better doctor. The lawyer studies new laws and new interpretations of the old ones and becomes a better lawyer. The only way a Christian can become a better Christian is to study and study diligently the textbook of Christianity, the Bible. The world is your classroom or office.

"A WOMAN WHO SERVED THE LORD"

Such was the general theme of the morning services in the Los Angeles church the first Sunday in November. The pastor announced that the congregation would be given an opportunity to express its deep appreciation to Sr. Emma C. Railsback, its retiring pastor, for the splendid and self-sacrificing service she had given during her years of successful leadership.

The present pastor, taking the general theme of the day as his subject, based his sermon on the work of Priscilla and Aquila, who, like Bro. and Sr. Railsback, labored together zealously in the advancement of the gospel and contributed so much to the success of the efforts of both Paul and the eloquent Apollos.

At the close of the sermon, Sr. Eva L. Stearns gave an impressive review of the remarkable accomplishments of Sr. Railsback in the building of the church and parsonage in so short a time and with so small a congregation. She called attention to the fact that not one cent of indebtedness remained and that there was a surplus which would be used for further improvements of the property in the near future. At the conclusion of her address, she presented to Sr. Railsback a fine copy of the Scriptures as an expression of appreciation from the church.

In the afternoon, Sr. Railsback delivered an unusually impressive discourse on "Unity," taking as her text Psalm 133:1: "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." At Sr. Railsback's request, Arlen Marsh gave a sermonette on future unity among the nations, at the conclusion of her discourse.

Special vocal numbers by Miss Charlotte Rahn and Arlen Marsh added to the pleasure of the day's activities. Only those who were present could appreciate the spirit of Christian love and fellowship that prevailed at this splendid service.

Under its new pastor, the church is carrying on a full program: Sunday school at 10:00 o'clock, worship at 11:00, and a Bible class at the church each Sunday night. Mid-week meetings are held in various parts of the city to accommodate those who find it difficult to attend the Sunday night services at the church. Interest in all the services is strongly apparent.

G. E. Marsh, Pastor.

UNITED WE STAND

Yesterday was Election Day. You, no doubt, voted for the men you wished to place in office; those you thought capable of conducting business for you for a period of years. Last August we had an election day at our General Conference. You, personally or through your church, voted in officers to conduct the business of the Conference for a year. You expect each officer to fill his position faithfully and well; and I am sure each one puts forth latent energy to do his best.

In a recent issue of The Herald, your president and general manager, Bro. L. E. Conner, asked for financial help. We have had a very meager response to his call. We are grateful to those who responded, but in order to meet necessary expenses that an institution such as ours incurs the response MUST be greater. There is still a balance on the deficit from last year's Bible Training School, though at General Conference there were sufficient pledges made to take care of this.

During the Conference sessions, we vote to do ever so many things that cannot even be started for lack of funds. We are all desirous of going forward, but we must put forth extra effort if we expect to succeed. Every phase of our work is worthy of your combined efforts to make it a success. Let us all get behind our President earnestly, financially, and prayerfully, to enable our church organization and all for which it stands to go FORWARD.

"Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest" (John 4:35).
Orpha LeMasurier, Treasurer.

MICHIGAN CONFERENCE REPORT

The Michigan Fall Conference convened at Blanchard from October 28 to November 3.

Bro. Harvey U. Krogh of Tipp City, Ohio, proved himself a very interesting and able speaker. His theme concerned the signs of the times. Bro. Krogh ended the meetings with a sermon on Restitution. He has made a large wall chart illustrating the times which is most interesting.

Sunday, November 3, was an ideal day and was well taken advantage of, as we had an excellent attendance. At noon a sumptuous chicken dinner was served in Blanchard style. And what style! Because of an early order, the writer's portion of chicken was bedecked with pink ribbon. The afternoon service was followed by Communion. Although the brethren from Coates Grove and Kalamazoo were absent, both Grand Rapids churches had a large representation which felt the trip well worth while.

Bro. Krogh was accompanied by his wife. Both have found a warm spot in the hearts of the Michigan folks, and we hope that we may have the pleasure of having them with us again sometime. May God crown the efforts of this young man with blessings, in our prayer.
Mrs. L. F. Slacum, Secy.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

Fieldmen C. E. Lapp and James McLain continue to do good work wherever they go. In this issue, page four, we are glad to present a letter from Bro. Lapp. Any churches wishing a fieldman's services should write to the National Bible Institution several weeks in advance, that arrangements might be made. You wanted a fieldman. You may have him now.

Bro. Arlen Marsh's new address is 230 West 103 Street, Los Angeles, Calif.; which will also be entered in the Berean-Page heading hereafter.

"An eight-pound daughter was born early Sunday morning, November 3, to Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Cronbaugh, Belle Plaine, Iowa."—Celaire Randall, student minister.

It could hardly be supposed that the Apostle Peter included all of the many millions of professed Christians when he said, "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people" (1 Peter 2:9).

"Diana Kay came to make her home with Bro. and Sr. Clement Richey, October 18. These young people, formerly of the Marshall, Ill., congregation, have been faithful attendants at our church and Berean services since coming to Los Angeles. We trust that the new member of the family will not interfere greatly with their faithfulness. Congratulations."—Mrs. E. C. Railsback, Los Angeles, Calif.

"How we wish man's rule, or his trying to rule, would soon end, and that Christ would come to rule in righteousness!"—Enos and Carrie Elton, Tustin, Calif.

"After being incapacitated for six weeks, following a major operation, I am recovering and have much for which to be thankful."—Hope Haupt, Natchitoches, La.

The Louisiana brethren are enjoying the evangelistic meetings conducted by Bro. M. W. Lyon of Cleveland, Ohio.

"Though one dreads to note the awful happenings all over the world, it must surely mean 'the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.'"—Lottie E. Young, Seattle, Wash.

Sr. Mary Richardson, Hammond, La., is employed as a field worker in the Public Welfare Department of the parish in which she resides.

"I find many good articles in The Restitution Herald, and they are a wonderful help for isolated ones, as well as all others."—Mrs. Minnie Rogers, 1888 Lincoln St., Eugene, Ore.

"I cannot tell you how very much comfort I receive from reading the good articles, so full of sweet promises and the hope of the soon coming of our dear Savior, that I find in The Restitution Herald."—Mrs. T. J. Ellis, Waterloo, Iowa.

LOUISIANA CHURCH NOTES

Our special series of meetings at Happy Woods began Sunday, November 3, with good attendance. The meetings will continue for two weeks, then Bro. M. W. Lyon will hold meetings at Blood River for two more weeks.

Bro. Gus Landry, of the Happy Woods church, has been confined to bed the past two weeks by illness and is still unable to be up at this writing. We especially miss him in our special services, as he is our tenor singer in the choir. Our prayer is that he may soon regain his strength.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bottolf. Her name is Beverly Jean.

The Blood River Berean class has been having excellent attendance and very good lessons, recently. Various members take turns teaching the class, and this seems to be working out well for both the teacher and the student.

Harry Goekler, Pastor.

BOSWORTH, MISSOURI

The brethren of Bosworth were privileged to have with them Bro. C. E. Lapp of Macomb, Ill., who gave a series of meetings starting Friday, November 1, through Sunday, November 3.

We greatly enjoyed Bro. Lapp's lessons. On Sunday morning, his Scripture lesson concerned how field work should be done. Then in picture and chart form, he showed each group's progress in building its church. This was a most interesting sermon.

We hope for the return of Bro. Lapp soon.
Mrs. Ray Pancoast.

BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL NEWS

The class has been especially well blessed this week with speakers. Wednesday the student body enjoyed Mr. Donneworth of the Anti-Saloon League. Mr. Donneworth is visiting all high schools in Illinois. His lectures treat alcohol and its uses from a scientific standpoint rather than from a moral aspect.

Bro. C. E. Lapp addressed the class Thursday afternoon.

Alan McLain spoke at Dixon, Ill., Sunday, November 10; Bro. L. E. Conner at Rockford, Ill., and Muriel Randall at Grand Rapids, Mich.

At this writing the class is planning a trip to Aurora, Ill., to visit Aurora College next Tuesday.
Orris J. Mills, Reporter.

SOUTHLAWN PARK CHURCH OF GOD

Grand Rapids, Michigan

On Sunday, October 27, our church observed its fourteenth birthday of the present church building here in Grand Rapids.

The regular services were held in the morning. After the morning worship, dinner was served in the church annex. Friends came from far and near to help us celebrate this occasion. The dinner was brought to a fitting close with the serving of a large birthday cake.

At two-thirty in the afternoon, Bro. Frank Siple spoke and reviewed the activities of our church for the past seven years. He told of new plans and hopes for the coming year. At the end of this service, Communion was observed.

The closing service was held in the evening, at which Bro. Siple told the story of Joseph to a young interested group of Bereans.

Sr. Frank Siple was appointed superintendent of the Bereans to fill the vacancy left by Bro. Arlen Marsh who is now in California. Sr. Siple reports that a group of twenty-five young people turn out each Sunday evening. It is also noticed that this group of Bereans have contributed musical talent to the evening worship. Plans are already under way to have them take a more active part than ever before.

Leslie Niles, Secy.

SULLIVAN - CALL

On Friday night, October 25, at the home of the bride's grandmother, Sr. Ida Eastman of Fenwick, Ont., Patricia Sullivan and Robert Call of Niagara Falls, N. Y., were united in marriage by the writer. Many of our Conference folk will remember the grandmother and the mother, Sr. Lida Sullivan, who have been in attendance at General Conference.

Patricia is a young lady of worthy Christian character. She has been an attendant at our Niagara Falls church since she was old enough to be brought to worship services. Seven years ago last February, she was baptized into Christ by the pastor. With this background, she enters the marriage relationship well founded in truth and with an unswerving loyalty to her church.

Robert is a young man who loves the Lord and is a seeker after truth. While not a member, as yet, of our church, he attends and shows a deep interest in the teachings of the gospel as understood by the Church of God, and we feel confident that with his anxious and willing heart, seeking after the only way, that this couple united in one body, will also be united in one faith in the near future.

They are comfortably settled in their first home at 2671 Whirlpool St., Niagara Falls, N. Y., and we pray that the blessings of a happy married life may be theirs to enjoy and their yoking together strengthened through a united faith in the Lord.

C. E. Randall.

The Restitution Herald is the official organ of the General Conference of the Church of God. It is published by the National Bible Institution at Oregon, Illinois.

L. E. Conner Business Manager

Subscription Rate.—51 issues per annum, $2.00.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him, (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

My Thanksgiving Offering

God, the Giver of "every good gift" has blessed us during the year with more than necessary "food and raiment." Regardless of the cloudy horizon, God has thus far favored us with peace and Christian liberty. It is not only appropriate at this harvest season to give a token of our appreciation, but it is unbecoming of sincere Christians not to do so.

Call to Arms

Once again the vast reaches of the old world echo with the rhythmic tread of marching men. This time the avowed destination is Egypt and the Suez Canal via the land of Palestine. To every nation of the world, it is the call to arms. Every nation, including the United States, is mustering its every available force for what it feels certain is the last bid for existence.

It is the humble opinion of this writer, that as the measured tread echoes across the treasured land of Abraham, we shall see a new order emerge for the land of Palestine. Then, it is not unreasonable to suppose that we shall vision, fulfilled before our very eyes, the seven years that constitute the last week of the Prophet Daniel.

If there be light in the dwellings of some, after the order of the former Exodus, to them it should doubly be a call to arms. We are assured, that once that order appears, the period of labor for the Christian will be no longer a matter of years, but of months.

Time after time, there is repeated within my hearing by Christian and non-Christian persons, "I surely believe that this unrest is working forward to the end of things." I'm going to be brutally frank—they don't believe any such thing.

If the non-Christian believed these things, would he allow these last few precious moments to pass in praising the call to arms of certain leaders? Would he do this as a means of increasing a limited national existence, while he neglects the great call to arms that would establish him a place for all eternity?

If the avowed Christian really believed these things, would he, at his own time and expense, be walking the streets handing out pamphlets, as hundreds are now handing them out by the thousands that say simply, "Elect Mr. So-and-so," while hundreds of tracts, that herald the coming of Christ and the only real hope of the world, are yellowing upon the shelves of our printers?

Perhaps, there are better ways to make friends than to mention these things, but the real friend is the one who offers an occasional warning. Surely this is a time for warning. These questions must be answered, if not here then hereafter, and in the meantime the measured tread of marching feet gets closer and closer and closer.

New Dorcas Society at Eldorado

Eldorado is rightly proud of its newly established Dorcas Society whose keynote, under the able leadership of Fanny Kittinger, seems to be to get things done. At the present time, the members are meeting one full day each week to do quilting and such kindred jobs as may properly come before them. So far their average is nearing two quilts a day in addition to other smaller jobs. As to the quality of the work, we here make no mention. In the first place we know nothing about it, and in the second place, well, you know the ladies!

Marshall Blossoms Out

The church building and grounds at Marshall have undergone a rehabilitation that is sure to bring it to its rightful place as a community church, in this locality. The grounds have been resurveyed, and a complete new fence has been erected around the entire church grounds. The church itself has been given a new coat of white paint that has taken away the abandoned look of the past. Over the door, a new black and white sign advises one that, if they are looking for the Salem Church of God of Abrahamic faith, they have found the right place. These, and many minor improvements, make it indeed an increasingly inviting place to come and worship. We feel sure that the determination of these brethren, in having a place of worship, that they are proud to ask friends and neighbors to attend, will bear much fruit.

Drive for Better Sunday Schools

Sunday schools at both Eldorado and Marshall are now busily engaged in getting a better Sunday school work outlined. Superintendents Ivan Veach and Herbert Edmister advise that class records, attendance pins, birthday cards, uniform promotion, and many kindred items will be a portion of the new order of promoting Sunday school work.

"He that goeth forth . . . bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him" (Psalm 126:6).

"In Every Thing Give Thanks"

By L. E. Conner

AS the day that has been set apart by proclamation as Thanksgiving Day approaches, our minds naturally go back over the year, and we are surprised as we consider how many reasons we find we have to be thankful. First, we think of our heavenly Father who "gives to all life, and breath, and all things." It is well, too, that our attention is called particularly to these things from time to time, that we may meditate upon them, for the reason that, as these blessings come to us at frequent intervals, in various ways and by different means, we pass the incidents and matters by with but little, if any, consideration, accepting such mercies as matters of course, as things to which we are justly entitled.

But, when what we call misfortune, even in small degree, comes to us, what complaint we make! We are prone to excuse ourselves, and try to place the responsibility upon someone other than ourselves. In these cases we seldom charge ourselves with anything more serious than making slight mistakes, and if our attention is called to some of our own faults we say yes, but, and then proceed to but around with our excuses until we think we have butted ourselves out of the guilty picture.

This all comes from selfishness which has its seat in the flesh. Therefore, in my own case, Thanksgiving Day, as proclaimed by constituted authority, serves a good purpose in causing me to take an inventory of myself, in which I find that I have received many blessings and kindly considerations from my heavenly Father and from others with whom I have associated in life, to all of whom I now feel that I have been negligent in expressing in more definite form my gratitude for the manifold blessings and good things that have come to me from their goodness of heart. "O Lord our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth!" (Psalm 8:1.)

Truly, goodness and mercy have been extended to us and our beloved country from our heavenly Father during the past year. We have had bountiful crops of the things necessary for our sustenance and comfort, and while much of the world has been cursed with war, we have been blessed with peace, so that when we in prayer sing, "God bless America, our home sweet home," we feel that He has answered before we have asked.

And such have been our experiences and observations all the way through this life. It has never been necessary for us to plead with our heavenly Father to convince Him that we are in need of the necessary comforts of life, as He knows what we need before we ask Him, and we need not do so much asking, but should be more thankful.

The paths over which we have traveled have not, at all times, been covered with roses; there have been some thorns, of course. We have had some sorrows, disappointments, troubles, difficulties, made mistakes, and possibly met with some accidents. But in my own case, in analyzing my experiences in this regard, I find that, in many of these unfortunate trials I, myself am, at least somewhat to blame for my own suffering; all of which causes me to see that the blessing and general experiences in life have been rich indeed. God has been good to us all far above my power to express, and mankind has been kind to me far beyond my just deserts. Therefore, I can only say; May God and all His creatures receive my sincere thanks for life and all that has come to make life so sweet and enjoyable to me. "Thou, Lord, hast made me glad through thy work."

“Offer Unto God Thanksgiving”

God, who knows “all the fowls of the mountains” (Psalm 50:11), this year sees more than thirty-three million turkeys in the United States—turkeys for Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners. So many of these dinners will lack the offering of thanks, and so few will be blessed with prayer, that God says, “If I were hungry, I would not tell thee: for the world is mine, and the fulness thereof” (v. 12).

“Offer unto God thanksgiving; and pay thy vows unto the most High. . . . Now consider this, ye that forget God, lest I tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver. Whoso offereth praise glorifieth me: and to him that ordereth his conversation aright will I shew the salvation of God” (vv. 14, 22, 23).

Standish, Squanto, or God?

There should be no discounting of the bravery, wisdom, and leadership of Captain Miles Standish in the dark days when our Pilgrim forefathers were for a while rationed six kernels of corn per day. We should not forget the practical religion of the heathen Squanto. Well, too, did the Indians show the white men how to increase their yeild by putting a small fish in each hill of corn. Colonial history would be incomplete without the stories of Standish, Squanto, and the fish, but there is danger more that He who “gave the increase” (1 Cor. 3:6) will be forgotten in the history.

Of whom do we sing in “Our Country ’Tis of Thee”—of Standish, Squanto, or God?

Score: 63,894 to One

63,894 do-or-die football fans huddled under umbrellas and newspapers. A drizzling rain during three quarters of the game at last tore loose in torrents. The rain, though, could not quench Minnesota-Michigan zeal. Nobody thought it necessary to leave the service to close automobile windows; nobody thought the sermon was too long, or too “dry”; nobody jumped the benediction for the door. Everybody paid to get in, and everybody worshipped—in the rain!

“The Lord saw it, and it displeased him that there was no judgment. And he saw there was no man, and wondered that there was no intercessor: therefore his arm brought salvation . . . clad with zeal as a cloke . . . the Redeemer.”

“Who hath believed our report?” “His visage was so marred more than any man.” He “gave (his) back to the smiters, and (his) cheeks to them that plucked off the hair: (he) hid not (his) face from shame and spitting.”

“Touching the king: my tongue is the pen of a ready writer. Thou art fairer than the children of men. . . . All thy garments smell of myrrh, and aloes, and cassia, out of the ivory palaces. . . . He is thy Lord; and worship thou him.”

Score: 63,894 to “One.”

Corollary: “No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other.”

Application: “Be instant in season, out of season.”

Explanation: Go to church, AND LIKE IT, when it rains!

Turkey or Water Cress?

Vegetarianism is no part of the Abrahamic Faith. It is well on Thanksgiving Day to remember the Biblical standard of being “temperate in all things,” but it is also well to consider that properly observed feast days comprised a divine part of Jewish worship—feasts in which various meats were eaten. Abraham, father of the faithful, “fetcht a calf tender and good,” had it carefully prepared, offered it to angels, and “they did eat.” Even after His resurrection, Jesus asked, “Have ye here any meat?” The disciples then “gave him a piece of broiled fish, and of an honeycomb.” No vegetarian was Jesus, for He “took it, and did eat before them” (Luke 24:41-43). Said Paul: “In the latter times some shall depart from the faith . . . commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe . . . the truth.” So, if by the goodness of God, a turkey should be served for our Thanksgiving dinner, we shall not cry for spinach or water cress.

Thanksgiving and Courage

By R. H. Judd

"When the brethren heard of us, they came to meet us. . . . Whom when Paul saw, he thanked God, and took courage" (Acts 28:15).

THOSE stirring lines—"God Be With You Till We Meet Again"—must, in these sad times, surely be the cry of multitudes; especially in war-torn Europe and those wonderful isles of Britain.

Tens of thousands of children separated from parents and relatives, and parents and relatives torn between grief and duty to children, are daily sending up the cry: "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

It has been the writer's privilege, and that of his beloved wife, to have been instrumental in bringing two teen-age girls away from the din and horrors of war to the peace and quiet in this Canada of ours in the great British Commonwealth of nations.

As we study our Bibles, we cannot fail to notice in God's great plan for mankind that suffering and sorrow are a part of that plan. Almost every Bible character of note passed through a period of suffering in order that he might benefit, and ultimately reap the glory that must inevitably follow when the suffering has been allowed to teach the lesson that the individual or the nation needed to learn.

We, on this side of the ocean, can but vaguely realize the bitterness of the partings between parent and child, and child and parent, for the suffering works both ways, though probably amid the change of new scenes, the children feel it by far the less.

In this connection, it is indeed cheering to note how differing groups in Canada and the United States have cheerfully extended a greeting and a helping hand (among them those of our own Church of God) to the children of those whose ideals and faiths are similar. Thus, in a very real and practical sense have the words of our text become as true today as the time when they were first uttered: "When the brethren heard of us, they came to meet us."

Who does not hate and abhor the horrors of war? Looked at from a human standpoint, war is the greatest evil in the world today. Yet, out of it has sprung a sympathy for each other, both individual and national, that has never had its equal since the world began; for again and again, aye numberless times, has the heart-agonizing but thankful cry gone forth from myriads of lips: "When the brethren heard of us, they came to meet us."

It has indeed been a pleasure and a privilege to "meet" the needs of those who are so grateful for kindness shown, and God Himself does not let the bearer of another's burden to suffer. In many instances, willing hearts have not realized the responsibilities and the difficulties involved in the undertaking, but others have been glad to step in to share the burden with surprising and kindly generosity. So genuine and so kindly is the spirit that human suffering is bringing to birth, that cases are known where monetary help has been anonymously given month by month, the recipient having no knowledge whatever as to who the donor may be. "Before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear."

What about the last half of our text? Can we speak of "thanks" and of "courage" under such conditions as prevail in dear old England today? Indeed we can! Travelers from Britain and letters from the Homeland tell us that the spirit of the nation is high. The writer can personally testify to that fact. From many relatives in that wonderful little Isle, we have never had a word of complaint, though houses have been shattered and hopes dashed to the ground. The promise, "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper," is the keynote of their hope and the inspiration of their courage.

Surely we also have cause to "take courage" and rejoice that though they have not, in most cases, seen us in the flesh, they "thanked God, and took courage" because of the little help that God in His mercy has permitted us to give.

The little poem, "King of Nations," which appears within this article was written in July, 1940, and has already helped many to be more thankful and courageous.

"King of Nations"

(Jeremiah 10:7)

Courage, men and women, courage,
That's the thing we need today.
Be thou strong and real courageous,
Face the issue while we may.

God has told us, "Go thou forward,"
Big the issues are at stake:
Life is worthless without freedom,
For ourselves and others' sake.

Sons and daughters of the future,
Look to us for what we owe:
A great heritage of blessings,
Clean and white as driven snow.

God above is "KING OF NATIONS,"
He is testing us today;
Sifting out the precious metal,
Burning out the miry clay.

SWEET INCENSE

By C. E. Randall

GREAT as the holy of holies may have been, yet the holy place, wherein stood the altar of incense, table of shewbread, and the seven-pointed candelabra was a most remarkable room, especially was it rich in symbolic teaching. This room contained the furniture which was overlaid with pure gold, which, as suggested in a previous article, represented the new life in Christ Jesus, when those who have been begotten by the Word are overlaid with the righteousness which is of God through faith in Jesus Christ (Phil. 3:9).

Altar of Incense

This altar stood before the entrance into the holy of holies. There are some scriptures which seem to teach that it stood within the holy of holies, for example, Hebrews 9:3, 4. (Discussion of technical questions will be avoided, lest our minds be diverted from the basic teachings which God intended we should get from these pieces of furniture.) The altar of incense was just what the name suggests, an altar whereon incense was offered. Description of this altar can be found in Exodus 30:1-10. Other references can be secured from marginal helps. Incense was to be burned every morning and every evening; at least the quantity was to be replaced twice a day, and the offering of incense was to be a "perpetual incense offering." Morning and night the sweet fragrance from this altar ascended up toward the God of heaven. The perfume filled the whole Tabernacle. Strange incense was not to be offered.

Of what was this altar and the incense a type? The answer is given in the Revelation. At least, it is so suggestive that definite conclusions may be drawn. "When he had taken the book, the four beasts and four and twenty elders fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them harps, and golden vials full of odours ("incense," margin), which are the prayers of saints" (Rev. 5:8). No thought could be more impressive or beautiful than that our prayers are fragrant incense to the Lord, which He desires us to offer regularly.

Morning and Evening

The morning and evening offering of incense on the altar before the Holy Presence, first of all, teaches us the great lesson of regularity. There should be system and rhythm in our prayer life. The outstanding exemplars of prayer in the Bible had their set times of going to God in prayer. David prayed "evening, and morning, and at noon" (Psalm 55:17). With his face set toward Jerusalem, as the altar of incense faced the holy of holies, Daniel prayed three times daily; although a decree had been signed by the king forbidding the offering of prayer incense to the God of heaven. Peter and John, we are told, went up to the Temple at the hour of prayer (Acts 3:1). They had a set time to meet the Lord, and they kept their appointment.

Continual Incense

The offering of the incense was not a hit and miss affair. It was regular and continual. There is not so much value in praying if we pray in a thermostatic manner—cutting in and kicking out—according to our spiritual atmosphere. We have a thermostat and blower for our furnace. When it gets cool enough in the room, the thermostat will cut in and start the blower, and as soon as the temperature rises to a set point, the thermostat cuts out. Many of us are thermostats in our prayer life. When necessities of life seem to slacken, we pray; or when sickness comes into the home, we seek the Lord and make many promises. Our hearts are touched in the presence of death, and we call for aid from heaven, but when these distresses are over, we cut out and our prayer life is over until something else goes wrong. Spasms of prayer are better than no prayer at all, but the altar of incense teaches us an entirely different principle in prayer. It is a lesson in regular and continued offering of prayer incense. Paul had caught the true perspective of prayer when he wrote to the Thessalonians, "Pray without ceasing." You say, "I can't pray." Then do as the disciples did, they asked the Lord to teach them how to pray (Luke 11:1).

Strange Incense

Israel was warned against strange incense. Such incense would hinder the receiving of God's blessings. Many of our prayers are strange incense. Being such, they hinder the receiving of God's blessings. Difficulties in the marriage relationship—not dwelling together in love—hinder prayers. It is strange incense. "Likewise, ye husbands, dwell with them according to knowledge, giving honour unto the wife, as unto the weaker vessel, and as being heirs together of the grace of life; that your prayers be not hindered" (1 Peter 3:7). Prayers from lustful hearts become strange incense. "Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts" (James 4:3). On the other hand, "the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much" (James 5:16). Keep this sweet incense rising continually!

Thanksgiving Throughout the World

By Margaret Magaw

WITH the approach of another Thanksgiving season, every member of the Church of God in America has much for which to be thankful. We live in a land where freedom of speech, freedom of the press, and the right to worship God according to the dictates of our own conscience are still tolerated. Each one of us, if called upon, should gladly testify to the abundant personal blessings enjoyed throughout the year.

First of all, I am thankful for the precious message of the gospel which I, as a child, was privileged to hear proclaimed by able ministers of the Word of God in years long gone by. I am thankful that God gave me grace to accept this message in my heart and to imbibe its teachings in my life, though I have often erred and grievously erred in this Christian walk. I am thankful for the grace that forgives, lifts me up again, and encourages me onward in that Christian walk. I am sure every Christian could testify to the blessings just mentioned, besides other personal blessings too numerous to mention.

We know that God has called out many members of His church in other lands less fortunate than ours, lands torn by war and all its attendant miseries and fears. What blessings have these members for which to be thankful as well as we? The Apostle Peter assures us of great promises of God to His people, saying: "According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue: whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust" (2 Peter 1:3, 4). What are these "exceeding great and precious promises"? Paul says in Galatians 3:16, "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made . . ." Turn to Genesis 12:1-3, 13:14-17; 17:1-6; also 26:24, for a record of these promises. Now refer back to Galatians 3:16 to finish the verse: "He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ." The promises of blessing to Christians are inseparably linked with the promises made to Abraham and his seed (the Israelites) through Christ. Paul continues to reason, "Ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

God promised Abraham all the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession, but according to Romans 4:13, Abraham is heir of the whole world. We, the church or body of Christ, are to inherit the whole world along with faithful Abraham! Furthermore, there are beautiful promises given that the earth itself shall be redeemed from the curse to its original Edenic beauty. (See Isa. 35.)

We who have named the name of Christ have accepted His challenge in Luke 9:23, to take up our crosses daily and follow Him. We have been heartened by His numerous promises of future blessing with Him, such as: "Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also" (John 14:1-3).

We are assured that Christ included us in the future blessing in His prayer in the Garden before His trial and crucifixion, saying: "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them: that they may be one, even as we are one" (John 17:20-22).

When shall we inherit these blessings? Paul says, "Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption. Behold, I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed" (1 Cor. 15:50-52).

Many other beautiful promises concerning Christ's Kingdom cause us to be exceedingly thankful, and these blessed promises rejoice the hearts of all true Christians throughout the world. "Be ye thankful."

Christ, the "Bright and Morning Star"

By Ellsworth Routson

"I am the root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star" (Revelation 22:16).

HAVE you ever stopped to notice the stars, only to have your attention called to one star which stood out brighter than all the others? Yes, I have, also, and I would like to literally compare that star to Christ. Christ's life stands out above the lives of all other men, and He stands out as a bright star on a dark night. It is usually considered that a star has five points, so let us now consider five characteristics of our Savior.

One is obedience—how Christ obeyed His Father, our God, in all things. He was so obedient as to go to the cross for our sins—obedient unto death.

Let us consider Samuel and Saul, in 1 Samuel 15, to see clearly the true meaning of obedience. Saul was to slay all the Amalekites, "both man and woman, infant and suckling, ox and sheep, camel and ass." Saul, however, disobeyed and took the king, Agag, alive with the best of the flocks, and "all that was good." Samuel said unto Saul upon his return, "To obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams." Saul was disobedient. Let us now consider Abraham as he offered up Isaac, his only son, to God. He had his son bound hand and foot upon the altar, and the knife raised in his hand to slay him as an offering to God. But the Lord stayed his hand. He was tested and found obedient. To me, Abraham was a type of Christ, who is much the greater.

Second, let us consider the love of Christ. We should first mention John 3:16, "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." God gave us Christ through His love, and Christ gave us His life through love by carrying our sins to the cross. In John 15:13, we read, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." How true that is of Christ! He was a friend to man, and gave His life for us. It is recorded several times in the Bible, "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself," so we ought to love one another. We have Scripture telling of Christ's love for individuals. In John 11:5, it says, "Now Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus." Also in Mark 10:21, we read, "Then Jesus beholding him loved him"—this refers to the rich young ruler. Christ said, "Sell whatsoever thou hast . . . and follow me"; but the possessions he had were great, and he sadly turned away. Truly, Christ loved all mankind, but few hearkened unto Him. Let us always remember that Christ died for us.

The third characteristic of our Star to be considered is His purity. Christ was pure, clean, and without sin. 1 Peter 1:19 speaks of Christ as "a lamb without blemish and without spot." He was pure in mind and body, the only one without sin. Ephesians 5:27, speaking of Christ and His church, says: "That he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish." We, as the church, should live more perfectly, if we are to be Christ's, without wrinkle, spot, or blemish. It is high time we are beginning to cleanse ourselves, to weed out the sins of our lives. Paul has written, "I beseech you therefore, brethren . . . that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service" (Rom. 12:1). So, let us strive to be a pure people for Christ. Was He not made sin for us?

Fourth, Christ was a friend to mankind. How? By His many healings. Did He not heal the lame, make the dumb to speak, cause the blind to see, heal the broken-hearted, and cleanse many others from all kinds of diseases? He also gave His apostles power to heal. Was He not a friend to mankind by doing this? Through His apostles, many were healed of their afflictions, and saved. Consider, too, Jesus' miracles wherein He fed the multitude of five thousand from the five loaves and two small fishes, and the filling to the breaking point of the disciples' net when He told them to cast it on the other side of the ship. It seems to me that everything Christ did in His ministry was a help to man. His greatest help was to lift us out of sin, to make us a people for His name by allowing His perfect body to be marred for our sins.

Fifth, Christ was the life-giver. How can we have life? Only through Christ. He gave His life for us, and by baptism we are representing His death, burial, and resurrection. How often do we think of His sacrifice for us? The crown of thorns crushed upon His brow, which brought forth His precious blood, the scourging, mocking, spitting upon Him when He was clothed in a purple robe in mockery of royalty, parting His garments, and nailing Him to the cruel cross—oh! what shame! what agony! what pain! How He must have suffered as He hung upon the cross, being pierced with a spear, and being nailed upon! How it saddens my heart to know how He was tortured for our sins, nailing them to the cross. He is the good giver of life, and unless we come to Him we are lost.

True, Christ is the Bright and Morning Star. In Revelation 22:16, He says, "I am the root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star." His light has shone out above all others. He has filled the world with His light, but still many cannot see.

These are the five points of our Star, Christ: (1) Obedience, (2) Love, (3) His Purity, (4) a Friend, and (5) the Life-giver. Let us follow the Bright and Morning Star!

Are Your Lamps Filled and Trimmed?

By Gerald L. Cooper

---

WE ARE all very familiar with the Parable of the Ten Virgins, so much so that it is hardly necessary to go into any detail in regard to the parable itself. However, I would that you note one fact, a very important one in this parable. That fact is this: the reason that the foolish virgins were late and, therefore, deprived of entering to the Bridegroom's feast, was because they had no oil for their lamps. All other facts become subservient to this all-important one.

I wish to apply this truth in a little different way, perhaps, than is the usual teaching. I have no desire to change the meaning of the parable, but just to get some additional truths from it. If the foolish virgins had had the foresight to fill their lamps with oil, they would not have missed the feast. The same thing can be said of many of our churches and their individual members, today. They have the appearance of being ready to meet the Savior, but are not really ready.

Let us study a little further, and use some illustrations that are well known to all of us. In many localities, where electricity has not yet come, there are kerosene lamps in use. Anyone who has ever used a kerosene lamp knows that such a lamp is of no use unless it has a proper amount of kerosene. It matters not how well the chimney is polished or the wick is trimmed, but without necessary fuel it is of no use. Perhaps you have an automobile. It may be in perfect mechanical condition. It may be polished so that it fairly shines, but it will be of no avail to you unless it has gasoline and oil in it. One time I was in a home that was wired completely for electricity, but the power lines had not yet been built to the house. The fixtures were very nice ones, and helped the appearance of the home, but they would not give light until the electric current came through from the powerhouse.

Ever since the time of the early Israelites, the anointing of the oil has been a type of the Spirit of God, as was so ably presented in a recent article by Brother C. E. Randall. In our illustrations above, the lamp, automobile, and light fixtures were all ready, but without the oil and the current they were no good. It is much the same way with us and our churches. We may be all ready to receive the Spirit of God; we may present a good appearance to the world, but have we that necessary Spirit that makes us the children of God? Remember that the foolish virgins were all ready and were waiting for the coming of the Bridegroom, but they were not fully prepared in that they had been so negligent in not filling their lamps with oil.

In my present condition, I have no way of knowing much about the activities of our various churches, except through the reports in The Restitution Herald and the recent church census. From these facts, it seems to me that there are several of our churches that are sadly lacking in the Spirit of God. Many of them have membership lists that look impressive, but that same list when given as the active list has dwindled considerably. From personal knowledge, I know that these churches teach the second coming of Christ, and many of their individual members are eagerly and patiently awaiting that coming. It seems that the church, as a whole, lacks that "spark" or Spirit of God that will animate it into a never-ceasing effort to not only be looking for Christ, but to be preaching and teaching that truth to all people.

We may believe with all our hearts that Christ is coming soon; we may have for years been teaching nothing but that. It is true that our church has been among those who have, for some one hundred years, proclaimed that truth, but are we doing as much about it as we should, or are we permitting others to carry the burden—those who apparently have more "oil in their lamps" or more of the Spirit of God? If we examine the records, we will find that other denominations that were copartners in the early teaching of the Second Coming have more members, and are more active than we.

Awake, Church of God! It is not yet too late. Prepare yourself in every way for the coming of Christ. Pray to God for your portion of "oil" for your "lamps." Obtain the Spirit of God fully, that you may be the more prepared for that great coming of Christ! May that great event occur soon, and may we not fail to meet the Bridegroom.

Conditional Immortality

In Three Parts—Part Two

By Arthur G. Young

AFTER saying, as I have, what Luke 17:21 does not mean, I suppose it would not be fair to leave it, as a negative answer is not sufficient. One cannot get away from the fact that in the Bible there are certain texts that have been the subject of much controversy, of which this is one. These texts usually render their true meaning when careful translations are made. I think it is true that a great many misconceptions, concerning what the Bible teaches, have their roots in the King James translation. We must always remember, when we speak of the authenticity and inspiration of the Bible, that this does not mean that all translations are correct. The original as written in the Hebrew, Chaldee, or Greek, I believe, was divinely inspired and written, and is authentic. A better translation of this text is, "The royal majesty of the Kingdom is in your midst," or, as another has it, "Among you."

Christ offered Himself to the Jews as their King and, if they had accepted Him, He would have been their Savior, personally as well as nationally. The Pharisees were the leading religious sect of the day, and were in religious and political power in Palestine in Christ's time. It was proper, therefore, for Christ to state to the Pharisees as He did, that He, the head and representative of the Kingdom of God that is to be established in accordance with God's plan, was in their midst talking to them, making a valid offer to them; but they would not have Him, and, in rejecting Him as both Savior and King, they rejected the Kingdom of God—bringing down on themselves both personal and national judgments. Remember, it was a personal offer of rulership to a nation to bring in a kingdom and it was, therefore, both a national and personal repudiation.

To consider that God's majestic plan and purpose for the Kingdom of God could be summed up as that which was in the heart of either a Christian or a Pharisee, to me shows a total lack of grasp of what is meant by the Bible doctrine of the Kingdom of God. It shows such an insignificant, petty, and futile conception that it is not even equal to what the mind of man has conceived as the ideal state, much less of God's. If this conception of the Kingdom of God is the best that God can do, then He could not justly claim to be God the Supreme, the Creator of the universe, humanity, and all other living organisms. He could not then claim to be the possessor of all-embracing wisdom and knowledge. These are strong words, but I stand on them.

The question which the gentleman asked me about the next world, however, does not call for a negative answer, but for a positive one. In the first place, I think the inquirer was not quite correct in using the word "world," if by use of same he meant the physical earth. Perhaps he really meant to use the word "age." However, I am not a mind reader; therefore, cannot fathom what he had in mind when he wrote his question. If he meant the physical earth, there is no question that the Bible teaches the earth has gone through various stages, and that there are stages yet to come.

To briefly summarize, I might say that, broadly speaking, it seems to be clear to me that Genesis states the following physical steps that have occurred:

- (1) "In the beginning God."
- (2) "God created the heaven and the earth."
- (3) Some great physical cataclysm in the heavens (the atmosphere surrounding the earth) and in the physical structure of the earth occurred, thus causing the earth to become "without form (waste), and void." This accounts for the upheavals of nature, the cessation of the prehistoric animals, and so forth. There is no time mentioned in the Bible pertaining to these events; so, there is no conflict in this respect with true scientific discoveries.
- (4) The second half of the second verse in Genesis, where it refers to the Spirit of God moving "upon the face of the waters," is the first sign of the succeeding reordering of a chaotic condition to an orderly one. The surface of the earth and the atmosphere above the earth had been seriously dislocated and made chaotic as above described. From then on, we have a succession of steps delineated. We see the present order of things created by the power of God. In the so-called "account of creation" in Genesis, please note there is no reference to anything below the surface of the earth, as it is solely a reorganization of that which was on and above the surface of the earth.
- (5) The Flood, which had a radical effect upon the living creatures on the earth, but which did not affect the structure of the earth, brought about some atmospheric changes.
- (6) This basic condition of the earth and heavens has existed to the present day, but it is prophesied there is a time to come in which the earth and the heavens (atmosphere surrounding the earth) are to be purified by fire. This does not mean the end of the earth, but a purification of the earth, in order to bring about perfect conditions. This is to be done so that the earth will be fitted for the "ages of the ages" to come. Here is where and how the removal of the curse, spoken of in Revelation 21, is to be accomplished.

(7) However, between this present age, which will come to a close with Christ's return, and the purification of the earth by fire as clearly described in 2 Peter 3, there is to be an age known as the Millennium, or one thousand years of rule by Christ and the church on this earth. During this time, Christ's Kingdom (i.e., the Kingdom of God) is to be a universal one on this earth, with nations and peoples living under the laws and rules of Christ and the church (i.e., the body of Christ). Christ is the head and the church is the body. They are joined together and they will comprise the complete ruling class. The leading nation during that period of time is to be Israel (the entire thirteen tribes) restored, reunited, and repentant.

Following the end of the Millennium is what the Bible describes as "the ages of the ages" and about which we have very little revealed. (See Emphatic Diaglott.) This is natural, as the present revelation deals with time since Adam, to and including Christ's rule in the Kingdom of God. The text that most clearly foreshadows the change at the end of the Millennium is found in 1 Corinthians 15:24-28, "Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule and all authority and power. For he must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. For he hath put all things under his feet. But when he saith all things are put under him, it is manifest that he is excepted, which did put all things under him. And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all."

Also, clear reference to vastly changed conditions in the "ages of the ages" is given in Revelation 21 and 22.

What Is the Gospel?

By S. J. Lindsay

---

THE word "gospel" is a much-misused word. We hear over the radio and in street talk statements like this: "Now that is the gospel truth," when the thing under consideration may not be truth at all. Some regard the word as relating to any kind of truth. This, also, is a mistake. Not all truth is gospel. Not all Bible truth is gospel. "Thou shalt surely die" is not good news to any of Adam's posterity. It is truth, but it is not good news.

"Gospel" means good news or glad tidings. The Scriptures always speak of it as the gospel. Scripturally speaking, there is only one gospel. Anything other than the gospel is a perverted gospel. A perverted gospel is no gospel at all.

The gospel was first preached to Abraham. When we examine to see of what truths that gospel consisted, we find simply that God spoke to him of an inheritance to come, which inheritance is to be attained by a revival from the dead to all who have entered into death at the time this gospel is to be realized. This good news is to the effect that God has planned deliverance from death to a life of incorruptibility, and to an inheritance in the earth to all who will comply with all the requirements. This has been made possible through Jesus Christ who has opened the way of life for us through His own death and resurrection. Relief from death and an eternal inheritance should be good news to anyone who appreciates life—a life free from all the ills of this life.

A young man on a bus recently gave us a tract. We looked it over. The title was, "Where Will You Spend Eternity—In Heaven or Hell?" It was one of those "hot hell" kind of tracts with a threat of eternal suffering which was amply stressed. There can be no good news in such a tract. It is not even truth. We scratched on the blank portion of the tract, "Please read John 3:13," and gave it back to him. It didn't start anything, and hasn't yet.

Why will people go so far out of their way to vilify our great God of love in such a way? This is quite commonly taught by the larger number of professing Christians, but that does not make it truth. In this story much more is said about the suffering in hell than of the pleasures of heaven. Too often the wish is father to the thought. It will be a great disappointment to many to find that many who these people have consigned to hell will never enter the hell of their conception. Paul says that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation. He calls a curse upon any other "gospel." That makes the gospel very important. There is no other way to life eternal, except through the gospel. Better study the matter, and make sure of your election to life eternal.

The Pilgrimage

By Mrs. William Stine

LET us turn back the pages of our history books to the seventeenth century. At this time our forefathers in England were being persecuted because they desired to worship God according to the dictates of their own hearts. The established church of England refused them this freedom. The few colonies already planted in America had religious freedom, so a small group of people banded themselves together and, after much delay, set sail for the New World. It took faith to put to sea in the tiny ship, the Mayflower. For sixty-three days they braved storms and waves which threatened to cut short their journey. Many of the group became discouraged and wanted to turn back. Others were sick. Finally, in December of the same year, they reached Plymouth. Before the winter ended more than half their members died. However, the survivors were thankful to God for blessing their great effort with success. At last they were home.

This account of their adventures recalls to our minds another and greater pilgrimage. When the Israelites journeyed from Egypt to Canaan, they, too, crossed a great sea. Many of them murmured against God when the enemy threatened to overpower them. They wished they had remained slaves in Egypt. When food was nowhere in sight, they showed no faith in the Lord. Sickness and death claimed many, because of their sin. By reason of repentance, God forgave their sins. He commanded the Tabernacle to be built, so that He might dwell with them. He led them on, until at last a few of them reached Canaan.

Yes, history tends to repeat itself! We who have taken upon ourselves the name of Christ are pilgrims. We are journeying through strange lands to a land we shall receive as our inheritance. David wrote in 1 Chronicles 29:15, "We are strangers before thee, and sojourners, as were all our fathers: our days on earth are as a shadow, and there is none abiding." Again, in Paul's Epistle to the Hebrews we read: "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth."

One definition given for "stranger" is: "One not admitted to fellowship." Therefore, a Christian is not a partaker of worldly things. We are in the world, but not a part of it. Please read John 17:14-17. Many of our members may be crossing the tempestuous sea of trials. While being tossed to and fro, they may lose courage and turn back. Others are greeted by temptation that bids them indulge in sin. In order to reach home, we must continue our pilgrimage. There is no time for a holiday of sin, for "no man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God." So,

No matter how difficult our journey may be,
Over rough, stony road, or tempestuous sea,
The command is, "Go on!"

There's no stopping now, or turning about,
For there rings in our ears our Captain's shout,
"Keep going on!"

At last we shall reach the end of the way,
Though our number be few, our Savior will say,
"Welcome, home!"

NOVEMBER

By Edith Andrew Burchell

I love November, for I know
The calm that heralds winter's snow;
In every barren tree I find
A balm that eases heart and mind.

I love November, for it doth hold
A peace and joy and wealth untold;
Chill winds that blow o'er land and sea
Take little cares that fretted me.

I love November, when timber leaves
Show patterns that my Savior weaves;
In every flower and bird and tree,
God sheweth that He cares for me.

SCHOOL LIGHTS

By "Chuck" Mills

I THANK GOD that I was born in the United States of America, the land with religious freedom and a free press. (You, who know me, realize how I feel about freedom of speech.) If our Pilgrim fathers, with their hardships, handicaps, inconveniences, and fear of Indian uprisings, saw proper to reserve one day especially for thanksgiving unto the Lord in appreciation of His goodness unto them, we with all our blessings should observe each day as one for giving thanks to God.

However, I am sure the Pilgrims did not limit it to one day.

If there ever was a time when we should find it worth while to be thankful, it is this year. With Europe in turmoil and strife and with people in sorrow and remorse throughout the world, the Christian of America truly should be thankful for the hope he has in Christ Jesus, and for the land that allows freedom to worship Him.

Have we ever sacrificed anything for Christ? There is no better time to make a generous contribution to our church than at Thanksgiving. Sacrifice at least one amusement a week, a show, a roller skate, or any other of our more or less unnecessary expenditures. If we do, God will bless us, for we are doing it for Him. (See Matt. 25:40.) Let us make this Thanksgiving Day the biggest and the best for us, for our church, and for our God, by really showing our veneration with the giving of thanks, the offering of sacrifices, and the bestowing of gifts unto God.

In enlightenment to those who have inquired and to those who are uncertain, we wish to explain that "Chuck" and Orris are synonymous with Mills.

Last week Terry, inquiring how to make a duck blind, was informed to poke its eyes out. . . . Speaking of bees, nectar, and honey, the other evening "Elzie" spoke up with, "My Honey is sweet and I have 'nectar'." . . . Francis' spirits are much higher since visiting "home?"

Did you know that the terms "red flannels" and "horse sense" were taken from the Bible? (See Prov. 31:21 and James 1:8.) Flaming youth did not mean Red Riding Hood? It is better to give than receive? Robin' Hood was not a hat snatcher? "Come up and see me sometime" was not said by Horace Greely? (He said, "Go West, young man.") Hogg-Penn topped the article of a newly married couple in a Cleveland newspaper, recently? The trend in America is toward dictatorship? A quack doctor is not a poultry veterinarian? In the "good old days" cars were used: the ford to cross rivers, the dodge to escape Indians, and the Plymouth (rock) to land on? I hope deso'ta thing doesn't get on ya noives.

BUILDING YOUR LIBRARY

Book Reviews

By Arlen Marsh

Simon and Schuster, publishers of the best-selling revision of the Bible "designed to be read as living literature," had no need, as far as this reviewer is concerned, to include in the book the special protection lines: "All rights reserved, including the rights to the introduction, the preface to each book, and the special selection, arrangement, and presentation of the text of this volume, and other new and supplementary material."

For the Simon and Schuster opus ($3.75) is worthy of quotation only in its actual Biblical text, and in its somewhat pedantic assurance that college students should have more knowledge of David, Jephthah, and Joshua, the son of Nun. Introduction, prefaces, and "other new and supplementary material" are about as truthful, scholastically and historically, as the preachment that Peter was the first Bishop of Rome.

The rearrangement of the King James text (which is followed exactly, except in Proverbs, Job, Ecclesiastes, and the Song of Songs, for which the English Revised text is used) perhaps makes the Bible more interesting to read; but it seems less scholarly, less authoritative, and considerably less comprehensible than the minor rearrangements by such translations as Moffatt's, Goodspeed's and Smith's, and the Twentieth Century version.

A good deal has been omitted from the complete Bible in order, say the editors, to make the entire volume more vital and compelling. Since the edition has been offered solely in the holy name of literature, and not because of any conviction that the Bible is either true or inspired, these omissions are replaced with portions of the apocryphal books of Judith, Tobit, and Susanna and the Elders. The chronology contained in the "new and supplementary material" of which the publishers are so proud is not wholly accurate.

Punctuation of the King James and English Revised texts is modern, from paragraphing to commas. This does make the Bible more readable; but the studied failure to include any marks of versification makes it wholly impossible to use the book for any reference purposes. On the whole, the Englishman, Moulton, does these things better.

PREPARED BY MADGE SAVAGE

"Take heed therefore how ye hear" (Luke 8:18).

Then the Harvest

One who spreads the gospel is a sower. The seed is the Word of God. The reader or listener is the one who will produce the yield. Some will bring forth much good, others little, some none at all, but the harvest will come.

What kind of a yield will you bring forth? Will you be as the clay that can be molded into a beautiful, useful life, or will you be like the clay that is lacking something and crumbles at the Master's touch?

The Word of God molds us, if we are trying to do His will. When we learnt a new thought from a verse of Scripture, we may make use of it—or forget it. We have a choice in everything. Pray that we may choose rightly.

We need to be more thankful for our many blessings. Peace and freedom of worship are two of these blessings. In some countries, little boys and girls are taken away from their mothers and fathers, and are educated for the government. We are so thankful that we have our homes with parents, children; and friends together!

Someone Has Said:

"Where there is Faith,
There is Love.
Where there is Love,
There is Peace.
Where there is Peace,
There is God.
Where there is God,
There is no need."

In return for these many blessings, we can remember to pray our thanks to God.

A Prayer of Thanksgiving

"We thank Thee then, O Father,
For all things bright and good,
For seedtime and harvest,
Our life, our health, our food;
No gifts have we to offer
For all Thy love imparts,
But that which Thou desirest,
Our humble, thankful hearts."

ECE Bible Study

The books of Prophecy are left in the Old Testament for us to learn. We shall learn the books of the Major Prophets this week. There are four major prophets, but five books. Yes, one wrote two books. The first is Isaiah. The fifth is Daniel. Look for the names of the other three books in between. Be sure to learn the books in order. This will help you to find quickly any book you need.

Favorite Bible Verses

Virgil Granquist of Saint Cloud, Minnesota, sends us Matthew 5:16, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." His brother, Duane's favorite verse is Psalm 116:1, "I love the Lord, because he hath heard my voice and my supplications." Send me your favorite.

Unholy Fire

Aaron, the first high priest of the Israelites, had four sons. The two oldest sons helped Aaron in the Tabernacle. They filled the bowls, or censers, with live coals from the altar. Then, the priests put incense upon these coals. The incense made a bright cloud and had a pleasant odor.

One day these men had been drinking wine, and their heads were not clear. So they took some other fire and went into the holy place to burn incense. God was angry with them. Some fire from this altar leaped out at them. They both fell down dead. Aaron was very sad. God wants everyone to do exactly as He says.

Moses, Aaron's brother, said, "After this let no priest drink wine or strong drink before he enters the Tabernacle." They were told to be sober and teach the people the laws God had given them.

Later, Aaron's two younger sons took their brothers places. They were very careful to do exactly as God had told them.

Shalt Thou Kill?

By Orris Mills

We pretend to be Christians, yet we ignore the very standards that Christ set for the individual to follow, by writing and preaching excuses for killing our fellow men in war. Jesus, as He went from place to place teaching, never once selfishly accepted anything. He always gave, even to the extent of His life. He taught us to love our enemies as well as our brethren. (See Matt. 5:44.)

Christ, although He knew He would be taken into custody, did not arm His followers to the teeth so that He might have prevented His capture. No, Christ practiced what He preached, "Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth: but I say unto you, That ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also" (Matt. 5:38, 39).

How can a true follower of Christ teach and preach the justification of one's going to war? Fighting, killing, and hate are taught by man. Love, sympathy, and kindness were taught by Christ. War means the forming of the lowest morals that are possible in mankind. I have compared the standards of men before they joined the army with their standards after their conversion to army life. War causes hardening of hearts, the destruction of that which is good and noble and pure and wholesome. It causes the deterioration of art, literature, and science. Yes, I catch your thought, dear reader, and you are right. We must have wars. The Bible says there shall be "wars and rumours of wars," but is a soldier of Christ one who takes life? (See James 5:20.) A nation must have defense, but can a Christian be a murderer? (Read 1 John 3:15.) There is a place for the soldier, but he is not synonymous with the Christian.

John the Baptist told the soldier to "do violence to no man." Some say, "Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's," and then are content to forget the part to be given to God (Matt. 22:21). Did Peter and John before the Sanhedrin, when warned not to preach any longer, quit? No, they said, "Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye" (Acts 4:19).

It has been said that the Christian wants all he can get from the government, with no thought of return. Doesn't the Christian pay taxes? The Christian pays as much for police protection as anyone else. The Christian contributes equally as well as any other citizen in maintaining highways and every other public service. Moreover, Christ said, "Ye are the salt of the earth." Let us keep our savor.

The church has a work to perform. The harvest of which Christ spoke in Matthew 9, I am sure, did not refer to the battlefield. Can you, dear brethren, with love for Christ, murder a man whom you do not even know?

"Come out from among them" (2 Cor. 6:17), and be "a peculiar people, zealous of good works" (Titus 2:14), and "give diligence to make your calling and election sure" (2 Peter 1:10). "Study to shew thyself approved" (2 Tim. 2:15), putting "on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand" in that day (Eph. 6:11).

The Other Solution

In tonight's paper, we read where a man being questioned told the deputy district attorney that he and his friend had been laid off, so they bought a jug of wine to drown their sorrows. When his friend made the comment that he wished he could climb over the window ledge and end it all, the first man obligingly assisted him over the brink. He gave him all the help he needed to solve his problem—one way.

When a friend comes to you and is weighed down with worldly problems and doesn't know how he is going to get straightened out, are you so weighed down with your own worldly problems and the worldly point of view that all you can do is to give him a worldly solution, which will leave him no better off than he was before? Or, are you always in a position to guide him to the Scriptures to find the answer to his problem in God's inspired Word? If we follow Hebrews 4:16, we will be better prepared to give a troubled friend the strength he needs. We will be able to present to him a plan that will end all of man's troubles, if man will only accept the plan—God's Kingdom.

Jesus not only said, "No man can serve two masters . . . ye cannot serve God and mammon," but also taught, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness."

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALENDAR OF EVANGELISM

November 17-30—Special meetings at Blood River Church, Hammond, La.
November 17-30—Annual Fall Meeting at the Brush Creek Church of God near Tipp City, Ohio.

FONTHILL, ONTARIO

"All work and no play" makes us dull, so the three classes, consisting of the young people of the church, had a Halloween party at Bro. and Sr. Raudall's hospitable home, the night after Halloween.

Many of the guests were in masquerade costumes. Games, contests, and group singing were enjoyed with many a laugh thrown in. The evening came to a very satisfying close with lunch. My! was that pumpkin pie and ice cream ever good!

A recently held Sunday school meeting made plans for Christmas. Our children's concert is to be held on Friday evening, December 20.

We have had a large thermometer looking at us from the front of our church for the last few weeks, and we, too, have been closely watching it. Winter is fast coming, and our old furnace has laid aside its work, having been a faithful servant for over thirty years. The red has been rising better this last week, and we hope final plans can soon be made for our new furnace.

We, in Canada, have had our Thanksgiving Day, but we wish our cousins in the States a happy time on their Thanksgiving Day.

Irene Holland, Reporter.

BLANCHARD, MICHIGAN

The Fall Conference held at the Church of God in Blanchard was brought to a close Sunday, November 3, with a large group from the Grand Rapids' Southlawn Park Church attending. Chicken dinner was served at noon by the Ladies' Aid, and was enjoyed by all.

The speaker for the week was Bro. Harvey U. Krogh, Jr., from Tipp City, Ohio. Most of his sermon topics were taken from Daniel. All who heard Bro. Krogh liked his sermons very much.

Bros. Charlie Egbert, Joe Wellhalf, and Clarence Lake repaired the chimney on the church before conference started. We also have new doors on the front, and basement entrances to the church. This was done by Bros. Bert Sheets and Roy Reynolds.

Little Dolene Ward has been on the sick list for several weeks with whooping cough.
 M. Windweh.

"Prophecy is being rapidly fulfilled. We must be watching and ready for the coming of Christ, lest coming suddenly He should find us sleeping."—Vaughn Long, Perryville, Ky.

EDEN VALLEY, MINNESOTA

We closed our evangelistic meetings yesterday, November 10. A baptismal service was conducted in the afternoon, at which time the following seven converts were added to the fold: Mr. and Mrs. Guy Mills, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hurd and daughter June, Fern Brossard, and Stanley Ross. All may be addressed at Eden Valley, Minn., except Mr. Ross, whose address is 425 E. Fourth St., Litchfield, Minn.
 Walter Wiggins, Pastor.

RIPLEY, ILLINOIS

The Ripley church enjoyed a visit of two of the Bible Training School students. They were Alan McLain and Francis Burnett.

Bro. Francis gave a short explanation of the activities of the School, after which Bro. Alan gave a sermon on "The Kingdom of God," which was much enjoyed by all.

Sr. Helen Schafer of Springfield, Mo., is spending several months visiting relatives in and near Ripley. She attends church services quite regularly. Sr. Mary Laning is leaving soon for California, where she plans to spend the winter with her son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Laning.

Sr. John Long is a patient in St. Francis Hospital at Macomb, Ill. She is recovering nicely and expects to soon return to her home.

Bro. and Sr. William Densmore observed their fifty-seventh wedding anniversary at their home in Ripley, Sunday, November 3. They received congratulations from many of their friends. May they have many more anniversaries.

The "Co-Workers," our ladies' aid, met at the home of Mrs. Frank Laning recently, and canned one hundred quarts of pear honey for General Conference. We hope to add other fruits and foods to this supply.

Mrs. Thomas Lewis, Secy.

THANKSGIVING

"Give thanks unto the Lord; for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever" (Psalm 106:1).

Thanksgiving Day will soon be here, but let us give thanks every day of our lives. We have many things for which to be thankful: health, strength, our daily food, and freedom of worship. Our government has not suppressed or compelled us to accept state religion, as some countries have. We should respect the laws of our government as long as they do not conflict with the laws of God. Should the time come when we would be forced to worship contrary to God's Word, we should refuse, even if we have to part with natural life.

Also, we thank God for His abundant mercy and the precious promises given through our Lord Jesus Christ. In everything, by prayer and supplication and thanksgiving, let our requests be known to God. (See Eph. 5:20.) We need Him every day and every hour. All the beauty and happiness we seek, and every treasure we would own, comes from Him. There is rich completeness found in Him alone, and we cannot find perfection elsewhere—only in Thee, Lord, just in Thee. Catharine Davis.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

"I think the Bible Training School is a splendid undertaking, and that it should be encouraged in every way."—Thelma Moore, Mineral, Calif.

Bro. and Sr. Harvey U. Krogh, Jr., Tipp City, Ohio, visited a few days at the William Reynolds' home in Oregon, Ill., Sr. Krogh staying with her mother while the Elder attended the Ministerial Conference at Aurora College, Aurora, Ill.

Bro. Harry Gockler, pastor of our two churches near Hammond, La., writes: "The meetings thus far are progressing well, and the attendance is most gratifying. Bro. Lyon has been preaching some very timely and forceful sermons, and we all are receiving spiritual uplift."

The main differences between war and murder are the dimensions.

"I enjoy the many splendid articles served us weekly as spiritual food, and pray God's blessing on all the writers."—Lillian S. Railton, Fonthill, Ontario, Canada.

Fieldman James W. McLain plans evangelistic meetings at the North Salem church in Indiana for two weeks the fore part of December, and a little later will probably work in a similar effort at Kokomo, Ind.

Bro. and Sr. Railsback of Los Angeles are vacationing at the home of their daughter, Sr. Thelma Moore, Mineral, Calif.

Bro. James A. Patrick, Ashland, Ohio, is supplying for Bro. M. W. Lyon at Golden Rule Church of God, Cleveland, Ohio, while the latter is conducting evangelistic meetings in Louisiana.

Bro. and Sr. F. L. Marsh, Oregon, Ill., went by bus to Grinnell, Iowa, November 15, from where they will accompany their son Ieland and his wife on a vacation trip of two weeks to California. . . . What is better than to have children who love and remember?

Minnesota has recently experienced one of its worst blizzards. Nearly all communication, except radio, was impaired if not wholly blocked, and many deaths are being reported.

MOTHER EARTH

By Mrs. Mae Nedrow

This Great Earth groans within her
As she views a world of sin,
Where cannons roar and airplanes soar—
Then she stifles a sob within.
Oh, Great Earth, with a great heartache,
Thou art with vast armies incased;
Strife and travail soon shall be ended;
All sorrow and pain be erased.
Though war clouds hover o'er you,
Sirens shriek, bombs burst in air,
The faint flush of dawn is approaching—
Lasting peace! from a true God who cares!

MAE PRIME HORTON

Mae Prime was the youngest daughter of Elder John T. Prime, who preached for many years in Nebraska, Iowa, and Kansas. She was born in the old farm home of the Primes near Nevada, Iowa, November 17, 1873, the family moving a few years later to Furnas County, Nebr., where they thereafter made their home.

Sr. Horton died at her home in Lincoln, Nebr., October 26, 1940, after a severe and lingering illness, hearing her suffering to the last with patience and fortitude.

She leaves a son, John, a daughter, Veda, and two grandchildren, Jack and Kay Horton. There are two sisters, Mrs. Ida Marsh of Oregon, Ill., and Mrs. Elizabeth Adams of San Anselmo, Calif.; two brothers, James M. Prime of Omaha, Nebr., and Carr S. Prime of Seward, Nebr. There are also many near relatives in Iowa and Illinois.

Funeral services were held by the writer at Lincoln, October 28, and Sr. Horton was then taken to Nevada, Iowa, to be interred beside her parents, where a short service was held at the grave. The service was based upon the reading of 1 Corinthians 15, and an analysis of the words of comfort in 1 Thessalonians 4:13-18, the main thought being that the dead are asleep in the calm and restful sleep of death, to be awakened by the descending Lord, when He shall call His sleepers to meet Him, to be reunited to part no more.

Being well acquainted with Sr. Horton, the writer remembers her devotion and cheerful Christian spirit with much appreciation, which gives us encouragement and hope in our treasured remembrance of her life. She always entertained the writer in her home when at Lincoln to minister, and services were held in her home at times.

The family are all sustained by the blessed hope. J. W. Williams.

TRAINING SCHOOL NEWS

Sunday, November 10, the students of the Home were very fortunate to have had the privilege of entertaining Barbara Fish of the Bible Training School, her mother of Colo., Iowa, and Orpha and Diane LeMasurier of Oregon, Ill.

Profitable and interesting meetings were enjoyed by the class last Tuesday, November 12, at Aurora College in Aurora, Ill.

Sunday, November 17, found Celaine Randall preaching at Rockford, Ill., Ellsworth Routson at Grand Rapids, Mich., Richard Smith at Dixon, Ill., and your reporter at Macomb, Ill.

Thanksgiving vacation starts Wednesday noon, November 20.

Orris J. Mills, Reporter.

Mrs. George Reighard, Delta, Ohio, sends her copies of The Restitution Herald to a Methodist minister, after she has finished reading them.

INA HERSHBERGER

Ina Andrew Hershberger, fourth child of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Andrew of Chana, Ill., died October 31, 1940, in Hollywood, Calif. She had only recently left Illinois to attend dedication ceremonies of a famed building in the West of which her daughter's husband, Don Riha, was the artist and designer. It was during the ceremonies that she very suddenly fell asleep in death.

Soon after her marriage to Frank Hershberger, she went to live in the South. After a few years there, they returned to Illinois, since which time her home has been in the North.

She is survived by one daughter, Marjorie Riha, of Hollywood, Calif.; one son Francis who went with his mother to California a few weeks ago; one brother, A. F. Andrew (Bert) of Chicago, Ill., and two sisters, Amy Andrew Dailey of Rockford, Ill., and Mabel Andrew of Chicago, Ill.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer, Wednesday, November 6, at the Farrell Funeral Home, Oregon, Ill.

Sydney E. Magaw.

LILLIAN L. RAYLS

Mrs. Lillian Rayls passed away at St. Joseph's Hospital, October 30, after a four-weeks' illness of pneumonia. She was united with the Church of God in Kokomo, Ind., December 3, 1938.

She leaves her husband and three children: Frank, five years of age; Charlotte, three years of age, and Nancy Jane, two months old. She will be sadly missed in the church as well as in her home.

Funeral services were held at the church, in which she so faithfully served, by the writer. A host of friends join with the bereaved husband in mourning her death. Such sorrow will prevail so long as our Lord tarries. Sr. Rayls was laid to rest in Liberty Cemetery to await that great day of judgment.

Elder O. J. Parker.

The Restitution Herald is the official organ of the General Conference of the Church of God. It is published by the National Bible Institution at Oregon, Illinois.

L. E. Conner Business Manager

Subscription Rate.—51 issues per annum, $2.00.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him, (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

My Thanksgiving Offering

God, the Giver of "every good gift" has blessed us during the year with more than necessary "food and raiment." Regardless of the cloudy horizon, God has thus far favored us with peace and Christian liberty. It is not only appropriate at this harvest season to give a token of our appreciation, but it is unbecoming of sincere Christians not to do so.

We Thank God!

By C. E. Lapp

"O praise the Lord, all ye nations: praise him, all ye people. For his merciful kindness is great toward us: and the truth of the Lord endureth for ever. Praise ye the Lord" (Psalm 117)

AS THE season of Thanksgiving closes, we have counted some of our blessings. The longer we meditated, the more we realized that God has been especially good. It creates in our heart a fear lest, by some selfish act, we may bring the displeasure of God upon us.

We thank and praise the Lord for His grace that is daily extended to us. Surely God's favor has been rich to even include us, for the many foolish things contained in our lives will never merit what He offers. "By grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast" (Eph. 2:8, 9).

Thank God for His love! "God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us" (Rom. 5:8). While trying to visualize someone in this world who would care enough for us to die to save us, we can think only of those very near us by nature. Even they, if put to the supreme test, might fail; but Jesus never fails, and before we were born or thought of, the Savior died for us.

Thank God for His mighty promises! They are mighty because none other could ever make such, and expect to fulfill them. Promises have given us hope, and we are to be saved through that hope which is of God. He has said, "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee. So that we may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me" (Heb. 13:5, 6). There are so many today who forsake their friends, and often, when put to a severe trial, forsake their loved ones, instead of helping to bear their burdens. "When my father and my mother forsake me, then the Lord will take me up" (Psalm 27:10). Thank God for the Friend "that sticketh closer than a brother" (Prov. 18:24).

Thank God that Jesus is coming again. Everyone is beginning to realize more and more that no ordinary man in this world is capable of correcting the ills of human nature. Only the Savior will be able to turn the great tide from human hate and destruction to love and peace. Our imperfections, aches, pains, diseases, and weaknesses of the flesh will all be taken away in a moment of time. "Our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body" (Phil. 3:20, 21). Shame and disgrace will give place to glory and honor when Jesus comes.

Thank God that Christ will soon be "KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS" (Rev. 19:16). All will worship and serve Him from the least unto the greatest. There will be no more armies to destroy and maim and kill. There will be no more autocratic rulers who will make their people mere slaves, but righteous judgments will be in effect, and the "earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea" (Isa. 11:9).

Thank God, He is no respecter of persons! It makes no difference with Him if we have good clothes or poor clothes, if we drive a Cadillac or have to walk, if we eat mush and milk or have choice dainties that may be provided, if we are beautiful or ugly, if we are brilliant or dull, if we are born in poverty or in wealth. None of these would move God to show a preference for any man, but "in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him" (Acts 10:35). This course is open to all, and, when the Master lived on the earth, the common people heard Him gladly! May the Lord help us to be common in this sense.

Thank God for the privilege of being reared in a Christian home with all of its (Please turn to page 11)

Neither Surprised Nor Disappointed

The present evils neither surprise nor disappoint the student of prophecy. In fact, one who knows the truth knows that "the earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard" (Isa. 24:20) before "the Lord of hosts shall reign in mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously" (v. 23). The night must fully pass before there will be the breaking of the Day, and those who await the Day have no fears during the night.

The Bible does not inform us as to whether or not God told Noah that his preaching would be almost fruitless. We know that only seven souls (Noah being the eighth person saved) were moved by the preaching of Noah to enter into the ark. True, God told Noah that mankind would be destroyed with the Flood, but it is altogether possible that this "preacher of righteousness" (2 Peter 2:5) entertained some little hope of converting more than the members of his own family. There is not, however, any indication that Noah complained or was in any sense dispirited by his utter failure to correct the evils of his day.

Concerning the present dispensation, God has fully foretold that there will be only a few, relatively speaking, interested in and prepared for the coming of Christ. Someone asked Jesus, "Are there few that be saved?" Our Lord answered, "Strive to enter in at the strait gate: for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able" (Luke 13:21, 24). Likewise, in Matthew 7:13, 14, Jesus said, "Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat: because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." To believe Jesus is a big part of being a Christian.

The Apostle Paul, likewise, prophesied: "In the last days perilous times shall come" (2 Tim. 3:1), because people will be, among other things, "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof" (vv. 4, 5). Paul further prophesied: "The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine . . . and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables" (4:3, 4).

The gospel, not fables, is "the power of God unto salvation" (Rom. 1:16).

"A Crooked and Perverse Nation"

Foreseeing that Christians would nowhere in this age find the perfect rest for which they seek and will ultimately find in the Kingdom of God, the Apostle Paul besought us: "Do all things without murmurings and disputings: that ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world; holding forth the word of life" (Phil. 2:14-16). To attempt to correct the evils of this present "crooked and perverse" generation by the use of any other means than "holding forth the word of life" would soon divide the body of Christ into "murmurings and disputings" as to how the work should be done. Our main duty before God is to hold aloft the Word of life as the torchlight which alone can guide through this dark night.

"If—and it is a big "IF"—all members of the Church of God, as we know it, had been agreed and had voted for either one or the other of the presidential candidates, the united vote would have been so small as to have in no sense changed the result. This is more or less true in respect to the Church of God being able to change any of the major issues or problems of the present "crooked and perverse" generation. When we centralize our every effort in proclaiming the Word of God, we shall most nearly fulfill our duty to God and men, and most brightly "shine as lights in the world" (v. 15). Jesus said, "Let the dead bury the dead," and commissioned His people, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature"!

British Appreciation

Words of Life, the official organ of the Conditional Immortality Mission in England, recently published the letter from the General Conference of the Church of God, Oregon, Illinois, which expressed a desire to help possible refugee children from homes of the Mission. The British editor expressed appreciation of our interest. If occasion arises, our Refugee Committee will be put to work.

TRUE DEVOTION

By S. J. Lindsay

"Keep thy foot when thou goest to the house of God, and be more ready to hear, than to give the sacrifice of fools: for they consider not that they do evil. Be not rash with thy mouth, and let not thine heart be hasty to utter any thing before God: for God is in heaven, and thou upon earth: therefore let thy words be few" (Ecclesiastes 5:1,2).

JESUS taught, "When ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do: for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking" (Matt. 6:7). In the matter of devotion to God, the consensus of thought in Scripture is that we should give attention to God in humbly listening to Him, having little to say as we learn of Him. We are urged continually to meditate much upon what He has spoken to us.

In our initial text, taken from the writings of Solomon, we are admonished, "Keep thy foot when thou goest to the house of God." In other words, let us watch our course, let us be mindful that we are going to the house of God, and let our words and thoughts be governed accordingly. For us to speak without first having learned what God has to say to us is to offer the sacrifice of fools. We are admonished not to be rash with our mouth, nor to be hasty in our heart toward God.

It is remarkable to what extent Jesus changed the matter of worship when He came into the world. Not only the heathen, who often spent whole days in prayer, as in the case of the prophets of Baal who sought to have their gods consume their offering when challenged by Elijah, but the Pharisees as well, were accustomed to offer long prayers in public places to be heard of men. Jesus changed all this. Instead of praying on the streets to be heard of men, Jesus recommended that they go to a place of quiet and there, alone with God, pour out their hearts to God. In the quiet chamber we may make ourselves heard of God, even with groanings which cannot be uttered. God knows our hearts before we speak. He knows our needs, and we are told that if we follow this advice of our Leader, God who sees and hears in secret will reward us openly.

"Ask, and it shall be given unto you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you: for every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened" (Matt. 7:7, 8). When as a teacher in the common schools years ago, pupils came with problems which they could not solve, the sentiment of the preceding verses was given to them. We would ask them, "What does your author say about it? What principles have you overlooked or forgotten?" They were thus directed to seek and knock until they should find the knowledge required. There can be no more profitable devotion to God than to study His Word and to meditate upon it.

"Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth," was Paul's advice to Timothy. The Word of Truth needs to be divided to be properly understood. To do this, we must be devoted to study and to the comparison of scripture with scripture until we are possessed of the truth that God wants us to have. Again, "Sanctify the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear." In this text we have wrapped together the thought of wisdom in the Word of God and a humble state of mind, without which no servant of God can be of much service.

One of the most outstanding characteristics of Jesus rests in the fact that when asked a question upon any matter of truth, His answer came not from His opinion or notion of things, but, rather, He answered with a quotation from the Scriptures. He put to silence both the Pharisees and Sadducees by quoting to them the Scriptures, or asking their interpretation of certain texts.

In praying, we should be careful to ask of God that which is in harmony with His will. We can know His will only by having knowledge of His plan and will concerning us. James gives voice to this thought by saying to his people, "Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts."

True devotion to God consists of more than study, prayer, and meditation. These only prepare us for real service. Never has there been greater opportunity than now to show to the world of mankind that we are of God—that we have been to Him and learned of Him. Proper conduct before men speaks louder than our words. Are we zealous of good works? Do we seek the welfare of others, without seeking profit from them? Are we so occupied with "making a living" that we have no time to spend in seeking the welfare of others? Do we love people as He loved people? This is true devotion to God. The widow's mite was great in that with it went the heart of the widow. Proper devotion is true love. The giving of the gift means little, (Please turn to page 10)

The Light of the Tabernacle

By C. E. Randall

LIGHT is essential to life. If our earth were clothed in darkness for a prolonged period, all types of life would cease. For the maintenance of the "life that now is" light is necessary. The life of man, if complete in the will of God, is twofold: natural and spiritual. The man who lives on the plane of the natural, dwelling solely in the environment of the fleshly, is living only a half life. He is in darkness, yes, in gross darkness such as will eventually cover all the people on the earth (Isa. 60:2). On the other hand, the person who lives not by bread alone, but by every word that proceeds out of the mouth of God (Matt. 4:4), lives in the light of God's countenance; and walks in the light, even as God is in the light (1 John 1:5-7).

There are many symbols of the light of life as it is in God through Christ. None are more impressive than the golden candlestick in the holy place of the Tabernacle. It stood on the left-hand side as approach was made to the holy of holies. It was the only light by which Aaron and the priests had vision in this room. The candelabra had seven candlesticks. The number seven is not without significance. Seven is an oft-used number in the Bible. Dr. Bullinger attaches to it the meaning of "spiritual perfection." I believe this is the commonly accepted thought among our students of the Word. Allowing that the seven-pointed candelabra represented divine perfection, we find that there is an imperfect light that is proceeding from this seat of perfection.

God's Word Is Light

In many different places the Bible is spoken of as light. Critics may rail against it, professed Christians may doubt part of it, but to us it is a perfect source of light. "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path" (Psalm 119:105). The Church of God walks in this light. We may be an imperfect light, but the source of our light is the essence of perfection. The more this Word shines into our minds and is worked into our lives, the brighter becomes our light. "The entrance of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding unto the simple" (Psalm 119:130). The mere indwelling of the Word will not give light, unless we speak according to the Word. "To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them" (Isa. 8:20).

As the candlesticks gave light to the priests as they ministered in the holy place of the Tabernacle, so the Bible gives light to the "spiritual house," otherwise called "an holy priesthood" (1 Peter 2:5). This light must not be busheled. It is most necessary, for it is the only light which the world has in this age of sin. Jesus stated the thought in simple terms when He said, "Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid" (Matt. 5:14). True, Jesus is spoken of as the "Light of the world," but His light shines through His church. Therefore, "let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

Being children of the light, we are not in darkness concerning the things which are to take place in the end-time (1 Thess. 5:4, 5). That which appears to the world as darkness, is to the church light. Jesus taught that when there is "upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity . . . men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth," His people should "look up, and lift up (their) heads; for (their) redemption draweth nigh" (Luke 21:25-28).

The Word that is in so many people today, doesn't seem to give forth light. Jesus touched upon this when He said, "If therefore the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness!" (Matt. 6:23.) The Bible is being sold more widely, and the number of volumes that leaves the presses is growing every year; still, the light that comes from the Word is becoming smaller all the time. How can we account for this disparity? Is it because the Word is not rightly divided, and the light becomes darkness? Why is it that when the Book that gives light is spread over the whole earth, the earth is becoming covered with darkness pertaining to the things of God? Can it be that the leaders who are giving this Word are themselves leaders of the blind? (See Matt. 15:14.) Keep the light of God's truth shining!

Light in the Holy of Holies

The light in the holy of holies was supernatural. It came from between the cherubim and over the mercyseat. It was the Shekinah glory that lighted this room. This symbolizes the true light, for "God is light" (1 John 1:5). It also foreshadowed Christ, who is the light of the world (John 1:9). This light which proceeds from the Father and the Son will be the light of the New Jerusalem, and the saved nations will walk in the light of the city (Rev. 21:23, 24). God is light—Christ is light—Their Word is light—Their people are light!

Current Events and Prophecy

By Celaine Randall

THE writer has secured the following events from a periodical entitled Contemporary Jewish Record, and the prophecies from the up-to-date Word of God.

In Italy:

One third of the Jewish population of Trieste, about sixteen hundred persons, has been arrested, and all Jews between sixteen and sixty years of age in Fiume and Abazzia have been taken into custody. Drastic measures were also taken against foreign Jews resident in the country. Out of three thousand persons in this category, some one thousand were rounded up by the end of July and placed in concentration camps or in small villages. As a result of Italy's racial policy, some fifty-five hundred conversions to Christianity were reported by August, 1940. This represented over eleven per cent of the Jewish population as listed in 1938.

In Matthew 23:37-39, we read: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate. For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord."

The trend is toward a leader that is more reliable than man. Some of the Jews are realizing that their only hope is in the Second Advent of their Messiah.

In Germany:

The Jews are now permitted to visit the stores only between the hours of 4:00 p.m. and 5:00 p.m. On August 22, the Jews were ordered to surrender their telephones.

The Nazi Institute for the Research Into Jewish Influence in the Life of the German Church produced a revised rendering of the New Testament Gospels in which all matter of Jewish character, including Jesus' pedigree, was systematically eliminated in order to accommodate them, so it was said, to the spirit of the modern German.

This recalls to our mind Revelation 22:18, 19, where we read: "I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book: and if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book."

In France:

On July 1, it was reported that there were as many as six million refugees massed in the southern districts, anxiously awaiting a chance to escape. Barely half of the country's three hundred fifty thousand Jews managed to escape the Nazi terror, the rest remaining in the occupied area. The roundup of Jewish refugees from Germany proceeded. On July 2, it was reported that agents had been brought to Paris especially for this purpose, and the following day it was learned that fear of such measures had led to eight hundred suicides in the capital, alone, during the twenty-four hours preceding the entry of the Nazis.

In Deuteronomy 28:66 we read: "Thy life shall hang in doubt before thee; and thou shalt fear day and night, and shalt have none assurance of thy life." These reports fulfill this prophecy, and many other prophecies which have similar thought.

In England:

Nearly half the German and Austrian refugees in Great Britain have now been interned. Official figures issued on July 9 put their number at date at more than twenty-five thousand, and on August 14 it was announced that nine thousand one hundred twenty persons (including Italians), considered potentially "dangerous," were deported to Canada. Germany or Austria to England to Canada! Ship ahoy! Where next?

In Deuteronomy 28:64, we have the prophecy of this very situation. We quote: "The Lord shall scatter thee among all people, from the one end of the earth even unto the other; and there thou shalt serve other gods, which neither thou nor thy fathers have known, even wood and stone."

Public reaction to this policy resulted in a storm of protest. Some London newspaper writers asked pointedly why Sir Oswald Mosely and Captain Ramsay, leading lights of the British Union of Fascists, should be allowed to live luxuriously in Brixton jail, while famous anti-Nazi (Jews) were confined in misery behind barbed wires.

In Palestine:

It was revealed on August 12, that during the past eleven months twenty-four thousand Jews immigrated into the Holy Land. Of these, sixteen thousand were legal entrants and eight thousand "illegal." The addition of the newcomers brought the total of the Jewish popula-

“Ye Must Be Born Again”

By Charles Lapp

“Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God” (John 3:3).

WE HAVE a very interesting and important event recorded in John 3:1-7; if we do not heed it, we are very likely to miss the Kingdom of God, the reward of the saints. Nicodemus, who was a ruler of the Jews, came to Jesus by night—exactly as most Jews do today when they want to hear the gospel. Why do they do that? Because they are afraid to let their people know they are interested in Jesus. So it was with Nicodemus. He was afraid to let the people see him talking with Jesus. In these first seven verses of this third chapter of John, Jesus made it very plain to Nicodemus that he must be born again. “Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God” (v. 5). We see by this verse that two births are necessary, if one expects to enter the Kingdom of God. No other way is provided.

First, we must believe something. Let us see what this is. In Romans 10:9, 10, we read: “If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.” Then again, “He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned” (Mark 16:16). Believers must be baptized. “Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost” (Acts 2:38).

From the foregoing verses, we can see what we must do. We must confess the Lord Jesus. We cannot do this unless we believe in him, so we must truly believe in Him. Then we must repent. When we repent, we decide to walk in a new life. To walk in a new life, we must be baptized. “Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life” (Rom. 6:4). This, we would say, is “being born of water.” “If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new” (2 Cor. 5:17). By being baptized, we become new—as is a newborn babe. We are then babes in Christ.

In Galatians 6:15, Paul says: “In Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision, but a new creature.” What does Paul mean by these words? Simply this: we can do all the good works we want to, but they will not save us. It takes an obedient action on our part which will give us newness of life. Paul tells us in Titus 3:4, 5, that it is through the kindness of God our Savior that we are saved, not by our works of righteousness. Verse 5 reads, “Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost.” Again we read: “Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently: being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever” (1 Peter 1:22, 23). We must be born again.

When Paul and Silas were in prison, the jailer took advantage of this new birth by water. Read Acts 16: 30-33. John says in 1 John 5:18, “We know that whosoever is born of God sinneth not; but he that is begotten of God keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not.” Isn’t it wonderful to know that the wicked one will not touch us, if we keep ourselves pure after we are born again?

Now, let us see when we are to be born of the Spirit. Let us consider what manner of people we shall be when we are born of the Spirit. “The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit” (John 3:8). Can any of us of the Church of God, or persons from any other church come and go as the wind, and not be seen by someone else? No, we cannot. Then we must not yet be born of the Spirit. Let us read 1 Corinthians 15:20, “Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept.” From this, we see that Christ has been born of the Spirit. Now, when shall we receive this birth? Let us read from 1 Corinthians 15:51, and we shall see when this new birth (born of the Spirit) will take place. “Behold, I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." We shall be born anew, or changed, at the first resurrection. Then Jesus will give His saints a new body, a spiritual body. Will we be watching when Jesus comes, that we may be worthy to obtain this new birth?

The foregoing scriptures show that the two births are necessary for a Christian. The birth by water comes by our own obedience. If we are obedient, Jesus will give us the birth of the Spirit, and a home in the Kingdom of God. There is one thing we must be particularly careful about: "Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves" (Matt. 7:15). These ravening wolves are people who come to us as Christians of our faith, or pretending they are of our faith, but when they gain our confidence, they begin to teach us false doctrine which will lead us away from the fold of God. So, brethren, let us beware. "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world" (1 John 4:1).

"Everlasting Punishment"

By Rufus A. Curtis

---

"These shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal" (Matt. 25:46).

THE question propounded many centuries ago by Philip to "a man of Ethiopia," "Understandest thou what thou readest?" (Acts 8:30), is not an obsolete question yet. The advocates of inherent immortality for our race, when asked the above question, will, without hesitation, answer most assuredly that we do, for they (the wicked) "shall go away into everlasting punishment." Then, they assume or infer that pain and punishment are synonymous. They are not equivalent terms.

A criminal may be placed in jail and deprived of his liberty, or compelled to pay a certain sum of money for his crime, but that may not necessarily involve any physical pain whatever. The advocates of the immortality of the soul and eternal torment for the wicked have based their arguments upon assumption and not Biblical facts. They assume that our race is now immortal and that their everlasting punishment will consist in the infliction of eternal torment, without any alleviation, mitigation, or end! They assume that unrepentant sinners, from Cain down through the centuries, are now undergoing such torment, with no prospects of its ever coming to an end through the endless "generations of the age of the ages." (See Diaglott translation, Eph. 3:21.)

"O! A wonderful stream is the river of time,
As it flows through the realm of tears;
With a musical rhythm and a magical rhyme,
And a grander sweep and a surge sublime,
As it blends with the ocean of years."

To be forewarned is to be forearmed. (See Matt. 24:24, 25.) "The paths of life" lead to morality, and not to degradation of character. (Prov. 2:11, 17-19.) The picture is not complete when we "cease to do evil"; we must also

"learn to do well." (See Isa. 1:16-18; Rom. 12:9; John 8:10, 11.) "Will ye pollute me among my people for handfuls of barley and for pieces of bread, to slay the souls that should not die, and to save the souls alive that should not live, by your lying to my people that hear your lies?" (Ezek. 13:19.)

Does not this departure "from the faith" strengthen "the hands of the wicked, that he should not return from his wicked way, by promising him life?" (See 1 Tim. 4:1; Ezek. 13:22; Isa. 8:20.) Our "eternal salvation" is too important for each of us to rest upon assumption, or "science falsely so called." (Heb. 5:9; 1 Tim. 6:20, 21.) To conclude otherwise is too much like hanging a criminal, and later having a day "appointed" to ascertain his guilt or innocence. (Acts 17:30-32; 1 Thess. 5:21.)

The text that heads this article does not state the nature of the punishment, but only gives its duration. The goals of both righteous and wicked persons are graphically portrayed in the above text of Scripture. It furnished a divine reply to Peter's question, "What shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God?" (1 Peter 4:17.) The punishment of the wicked and slothful servants will be as enduring as the reward of the righteous, but they reap opposite destinies! Only one class, the righteous, goes "into life," qualified by the adjective, "eternal." The other class goes into the aionian cutting off from life. (See Emphatic Diaglott on this text.)

The condition "both of the just and unjust" (Acts 24:15), during the intermediate state of man while in sheol or hades, between the events of death and resurrection, precludes the idea of either class being dealt with before they are "brought forth" from that state! Those

In Three Parts—Part Three

By Arthur G. Young

THE Kingdom of God during the Millennium will comprise nations and peoples, and will have perfectly righteous, economic, moral, and spiritual laws with voluntary or enforced obedience—if the latter is necessary to these laws. In very truth, the law will go forth from Zion, that is, from Jerusalem, where Christ will rule from the Capital City of the earth to all the earth. There is no use in using the word “law” if there is no need for law, but the Bible clearly shows there will be a need for righteous laws and for the observance of these laws by the nations and the peoples on earth during the reign of Christ. (Read Zechariah 14, and many other texts, which will have a literal fulfillment during the thousand-year period.) All of this organization, of course, will be for the blessing of the peoples and for the glorification of God, but it will be orderly, systematic, righteous, and all-powerful.

The Kingdom of God most certainly does have its spiritual aspect, as well as the material. As I have said, I believe the Kingdom of God is to be positive, real, and inhabited by real personalities, nevertheless, the fundamental basis of rule will be spiritual, as the spiritual is always superior to the material, and there is no inharmony in the joining of the spiritual and material. We see this all about us, but the union of the spiritual and material will be perfected in that Kingdom which is to come.

Men have dreamed dreams of the ideal State. They have even reduced them to writings, such as Plato’s “Republic,” Sir Thomas Moore’s “Utopia,” and many other writings of less fame, but the ideal State has never come into existence. Why? Men have lacked the power, as well as the all-embracing wisdom, to bring their ideals into actuality. These two essentials will be supplied by Christ when He returns, as He will use them in the exercises of His possession of all authority and power. He is the embodiment of the Father, and will have the divine wisdom with which to exercise His all-embracing power.

Man has never been able to eradicate all the great tragedies of humanity, such as war, death, sickness, and sin—the latter being the root cause of all the others. It will take Christ’s divine and all-embracing power to correct this, and He alone can and will do it. The intense practicality of the Kingdom of God on this earth, made subject to the divine rule, power, and wisdom of our glorified Lord, should be immediately apparent. While we cannot now understand in full the results from such a changed condition, we can, nevertheless, grasp that if Christ is the Son of God, and if He is the possessor of all power, wisdom, and authority, there is a reasonable basis for a very real and tangible Kingdom of God. In this Kingdom, we, in our perfected personalities, both individually and collectively, can be partners with God in the future working out of the plan and purpose that He has. It is a magnificent and real vista that opens before our eyes, and one that, when we are actual participants, will completely satisfy every true and reasonable longing of our entire being.

Concerning the second half of the gentleman’s question in which he asks what the religious leaders are doing to prove that the next world exists, I really do not feel myself competent to answer, as I am not one of the religious leaders. Frankly, however, I do not see how the religious leaders can prove that the next world or age now exists, and I do not see it now existing; so, perhaps he should revise this portion of his question.

In closing his question, the inquirer states that he desires faith to believe in the life after death. I think what I have already said will give him an answer to this. For one to have faith concerning an immortal life in immortal personality after this life, (by this I do not mean a continuous life in personality, but rather, the present life, then an interval which we call death in which there is cessation of life in personality, and later a resurrection of the individual to a new and immortal life), one must, in the last analysis, trust the Almighty God. We do not have, nor do we see any evidence now in ourselves that we have in actual possession immortal life. As we cannot give it to ourselves, it must come from outside us at a time still future and from a superior power. In short, if we are to have it in actual possession, it must come from God, the Creator of all forms of life.

Now, I fully appreciate that what has been said perhaps will merely stimulate one’s mind to many more questions, and it may conceivably not answer to satisfaction the questions that have been asked. Nevertheless, while I realize my answer is incomplete and could be much improved, I believe it will be granted that this is an honest expression of my views and a sincere attempt to answer the questions in language that can be understood.

Kingdom Blessings

By A. Weldon McCoy

"NOW after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye, and believe the gospel" (Mark 1:14, 15).

According to the words just quoted, Jesus Himself preached the gospel or "good news" of the Kingdom of God. Are we, members of the Church of God, busying ourselves with getting this "good news" or gospel to others, as did our Savior? Or, are we busy telling others of the coming of an antichrist in the future; the coming of another universal ruler, other than Christ, the promised Seed of the woman (Gen. 3:15), the promised heir to David's throne (Luke 1:32)? The Bible teaches that there were to be four universal powers preceding the Kingdom of God. (See Dan. 2:31-35.)

The Kingdom "of the Lord" (1 Chron. 29:23), or "of Israel" (Ezek. 21:25), was overturned three times by three of these world powers, and was to be no more, "until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him" (Ezek. 21:26, 27). History records all of these overturnings, and I hope the reader will keep this in mind, as the man Hitler continues his aggressive measures in the direction of the Holy Land. May I repeat—there were to be four universal powers (not five or more) preceding the establishment of God's Kingdom on the earth; and the Kingdom of Israel was to be overturned three times, by three of the four universal powers. Don't look for a world dictator to arise before the coming of Christ. If we have Bibles in our homes, we should learn the truth, and the Bible teaches that the fifth universal government will be under the reign of Christ. (See Isa. 9:6, 7; Luke 1:32, 33; Psalm 72:1-11; Isa. 32:1-4.)

Throughout Christ's reign, and until He delivers the Kingdom up to God (after having first put down all rule and authority that is in opposition to God's plan of blessing all nations), the following Kingdom blessings will be brought to earth's inhabitants:

- (1) Wars shall cease. (Isa. 2:4; Micah 4:3.)
- (2) There will be no sickness among inhabitants. (Isa. 33:24; Rev. 21:4.)
- (3) The ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. (Isa. 35:5; Matt. 11:5; Mark 7:37.)
- (4) The lame shall leap and walk. (Isa. 35:6; Matt. 11:5.)
- (5) The wolf and the lamb shall dwell together, the calf and young lion shall lie together in peace, the cow and bear shall feed together, and a little child shall lead them. "The sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice' den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: (and here is the reason) for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea" (Isa. 11:6-9).

Would you like to live in a land such as has been briefly outlined to you in these few lines? We should be interested in such a home. The best stimulant we have, I believe, is to create a desire for such a home in comparison to what we now have, with that which God has promised us in His Word, and His Word is truth. (John 17:17.)

May each of us so live and conduct ourselves that we "may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city" (Rev. 22:14).

A QUESTION AND ANSWER

By James A. Patrick

A BROTHER once asked me the following question: "In 1 Thessalonians 4:14, we find these words: 'will God bring with him.' The particular words in question are: 'bring with him.' It would seem from those words that the dead are with God, and that He will bring them along with Him when Christ returns. Will you please help me to understand this passage?"

My reply was as follows: "The text to which you refer has puzzled a good many people, but I think a close examination of all the verses, starting with verse 13, and taken with other scriptures, will clear the matter for you."

"I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep." You notice that it is about the sleeping ones. Over sixty times in the Bible, death is spoken of as sleep. "If we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so (in like manner) them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him" (v. 14). With whom? With Jesus. "The God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus" (Heb. 13:20). "Even so," or in like manner, He will bring from the dead the sleeping ones. This is proved by verse 16: "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout . . . and the dead in Christ shall rise first." If they are in heaven, and Christ is to bring them with Him when He comes, they could not rise from the dead. Further proof is found in 2 Corinthians 4:14: "Knowing that he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus, and shall present us with him."

Now, please turn to 1 Corinthians 15:16-18. Here we read, "If the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised. . . . Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." If the dead Christians are in heaven, and Christ is to bring them with Him when He comes, they could not be "perished." Read in this connection, Ecclesiastes 9:5, 6.

The emphases in the foregoing are all mine.

TRUE DEVOTION

unless true sympathy and love go with it. The humble attitude of the sinful publican went much farther with God than the boastful prayer of the Pharisee who thanked God that he was not like other men—even as this publican. We all need more of the spirit of the publican in our worship.

With the world in the condition in which we find it today, our field of usefulness has been enlarged many times over what it is in times of peace. War is brutal at its best, but the present war has excelled all others in point of sheer brutality, in that the blows are directed not at armies, but upon the innocent and helpless, the old men and the old women, and the children. Multitudes of innocents are left without home or shelter, without food or clothing. Our hearts should melt in our sympathy and love for these. They are not guilty of bringing upon themselves this awful condition. There is little, though, that we alone can do to alleviate this suffering. Our government has provided a means by which we may become useful in doing our part. The Red Cross is probably the most reliable means we have at hand for giving relief. Other means are provided by which we may reach those nearer home, but we believe that in many cases there are those within our list of acquaintances who are less fortunate than we are, whom we may reach directly with the aid we may have to offer. We may feel at times that we ourselves are almost to the point of need, but if we will look about us we shall find that there are others more in need than we are, and for no fault of their own.

The human mind is a brooder. In the presence of a little trouble, it can breed trouble and multiply it in proportion as we give time and inclination to it. Yet, again, if we use that mind to a better purpose, we find that it is capable of breeding joy and peace and love, until we have buried our own troubles so deep that they can never be revived. We should take more time to be Christians, meditating more upon the good things of God and of life.

"Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things" (Phil. 4:8). We are made noble and holy by following in our minds the things that are noble and holy.

"EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT"

who "sleep the sleep of death" (Psalm 13:3) "know not any thing" (Eccl. 9:4, 5). While in that state, the righteous are not praising the Lord. "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence" (Psalm 115:17). Neither can the wicked hate Him, for "their hatred, and their envy, is now perished" (Eccl. 9:6). They are not rewarded or punished until they are "brought forth" to the "appointed day" of reckoning, which involves the return of the absent Nobleman, and the resurrection of the dead. (Job 21:30; Acts 17:30-32; Luke 19:11-15; 1 Tim. 6:17-19; Acts 26:8.) "The day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men" (2 Peter 3:6, 7) "will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire" (Matt. 3:12).

"What is the chaff to the wheat? saith the Lord" (Jer. 23:28-32). From the depths of my heart, I can say that those who willfully persist in refusing to come unto Jesus, that they "might have life" "through his name," are "worthy" of the harvest they will "reap," "which is the second death." (See John 5:40; 20:31; Acts 3:12; 1 John 5:9-12; Gal. 6:7, 8; Rom. 1:28-32; Rev. 21:8.) As a conditionalist, I am glad, for "our God is a consuming fire," and not a vindictive tyrant. (See Heb. 12:29; Gen. 18:25; Ezek. 18:23-28.) Against all the "false prophets" who malign the character of God's "goodness" and merciful provisions of rescue from the thralldom of sin and the dominion of death, I triumphantly wave this flag of ultimate victory "through our Lord Jesus Christ." (1 John 4:1; Rom. 2:4-11; Matt. 1:21; Hosea 13:14; 1 Cor. 15:51-55.)

"He brought me to the banqueting house, and his banner over me was love." (Canticles, or Solomon's Song 2:4.) "He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love" (1 John 4:8, 9). "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16).

"So live that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan, which moves
To that mysterious realm, where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not, like the galley slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave,
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."

WE THANK GOD!

attendant blessings! We are thankful to God that we were born in the United States. It is no merit of ours that we are here. It is no choice of the Chinese young man that he lives in a land full of ignorance, superstition, and idols. The German young man, who is forced to go and die if need be in response to his government's call, has no choice in the matter. The cannibal's son in darkest Africa did not choose his birthplace.

When we drive from city to city, and see our beautiful flag, the Stars and Stripes, floating in the breeze above our schools and public buildings, we thank God. It is a symbol to us of the greatest nation on earth, a symbol of the best that human governments have to offer to mankind the world over. We can drive from East to West, from North to South, with none to question us. We can speak from the pulpit that which is in our hearts, without fear of the secret police. To worship God or not to worship is our privilege, with none to persecute if we choose to worship.

Thank God our rest is not disturbed by bursting bombs, screeching shells, or dying women and children! We do not have to seek a musty air-raid shelter every night. Our little girls and boys will not be given dog meat by the government this winter, nor will they see their fathers and mothers sent to concentration camps because of their belief in God. They will not grow up to be sold by their fathers as prostitutes, as some of the young girls are sold in Japan, China, and India.

For these things and many, many more, we thank God. "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits" (Psalm 103:2).

tion within the neighborhood of five hundred thousand, a tenfold increase since the end of the World War in 1918. It was officially reported on July 5 that twenty-five thousand Jews remained unemployed.

In Luke 21:29-33 are recorded words of Jesus to which we wish to draw your attention: "He spake to them a parable, Behold the fig tree, and all the trees; when they now shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves that summer is now nigh at hand. So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand. Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass away, till all be fulfilled. Heaven and earth shall pass away: but my words shall not pass away."

The fig tree is putting forth leaves. Watch!

SCHOOL LIGHTS

By "Chuck" Mills

THE last two wash days' starch has been a problem here at the Students' Home. Maybe a corrugated collar doesn't slide out of place, but it certainly is irritating.

Last week one of the fellows felt something rubbing his neck; investigating, he found the iron had stuck to the starch and was still hanging on. This week the starch was so lumpy we had to iron slowly, or the iron would shake out of our hands.

It is better to break in a new car than one's neck. Of course, one can break his neck by parking or going too slowly, especially when a young man's fancies turn to love and baseball.

It seems some corners are certainly long. Prosperity has been just around one for eight years, and, according to all indications, it will be around four years more. We hoped for happy Landon's four years ago, but I am afraid we Wilkeep up until we finish the "turm."

There should be a law against: writing letters on one-cent post cards, parks without benches, pets with "no petting allowed" signs, infatuation as a substitute for love, everyone turning around and shaking hands with the one behind him, love with 'nots, and moral clubs clothing everything but the mouth.

Last week I learned that some people without hair are not really bald, they just part their hair farther apart than is customary. Personally, I think they are getting a bit high brow. I have been informed that one can tell how close he is to a city and how large it is by the number of people he knocks down, while driving.

Problem for the week. Listen carefully, and, oh yes, I forgot to tell you this is to be figured in your head; you have more room there than on that little piece of paper anyway, so be a sport and lay your pencil down. You have five seconds, all set! Go! If it takes two-fifths of a second to get your foot on the brake from the accelerator, how long does it take to get your other hand on the wheel? You are right, it depends on the speed. At "eighty" no one knows; dead men tell no tales.

We certainly have a "swell" radio here at the Students' Home. The sound effects are extraordinary, especially on stormy nights. It must have cost an "awful lot," because one can get so many stations on it. Why, only last night I received eight stations and all at one time, too. Radio is a marvelous invention. It has certainly progressed a lot; at first, we could hear the programs, then by television we could see them, and now some programs, like the jokes in this column, we can smell them. They now have push-button tuning, and in a few years I predict they will have zippers on them.

PREPARED BY MADGE SAVAGE

"No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God" (Luke 9:62).

A Morning Prayer

"Father, keep me all this day,
When at school and when at play;
May I do all things I ought,
May I hate each evil thought;
Help me love and trust in Thee,
Now and through eternity,
In Jesus' name, Amen."

Our Help Cometh

As we try to be Christians in all our deeds, words, and thoughts, we have many helps found in our Bibles.

We are able to read that the Twelve who followed Jesus made mistakes. They were weak, for they did sinful things, although they were trying to do right. Some of them quarreled among themselves for the honor of sitting one on either side of Christ in the coming Kingdom. Some rebuked a man who was doing good "in Jesus' name," and who was not one of the Twelve who followed Jesus. Jesus, in turn, scolded them for so doing. He said, "Forbid him not: for he that is not against us is for us" (Luke 9:50).

Now, the help we gain from God's Word is not the knowledge that these good people sometimes sinned. The help we may have is the strength we get from such thoughts as these: "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee," and "God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able" (1 Cor. 10:13).

Further help is the hope we have, as found in verses like these: "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God: and if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together" (Rom. 8:16, 17).

Also, we read that Jesus called the little children to Him and said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God" (Luke 18:16).

True Discipleship

We must continue to follow Jesus all our lives. If we lose sight of Christ, we might want to turn back into the world. Our golden text, written at the top of the page, tells us what Jesus thought of a person who looked back.

Be very patient with those who do not choose the Christian way. They are missing so much now, for they have not that "peace which passeth understanding." They also will miss living forever with Jesus—all those wonderful years which are ahead for the ones who remain true disciples! Keep your light shining. Who knows? Perhaps you may win a soul for Christ.

Without charity, or love, we are told that it will profit us nothing, even though we give all our goods to feed the poor. Without love, it will help us not at all to give our very bodies to be burned. (See 1 Cor. 13:3.)

Paul wrote some good advice: "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things" (Phil. 4:8).

ECE Bible Study Club

We now know the first twenty-seven books in the Old Testament. There are thirty-nine in all, remember? There are twelve minor prophets who wrote the last books in the Old Testament. We will learn the first four this week. They are: Hosea, Joel, Amos, and Obadiah. Review all of them often, and add these new ones to your list.

Modernistic Interjections

* * *

By Celaine Randall

During this crisis period of the nations, when the intents of men's hearts are evil continually, and that great leader, "Greed," is beckoning the rulers of our several governments to follow the example of those who have found it profitable (?), it is found that men, naturally, have become involved in discussions along these avenues of thought. It is with reluctance that we have to admit that the above topics have provided subject material for many an unprofitable sermon. Too many times this has been substituted for the Word of God. Paul says in 2 Timothy 4:2, "Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine."

It is the first part of this verse to which we wish to call your attention, and ask you if you can see any possibility of changing this to have any other meaning than it has in its pure state? I believe that we can all agree that it is impossible to change the meaning. Therefore, we cannot say that we are told to preach some modern gospel that will tickle the ears of the hearers. Substitutions such as current events, Hitler's latest move, articles from the latest current magazines, or some great catastrophe that occurred during the week have become the meat of the gospel (?) sermons delivered from many of the sacred pulpits of the churches in this land.

Approximately two months ago, while riding on a Union Pacific bus, I was engaged in conversation with a young man employed by an insurance company. After finding out our different occupations in which we were engaged, and as the work of the writer is that of a theological student, the subject then changed to that of religion. After discussing different phases of the subject, the man then said, "Perhaps I should take a more active part in the church and be more regular in my attendance, but I don't like to go because I do not receive anything that is worth while. The minister talks about the war and all the current events that take place. We don't have to go to church to hear that. We can read about these things at home in the newspapers. We should receive something that will be of benefit to us and uplift us, instead of playing upon our emotions."

This young man, as do many others, wanted to receive spiritual food, instead of the everyday "hash" of events. In 1 Corinthians 10:3 and 4, we read: "And (they) did all eat the same spiritual meat; and did all drink the same spiritual drink: for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ."

One of the great tragedies of the preaching and teaching of today is that, sad to say, it is being infected with ideas that are not relative to the Word of God in any way, shape, or form. This does not mean that all material other than the Bible should be excluded entirely, but that it should come secondary, instead of being the sum and substance of the sermon.

Are we, as Bereans in our gospel work and our Bible studies, supplying the unhelpful, idle gossip of some commentator for that of the sound, infallible truths of the Bible; or are we feasting upon the riches of the plain, simple gospel that was given to us "for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness" (2 Tim. 3:16), leaving out the "Modernistic Interjections"?

Cut It Out!

That's what a lot of people do when they find an article or picture in which they are particularly interested—they cut it out, and paste it in a book where they may keep it safely. By systematically clipping newspaper and magazine articles on a particular subject, a person can accumulate a fund of information that will become invaluable. Not just any mediocre article will do; only those that really "hit you" when you first read them will make your scrapbook a possession to be highly prized. A certain production engineer has collected articles on gear cutting and design for several years, until now he has a book that rivals any single publication on the subject of gears available.

Religious tracts are single articles, each of which covers a certain phase of Christian teaching exceptionally well. They have been printed in a form more convenient than a clipping. Brother James Watkins, Chairman of the Berean Publishing Committee, described a number of these tracts in the November 5 issue of The Restitution Herald. The last page of The Herald lists many more. Be an authority on Christianity. A complete set of available tracts will help you get started.

CALENDAR OF EVANGELISM

November 17-30—Special meetings at Blood River Church, Hammond, La.
 December 15—Iowa Quarterly Conference at Gladbrook.

LOUISIANA CHURCH NOTES

The meetings at the Happy Woods church came to a close Friday night, November 15, thus ending one of the most successful meetings held here in recent years. The attendance, for the most part, was good; only on two nights did it fall below forty, due to inclement weather and sickness. The highest attendance mark was seventy-one and the smallest was twenty-six. Two of our most faithful members, Mr. Gus Landry and Mrs. Gilbert Bottolf, were unable to attend most of the meetings because of sickness.

The sermons delivered by Bro. M. W. Lyon were forceful, interesting, and instructive, and the entire church received much spiritual benefit. As a result of the meetings eight young people made the good confession and were baptized into the all-saving name of Jesus. The church was made to rejoice by the obedience of these young people, all in the teen age, and all members of the Sunday school. Truly, they have obeyed the admonition of the Wise Man in Ecclesiastes 12:1. Their names and addresses are as follows: Peggy Ruth Campbell, 305 E. Hanson Ave.; Marie Landry, 402 E. Hanson Ave.; Mary Helen Landry, Jerome Landry, and Gordon Landry, 109 E. Thomas St.; Henry Hutchinson, Rt. 3 (all the foregoing from Hammond, La.); and Iris Foster and Lucy Lee Bankston, Ponchartraine, La.

We pray God's richest blessings to rest upon these young people in their new service unto the King.

Meetings began at Blood River, Saturday night, November 17, with sixty in attendance and eighty-two Sunday morning. We look for rich blessings from this meeting also.

Harry Gockler, Pastor.

FONTHILL, ONTARIO

Last Friday night, through the kindness of Sr. Railton, we were privileged to listen to a fine lecture on Palestine. Between sixty and seventy assembled at the church to hear Mrs. Hamilton of Toronto give her illustrated lecture on the Holy Land. The up-to-date information on the Holy Land, the Zionist movement, and the achievements of the Jewish people in the rebuilding of Palestine as their national homeland was very educational. The slides were both beautiful and interesting. Verse after verse of Holy Writ, thrown on the screen and read in unison, stirred our inmost beings. We, as a people, have taught this truth of the restoration of Israel for many years, and have so often in the past been ridiculed and scoffed for teaching such an impossible event. Now it thrills our hearts, and greatly strengthens our faith, to see these things truly coming to pass. We had a great spiritual feast together, and the lecture gave us a sense of indebtedness and responsibility to God's chosen people.

The enjoyable evening came to a close over well-laden tables in the basement, and a happy time of visiting together. It was a pleasure having for our guests some of the L. F. T. class of the Niagara Falls church.

BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL NEWS

At this time your reporter is somewhat recovering from an overindulgent helping of turkey. It happened on "Franks-giving Day." I suppose many of you have enjoyed this day, while others have observed Thanksgiving Day.

Our vacation started Wednesday noon, November 20. Francis and Alan went home to Ripley, Ill. Mrs. Brewer, our matron, is spending her vacation in Macomb, Ill., with her daughter and son-in-law, Sr. and Bro. C. E. Lapp. "Elzie," we trust, is making up for lost time (to his heart's content) at his home community, Brush Creek, Ohio. Celaine, whom the Cupid favored by shooting at close range, is spending his vacation at Zollingers, in Oregon, Ill. During the absence of our matron, Orpha LeMasurier is taking charge of the Students' Home. Barbara Fish and Diane are also keeping us in company.

Alan McLain preached in the morning at Ripley, and Francis Burnett in the evening, Sunday, November 24. Dick Smith was at Dixon, Ill., Celaine Randall at Grand Rapids, Mich., and Muriel Randall at Rockford, Ill., this same date.

Classes resume regular schedule, Monday morning, November 25.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

"We are having very good attendance in Sunday school, and there was a Thanksgiving service at the church, Sunday, November 24."
 —Mrs. M. D. Newell, Blair, Nebr.

"We wish every family of the Church of God subscribed for The Restitution Herald. That all our members do not read it is too bad; but how can we get them to see their mistake?"—Anna A. Eidemiller, West Milton, Ohio.

"We are all well, and the weather is fine out here. We send greetings to all the brethren."
 —Leo Behrends, Albany, Ore.

Correction: The contribution of $10.00 by Mrs. Howard Andrews and Miss Georgia Gill was a memorial gift in honor of their mother, Sophia Gill.

Bro. A. Weldon McCoy, who has recently joined our staff of writers, lives at Piedmont, S. C., Rt. 1.

Richard Powell, Point Reyes, Calif., having received a scholarship when graduating from high school, is now enrolled in Santa Clara University.

"The brethren in the vicinity of Washington, D. C., have made arrangements to gather every second and fourth Sunday nights for Bible study or preaching."
 —J. R. LeCrone, Woodstock, Va.

"I just returned home from Perryville, Ky., where Bro. Vaughn Long and I conducted a ten-days' meeting. Interest was good, attendance fair, and two young men are contemplating baptism."
 —Cantwell Drabensstott, Hartford City, Ind.

Donna Jean arrived Saturday, November 23, to brighten the home of Bro. and Sr. Kenneth Brewer, Troy, Ohio.

Bro. L. D. Romine, Jr., wife and daughter Eleanor of Riverside, Ill., were Thanksgiving guests of Golden Rule Home. Also with the guests was Sr. Jeannette Romine, who is now a student nurse at Cook County Hospital Training School of Chicago.

"True ambassadors for Christ have a greater work than endeavoring to make this world better through the medium of worldly politics."

Sixty-three new industrial projects were started by Jews in Palestine during the first year of the Second World War. Restricted imports and higher demands for government and military supplies have stimulated Palestine's industries. "All things work together for good."

FREDERICKTOWN, MISSOURI

The Women's Missionary Society met Thursday, November 14, at the home of the writer, for an all-day meeting. Most of the time was spent in quilting. We had ten members present and three visitors.

At the noon hour, we had a potluck dinner which was very good, judging by the way the dinner disappeared. After the dinner, we had our regular business meeting. At this time we adopted a motto for our Society, which is, "See no evil, hear no evil, speak no evil." We also planned to have a Christmas grab box at our next meeting, out of which each will receive a Christmas gift.

The first Sunday in December, our Society will have a program on missions. This program will be at the time of morning service, as we have church only once a month. Although organized this summer, our Society is progressing nicely, and we feel each one has shown an interest in the work.

Three of our members, Agnes Cooper, Ethel Mankin, and Mrs. Will Thomas had birthdays this month. Each received gifts from the other members, then we sang "Happy Birthday to You," which I think made them feel very young and happy. May the Lord direct us in our work.

SHEETS - DEIHM

Its unbroken circle of pure gold to symbolize the unchanging love and the permanence of the vows of the contracting parties, the wedding ring became a powerful symbol in the marriage Saturday, November 9, of Miss Inez Sheets, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Sheets, Blanchard, Mich., to Mr. Dallas Deihm, Remus. It was brought out forcefully by Elder Harry A. Sheets, of Illinois, brother of the bride, who solemnized the marriage, that included also in the circle of contracting parties is God.

The bride, a vision in pure white, carrying a bouquet of chrysanthemums, came down the stairs of her Remus home at Mrs. Colgrove's to the music of the wedding march; and before an altar of lighted candles, in the presence of the immediate families as guests, the happy couple received the blessings of the church to crown their love. Elder Sheets was assisted in the sacred ceremony by the writer, former pastor of the bride, Miss Jessie Hadlock of Remus was bridesmaid, Mr. Solon Deihm, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

Immediately following the wedding, there was a reception at which a lovely wedding cake was cut. Mr. and Mrs. Deihm left shortly afterward for a short trip, after which they will be at home in Remus where Mr. Deihm is the proprietor of a grocery store. The bride is a faithful member of the Blanchard church, serving, for one thing, in time past, as the talented and spirited pianist of the Sunday school.

May God richly bless this new home, and be the Head of it in all things.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him, (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

The Good Shepherd

By Francis E. Burnett

FOUR years ago, we had the privilege of meeting a man who owned a large ranch in Nevada. This ranch was used exclusively for sheep raising. Being a farm hand at that time, we naturally became interested. Thousands of sheep are raised here, and it takes a large force of men to care for them. These men are known to us as shepherds. Each shepherd can take care of twenty-five hundred sheep.

Mention of the word "shepherd" makes us think of the Bible and, especially, of David, the little shepherd boy who was chosen to be king. From the beginning of time, men have known about shepherds. Just what or who is a shepherd? A shepherd is one who gathers, a guardian, or a leader. David gathered, guarded, and led his father's sheep.

In Psalm 23:1, we read, "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want." David, a man after God's own heart, said that God was his Shepherd. David surely trusted in God as his Guardian or Leader, because he said that he would "not want." In Psalm 80:1, David again spoke of God as a Shepherd, this time referring to God as the "Shepherd of Israel."

Isaiah 40:10, 11 tells of another shepherd. This surely refers to Christ, for verse 10 states, "The Lord God will come with strong hand, and his arm shall rule for him." Verse 11 tells of how this person (God's arm) "shall feed his flock like a shepherd," taking care of the sheep and gently leading them.

Why do we think that this prophecy refers to Christ? Because Jesus Himself said, "I am the good shepherd"

(John 10:14). Did Jesus possess any of the qualities of a shepherd? In the study of His life, we shall find all the qualities of a shepherd. He was gentle and kind, a leader, always helping someone in need. Perhaps you may ask, Is this all the proof that you have of Christ as a shepherd? We read, also, in Hebrews 13:20, about "that great shepherd of the sheep."

Do we sincerely believe in Jesus Christ as our Shepherd? Do we live as an obedient flock, letting our Shepherd lead us?

People may say that Christ does not lead us today. Many say that man is a free moral agent and lives as he thinks best. Man is a free moral agent, but if he will submit himself to Christ, he will be led by the Shepherd. We read in John 10:27, "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me." Again, we read in Ezekiel 34:2, "Son of man, prophesy against the shepherds of Israel, prophesy, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God unto the shepherds; Woe be to the shepherds of Israel that do feed themselves! should not the shepherds feed the flocks?" We can interpret the above verse today by this reasoning: Woe be to the ministers, pastors, or any religious leaders who think only of themselves! Should not the pastor lead his flock?

In verses 3 and 4 of this chapter, we read and can see how some of our pastors live today. Ezekiel told the shepherds, "Ye eat the fat, and ye clothe you with wool." In other words, they had the best and lived very highly. Do we not have men today who are preaching only for the money? Verse 5 reads, (Please turn to page 10)

The House of Many Mansions

By S. J. Lindsay

"Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."—Jesus.

HAVE you ever heard John 14:1-3 quoted as follows: "I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am, there ye may be also"? This text may be added to or subtracted from in many ways, best to suit the speaker's notion. A study of the text will reveal no such interpretations as we often hear placed upon it. We shall first deal with the word "mansions." The Greek word mone, here translated "mansions" is in verse 23 translated "abode." This is the only use made of the word mone in the New Testament. With this knowledge in mind, we shall translate as follows: "In my Father's house are many abiding places."

Now, as to the house: whatever or wherever the place is that He went to prepare, it is a place that concerns us. Jesus had told His disciples that unless He went to the Father, the Holy Spirit would not come from the Father, but if He went to the Father, the Father would send the Holy Spirit (the Comforter) to them, and that when the Comforter came, it would guide them into all truth and call to their minds all things that He had said unto them. He told the disciples to go up to Jerusalem, and tarry there until they should receive this power from on high. On the day of Pentecost this power came. On the day of Pentecost the church was organized. This could not have been done, except the Son ascended to the Father. By His going to be with the Father, they were authorized to organize the church, the house in which there would be a place for every child of God. And the church is called God's house, His building. We quote first from Hebrews 3:4-6: "Every house is builded by some man; but he that built all things is God. And Moses verily was faithful in all his house, as a servant, for a testimony of those things which were to be spoken after; but Christ as a Son over his own house; whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end."

This would make it Christ's house. In writing to Timothy, Paul directed Timothy how to conduct himself as a pastor of the flock. He wrote: "If I tarry long, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth" (1 Tim. 3:15). Here the church is called the house of God.

In 1 Corinthians 3, the building of this structure is described. Here we are told: "We (the ministers) are labourers together with God: ye are God's husbandry, ye are God's building" (v. 9). It would be well for the reader to carefully study this whole chapter. This burning-out process is going on all the time. The builders are admonished to be careful what they build into it, for the wood, hay, and stubble will surely be burned out. The builders are to be tried by this same fire. Of the many that are called, few are to be chosen, because they will not stand the test of the fiery difficulties through which they must pass when built into this building.

The church is compared to the bride of Christ. "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish" (Eph. 5:25-27). Jesus went to the Father that this house might be authorized. In this house there is a place for everyone who will strive for it. None need be left out.

A paraphrase, then, in the light of this comparison of scriptures on the subject, would read something like this: "In my Father's house (the church) are many abiding places. I go to prepare this abiding place for you. And if I go and prepare this place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also."

Many scriptures reveal the manner of Christ's coming to receive His church unto Himself. Where He will be from that time forward, there the church will be, also. It is revealed that He will be King of all the earth, ruling on David's throne. The Revelator tells us that if we overcome, we shall sit with Christ on His throne, even as He overcame and is set down now at the right hand of His Father. (Rev. 3:20, 21.) He will sit upon His throne when He comes again, for "when the Son of man shall come in his glory . . . then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory: and before him shall be gathered all nations" in judgment. John prophesied, "Thou hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth" (Rev. 5:10). May Jesus, the King, soon come.

Maranatha College?

By C. Alan McLain

WE ARE living in an age in which civilization is calling for well trained and well educated men and women. There is greater need today for well trained workers than in the earlier days of civilization. The old law concerning "the survival of the fittest" is still in force: for the people who are not qualified to meet the requirements of this life and the life to come will have to pay for their neglect to equip themselves for responsibilities. As the stronger animals are victorious over the weaker, well trained and well educated men and women are more successful than the untrained and uneducated. Those who take advantage of every opportunity for further equipping themselves for life's duties will be repaid an hundredfold. Education and training make the weak strong.

The wrestler develops his physical strength, while the thinker his mentality. The educated outmaneuver the mighty. Without a reasonable amount of education, no one can secure employment. Man has developed in some respects more in the last one hundred years than since Creation, but in other respects he has degenerated almost to beasts. People are "ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth" (2 Tim. 3:7). Consider the many clever inventions which we enjoy; consider, also, the many witty inventions that are instruments of death in the hands of brutish men. Education is like a gun: only when pointed the right direction is it beneficial. An educated fool is like a mad dog seeking whom he may destroy.

The educated man that has the knowledge of the truth, and lives accordingly, and teaches others, is a balanced man. The Apostle Paul was a good example. The person who is educated in every way but in the truth is like a bucket without a bottom.

As Uncle Sam is calling for soldiers, so Jesus is calling for soldiers to fight against the evil of this world. Who will be a volunteer for Jesus, a soldier true? "Others have enlisted, why not you? Jesus is the Captain; we will never fear."

"Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand. Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness; and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. And the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God" (Eph. 6:11-17).

There is a greater need than ever before for trained ministers. "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth labourers into his harvest" (Matt. 9:37, 38). As a carpenter must be skilled with his tools, the mason with his, the machinist with his, the farmer with his, so must the minister be skilled in the Word of God. He must know the kind of medicine to give in different circumstances to different sick or dying congregations. He must "study to shew (himself) approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Tim. 2:15). "Know the truth, and the truth shall make you free" (John 8:32). Why do men love slavery?—slavery to sin. "Righteousness exalteth a nation: but sin is a reproach to any people" (Prov. 14:34).

The minister must be a beacon light, reflecting God's love, if he expects others to shine. To be educated in the truth is worth more than all other learning; to live it is priceless.

There is a real need for schools to train and educate young men and women for leadership in Christ's service. "Necessity is the mother of invention." Some of our wise leaders made the bold adventure in these trying times to establish a Bible Training School for the training of our sincere Christian young men and women for leadership in the service of Christ. These men were, and are, looking forward by faith, as did the patriarchs of old.

Last year was the first year for the School. It started in October, and closed the last of May. The School so far has been a success—not, of course, in dollars and cents, but in the purpose for which it was really organized. The students are like a large family, with Mrs. Brewer as the mother. Very few persons, if any, could excell her as a matron. This year the students have preached in many churches. Good reports have been received from every place in which they have spoken. The Spirit of Jesus rules the Students' Home. Co-operation makes possible a well regulated School.

We have two very good teachers: Brothers L. E. Conner and S. E. Magaw. This year, Sister Leila Mae Doeden is teaching music once a week. This subject was not taught last year.

All last year and this year the School has gone without a name. The title, "Bible Training School," is insufficient, for there are many such titles. The Board of Religious Education has been wanting a name for the School. This is my suggestion for the name: "Maranatha College." "Maranatha" means "our Lord cometh." Since we are looking for the soon coming of Christ, I believe "Maranatha College" is a good name for our Bible School.

Most of the students like this name, and we are thinking of giving this name to our basketball team. It is, of course, the privilege of the Board of Religious Education to decide a permanent name for the School.

According to prophecy, the time is drawing near for the coming of our Lord. Let us "work . . . while it is day: (for) the night cometh, when no man can work." Let us work more diligently to bring others into the fold. We look forward to the coming of our Lord. "Be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh" (Matt. 24:44). Let us say, as did the early disciples: "Maranatha."

The Rechabites

---

THE Rechabites are not a well-known people, yet their story is one of the most interesting in the entire Old Testament and one that is of benefit to us. It is found in Jeremiah 35.

The Prophet was instructed of God to go to the people in question, and to offer them wine to drink. It seems strange that God would give such a command, but, as always, we find that God was all-wise and knew perfectly well what He was doing. Jeremiah obeyed the voice of God, going to these Rechabites, the descendants of Rechab, who peculiarly enough is only mentioned by his descendants as being the father of Jonadab, who seems to have been the hero of the tribe. Jeremiah gave the command that God had told him to give: "Drink ye wine"! Surprised must he have been at the answer he received, for it was in this manner: "We will drink no wine." Then followed the explanation. Jonadab, the son of Rechab their father, had given them a command to drink no wine forever, at the time of this story, and even many years later, they held to this command and to other commands that he had given.

Now, why did God have Jeremiah order these people to do this thing, when He knew beforehand that they would not obey the order? Was it to test them, perhaps? It might have been, but the main purpose was to teach the people of Judah a lesson through the example of the Rechabites, for we read next that Jeremiah went to the men of Judah and pointed out to them the story of these people. He showed how that all through the years these Rechabites had adhered to an ancient teaching of their fathers, who were only human, but that the Judeans had not obeyed the voice of Jehovah, their God. We know that this is true, for God sent many prophets unto the people of Israel, but the Israelites rejected their counsel—electing to follow other gods and to reject Jehovah.

Finally, God told the Judeans through Jeremiah that He would bring much evil upon them because of their disobedience of Him, because, as it says in Jeremiah 35: 17: "I have spoken unto them, but they have not heard; and I have called unto them, but they have not answered." However, of the Rechabites we read in verses 18 and 19: "Jeremiah said unto the house of the Rechabites, Thus saith Jehovah of hosts, the God of Israel; Because ye have obeyed the commandment of Jonadab your father, and kept all his precepts, and done according unto all that he hath commanded you: therefore thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel; Jonadab the son of Rechab shall not want a man to stand before me for ever."

It seems to me that there is just as much of a lesson for us in the exemplary methods of the Rechabites as there was for the men of Judah. We have certain precepts and commands given us under the Christian dispensation that we should obey, not only for our own good, but because God through His Son, Jesus Christ, has commanded them. The Rechabites were staunch enough to obey the commands of a man. Many times we can do that, too, but we oftentimes are not strong enough to learn to obey God and His Word. Let us follow the example of these almost unknown people, holding fast to our beliefs, so that God can and will say of us as He did of the Rechabites: "They shall not want a man to stand before me for ever."

Christian Faith

In Two Parts—Part One

By Arthur G. Young

FAITH is a general term. The more I think about it, the more I realize it is necessary to define it. For instance, one may have faith in many things, both good and bad, but as I understand the question, and for the purpose of this article, I shall qualify it, confining my remarks to Christian faith.

Faith is a fundamental in the Christian religion, and as Peter says, "Add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness." You see, Peter starts at the bottom with faith as the foundation, and then adds those other very necessary qualities. When one starts to build a house, the first thing to be considered is the foundation, and this is exactly the position faith occupies in the Christian religion. Unless there is a foundation of faith to build upon, it is impossible to raise the superstructure of godliness and love. I would also remind you, however, that it is the duty of a Christian to add these qualities to faith.

It is obviously impracticable for the purpose of this article to attempt to prove the authenticity of the Bible, the personality of God, or the divinity of Christ; as these subjects must be considered separately. I hope, though, to make clear that faith is not synonymous with credulity. The agnostic tries to make it appear that these two words are synonymous. This reminds me of a story I recently read to the effect that a Christian man, whom we shall call Mr. Jones, got on one of these English trains where they have the little compartments and, as it happened, there were several men in the compartment, one of which was quite an aggressive sort of individual. No sooner had Mr. Jones seated himself, than this other man said to him that he would like to ask him some questions. Upon receiving permission, he asked, "Do you believe in the existence of a God?" Mr. Jones replied that he did. The questioner then said to the other gentlemen in the compartment, that he had asked the same question of other people, had always received the same answer, and felt that he would get the same reply now. So, he repeated, "You believe in the existence of a God? Yes. Have you ever seen Him? No. Can you measure Him? No. Weigh Him? No. Feel Him? No. Smell Him? No. Taste Him? No. Do you know anything about Him, humanly speaking? No." Turning with a look of disgust, the questioner said to the other gentlemen, "There are tens of thousands of people putting their faith in this person they call God, and if we were to apply as much reasoning to our business, where would we be? I don't think much of their brains."

While all this questioning was going on, Mr. Jones was thinking of what he was going to say; so, in reply, he moved his fingers in front of the other man's face, and asked: "What moves these fingers?" The agnostic replied, after thinking about it, that life did. Mr. Jones then said, "Have you ever seen life? No. Can you measure life? No. Weigh life? No. Feel life? No. Smell life? No. Or taste life? No. Do you know anything about life, or where it is located? No." Mr. Jones then turned to the other men, and said, "Here is a man who believes my fingers are moved by life, yet he knows nothing whatever about it; but, believe me, there are tens of thousands of people who do believe this, so you see it is not possible to test everything in the world by the five senses."

As a matter of fact, we all have to have faith in something. It is one of the most common things in life.

I should also like to state very clearly that I do not believe humanity knows everything, nor that anyone can know everything in the present state. It is well to remember that no matter how much our knowledge is increased, it is going to be necessary for the Christian to have faith in that which he cannot absolutely prove. This qualification, I might remark, is not confined to Christians, but applies to everybody. Man is too much inclined now to get arrogant over the knowledge he has.

Nevertheless, God has by no means left us in the position where we do not have evidence that appeals to our reason and to our senses to justify our faith. I really believe that in too many minds there is a very inadequate idea of the supporting evidence that can be brought to bear in support, and which lies ready at our hands. On the other hand, many people today are giving up their faith in God by reason of the mass of statements being made by those opposing Him. Satan and his emissaries have attacked God and His plan right from the beginning, and while the attack has varied in method through the ages, it has, nevertheless, been a persistent and steady attack. Today, the form of attack is from the so-called scientific standpoint, particularly in connection with trying to disprove the Bible record of creation, as contained in the first chapters of Genesis. Although I have talked with scores of people who have advanced the theories of evolution, the researches of geology, and biology, I have yet to hear one that can offer convincing proof that the Bible story of creation is incorrect or unscientific. This may sound like a bold statement, but I may say a good deal of the trouble lies in the believer in the Bible trying to defend doctrines and statements it does not contain.

No, the fact is that God in His Holy Word has made statements regarding the creation which are absolutely in accord with the facts, and then has detailed in a broad, as well as minute way, His plan of salvation. I thank God that He has a plan that will meet all the conditions and requirements of men, and that in His love and mercy, He has offered it to mankind. Not only that, He has in addition provided a means in the person of His Son to put by divine power that plan into execution.

If God has a plan which is perfect and which will be executed perfectly by divine power, and which plan, when compared to any plan of man's, is so transcendently beautiful and complete, you can see the Christian has something in which to have faith, and which something is well worth giving earnest consideration to.

Just let us look back for a few moments. God at no time has asked man to have faith in Him and His promises, without leaving supporting evidence.

Adam and the early patriarchs certainly had abundant evidence to support their faith. Of course, you hear the statement that Adam never existed. If he was a myth, how can one explain the later generations' belief in him, and the New Testament references to him? The only alternative is that it is a lie from beginning to end. If Adam is a lie, Moses is a lie, Christ is a lie. Mohammedan, as well as Christian and Jew, believes Moses, Abraham, and Christ, actually lived. Is all the existing history of the world a lie? If so, and you take it out, where is the record in which we can believe, one that can fill the void that is left? Really, when one thinks about it, it is a hopeless mix-up, once we stray from the plain statements of God's Holy Word. To me, the credulity lies on the part of the skeptic who seems so able to swallow the latest effusion of science, rather than on the part of the Christian who has seen one after another scientific theory exploded that was pronounced a certain proof of the incorrectness of the Bible.

The Unsolved Problems

By Laura McInturff

WHEN the hard problems in life come to us, the clouds appear extremely dark, and discouragements roll in on so many sides (as they oftentimes do), the question is likely to come to our minds, "Will it pay to fold our hands and quit?"

Although we may feel that it is about the only thing that is left for us to do, we are assured that it will not pay to quit. We then should remember that God's promise of reward is made only to those who continue faithful to the end. If we fold hands and quit, the reward promised to the faithful will not be ours. We must push onward toward the goal. Sometimes it does seem best and necessary to rest for a period of time, and await the results and answers to our prayers. We must stand firm and watch that we do not drop by the wayside. By so doing we would lose our rewards, and our work would be unfinished.

The clouds of life and the difficulties that surround us oftentimes seem to be what we may class as the impossible. To us there seems to be no bright lining for the future. The question arises in our minds, How can we climb a mountain of so great a height? It would be an impossibility, if all depended on our own feeble efforts, but with God's helping hand we have been able to overcome what we had classed as an impossibility. If we do our part, God never fails to do His.

Through personal experience, I have found that perseverance and trust in the Lord have brought about some very pleasant results. The most difficult problem in life, when solved, although it may require much perseverance and hard work, will bring greater reward to the overcomer. One cannot help realizing that he has been paid for his perseverance and hard work.

It is a true saying, "The darker the cloud, the brighter the lining." We may not always be able to realize the genuine brightness of the lining during this life, but it may be made brighter during life in the future.

To all who are working for the future life which is promised to God's faithful ones, I do say, that it will not pay to fold our hands and quit. Be faithful to the end. Strive to be one of God's faithful servants. Many times we are much nearer to success than we think we are, then we decide it's no use to try; I will just quit. Oftentimes just a few steps more would bring us to success. Let us labor on as long as we are given health and strength to serve our Lord and fellow men. God's promises are sure.

A Soul in Departing

By Harold Hardesty

"It came to pass, as her soul was in departing, (for she died) that she called his name Benoni: but his father called him Benjamin" (Gen. 35:18).

THOSE Christians who have embraced the theories of heathen philosophers in regard to the nature of man and the death state seize avidly upon passages in the Word of God which seem to corroborate their belief, resting in the false assurance that such theories are of God. If the above and similar passages were all that could be found in the entire Bible concerning death, there could be little doubt as to man's condition in death. But there are many, many passages in Scripture dealing directly upon this subject.

Because there is such a profusion of passages bearing upon the subject and because our space is limited, necessity dictates that we confine our discussion to those passages that are terse, to the point, and which deal directly upon the scripture in question. First, let us present a few scriptures which appear to support the popular interpretation of Genesis 35:18, and which deal with the "soul" in much the same manner:

"He (Elijah) stretched himself upon the child three times, and cried unto the Lord, and said, O Lord my God, I pray thee, let this child's soul come into him again. And the Lord heard the voice of Elijah; and the soul of the child came into him again, and he revived" (1 Kings 17:21, 22).

"What is the hope of the hypocrite, though he hath gained, when God taketh away his soul?" (Job 27:8).

"God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided?" (Luke 12:20).

The word "soul" occurs more than one hundred fifty times in the King James Version, and in most cases is used in connection with the thoughts, consciousness, emotions, desires, and feelings of a person. Therefore, these verses cannot be lightly cast aside by any loyal and faithful student of the Word.

Next, we shall present a few of the many verses which seem to teach that man in death is totally unconscious:

"Thou destroyest the hope of man. Thou prevailest for ever against him, and he passeth: thou changest his countenance, and sendest him away. His sons come to honour, and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them" (Job 14:19-21).

"The living know that they shall die: but the dead know not any thing . . . Also their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished" (Eccl. 9:5, 6).

"Though Abraham be ignorant of us, and Israel acknowledge us not: thou, O Lord, art our father, our redeemer; thy name is from everlasting" (Isa. 63:16).

These verses indicate that man's thoughts, feelings, emotions, consciousness—in fact, everything that goes to make man a living soul—are perished in death. It might be well to state here that death is compared to sleep in no less than fifty-eight passages of Scripture.

Harold Hardesty

An Apparent Contradiction

From the foregoing two groups of quotations, we come to two directly opposite conclusions concerning death. Yet, "God is not the author of confusion, but of peace." Therefore, we must look for harmony even in things which appear to be in contradiction. "He that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened."

We might find harmony, if we could prove that the verses alluding to death as a state of unconsciousness concern only that part of man which enters the grave, that is, his body. Yes, our apparently irreconcilable contradiction would vanish into thin air; except that these verses cannot be discarded as easily as that. Although there are many passages which speak of man in reference to the grave, in not one of the passages quoted can there be found a single reference to the grave, either directly or indirectly. They speak only of the man who was alive and now is dead.

These verses are firm in their declaration that man in death is unconscious, that he has lost the faculty of thought or reflection, that his power to feel the emotions of love, hatred, and envy is perished. These are plain and simple statements of fact in God's Word that will stand for time and for eternity against the theories and onslaughts of finite men.

There is only one alternative that can bring order out of chaos: to strip the "soul" in Genesis 35:18 and like references of its attributes of consciousness, thoughts, and feelings. In other words, whatever else Rachel's departing soul may have been, it was, at most, a totally unconscious substance. This seems like a harsh, almost contradictory statement, but let us weigh the evidence in its favor.

There is another scripture in which we read of a departing. I refer to Psalm 146:3, 4, where it says, "Put not your trust . . . in the son of man, in whom there is no help. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish."

One could say that he saw a man depart from a certain building, or that he saw him go forth from that building, and still mean the same thing. The two expressions are synonymous. In fact, Rotherham's translation of the Bible renders Genesis 35:18 thus: "It came to pass when her soul was going forth—for she died, etc."

This much is plain: in one place we are told that the breath departs at death, and in another place it is the soul that departs. But what connection can we find between these two verses, aside from the fact that both speak of a departing at death? Breath and soul are two vastly different things.

A Suggestion

A suggestion is now in order. Since the Bible in many instances speaks of the soul in connection with the thoughts, the desires, the emotions, and the consciousness of men, and sometimes even of animals, but in this instance apparently speaks of it as possessing none of these attributes, is it not possible that when God through Moses used the word "soul" He might have had reference to "breath," which in fact possesses none of these attributes?

Again we anticipate an objection—Why would God say one thing and mean another? For the very same reason you and I often say a certain thing, when in reality we mean something else.

Why do we tell a speaker to address the chair, when we mean the presiding officer? Why do we say that the radio predicts fair weather, when we are very well aware that a radio has not even the faculty of reflecting upon the past, let alone forecasting the future? Why do we say the sun gets in our eyes, whereas it is actually the sunlight that gets in them and makes us squint?

In each instance a meaning quite different from what was actually said, was intended. We substitute one word for another because our minds associate the two together. We see a relationship between "chairman" and "chair." The weather forecaster speaks to us through the medium of the radio. The sun is the cause for the sunlight. Such statements are spoken in figure, and not in fact; hence, they are called "figures of speech."

We use scores of similar figures in our ordinary conversation. We lose our head. We give someone a piece of our mind. Someone gets under our skin. The mistress of the house creates a new dish. And so on. These figures are peculiar to our English language. How colorless and matter of fact our speech would be without them! Figures give life to speech, just as surely as breath gives life to the soul.

The Hebrew language is every bit as rich in figures of speech as is our own. Two or three random instances from the Bible will serve to illustrate. The Lord told Rebekah that two nations were in her womb (Gen. 25:23). God gave King Saul another heart (1 Sam. 10:9). Jesus said that Lazarus was asleep (John 11:11), although in reality he was dead (vv. 13, 14). Not one of these passages can be taken as a literal statement of fact. They are figures peculiar to the Hebrew tongue.

Now then, whereas both the breath and the soul are spoken of in the Bible as departing or going forth at the time of death; whereas harmony demands that the "soul" in Genesis 35:18 and similar passages be stripped of its ordinary attributes; whereas the "breath" is, in fact, free of these attributes; it is possible that we have in Genesis 35:18 a figure of speech in which the word "soul" is being used where "breath" is meant.

Genesis 2:7 shows how the Hebrew mind connected the thought of "breath" with that of the "soul." We read, "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul."

A living soul resulted from the breath of life being breathed into the nostrils of the dust-formed man. Adam did not become a living soul until he started breathing. He continued a living soul as long as the breath that gives life continued in his nostrils. When his breath left him, he died (see Psalm 104:29; 146:4), and became a dead soul (see Ezek. 18:20). Thus, we see that "breath" and "soul" are inseparably linked together, for that soul is dead whose breath has departed. He no longer responds to his surroundings, nor is he conscious of them.

Thus far we have both logic and evidence to support our contention that the phrase, "her soul was in departing," is a figure of speech, rather than a statement of fact. We still lack proof.

The Proof

The proof will be found, we believe, in 1 Kings 17:21, 22 (previously quoted). Here we read of Elijah praying for the soul of a boy who had died to come into him again. Since it says that his soul "came into him again," we would expect the account to relate the fact of his soul's departure. But it does no such thing. It does tell us in verse 17, however, of the departure of his breath—"his sickness was so sore, that there was no breath left in him."

It was the child's breath that left him, but upon praying for its return Elijah called it his soul. Literally, it was his breath that left him causing him to die, and came into him again causing him to revive; in figure, it was his soul.

It was just as natural for a Hebrew to say that a person's soul departed at death or came into him at resurrection, as it is for you and me to say that a woman stole her lover's heart or that a child found its tongue after a spell of bashfulness. None of these is a statement of fact, and, therefore, does not demand literal interpretation. All are spoken in figure.

By a parallelism of Scripture passages, we discovered that both soul and breath are said to depart, or go forth, at death. There is another parallelism which we shall do well to examine before quitting our subject, and this by way of confirmation of the conclusion already drawn. It is found in Job 27:8 and Psalm 104:29, respectively:

"For what is the hope of the hypocrite, though he hath gained, when God taketh away his soul?"

"Thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust."

One verse tells us that God takes away man's soul, and the other, that He takes away man's breath. One is spoken in figure, the other in fact. Compare Luke 12:20 (previously quoted) with these verses. It should be remembered that although Luke's Gospel was written in the Greek language, Jesus spoke the language of the Jews.

False teachers have ruthlessly used God's Word as a textbook for every human theory and concoction under the sun. The harvest is seen in the overwhelming dis-sension that exists in the ranks of Christian endeavor. Christianity, in incorporating heathen fables and philosophies, has become a veritable Babel of religions.

Let no man say that God is the author of confusion. Rather, let him come to a knowledge of the truth of God by allowing God to speak to him through His infallible Word. Let him follow the divine command to rightly divide the Word of Truth, one phase of which consists in properly discriminating between fact and figure.

THE GOOD SHEPHERD

"They were scattered, because there is no shepherd: and they became meat to all the beasts of the field, when they were scattered." How many congregations are scattered today! How many churches have closed their doors! Why has this happened? One reason is that the pastors, who were supposed to be the leaders, thought it best not to have services on Sunday nights. In many instances, the pastor reasoned that there would not be many out for the service; so why not all stay at home or go to a movie?

When professing Christians do not have church services or a leader to help them, they wander out into the world and into sin. Are the leaders to be blamed? Paul wrote in 1 Corinthians 9:14, "Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel," and in verse 16, "Woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel." The word "gospel" means good message or good news. Do our ministers preach the gospel? Or do they spend their time telling stories, recommending good books, or some other nonsense? I'm afraid that many of our so-called ministers or pastors are not feeding the flock. Rather, they are feeding themselves! Because of this laxness, the people have gone astray. If we are sheep and Christ is our Shepherd, will He lead us?

Jesus said, "I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep" (John 10:11). Again, in verse 14, He said, "I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine." Christ did give His life for us (Matt. 20:28), and as stated in John 10:11, He will give us life if we follow Him. We read in John 10:27, 28: "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me: and I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand." No promise should satisfy us any more than the one in the above verse. If we belong to Christ, no man can take us away from Him. Let us follow Christ, our Shepherd, that we may receive the reward mentioned in 1 Peter 5:4, promising: "When the chief shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."

PEACE, BE STILL

By Ruth V. Gesin

WE HAVE just passed the celebration of another Thanksgiving Day. How thankful we should be for our land, America. Here, not only on Thanksgiving, but any day we wish, we may worship when and how we please. Do we fully appreciate this privilege granted us?

Truly, it is a beautiful sound when we hear our church bells calling us to worship. America is at peace as her children and grown people go to church to worship as they desire. Do we stop to think of the many countries where war is raging and many church doors are closed? I fear that often we do not get on our knees and thank God for America and for what she stands. God is blessing the United States of America. We must appreciate our privilege, so that God will continue to bless us. We know many people in many countries are praying for the same blessing.

What a comfort to think of the One whose coming will bring peace over the earth—a peace that will last throughout eternity! When His voice echoes over the earth, all faithful hearts will rejoice. The same voice that spoke to the waves and bade them, "Be still," will again speak peace to the world and its significance will not be denied.

The angels' words, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men," will be fulfilled at the coming of our Lord.

SCHOOL LIGHTS

By "Chuck" Mills

WE have just passed a formal thanksgiving period, we may now, as many do, forget from whence all blessings flow, or we may continue to raise our voices in praise and thankfulness.

We often criticize the Israelitish nation because of its impressive neglect of God. Recalling the story of the Israelites' exodus from Egypt, we can see God's goodness shown them, yet they were lacking in faith. The moment the future looked somewhat abstruse, they were ready to abandon God, and they often did. After God had led them from Egyptian bondage through the Red Sea to safety (when the people were confronted with thirst), they "murmured against Moses, and said, Wherefore is this that thou has brought us up out of Egypt, to kill us and our children and our cattle with thirst?"

Is there not in the above quotation a faint application to present-day Christians? We often are ready to forsake God as soon as we meet an obstacle. Let us remember that even Christ was made perfect through suffering. (See Heb. 2:10.) Christ said, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me." If we are going to follow Christ, we must bear the burden, keeping in mind that in overcoming temptation we are strengthened in Him. May we also keep in mind that when we judge others we may be condemning ourselves. (Read Rom. 2:1.)

Let us not, as sometimes the Israelites did, repudiate God. May we trust Him, regardless of the impediments.

Today we construct contracts of differing natures to make legal proceedings lawful. A contract to be binding must have two legal parties' signatures. Until this paper is signed it is null and void. God also forms contracts. There is one in which Christians are particularly interested, for by it we are promised eternal inheritance upon the earth. God first made that contract with Abraham. "I will establish my covenant between me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee" (Gen. 17:7). In Hebrews 6:13 we read, "Because he (God) could swear by no greater, he swore by himself." "Ye shall circumcise the flesh of your foreskin; and it shall be a token of the covenant betwixt me and you" (Gen. 17:11). Abraham signed at the age of ninety-nine years (v. 24). We sign that contract by baptism into Christ. By Christ's death, we became heirs of the commonwealth of Israel. (Read Eph. 2:11-19.) To see whether or not we are justified in comparing this to a man's covenant, read Galatians 3:15. Have you made that contract binding?

BUILDING YOUR LIBRARY

Book Reviews

By Arlen Marsh

Eleanor DeForest gets off to a slow start in Armageddon, but if you're willing to go along with her for a dozen chapters, this tale of the Antichrist and the return of our Lord becomes genuinely gripping. It's published by William B. Eerdmans ($1.00).

Technically, the book is much more effective than those earlier stories about the Antichrist: The Mark of the Beast and In the Twinkling of an Eye. The actual story is quite good, and the flow of language is infinitely better. Biblical quotations are less obtrusive than in either of the other books mentioned, whose numerous quotes from the Prophets make it impossible really to enjoy their plot.

Yet Armageddon is by no means free of Bible. It starts with twin girls who, with their father, a converted rabbi, are living in an isolated spot in the Northern California wilderness. The story runs through its first half with the tale of the girls, their father, and the odd characters who appear to disturb the quiet of the wilderness. This is the section that is dull—it takes too much of the total space of the book, says in twenty-thousand words what easily could be told in half as many.

But the last half—ah, the last half! It runs from Hollywood to Jerusalem, from adultery to the second coming of the Christ. And it runs fast, with a pace so accelerated over that of the first half of the book that it seems almost unbelievable. The author has drawn very liberally upon imagination in describing the second coming; but her opinion is quite as apt to be correct as your own nebulous idea.

Doctrinally acceptable.

Although not a religious book in any sense, John Gunther's 1940 edition of Inside Europe (Harper & Brothers; $3.50) practically *demand*s attention from this column. Gunther's knowledge of European politics, acquired during years as a foreign correspondent, has set him up as an authoritative lecturer and writer in all English-speaking countries. The new edition of the best-selling Inside Europe paints a picture of international affairs that is at once entrancing and horrifying. Should be a "must" for every student of Bible prophecy.

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind: and thy neighbour as thyself" (Luke 10:27).

Preparing the Way

Jesus had sent out the seventy men, two by two, to prepare the way for His coming to "every city and place" where He would enter. Now they returned with joy, because of the power they had through Jesus' name. They said, "Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name." Jesus said they should rejoice not in that, "but rather rejoice, because your names are written in heaven."

After Jesus had paused to offer a prayer of thanksgiving to God, He told the disciples that they were surely blessed, for they had seen and heard things for which prophets and kings had searched in vain.

Then a lawyer stood up, tempting Jesus, and asked, "Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?"

Now Jesus was talking to a lawyer, one who knew the law, so He answered, "What is written in the law? how readest thou?" The lawyer answered by quoting the golden text written at the top of the page. Whereupon, Jesus told the lawyer that he was right. He said, "This do, and thou shalt live."

"Who is my neighbour?" asked the lawyer. We can be glad for this question, and for Luke's record of it.

Go, Do Likewise!

The Levites and priests, who ministered in the Tabernacle, were of the tribe of Levi. They were set apart for this very work. We do expect them to be the kindest and most merciful of all. Yet, they passed by on the other side!

A Samaritan was not loved by either Jew or Gentile. Samaritans were people who had one Jewish parent and one Gentile. The Jews especially disliked the Samaritans. Yet, it was a Samaritan who was the best neighbor. He showed mercy upon one who was wounded and half dead by the roadside.

Let us not "pass by" on the far side when we know of someone in need. Let us be good neighbors to the needy. We would not say, "We shall pray for you" to one who needed food, and do nothing to get him food! "Faith without works is dead." To pray only would reveal a dead faith.

Jesus was the good Samaritan. In His hands are: health for the sick, sight for the blind, love for the hated, joy for the sorrowful, forgiveness for the sinner, life for all who will believe. Yes, He paid the price of our redemption when He died for us.

May we all be ready to receive these many blessings in their fullness when He comes.

A Prayer

"Jesus, help my eyes to see
All the good Thou sendest me.
Jesus, help my ears to hear
Calls for help from far and near.
Jesus, help my hands to do
All things loving, kind, and true.
Jesus, may I helpful be,
Growing every day like Thee."

—Selected by Mrs. Benjamin Johnson.

ECE Study Club

Review the thirty-one books learned, especially from Isaiah through Obadiah. Can you write and spell the names? Can you spell "Ecclesiastes" correctly?

Favorite Bible Verses

"Jesus said, Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 19:14). This is the favorite verse of Edison Millsap, age 8, Mt. Vernon, Ark.

Esta Lee Millsap, age 12, sent us Romans 1:16: "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek."

Decently and in Order

* * *

By Lorna Macy, Troy, Ohio

How many of you, when doing your work, have some kind of a system or routine that you like to follow?

In writing to the Christians at Corinth, Paul wrote, "Let all things be done decently and in order." "All things" include a treasurer's work, as well as a business meeting, church service, housekeeping, rearing of children, or earning the daily bread. All must have an adequate system, order, or method of procedure before anything can be accomplished. A business meeting in which Roberts "Rules of Order" are completely discarded will accomplish as little as would someone trying to empty the ocean with a spoon.

So must every treasurer do his work "decently and in order." First, he needs a book in which to list the expenditures and receipts. This book should be kept up to the minute, and not a day behind.

Every penny deposited and every penny spent should be recorded. He should keep tab of the date when the money was drawn out or taken in. Also, he should make a note as to when, how, and where the money was used, and as to whom and from whom the receipts emanated.

Neatness is of vital importance in the treasurer's work. If the treasurer's book is neat, it can be easily checked and specific items can readily be found.

Make a detailed report to your society at every meeting. This will keep the society well informed of the amount of money in its treasury. In this way the members will know the need, if any, for more contributions or promptly paid dues.

When Paul left Titus in Crete, he left him there so that Titus might "set in order the things" that were left undone. Titus had to organize and set up a system in the church at Crete, so that the church would move forward and not slide backward.

If you do not use a system or definite routine in doing your work, why not inaugurate one right now? Then, see how much more smoothly you are able to carry on your work. The Apostle Paul, who said, "Let all things be done decently and in order," also reminded the Corinthians that "God is not the author of confusion, but of peace, as in all churches of the saints" (1 Cor. 14:33).

Why Go to Church?

* * *

—Unsigned

As I walked away from the church steps last Sunday at the conclusion of the sermon, I wondered just why I had attended the service! Was my attendance just a habit, or did I go to church because I received something from each service? Possibly I went because each member of a small church is needed in every meeting—because, had I not gone, I would have been missed.

To be certain, regular attendance at church is a habit, but is it not a fine habit to cultivate? The man who never puts in a full week at his work is of little value to his employer. Similarly, one who has a hit-and-miss attendance record at church is of less value to the church.

As I considered the words of the minister, I wondered just how many other people had realized the words of wisdom in David's verse: "Even a fool, when he holdeth his peace, is counted wise." Surely each of us should endeavor to control that member of our body which is so often overactive—our tongue. Gossip and slander are not of the Lord. That sermon brought out some very good facts. I was better for having heard it.

I had benefited by attending church, but had anyone benefited by my attendance? Though it seems as though the absence of one member would not be noticed, this is not true. Of course, one may be present time after time and receive nothing more than a casual "Hello." However, omitting one service will bring practically the whole church board to your doorstep.

One should worship God every day, not only on Sunday; however, mere attendance at church will help one to be more than a "Sunday Christian." Just as our automobiles must have fuel to keep going, so man must have spiritual fuel to "keep going" for Christ. Possibly, one can gain that spiritual fuel by observing God through nature, but that fuel is more likely to be found in one of God's churches. Nature proves the existence of God. Since nature was created before sin entered the world, it is impossible for nature to reveal God's plan for redemption.

No, I do not attend church merely through habit. Nor do I attend merely because I'll be missed if I stay away. I attend church because its benefits to me are numberless—I cannot risk missing a single service.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALENDAR OF EVANGELISM

December 15—Iowa Quarterly Conference at Gladbrook.

SAC CITY, IOWA

Special evangelistic services were held by Bro. J. W. Williams at Sac City, Iowa, from October 21-27 in the home of Mrs. Augusta Rouse. We are very happy to welcome to our church family the ten people who were baptized on Sunday afternoon, October 27: Mr. and Mrs. Walter Rouse, Mr. and Mrs. LaVerne Rouse, Mrs. Osear Blumgren and her daughter Pearl, Mr. Harvey Wilson and his son James, Miss Gayle Wilson, and Miss Rosemarie Brownell. Walter and LaVerne are sons of Sr. Rouse, Mrs. Blumgren is her daughter, Mr. Wilson her son-in-law, and Pearl, Gayle, and Rosemarie are granddaughters. Many of us remember Esther Rouse Brownell, the mother of Rosemarie. What a happy day it must have been for Sr. Rouse, who is also the mother of two of our former workers in the Bereans!

We rejoice over these additions to the body of Christ, and we hope that the weekly Bible study class which has been started for the Lake View-Sac City congregation under the leadership of Bro. Arthur Johnson will be very profitable for all.

BRUSH CREEK, OHIO

Special meetings at the Brush Creek, Ohio, Church of God started November 17, with guest speaker J. W. McLain, State evangelist of Indiana, working with the pastor, Harvey U. Krogh, Jr. The messages concerning the Tabernacle, prophecy, and the Kingdom are being received with open and receptive hearts. Meetings, thus far, have been well attended, with an attendance of one hundred forty-four at Sunday school, November 24.

We are very happy to report three baptisms in the first week of our meetings. The ones to accept Christ as their Savior are: Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Pearson, Rt. 2, Tipp City, Ohio, and Miss Martha Pensyl, Rt. 1, West Milton, Ohio. May God's richest blessings attend them as they walk in this new life. Our hope and prayer are that many others will see the light.

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

Bro. and Sr. F. L. Austin's new address is 1705 S. Leer St., South Bend, Ind.

"Alan McLain and Francis Burnett preached two good sermons, Sunday, November 24."—J. W. Cooper, Ripley, Ill.

"Grandma" Hatch and "Uncle" Paul, Harvey, Ill., were Thanksgiving Day guests at the editor's home.

"To be educated in the truth is worth more than all other learning; to live it is priceless."—C. Alan McLain, Oregon, Ill.

Sr. Anna Drew, resident of Golden Rule Home, fell asleep in Christ, Saturday afternoon, November 30. Funeral services conducted Tuesday, December 3, will be reported more fully next week by her pastor, Bro. L. E. Conner.

Pages 8 and 9 herald Harold in The Herald.

Blizzard aftermath: "We had a snowdrift eight feet deep at the east end of our barn."—E. H. Magaw, Lester Prairie, Minn.

From Russellville, Ark., Bro. T. A. Drinkard writes, "I am leaving for Oklahoma tomorrow (November 30); then home (Handley, Texas).

Writing of the Thanksgiving number of The Herald, Bro. R. H. Judd, Toronto, Ont., comments: "Bro. C. E. Randall's article is particularly good and instructive; so is Bro. Arthur G. Young's and Bro. S. J. Lindsay's. Indeed, all the articles are most interesting. . . . I think friends and relatives in England will be much interested to see the interest you have taken in war guests."

It will cost you only the price of a government postal card, whereas it costs us two cents to learn through the Postal Department of your new address, and by your reporting the matter you can eliminate considerable delay.

Loyalty: To be loyal to the Lord, to the Bible, to the truth as understood and taught by the Church of God, we plead that all our Sunday schools cooperate with us by using Truth Seekers' Quarterly. The edition for the first quarter of 1941 will soon be ready for mailing. Let us have an order from your Sunday school. The price is fifteen cents each per quarter, if three or more are ordered. Single copies cost seventeen cents.

"Christianity, in incorporating heathen fables and philosophies, has become a veritable Babel of religions. . . . The beauty and harmony of God's great Written Revelation cannot long remain hidden to the earnest seeker after truth."—Harold Hardesty, Oregon, Ill.

"The way the world is going, I feel that we shall not have long to work in the Lord's vineyard. We need more ministers of the Church of God to go into the gospel field to preach the truth to the people. I am glad the Bible Training School is progressing, and I am pleased with the idea of putting something aside for the retired ministers and their wives."—Mrs. Kittie C. Humphreys, Royal, Ark.

Supposing that members of the Church of God will soon spend several hundred dollars for Christmas trees and trimmings, we become interested in Jeremiah 10:1-10. Though written to Israel, this scripture may have an application or lesson for the church "upon whom the ends of the world are come" (1 Cor. 10:11).

"I enjoy The Herald more since I have been shut in here than I ever did before. It is about my only contact with the truth, as the ministers who come here have it twisted more than occasionally."—Gerald L. Cooper, Ah-Gwah-Ching, Minn.

BROWN - CASBERG

On Sunday, November 3, at 7:00 a.m., occurred the marriage of Miss Noma Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Brown, and George Casberg, all of Waterloo, Iowa. The writer performed the ceremony, the first of its kind to be held in the new church building at the Waterloo Church of God.

Immediately following, a reception and wedding breakfast were given at the home of the bride's parents. A large, beautifully decorated wedding cake centered the table. The couple left at once for a short wedding trip to Chicago, after which they will make their home at 1116 Mulberry St., Waterloo, Iowa.

Noma is widely known in Church of God circles, having attended General Conference several times, and being in constant attendance at Waterloo Conferences since young girlhood. Since the beginning of the Iowa Berean paper, The Searchlight, she has been coeditor. She is also secretary of the State Bercans. She is an accomplished violinist, sharing her gift at various services through Conference sessions. She has also been a violinist with the Waterloo Symphony Orchestra for sometime. Mr. Casberg is employed by the Rath Packing Company at Waterloo.

MRS. LUCY ROBINSON

Mrs. Lucy Robinson, whose maiden name was Schnasse, was born in Germany, November 17, 1864, and came to the United States with her parents in 1865. They lived in Missouri until 1877, then they moved to Nebraska. She was married to Henry Robinson at St. Paul, Nebr., January 20, 1885. To them were born six children, one dying in infancy. Those surviving are: Sherman, Portsmouth, Va.; Lee, Ottumwa, Iowa; Mrs. Elsie Place, Independence, Mo.; Mrs. Nona E. Wyatt, Los Angeles, Calif.; and Mrs. Josephine Christensen, Clarks, Nebr. There are two sisters, Mrs. George Berek, Osceola, Nebr., and Mrs. Charles Evans, Denver, Colo, and one brother, Henry G. Schnasse of Hollywood, Calif. Mr. Robinson died in 1923.

In the early "nineties" Bro. and Sr. Robinson embraced the teaching of life only through Christ and His soon return to raise the dead, and establish God's Kingdom on earth. They were baptized by the late Elder Almus Adams who traveled extensively throughout the West, teaching these precious truths. Sr. Robinson came to Los Angeles last spring to spend the summer with her daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wyatt, who kindly looked after all her wishes, bringing her to church regularly, where we all learned to love her. In October, she decided to return to Osceola, Nebr., to be with a lonely sister. She was happy to be back in her home State, away from the noise and hustle of a big city. She was apparently well, but suddenly after supper November 13, she died. Her death came as a distinct shock to her relatives and friends. Had she lived four days longer, she would have been seventy-six years of age. Funeral services were conducted by a local minister and she was laid to rest beside her husband in St. Paul, Nebr., to await the call of the Life-Giver.

ELIZA MARION DREW

Eliza Marion Drew was born in Montezuma, N. Y., December 19, 1854, and died at her home in Dixon, Ill., November 24, 1940, leaving surviving of her immediate family, four sons and two daughters, namely: Avon of Tacoma, Wash; Earl, Floyd, and Ross of Dixon, Ill., Mrs. Lila Wagner of Dixon, Ill., and Mrs. Bessie Schrock of Ottawa, Ill., nine grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren, her husband and one son having died a number of years ago.

Grandma Drew, as she was affectionately known by her many friends, had been a faithful member of the Church of God, of Dixon, Ill., for many years; a woman of kindly, affectionate, and cheerful disposition, who bore her troubles and sorrows with Christian fortitude and without complaint; being full of years, rich in faith and hope, she quietly fell asleep.

Funeral services were held in the church where she had enjoyed meeting with others for worship, after which she was tenderly laid to rest and wait for the dawning of the Lord's day.

The Restitution Herald is the official organ of the General Conference of the Church of God. It is published by the National Bible Institution at Oregon, Illinois.

L. E. Conner Business Manager

Subscription Rate.—51 issues per annum, $2.00.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him, (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

Ministers of the Church of God

Headquarters: Oregon, Illinois

THE following list of ministers, whose names have been reported to us by the secretaries of their several state conferences, or local churches, is published to make it more convenient for these ministers to obtain Clergy Fare Certificates from the railroad clergy bureaus, and to facilitate the securing of evangelists and pastors on the part of any of our churches who may be in need of such assistance. We are sorry that this list is incomplete. We know, for instance, that Sister Clinton Appleby, Blair, Nebraska, is actively engaged in the ministry and doing a good work; and there are, most likely, several other names that should be added to this list. We trust that conference and church secretaries will report other ministers' names and addresses. It is very probable that a revised list will be published within a few weeks.

"HOLD FAST"

By H. H. Hawkins

WHEN a person is moving about on a train or on a boat, it is only natural that he would look for a handrail or other support for self-protection. Christians should always look for the Higher Support that will guide us at all times, even though the handrail of the train or boat is not available. Why not heed the admonition in Hebrews 10:23, "Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering; (for he is faithful that promised)"?

No one will deny that the world is in a turmoil. At the present moment, millions of men are engaged in warfare, and other millions are in training. We dread to think of the destruction that is now going on in the nations across the sea, in which struggle women and helpless children suffer in many ways. In lands where war is not rampant, people continue with their madness for pleasure in its many channels, all more or less resulting in a disregard for God. Is it any wonder that the Prophet of old saw a time coming when "the earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard" (Isa. 24:20)?

Is the wickedness of this world to continue forever? No! "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever" (Dan. 2:44).

While we, as individuals, have no control over existing conditions, we should not throw up our hands and float along with the current, but let us be like the live fish that can swim against the current, and by doing so we may "fight the good fight of faith, (and) lay hold on eternal life."

In these last days, when there are so many "isms" and other things to detract, we should at every opportunity "earnestly contend for the faith." One way to do this is to have a supply of pamphlets at one's home or place of business, and when the opportunity arises, present the party with a pamphlet or leaflet. Again, these can be placed in an envelope when writing to someone. "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 5:16). By doing this and other services for the Lord, we are "holding fast the faithful word," and helping "to convince the gainsayers" (Titus 1:9).

H. H. Hawkins

There is a great necessity for the return of Christ that the word of prophecy may be fulfilled. Here one of our pamphlets comes in handy—"The Coming of Christ," by R. A. Curtis. Every church or meeting place should have a special rack for pamphlets which would be available for visitors and others. In telling others about these wonderful truths, we first must be firm believers. "Without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him" (Heb. 11:6).

Many people seek worldly rewards or honors, and will stop at almost anything to obtain them, never considering that they are only temporary and oftentimes of very short duration. If we are Christ's, we should "seek those things which are above." The reward which comes from above will be eternal, or everlasting, to those who wait patiently for the crown of immortality to be given when Christ comes. "Unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation" (Heb. 9:28). Said Jesus, "Behold, I come quickly . . . to give every man according as his work shall be" (Rev. 22:12).

It behooves us all to lay aside the things of this world which would interfere in any way with eternal life, because the pride of man is only foolishness with God. Let's look up and not down, and be steadfast unto the end."

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March, 1879.

Last Choice

Seven of Jesse's sons were considered for the kingship, before David was called before Samuel. That David knew this is almost certain, but that men considered him as last choice in no way embittered him toward his senior brothers or diminished his joy and appreciation of God's call. Likewise, Paul was last chosen as an apostle, yet seemingly labored more abundantly than the others. Said David, "When my father and my mother forsake me, then the Lord will take me" (Psalm 27:10). Said Paul, "If God be for us, who can be against us?" (Rom. 8:31.)

Honesty When It Hurts

"Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in thy holy hill? . . . He that sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not" (Psalm 15:1,4). It sometimes happens that by breaking a promise one might gain in dollars and cents, but especially if breaking the promise would in any way inconvenience the second party, he who made the oath should keep it, bearing the loss, that he might abide in the tabernacle of God. Esau is not alone in selling his birthright for a mess of pottage.

Though the foregoing is off our usual type of editorial, it should serve to assure our readers that we are interested in all (some names would not fit). We do not have time to write personally to you, but be sure we are concerned about you. Also, we need your help. "Pray for us."

Bread of Faces

By C. E. Randall

THE more one becomes conversant with the Old Testament, the more he realizes the imbedded truth in Paul's statement to Timothy that "everything written under divine inspiration is helpful for teaching, for refuting error, for giving guidance, and for training others in righteousness; so that the servant of God may be perfect himself, and perfectly equipped for every good action" (2 Tim. 3:16, 17, Twentieth Century). Every page of the Bible is a source of light and life, inspiration and blessing, encouragement and instruction.

Some years ago, a lady with whom we were talking, said, "I am so busy living the Christian life that I don't have time to bother myself with the Old Testament." What a blessing she was missing! The Old Testament is a revelation of good things for the people of God, and a divine interpreter of the New Testament. God bless the people who love the Lord so much that they want to know about His will and way as revealed in ages past!

Table of Shewbread

The table of shewbread holds a lesson for us that all inquiring Bible students should learn. It stood in the holy place of the Tabernacle, and was situated on the right-hand side of this room as approach was made toward the holy of holies. Like the other pieces of furniture in this room, it was overlaid with pure gold. It was not the table that was so important, as that which was on the table and the use made of the table. Upon this table was spread the shewbread. This bread was unleavened and the loaves were thin. There were twelve loaves, placed in two stacks of six each, kept perpetually on this table—the number twelve representing the twelve tribes of Israel. The bread was renewed each week, the old loaves being eaten by the priests.

Description of the table and of the bread may be found in Exodus 25:23-30; Leviticus 24:5-9. In reality, it was the "table of the Lord" prepared for the priests of God. There is another priestly class (1 Peter 2:5, 9) for which a table is being prepared. This table will be spread in the Kingdom of God (Luke 22:29, 30).

Bread of Faces

The literal meaning of "shewbread" is, "Bread of Faces." It is evident that there were faces on this bread which suggested the presence of God. Another name which could be applied to this bread is, "Bread of Presence." Though we are not told what made this the "Bread of Faces," it is a reasonable deduction that the cherubim, which overshadowed the mercy seat and were wrought by fine needlecraft into the coverings and hangings of the Tabernacle, were designed also in the "Bread of Presence." The cherubim, wherever appearing, indicate the presence of God. God dwells between the cherubim (Psalm 99:1).

The "Bread of Presence" pointed forward to the "living bread," the "bread of life" (John 6:48-54). As the priests used the shewbread as a part of their diet, we must live by eating of that living Bread. "If any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever." This living forever, of course, refers to eternal life in the Kingdom. Jesus represented the presence of God. God's power was manifested through Christ. Too little emphasis in these latter times is being placed on our need of Christ in daily life, the manifestation of the presence of God.

Putting the thought in New Testament language, we have: "Christ in you, the hope of glory" (Col. 1:27). Paul gave life to this thought in his letter to the Galatians, when he said: "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God" (Gal. 2:20). There is more to the presence of Christ in the life of the Christian than a mere assent to His teachings. More, this manifested presence must be a continual one, that is, we cannot have it today, neglect it tomorrow, and enjoy it the next day. Like the shewbread, it must be an abiding presence.

There is another form of bread which the shewbread typified. It is the Word of God. "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God" (Matt. 4:4). It must be apparent to all that there are only a few who daily live by partaking of this bread of God. This bread is the nourishment that feeds the new man in Christ Jesus. As we eat and live by this bread, it becomes a "Bread of Faces" to us, and we manifest the presence of God and the life of Jesus Christ. In a sense, the written Word makes us the living word, otherwise spoken of as "living epistles, known and read of all men."

Unleavened Bread

The shewbread was unleavened, that is, it had nothing in it that would cause fermentation. Unleavened bread is a symbol of "sincerity and truth" (1 Cor. 5:8). Whereas, leaven or leavened bread stands for "malice and wickedness," and false doctrine, sometimes called "doctrines of men" (Matt. 16:6-12; 15:9). (Please turn to page 11)

Historic Rendezvous

By Arlen Marsh

WITH a certain tongue-in-the-check cynicism, the embattled Greeks appear to have been acting wholeheartedly on the principle of Lao-Tze, Chinese philosopher: "The more we give to others, the more we are increased."

For in their two-month-old war, the Greeks have surprised not only the world at large, but themselves as well, by snapping back like a stretched rubber band at invading Fascism. They have given—ah, how they have given!—and from their own peculiar selfish viewpoint they have proved beyond any doubt that it is more blessed to give than to receive.

Prior to the abortive efforts of Italian troops to scale the almost sheer cliffs of the northwestern and western Greek mountains, the egregious Mussolini poured forth anathema with all the speed of a newspaper press printing a war extra. Fascist communiqués outdid even the Germanic efforts at boastful bluster.

Then came the affairs at Madik and Koritza, the blasting of the Italian Navy by a hard-working Royal Air Force, the definite stemming of the Fascist advance into Egypt. Greeks, who apparently were unaware that they were supposed to run away and hide, drove well into Albania, threatened capture of half the newly acquired Italian possession, sang tumultuously, "On to Rome!"

And the magniloquent Mussolini reversed himself so quickly that press agents in Egypt, Palestine, and other African and Near Eastern nations were caught with the wrong words in their mouths. While they spouted defiance at the enemies of Italy, Il Duce ruefully announced to the world that Fascism must face the facts, that England was doing phenomenally well, that the Axis must gird itself for a long war. Indeed, so remarkable and so complete was his change of heart that many observers, mindful of the efforts of Prince Umberto to pull Italy out of the war with Greece, interpreted the Duce's shift as a mark of the great man's fear for the outcome of the war.

While Mussolini's fleeing legions were being smitten hip and thigh by the Greeks and by certain recalcitrant Albanian tribesmen, activity on the diplomatic front rose to such heat as to melt the wing collars of a half dozen different ambassadors and ministers. Rumania, already overrun by German troops, joined itself to the Axis in a non-combatant role; so did Slovakia.

But Bulgaria refused to sign any kind of pact with the Fascist-Nazi Powers.

Superficially, this refusal of the Bulgarian Government to countenance diplomatic union with the Axis bore the marks of courage as great as that shown by Iceland when that tiny nation refused pointblank to permit German occupation of her flying fields before the current war began. Actually, Bulgaria's obstinacy derived from Uncle Ivan—as the Bulgarians still call Russia—who indicated that any further changes in the Balkan status quo would be dealt with in no gentle manner.

The Bulgarian attitude, plus the Greek successes against Italy, were expected to persuade Yugoslavia to stand off Axis demands for cooperation. (Yugoslavia has one of the best armies in Europe—or had, in 1938.) Moreover, the Bulgarian attitude and the Yugoslavian neutrality combined with the Turkish disposition to favor Britain; and the three factors, temporarily, at least, protected Greece from any further invasion by German-Italian interests. Greece is bounded by four nations: Albania, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, and Turkey; three of these four now act as buffer States against hostile encroachments.

There are those students who will feel that any successes Greece may have will be at best temporary. These students will point out that Greek victories have been due to three things: first, invading Italian mechanized units operating on what level ground there was bogged down in mud that seemed to stretch through to the Antipodes; second, Greek defending forces were fighting principally in territory so steep that not even mules could be used for transportation; third, and most unusual, Greek and Italian armies used ammunition of the same style and caliber—which permitted Greece to turn captured ammunition dumps to her own use. The advantages of these factors, in the eyes of pessimists, early might be lost in the face of superior Italian-German resources and equipment.

But the Italian Navy has been decimated. The most important taking-off points in Albania for Italian invasion of Greece are in Greek hands. Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, and Turkey form an effective barrier against any immediate military invasion of Greek territory by Germany. Albanian tribesmen are attacking Italian columns on the flanks and from the rear with no little vigor and astonishing effect. British planes have bombed Italian communication lines into a state of almost complete demoralization. The Greeks' chief worry lies now—as Finland's chief worry lay—in the vastly superior numbers of the enemy; Italy alone can raise five men easily for every man the Greek dictator, Metaxas, can raise.

Bible scholars who cling to the notion that a revived

Roman Empire must be established prior to the return of our Lord will join with the pessimists in the cry that Greece is doomed. It appears, however, that almost the reverse may be true—and note that “may” very carefully. Greece was a part of the ancient Roman Empire; but the Biblical indications of a revival of that Empire are so slight as to seem considerably more theoretical than factual.

As has been pointed out in The Restitution Herald on numerous past occasions, the 38th and 39th chapters of Ezekiel and corresponding chapters of other Prophets apparently signify that three great groups of nations will be in existence, fighting a three-cornered war, at the time of Armageddon. Egypt, definitely, is not to be among those Powers which are combined with Libya and Ethiopia.

Let Us Forgive

By Thomas Savage

---

THERE are a few scriptures I should like all to read. “Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts” (James 4:3). In our prayers we are lacking in faith; therefore, we ask amiss. To believe you receive it is a prayer of faith. We cannot come to God, except by prayer through Christ our High Priest. Matthew 7:5 calls us hypocrites, or today we would say “taking a double role.” We ask God in prayer for things, but do not expect God to give them to us, then say, “Oh well, it was not the Lord’s will.” The Master prayed to His Father, and God heard all of His prayers and answered them.

In raising Lazarus from the grave (John 11:41, 42), Christ had asked God, through prayer, to again give Lazarus life. If Christ had been in doubt, Lazarus would not have come forth.

Now, we are getting down to the forgiving part of this article. If someone has wronged you, and you ask God, in all sincerity, to forgive him his wrong, God will forgive. The individual may not come to you to ask forgiveness, but all Christians should ask forgiveness. You ask God to forgive him, and He will! This may seem strange to you. Nevertheless, it is true.

When Christ hung on the cross, He asked God to forgive, saying, “Forgive them; for they know not what they do” (Luke 23:34). Did God hear Christ’s prayer? Yes! Did God answer His prayer? Yes! Had Christ asked forgiveness and not meant it, He, too, would have been taking a dual role, or have been a hypocrite. Now, as God forgave these people this wrong, who can hold it against them?

Stephen, who was being stoned to death, asked God to “lay not this sin to their charge” (Acts 7:60). Did God hear Stephen’s prayer? Yes! Did He answer it? Yes! If Stephen had asked amiss, his prayer would not have been answered. We know a hypocrite has no place in the Kingdom (Matt. 24:51). We cannot judge others for their actions; therefore, let us better our own.

There is no doubt in my mind that there are many who call themselves Christians, but still they cannot forgive. Consider the Parable of the Unmerciful Servant. (See Matt. 18:27.) The Lord forgave this servant his debt, but the servant was not willing to forgive others their debts. We know what happened to that servant. Are you in the servant’s place—willing to be forgiven, yet not willing to forgive others?

How many times did Peter say he had forgiven? Seven times. The Master said to forgive “seventy times seven” (Matt. 18:21, 22). Christ asked God to forgive the ones who were at His crucifixion of this one sin, not of all the sins they had committed. We must remember that Christ had not yet died for the sinner. Therefore, when Peter was preaching to them on the day of Pentecost, they had other sins to be forgiven, before they could accept Christ (Acts 2:38), for Christ had now died on the cross for the forgiveness of all sin (Rom. 10:9).

Stephen’s prayer was answered. Are you trying to live so you can be one of the bride of Christ? Then your prayers, also, will be answered.

Please do not think that we are trying to tell you not to go to make a wrong right, because that would not be the Scriptural thing to do. If you have wronged anyone through speech or otherwise, go, by all means, and ask forgiveness. Even if the one who was wronged does not forgive you, you are safe in the Lord’s sight. But, if someone has wronged you, do not wait for him to come and ask forgiveness, but ask God to forgive him, “believing God will,” and your prayer will be answered.

There is too much stress placed on what the “offender” should do, and not enough on what the “offended” should do. “Great peace have they which love thy law: and nothing shall offend them” (Psalm 119:165).

Let us all live forgiving lives, not willing to harbor any ill feeling toward anyone, and may the Lord bless us.

Christian Faith

Part Two

By Arthur G. Young

LET us next consider the story of the children of Israel. God asked Moses and the people to have faith in Him, and He would lead them out of the land of Egypt into the Promised Land. Did not God in the plagues of Egypt, the crossing of the Red Sea, the providing of food and water in the wilderness, the pillar of fire by night and the cloud by day, give ample evidence to the Hebrew people to support their faith? Do we not now have the fact of the Jews, and the fact of the Jews' belief in this Old Testament record before us for observation and test today?

Do not the Scriptures of the Hebrews, which we call the Old Testament, relate instance after instance, too numerous to mention, of God's supporting hand, to say nothing of the fact of His actual presence in the Tabernacle and Temple, give the Jews evidence to support their faith? Neither can we as Christians ignore His words through the prophets.

Coming down to a later date, did not the fact that God sent His Son to the earth as a sin offering, according to the Old Testament prophecies, give further evidence on which to base our faith? In our day the actual knowledge by millions of people of God's supporting care and the presence in this world of the Holy Spirit is concrete evidence, which cannot be denied.

I would also like to especially call your attention to the miracles of Christ as very weighty reasons and evidence in support of our faith in the execution of the plan of God in relation to man and earth. This plan is yet to receive its expression in perfection in the future. While it is true that the miracles Christ did were credentials which proved that He was what He claimed He was, these miracles have a much wider significance and larger bearing on our faith than only this. What is necessary in order to bring into actual being the plan of God? Is it not the execution on a world-wide scale of the miracles of Christ? In other words, if Christ raised Lazarus and others from the dead, is it not proof to you and me that He has demonstrated He has the power to raise all the dead? If He cured leprosy and other forms of sickness, is it not proof that He can cure and make an end to all sickness? If He could control the evil forces of the world so that even Satan and demons obeyed Him, is not the promise that Satan and evil will be destroyed forever, worthy of our acceptance? If He controlled the elements, and they did His bidding, is it not evidence in support of our faith that by divine power He can so order the remaking of this physical world, that it may be a fit habitation for those counted worthy of being in the perfected state? If He could rise from the dead by the power of His Father with an eternal life principle within Him to die no more, is it not evidence to support our faith that God will carry out His promises, that those who partake in the first resurrection will be endowed with eternal life and will die no more?

Yes, I say, and again, yes. It is quite possible, yet men frequently throw aside all of this evidence and deny it utterly. But mark you, if it is a fact, this does not change it. It is, to put it plainly, entirely a lie or it is worthy of all acceptance as truth. There is no halfway measure, and I have no hesitation in saying that the Christian is treading on very dangerous ground when once the question of doubt enters into his mind that this part of the Bible may be all right, but another part is of doubtful origin or correctness. The comforting thought I have is that I do not have to dodge questions such as these, but have a simple and natural explanation to give.

While we, as Christians, have faith that these events which have occurred in the past, are true and are, therefore, a basis of our faith, still they are much more than this, as they give us a faith in something definite to which we can look forward. The Bible holds out the promise of a wonderful future on this earth, it gives a reason why this future is to be, it details the means by which it will be accomplished, it states where it will take place, it states within close limits of when it will take place. I challenge any religion in the world today to answer these questions in the affirmative, definite way that the Christian Bible details.

I said, a while back, that faith is a common thing in this world. This is necessarily so, or how else could the life of the world go on? When we go to a letter box to post a letter, we do so with profound faith that the letter will reach its destination. When we get on a train, we have faith that the train will take us to the place we wish to go. You all believe what is said when someone tells you about the radio and ether waves. Well, the principle of the radio has been in the world all these centuries, but has just been discovered. Is it really harder in principle for God to hear our prayers without wires, than for you to listen to a band playing one hundred fifty miles away?

Faith in something is an absolute requirement of the human heart and mind, whether one is a Christian or not.

Where would we be without the faith that we, each and everyone of us, have in some other human being: our wives, our mothers, our fathers, our brothers, our sisters, and our friends? What is it that has made us have faith in these other human beings? It is the record of their lives with whom we have come in contact. It is the same with God: we have faith in His promises that are yet to be fulfilled by reason of the knowledge that we have of the promises that were made years ago.

This faith which we have is not simply for ourselves, individually, though it does bring a simplicity and peace of mind and comfort of spirit to all who have it. I would emphasize the fact that it is given to us principally for a purpose, and that purpose is to spread it for the salvation of others. You can see, therefore, how precious a thing our faith is—how we should cling to it, hold it, and defend it. Let no man tell you without protest that science has disproved the Bible; let no man tell you that the first few chapters in Genesis are an exploded theory. They are nothing of the kind, and I venture to remark that they will be in existence and believed when the current-day theories of science will have been exploded and lost sight of, the same as the ones that have come and gone into the forgetfulness of the past. The Bible is the living Word of God; it "liveth and abideth for ever."

It has been with a sense of ever-deepening gratitude and thanksgiving that I can honestly say to you today that the faith in the Bible, as the divinely inspired Word of God, which I received as a boy from my parents, has stood the test of examination by the man. So, I feel, today, more certain than ever that not only is the Bible the Word of God, but that it contains the conditions that God has placed before men, out of which conditions are the issues of life and death.

The Bible places before us a glorious and beautiful picture that God has painted for all humanity who will have faith and belief in Him. It is a picture that He, with omnipotent power, will make a reality, and which I sincerely and verily trust will soon come to pass. Oh, that all who hear could realize the value of life eternal in God's Kingdom on this earth that He in love has set before us, and would accept the opportunity now by laying hold on the same through faith, confessing and asking pardon for sins, so that this great reward might be theirs! This is my message and prayer. May God grant it.

Prepare Them and Be Prepared

By Orris Mills

---

TO THE PARENT: You wish to give your children the best of everything, don't you? You have many times sacrificed necessities in order that your child or children might have the best. You have sent them to schools of the world, that they might equip themselves to better defy the future, that they might earn for themselves a better livelihood. You have sent them to public schools where they mingled with the world, where they learned how to play, how to run, how to study, how to "give and take," and how to make friends. May God bless you for it. Education is the one property that can never be taken away from these loved ones of yours. Their ability to write, to speak, to make friends, and to play square, are great assets in this life. Without these, they would be very handicapped in as complicated a world as we face today. They must have this training, or they are useless to the world.

Now, "Mom" and "Dad," you have done some fine things for your children, but there is one thing greater than all that you probably have not done. You have not suited them to live Christian lives. You have not taught them Christ. You want your children to get the most out of life, but they cannot, until they truly know Jesus, the One who came and died that we might have life, and that we might have it more abundantly.

You may say, "We have taught them Christ, we have sent them to Sunday school every Sunday, and have even mentioned Him at home occasionally."

How many days did you send Jean and George to the public schools, as compared to the number of days they spent in the church school? Solomon said, "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it." Should we train him in the ways of the world more thoroughly than in the way of Christ?

We are sure you are like any other parent, you wish your son or daughter to be a Christian, to be a straight and upright character. You wish your children to get the most out of life. Then, let us plan something for them that will qualify them in this manner. Let us design for them to spend at least one year at our Bible Training School, the college where the Bible is the main textbook. God holds you responsible to a degree for what your son or

Sound Doctrine

By Ben Carpenter

IT IS not our desire to speak lightly of, or ridicule, anyone's religious beliefs, for we can respect them when they are honest and sincere, yet we must realize that honesty and sincerity do not necessarily bring salvation. For proof, we cite the case of Paul, when he persecuted the church, thinking he was doing God service. Our thoughts for "Sound Doctrine" are based on the admonition of Paul to Titus, as recorded in Titus 1 and 2. Sound doctrine is something that is logical, or reasonable, or something founded on truth. Many times arguments are made both for and against a thing, and it is hard to convince the listener if we do not have logical reasoning.

In order to carry the subject to an intelligent conclusion, we would like to make mention of several doctrinal subjects about which we, as a church group, differ from some other denominations. Sometimes we are confronted with hard questions to answer, at least to the other fellow's entire satisfaction. One Scripture text, taken alone, might appear to contradict another, and some say the Bible contradicts itself.

Let us consider, first, the transgression of our first parents, and the death sentence passed upon them. In Genesis 2:16 and 17, God warned man of the penalty of transgressing His laws, and the penalty was to be death. In Genesis 3:22-24, evidence is shown that God began to keep His part of the bargain, because He removed man from the tree of life, after he disobeyed the instructions of his Maker. We can see that the man did begin to die in that very day, because he was separated from the life-giving properties of the tree. Change and decay began to be his lot, although he did not cease from life for several hundred years. According to Genesis 5:5, Adam lived to be nine hundred thirty years of age, which was the fulfillment of Genesis 3:9.

To say any part of Adam remained alive seems unreasonable to us, because he was a sinner, and according to Ezekiel 18:4, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." Romans 6:23, tells us that "the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Then, because of transgression, death came upon Adam and Eve, and Jesus Christ had not yet brought life and immortality to light. Some may say it is the spirit that does not die, but after careful consideration of Ecclesiastes 3:18-22, it seems like sound doctrine to us to believe that God, instead of the Serpent, was right.

Suppose we consider the subject of baptism, which was an ordinance given us whereby we have access to eternal life through Christ at His coming. In the ordinance of circumcision there was no substitute, but a full compliance with the law. Likewise, in baptism I see no substitute, but a full compliance with the command. After reading such scriptures as Colossians 2:11, 12; 1 Peter 3:21; and Titus 3:5, we are convinced that baptism is an act of washing, and a purifying process, as well as a covering for sin, and the act of arising to walk in a newness of life. It does not seem reasonable to believe any form of baptism could function as a covering; only immersion typifies a covering for sin. If it is a covering for sin, who shall use it for that purpose? Shall little children, who have not reached the age of knowledge of good and evil, be considered ready for baptism? The answer, according to Acts 2:38, seems to indicate it is for one who is old enough to repent. Acts 22:16 refers to those who are laden with sin, and in Acts 8:12 it mentions only men and women. Insofar as we know, there is no record of infant baptism in all the Scriptures.

Did Jesus Pre-exist?

Now, let us consider a much discussed subject, the pre-existence of Christ. We are familiar with some of the scriptures used by those who teach such things, and will refer to one, John 8:58, "Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Before Abraham was, I am." The question arises in my mind, Did those who translated the Scriptures always put the punctuation marks where they rightly belonged? Jehovah was known to Moses and the enslaved Israelites as "I AM" (Ex. 3:14).

It seems strange to me that if Christ did exist in the beginning, that there is not some very definite reference to Him, concerning His pre-existence, in the Old Testament. It is true there are many references to Him, but they prophesy of Him to come, not that He already existed.

In Deuteronomy 6:4, Moses, in speaking to the children of Israel, said, "Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord"—not two or three, but one. The word "Lord" here is all in capital letters, which indicated to the translators that it referred to Jehovah. In Isaiah 42:8, we read: "I am the Lord: that is my name: and my glory will I not give to another, neither my praise to graven images." There is a definite promise of the Son of God coming in the glory of the Father, but it was because He was made perfect through suffering, and came into harmony, or as a partner with the Father.

In 1 Corinthians 15:47, we read, "The first man is of the earth, earthy: the second man is the Lord from heaven." Here you see Jesus is placed second, and not before—not from the standpoint of righteousness, but He came after, to redeem man from sin, for a redeemer was not needed until there was sin from which to be redeemed. In verse 46 of 1 Corinthians 15, we read, "Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual."

Concerning the theory of pre-existence, I find myself as puzzled as was Nicodemus of old, and ask, "How can these things be?" If Jesus were already a spiritual being, how could He be born of the Virgin Mary? To have been in the beginning of time with Jehovah and to have continued with Him to the birth of the Babe of Bethlehem would have required some measure of immortality, and immortality cannot die. If we say that God and Christ are one and the same person, or being, then we confess that God was nailed to the cross for our sins; and who can reason intelligently that the Creator would die for the creature? It seems more logical to me to believe Ephesians 4:6, which teaches that the one God is the Father of all, and above all, even above the Son, who said, "I come . . . to do thy will, O God" (Heb. 10:7, 9).

Born of the Spirit at Resurrection

There are those, too, who believe we are born of the Spirit in this life. Such a thing might be possible, but I am unable to understand how. It is true Jesus told Nicodemus, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God" (John 3:5), but there is nothing to indicate that the birth of the water and of the Spirit are one and the same, or that they take place at the same time.

In John 3:8, we read: "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit." Now, I am just simple-minded enough to take Jesus at His word and believe that the birth of the Spirit will enable us to come and go as unobserved as the wind, but I do not believe it will be while we are "that which is flesh." In John 3:6, Jesus said: "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit, is spirit." Certainly no one could say that he is ready now—subject to sin and death as he is—to be a joint heir with Christ, because Christ is alive to die no more, and we have not yet put on immortality. When, by the Spirit of God, we are made like Christ is, we believe, the logical time for the birth of the Spirit.

Will God Torture the Wicked?

There are, also, people who believe God will torture the wicked in eternal misery. If such were true, the tortured would of necessity be endowed with eternal life; otherwise he would not be conscious of the misery, in which case it would not be torture. Let us consider God's nature. In Psalm 136, every one of the twenty-six verses ends with "His mercy endureth for ever." In Ezekiel 18:23, God speaking, we read, "Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord God." Verse 32 says, "I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord God: wherefore turn yourselves, and live."

I once heard a preacher, who was telling his version of the terribleness of hell, say that after a man had been in hell for ten thousand years, if he could then find a ladder made of razor blades, it would take him another ten thousand years to climb out, but that a man would try to get away from such miseries, even by using a razor-blade ladder to escape on. He failed to say how the sharp steel blades would stand up under such terrific heat as he pictured hell to be. Also, ten thousand years is a longer period of time than we have any authentic record of mankind, but twice ten thousand years is only a moment of time, compared to the endless ages of eternity.

If God is a loving heavenly Father, and if His mercy endures forever, how could He hide His face from such scenes? If He had no pleasure in one's death, certainly He would not enjoy the agony of the tortured ones in such a place as some try to picture hell.

Search the Scriptures

How shall we know what is "sound doctrine"? Can we take everyone's word for it? Are there any religious leaders who are qualified to instruct us in the way of truth and righteousness? Are we not all under an obligation to search the Scriptures, and to seek out for ourselves, as the Bereans of old did, to find out what is true?

In John 5:39, Jesus said to the Jews: "Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me." In 2 Timothy 2:15, Paul says, "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

It would hardly be possible for a child to read and understand everything in the Bible, nor would many adults fully understand it all, but if one is earnest and sincere, as was Cornelius, the centurion, and if one will try as he did, God will lead him in the way he should go. It is so easy, though, for one to be careless, to drift with the tide; and the tide sometimes carries one away to destruction.

There are many other subjects that we might consider, but I believe this will suffice to show the necessity of clear thinking, and logical reasoning, so that we might be in harmony with God's will. "Therefore let us not sleep, as do others; but let us watch and be sober. . . For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Thess. 5:6, 9). Not only should we speak the things that become sound doctrine, but live them as well.

PREPARE THEM AND BE PREPARED

daughter does. Society holds you responsible to an almost unanimous degree for what your son or daughter contributes. That you may be proud of your children, make it a point in your outline of their lives that they spend at least one year in this, your Bible Training School. Dollars and cents cannot measure the benefits which they will receive from a year of true religious instruction.

In this present world of atheism and infidelity, one who is not well founded in the Bible can hardly go through college without graduating as somewhat of a skeptic, if not a downright infidel or atheist.

The new semester will begin January 27. For your boy or girl's sake, send him or her to the next semester of the Bible Training School. This School is not a school designed only for preachers; it is one organized for all who wish to gain an understanding of what they believe, to grasp the great meaning of salvation, and to prove above all manner of doubt the authenticity of the Bible.

A year spent here will be the most profitable one that could ever be spent. Your son and daughter will never be able to thank you enough, once they have attended. It will help them immeasurably, regardless of the vocations they choose to follow.

TO THE STUDENT: I suppose like me you are, above all, glad for life in the United States of America. We can especially be keen to this as we view the foreign situation. You fellow students in college and high school are, I suppose, getting all set for the basketball season, although you are somewhat relaxing from the enjoyable football season we saw this year.

I enjoyed college very much; I thought I was having a "grand old time," but I found we could have an even more satisfying life if we knew one greater—that One is the Lord Jesus Christ. We cannot have a full understanding of life, until we thoroughly and positively know Him. Paul said, "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." There is only one way to entirely know Him, and that is by studying. The only way to study Him is by contact with others who know Him, and in that contact you will also study the Bible.

There is a Bible school appropriate for your need, that school is the Bible Training School at Oregon, Illinois. In this School you will be taught the truth of the Bible. This School will show you the meaning of the life to come. You will gain knowledge of the Bible to the extent that you cannot possibly disbelieve. I realize how often we can come to doubt the Bible when we so often hear skeptics, agnostics, infidels, and atheists speak, but when we fully gain the truth, when we study the Bible from all angles, when we understand God's great plan and the harmony of the Scriptures, we cannot doubt one mite of it.

In addition to our spiritual life in the School, we have good Christian fun—even in our work. We have basketball, music, dramatics, and, of course, regular parties. In regard to the basketball team, I might add that we haven't lost a game this year.

When the next semester starts, we should like very much to see you here. If you cannot arrange to come next semester, plan to come next fall. You owe yourself at least one year of instruction in the Bible.

TO OTHERS: There is a position in addition to the parent and the student in the Bible Training School, which is fully as great. If you do not have a son or a daughter to send, if you yourself cannot come, but wish to have a part in the School, if you wish to share in the rich blessings that will come to those who take part, you may contribute your wholehearted support in finance, in spirit, in prayer, and in word. Financial support is needed. There are many things to be purchased, and your support will be appreciated.

The greatest work is saving souls for Christ. Each member of the Church of God has a part to perform. The Lord "gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ." We cannot all be preachers, we cannot all be teachers, but we all have a life that we can give in support of God's work. Let us help prepare others, that thereby we might better prepare ourselves for Christ's coming.

HISTORIC RENDEZVOUS

pia—yet Egypt, Libya, and a small portion of Ethiopia were at one time sections of the Roman Empire. If, therefore, the old Empire is to be revived, it may be in an abbreviated state. If Italy wins this war, it possibly will mean the transference of Egypt to Italian hands—a dream that has festered in Mussolini as dreams of Indian conquest long have festered in the rulers of Russia. If Italy does not win, it will mean, probably, the freeing of Greece and, perhaps, Albania, from threats of Italian domination.

All this, of course, is pure speculation. The Bible does not picture, as a rule, exact results of war on international boundaries and diplomacy; it is not intended to picture such results. The Bible deals in generalities—as those generalities affect the Jews, Palestine, the church. To attempt to lay down dogmatic prophetic interpretations is to invite disaster—the simplest, and the only sure, way to make use of Bible prophecy is by tying it up with events as they occur, and not as they are likely to occur.

UNSHAKEN

Selected by Beatrice Walter

"No matter how the world may move,
Or how the wind may blow,
Or how the tides may rise and fall,
Or seasons come and go,
They ne'er affect me nor disturb
My peaceful soul's content,
And I remain unshaken,
Undisturbed, unmoved, unrent.

"The things that other persons say,
The things that they would do
Cannot affect my spirit's peace,
My spirit constant, true,
And things outside cannot molest,
And neither can they harm,
For in the calmness of my soul
I'm safe from all alarm.

"Unshaken, undisturbed, unmoved—
The spirit in my breast
Makes me to know I am secure
And safe from all unrest.
I pause in time of stress and strain,
Amidst all worldly things,
And listen to assurance sweet—
With joy my spirit sings."

BREAD OF FACES

Hence, if the Word is to become to us a "Bread of Faces" (Presence), we must be void of malice and wickedness and free of false doctrines—else, in our hands it will be made "leavened bread," as it was in the hands of the Pharisees.

In our last article, the question was asked, If the Word is light, why, with its wide dissemination, is there so much darkness in the world? Our reply to this question is, that the unleavened bread (Word of God) in the hands of man has been mixed with so much malice, wickedness, and doctrines of men, that to all intents and purposes, it has become in their hands "leavened bread." This kind of bread has no redeeming power—no saving grace. It makes it possible for people to be ever learning from it, but they can never come to a "knowledge of the truth" (2 Tim. 3:7).

BUILDING YOUR LIBRARY

Book Reviews

By Arlen Marsh

Neither Normative Psychology of Religion nor Psychiatry ever will be read for its beautiful word pictures, its delightful humor, and its entertainment value; but both books probably will be in use by ministers long after contemporary lighter works have been forgotten.

The first (Thomas Y. Crowell; $3.50) is more thorough, but no more authoritative than Psychiatry. It deals with voluminous case histories of two first-class psychiatrists who feel that religion is every whit the balm it is held to be by Dr. Link's famous volume, The Return to Religion. It's dull, of course; but it offers concise pictures of how Christianity may be used to solve psychological problems, of what religious belief and practice do to men and women and boys and girls in various occupations and economic levels.

Psychiatry (William B. Eerdmans; $1.50) purports, according to its jacket, to be "for pastors, students, and nurses." We suspect it would be more valuable for the latter two classes than for the first—but this in no way lessens its value for the first. Case histories abound, written from the files of a large denominational insane asylum, of paranoia, schizophrenia, and numerous other fancy versions of mental disability. The object is to enable the reader to determine what symptoms represent mental defects. It is not intended, of course, to enable the reader to perform accurate psychological diagnoses.

Frequently, religion properly applied may be used as a curative for psychological disturbances and mental diseases. These two books have been prepared to help the pastor and student recognize when mental disease exists and to use their religious teachings as a basis for calming minor fanaticisms and illusions.

Problem cases arise in every congregation. Those who are called "queer" usually are queer because of mental illness—which often can be cured. Normative psychology of Religion and Psychiatry should assist in giving such eccentrics a break for almost the first time in church history.

The Drs. Weimann of Chicago are coauthors of the larger book; Dr. Jacob Mulder, superintendent of the Christian Psychopathic Hospital, prepared Psychiatry.

Christmas

"It is Christmas in the mansion,
Yule log fires and silken frocks;
It is Christmas in the cottage,
Mother's filling little socks.
It is Christmas on the highway,
In the thronging, busy mart;
But the dearest, truest Christmas
Is the Christmas in the heart."

The First Report

The first report as to whether anyone is learning the names of the books of our Bible was a joy to me. Luella Mae Unterkircher of Sherrard, Illinois, writes:

"How are you? I hope you are just fine. I like the Children's Page ECE Club lessons. I can say, write, and pronounce the books so far."

Then Luella wrote the names for me. They were spelled correctly, too. Luella also sent us a new member. Perhaps you will see part of your letter in print, if you write to me.

Teach Us to Pray

Do boys and girls need to know how to pray? What does the Bible say? "Ask, and it shall be given you" (Luke 11:9). "How much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him" (v. 13). "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much" (James 5:16). "Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts" (James 4:3).

Surely everyone needs to know how to pray! The disciples asked Jesus to teach them to pray.

Notice, boys and girls, we begin to pray much the same as writing a letter, or talking to our parents. We address the one to whom we pray: "Our Father." Then the desire to honor and revere His name is stated. Following that, we can ask for what we desire, and thank Him for all good things. What greater thing could we pray for than for the coming of the Kingdom of God and the return of Jesus?

We ask and live according to His will. We also must forgive others, if we want forgiveness. "Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors" (Matt. 6:12). Luke says, "Forgive us our sins; for we also forgive every one that is indebted to us." We are to pray for the Holy Spirit.

May we learn to pray, so we shall not ask amiss.

We close our prayer, saying, "In Jesus' name," for He is the only One who intercedes to God for us. He is the One mediator between God and man. (See 1 Tim. 2:5)

What Tune Are You Carrying?

By Mary Richardson, Hammond, La.

Two boys were hurrying along at a rapid pace. In each of their minds raced the thought that they would be late this morning. A tardy employee irritated the boss very much, and if the offense was repeated more than three times, the employee was "fired." The livelihood of both boys depended upon their jobs, and it seemed as they hurried along this morning that the verdict would be either life or death. Suddenly, in the distance, the strains of a melody floated to their ears. Both stood tense and silent a few moments, for each recognized the melody being that of "America the Beautiful." Both boys' thoughts turned to the greatness of the nation in which they lived, and to the many opportunities it offered. In a few moments both boys passed on—each a possessor of new zeal for his work. Each boy had found something stimulating and refreshing in a tune that characterized his country.

Did you ever try to recognize what kind of tunes individuals carry? Some people live such beautiful lives that others may come to be like them. While Jesus lived on this earth, His life was a beacon in the world of sin—His tune was the most perfect and harmonious that ever was heard. Not a note was ever out of place—each fitted perfectly in His staff of life. The words to Jesus' tune were those emphasizing kindness, peace, love, happiness, service, humility, baptism, repentance, faith, obedience. Those working close to Jesus caught the tune and sought to carry it to the people, though often they were persecuted.

All through the Bible, especially in the New Testament, word pictures are given which prove to us the perfect and irreproachable life that Jesus lived. We find glimpses of His happy comradeship, His loyalty to His friends, His earnestness about His work, His anger at injustice, His pity for suffering, His tenderness for little children. These ways of living and thinking should be molded into our lives, in order that we may "carry the tune" until others recognize it as being of Christ. Individuals will never be able to learn of Christ unless we, as Christians, carry the tune to the best of our ability.

There are two kinds of tunes—the perfect, which is a pattern after Christ's wonderful and melodious tune; the other tune, which is so prominent today, is full of discordant notes—sinful notes. Each tune has its reward. The first has as its reward—eternal life; the latter—eternal destruction.

Get your true pitch from your Bible. Strive for perfection.

Tacks! Tracks! Tracts!

Want to keep that carpet in the right spot, so it will remain where it is the most useful? Tack it down. What is the easiest way to follow game? Follow tracks. What's one of the best methods for getting Biblical facts on a given subject quickly, concisely, and in an easily circulated form? Use tracts.

Yes, Sir, if you are unfamiliar with a certain subject, each tract pertaining to that subject that you read will help you to track down the truth you are seeking, and diligent study will fasten those truths as firmly in your mind as the tack fastens the carpet to the floor.

Remember that collection of tracts you have been planning to assemble. The sooner you get to work on it, the sooner you will increase your knowledge of Biblical teachings. While you're at it, why confine your collection to yourself? Did you ever try to strike up a conversation on current events with a fellow who never read the newspapers? Not much success, eh? Same thing with Christianity—too many people know so little about it. They believe a person should be good and do his best, and the rest will take care of itself. But, how many really know of God's plan for the salvation of men, and of His Kingdom to be established on this earth? It's a simple plan—easily understood—if you've ever heard about it.

Has everybody you know heard about the detailed plan of God's Kingdom? If not, why not? Probably because you haven't told them. Maybe it would be rather hard to get all of them to listen to you when they are more or less under pressure. It would be easier for them to become familiar with a few basic truths through the reading of tracts, then they could talk with you on more or less common ground.

Do you know how to distribute tracts in the most effective manner? James Watkins of Eldorado, Illinois, chairman of the Berean Publishing Committee, will be glad to help you. Write him a letter.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALENDAR OF EVANGELISM

December 15—Iowa Quarterly Conference at Gladbrook.

NO HERALD TWO WEEKS HENCE

Each year fifty-one issues of The Restitution Herald are sent to its subscribers. In the present volume, which began with the first Tuesday in October, 1940, there is a possibility of publishing fifty-three issues. Inasmuch as the regular subscription is for fifty-one issues, you will receive no Herald under date of December 24.

The issue of December 17 will be the special Christmas number; then your next issue will be dated December 31, which will be the New Year's number. . . . Merry Christmas.

HAMMOND, LOUISIANA

The meetings at the Blood River church came to a close Sunday afternoon, December 1. The final preaching service was held in the morning, followed by a basket dinner on the grounds. The meetings closed with baptismal services and Communion. Good weather prevailed throughout most of the meeting, and the attendance was exceptionally good. The largest attendance was one hundred thirty-five—the smallest fifty-six; the average was ninety-four. One of the unusual features of the meeting was the consistent attendance of many nonmembers, some having never before attended a Church of God meeting. During the last service of the meeting one young man came forward and requested baptism. The baptismal service was held shortly afterward. His name is J. C. Kennedy, Hammond, La., Rt. 1. We rejoice with him in his obedience in Christian baptism. Many others were thinking seriously of taking the same step, and we feel that in time the seed sown will bear fruit.

Bro. M. W. Lyon's sermons were plain and forceful, and as a result all felt the need of greater consecration and diligence in the Master's service. It has been a rich blessing to work with Bro. Lyon during these meetings, and the good that he has accomplished will long remain in evidence. Both churches look forward with renewed zeal to the work of the future.

The annual election of officers of the Blood River church and Sunday school took place Sunday morning, December 1, after the preaching service. The following officers were selected for the coming year: elders—Clarence Barnum, Claiborne Lee, and Melvin Richardson; deacons—Ellsworth Richardson, Cecil Richardson, Alfred Hutchinson, and Vernon Lobell; secretary-treasurer—Mary Richardson; Sunday school superintendent—Ernest Barnum; assistant superintendent—Vernon Lobell; secretary-treasurer—Eddie Wall. One interesting feature is the fact that Vernon Lobell, Mary Richardson, and Ernest Barnum, all former students of the Summer Training School, have been and are now serving the church as officers and teachers. Needless to say, the instruction and training they received at the School is proving to be quite an asset to them now in their work. May God direct us all in our labors together.

Harry Gockler, Pastor.

BRUSH CREEK CHURCH OF GOD

We are glad to report God's blessing in our meetings which closed Sunday night, December 1. Our evangelist, Bro. J. W. McLain, returned Saturday night after the service to fill appointments in Indiana on Sunday.

Bro. McLain's sermons were very interesting and timely. Some of the subjects included those on the Tabernacle, prophecy, the covenants, and the Kingdom of God. Most of these were illustrated with "rag pictures" or blackboard sketches and outlines.

The attendance ranged from eighty to one hundred forty-four, with an average of one hundred eight. Four young people were baptized into Christ and have begun their new lives as adopted children of God. Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Pearson, Rt. 2, Tipp City, and Miss Martha Pensyl, R.F.D., West Milton, were baptized Sunday, November 24, and Mr. James Lambert, 56 Redwood Ave., Dayton, was baptized Sunday, December 1. May God's richest blessing be on these who have given themselves to the Master, early in life.

Harvey Krogh, Jr., Pastor.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

Fieldman C. E. Lapp, Macomb, Ill., suggests the slogan: "A Herald in Every Home." . . . Pass the word along.

"Born, November 11, a little daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Wilber Treemaine. They call her Nancy Edna."—Flora E. Anthon, Corvallis, Ore.

It was a pleasure and privilege to have Dr. O. R. Jenks, President Emeritus of Aurora College, address the students of the Bible Training School, Thursday, December 5. His visit and address encouraged us.

"On Sunday afternoon, December 1, the enemy Death visited members of the Cecil Cronbaugh family, robbing them of their newborn babe. Funeral services were held at the church in Koszta, Monday afternoon, by Bro. J. W. Williams."—Celaire Randall, Oregon, Ill.

MACOMB, ILLINOIS

An effort is being made to build up our Sunday school. A series of teachers' meetings is being conducted by Bro. C. E. Lapp for anyone interested. Rally Day was held Sunday, November 24.

Sr. Louise Lapp and Bro. Walter Croxton filled the pulpit during Bro. Lapp's absence on November 10, and on November 17 we were fortunate in having Bro. Orris Mills speak for us.

Other recent visitors from Oregon, Ill., to our Sunday services have been Charles and Ruth Gesin, Lois Carpenter, and Edna Brewer. Gladys Mercer, Secy.

IN MEMORY

In memory of our mother who died a year ago today.

Oh, dear Mother, how we miss you;
Your place no other can fill.
Your life was a great example,
It was patterned after His will.

We know that if we are faithful,
We will see you that glorious day,
When all of life's trials are over,
And we get to the end of the way.

—By Alice and Ruth Gesin.

BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL NEWS

Dr. Orrin Jenks of Aurora College in Aurora, Ill., addressed the students here at the School, last Thursday, December 4. His topic included principally a word study. Dr. Jenks' lesson proved profitable to all.

Last Sunday, December 8, Celaire Randall spoke at Koszta, Iowa; Ellsworth Routson at Grand Rapids, Mich.; Richard Smith at Dixon, Ill.; Alan McLain at Rockford, Ill.

Cold weather has been prevalent in Oregon, Ill., the past few days, but according to the weatherman's predictions, we may soon have a change in the thermometer's tempo.

Orris J. Mills, Reporter.

Bro. H. H. Hawkins, Cleveland, Ohio, recommends to Herald readers the book, "Light From Bible Prophecy," by Louis S. Bauman. It has been recently published by the Fleming H. Revell Co., and may be bought through the National Bible Institution for $1.00 per copy.

"We have finished the first book of the Bible Foundation Series of Children's Quarterly, and enjoyed it very much. We are looking forward to the next quarterlies."—Ruth Gockler, Marshall, Ill.

The tract kits are now ready for sale and distribution. Each kit consists of a group of sixteen selected tracts. Price each is twenty cents. Address: National Bible Institution, Oregon, Ill., or James M. Watkins, Box 521, Eldorado, Ill.

ANTHONY W. DARBY

Anthony W. Darby of Gresham, Ore., who was born May 1, 1856, in Cedar County, Mo., died November 23, 1940, at his home in the Hillsvie community.

Bro. Darby was united in marriage to Miss Nettie Cramer, August 14, 1913.

He was a member of the Church of God at Corvallis, Ore., and was a minister of the gospel since he was twenty-one years of age, serving congregations in the states of Kansas, Oklahoma, Oregon, and Washington.

Bro. Darby came from Kansas to Corvallis, Ore., and from Corvallis to Gresham. He has lived in the Hillsvie community for twenty-two years.

Surviving relatives are: the widow, Mrs. Nettie Darby of Gresham; one daughter, Mrs. Alice Pryor; and one son, George of Portland; four grandchildren; four great-grandchildren; and a host of friends.

Words of comfort were spoken by the writer from Job 14.

Bro. Darby gave his life and accumulations of this world's goods in the service of his Lord and the gospel of the Kingdom. He now sleeps until Jesus comes to reward His saints.

ANNA EATON DREW

Anna Eaton Drew, daughter of Joseph Henry and Mercy A. Nowell Drew, was born in Dixon, Ill., September 28, 1866, and died in Golden Rule Home, Oregon, Ill., November 30, 1940, in the seventy-fifth year of her age.

She resided continuously in the home in which she was born until February, 1940, when she became a resident of Golden Rule Home.

For a number of years she had suffered with arthritis and a weak heart. Her entire physical system was becoming so weakened that when attacked by pneumonia, she was unable to withstand its ravages.

In the days of her youth she remembered her Creator and espoused His cause, from which time and until the close of her life, she labored industriously in His vineyard. She never missed attending a meeting held in her church, when it was reasonably possible for her to be in attendance.

Her special work, which she loved so well to do, was teaching young girls and boys the best ways of life, in which work she was very successful. When the Berean Society was first organized in Illinois, Anna E. Drew was found in its front ranks, where she remained as one of its most active aggressors until she was unable, on account of failing health, to serve so actively. She kept up her correspondence and the distribution of tracts until the time of her death. She labored quietly, but devotedly. Hers was a life of peace; she created no storms and made no enemies. Those with whom she associated loved her sincerely.

It will be comforting for her many friends to know that her passing was without pain or a struggle. She quietly fell asleep.

After appropriate services in the church in Dixon, where she enjoyed meeting with others to worship, with tender hands we laid her to rest under a blanket of flowers—emblems of love and affection—to await the coming of the Lord she loved and faithfully served.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him, (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

Evangelism Will Build the Church."*

Bible Reading Campaign

The Bible is without question the greatest, the most powerful book in the world. Why? Because it has never been overcome by its enemies. It is powerful because it has survived the neglect of those who are its friends. It has produced every spiritual urge that has ever come to man. Individual lives have been transformed, and society has been uplifted wherever its precepts have been followed.

The Bible contains the world's best literature, and more copies of it are sold than of any other known book. It brings comfort to the fearful, it is a companion to the lonely. The Bible has a strange power to build character, make drunkards sober, thieves honest, and is extremely helpful in saving youth from the pitfalls of early life.

The Bible is inexhaustible. Thousands of books have been written about it, millions of sermons preached from its pages, nevertheless its thoughts and teachings are as fresh as the morning dew.

The Bible is God's Word, therefore, it is of greater value than gold for which men die to get gain. If you have a copy in your possession, read it daily. Your life will be happier, your disposition sweeter, and while reading it yourself, you may convince others that it is of value to them.

What percentage of church members read the Bible, each day? If we knew, we might all be alarmed, and perhaps very much ashamed. Yet, it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. How can we believe except we read?

Start a Bible Reading Campaign in your church, and you will be happily surprised to see how soon the spirituality among the members will take a definite surge upward. Three or four chapters a day will cover the entire Bible in one year. To assist you, write to the Moody Bible Institute, 153 Institute Place, Chicago, Illinois, for free calendars telling the number of chapters to be read daily.

Macomb Gets a Setback

The church work here was first organized in 1937, but since that time we have had no church of our own. We were very much encouraged a year ago when the church was deeded a vacant lot in a very desirable section of the city. This lot was given to us with the understanding that we would build a church at the earliest possible date. Accordingly, a building fund was started the first of last year, and the Lord has blessed us beyond our fondest hope. This year, however, it became necessary to deed the lot back to the original owner. It has been a disappointment to us, but "if God be for us, who can be against us?"

There is a wonderful opportunity in this city of ten thousand people, but we are handicapped because of our present building and the lack of room. There are no millionaires in our group; therefore, we are asking you, whoever you are, to remember us in prayer, both in your individual devotions and when gathered together for prayer. We are praying and trusting that the Lord will help us, as He feels is best for the work at this place.

The Spirit of Christmas

The other day I attended a large Christmas parade. Santa Claus, with all the attending groups of fantastic figures that are supposed to live in toyland with him, composed the greater part. The only thing that even suggested the true meaning of Christmas was a group representing the Three Wise Men. There was plenty of room allotted to foolishness and make believe, but even as it was at the time of Jesus' birth, there was no room for Him.

Will He be forgotten this Christmas? Will we have time to think of Him? Will we be willing to give one dollar to the Lord, for every dollar present given to others? We are to celebrate the birthday of Jesus, and may we not forget Him whose birthday it is!

Christmas Dollar Day

The second quarterly Dollar Day has been set for December 15. At this Christmas season, when "it is more blessed to give than to receive," we urge each and every member of the Church of God in Illinois to send a dollar to our State treasurer, Bro. Delos Andrew. Every dollar contributed will be used in evangelistic work. The work must go forward. Please respond by returning your dollar when you receive notice from Bro. Andrew.

Jesus' Birth and Coronation

Chorus of angels in the heavens, amazed shepherds hurriedly going to the stable in Bethlehem, Mary in rapt wonder and meditation, faithful Joseph standing guard, star-guided Wise Men later asking, "Where is he that is born king of the Jews?"—all these add enchantment to the most significant birth in the history of the world. Even the no-room-in-the-inn chapter should not be overlooked, nor Herod's deceit to slay the newborn King. One senses throughout the story the miraculous, the marvelous, the sublime. The lowly birth of Jesus, so simply told, has meant more to this world than the births of all conquerors, and in the world to come earth's mighty ones will bow to Him of lowly birth become the glorious King.

The sweet peace and quietude which enriched the life of Mary, as she pondered these things in her heart, have, though probably in less degree, enriched every meditating soul humble enough to bow at the manger, devoted enough to follow to the cross and share in its pain, hopeful enough to worship in upper rooms of prayer until the ascended and invisible King should pour out blessings that none other can give.

After nineteen centuries, Christians believe the King is yet alive. As a few faithful souls awaited His birth, we await the coronation of the King. May the heavens soon sound again with song from a "multitude of the heavenly host." The night is upon us: nearly all have fallen asleep, save that we again hear revelers far into the night, and a few humble shepherds are watching their flocks. . . . God grant that the light may soon shine, the trumpet soon sound, the King soon appear.

Gleanings and Unwritten Laws

Since the death of Sister Anna Drew, resident of Golden Rule Home, there has been found in one of her Bibles a clipping bearing the following quotation: "Make no accusation which you cannot prove, and believe no accusation which is not proved to you—is as good a motto for the street corner as the courtroom." Insofar as we know, Sister Drew did not actually subscribe to this motto as being a part of her written Law, but the gleaning being placed in her Bible indicates that it was somewhat of an unwritten law of her life—a truth further attested by her kind, charitable, and unpretentious manner.

Solomon said, "Remove not the ancient landmark, which thy fathers have set" (Prov. 22:28), also, "Remove not the old landmark; and enter not into the fields of the fatherless" (23:10). Obviously, a large rock or a tree sometimes served as a landmark in Israel, telling the boundary between farms: possibly marking the boundary between the field of a rich man and the field of a poor man. Should the rich man remove one such landmark, it would indicate that he was doing so with the intent of increasing his own acreage, which would have been especially sinful if the stolen land was from orphans. Hence came the proverb, "Remove not the old landmark; and enter not into the fields of the fatherless."

A landmark thus became somewhat of an unwritten law. A stately tree has often decreed to the plowman, "This is your last furrow," or to the reaper, "This is the end of your harvest." . . . Should all landmarks, all unwritten laws, be destroyed, the warp and woof of society would suffer. There would be more cheating and stealing and voluptuous crime than written law could control. Written law is needful for criminals; unwritten law develops those characters who keep also the written law.

Unwritten law is an especially strong factor in a Christian's life. True, the Bible is his Constitution, but he who daily follows Christ also lives by ideals mysteriously and deeply engraved in the heart. These unwritten rules, because they are fully read of God, more definitely fix one's standing before the Eternal than do the written laws that are more widely read and interpreted of men. Only God reads the invisible, the immeasurable, the heart.

God's Law is perfect. What gleanings, though, of your own heart's choosing are you hiding either in the pages of that Sacred Book, or in the innermost recesses of your heart? What gleanings will be found in your Bible when only others can turn its pages? What is the unwritten testimony of your heart and soul?

Christmas would this year become brighter to many discouraged persons, if they could know their Christian companions were truly living the standard and spirit of Sister Drew's gleaning. Christmas is a challenge to the soul!

I Bring You Good Tidings

By Paul M. Hatch

IT WAS good news, indeed. It was not the news of a new ideal or theory, not the thought of some sedate self-satisfied philosopher, not the edict of some magnanimous ruler of state, nor the setting up of some new regulation that would alleviate the sufferings of mankind. None of these were the good tidings of great joy that the angel brought unto the shepherds.

The good news was about the birth of a child, a child born in David's city—Bethlehem. He was not an ordinary child that would develop the ordinary selfish and sinful propensities, but a Savior. How much that name meant unto the shepherds and people of that time, and how much it means to people of the present, only a comparatively few know.

The angel announced to Joseph, before the birth of Jesus, that His name should be called "Jesus," for He would save His people from their sins. To be saved from one's enemies and to be saved from one's sins implies two distinct dangers. Enemies often seen can be guarded against, but the ravages of sin in one's members seem to be something that tears at us without our full knowledge. We see the result of sin's action in weakness and in the aging of our members that eventually brings death. Sin is the greatest and most subtle enemy of all. We cannot rely on ourselves to combat its ravages; we have to summon a higher aid, if we truly desire to conquer it. It was good news to all people that a champion to help them to combat this unseen, unknown, and secret enemy was born into the world.

Why should they or we believe this child was all that the angel had announced? Instinctively, we sense that this child was the Savior, whether that instinct is borne to us by the teaching of our elders in our early years, or by simply reading the account. The very words convey to our minds that the truth was spoken, and any receptive mind believes it. The words of the angel work up to their climax in the expression, "which is Christ the Lord." The shepherds, in hearing this climaxing statement, "Mashiah Jehovah," and observing the Lord's glory shining "round about" them in a diffused, soft light, had no room for doubt. They hastened to Bethlehem to pay their humble respects to the One that was born "Jehovah's Anointed."

The glory of the Lord that shone "round about" them was the manifestation of the presence of God. They saw and recognized it as the Shekinah glory that attended the Israelites from Egypt in the time of Moses, and followed them through the wilderness wanderings. Its manifestation, as a pillar of light like a column of smoke during the day and of fire by night, was a source of comfort to the camps of Israel, for it meant that God was with them, protecting and guiding their way.

The Shekinah light in other chapters of Israel's illustrious history shone unto them at the dedication of Solomon's Temple and at the consummation of Elijah's sacrifice before the priests of Baal. God was manifest in the fire that kindled the fuel of the sacrifice.

At the birth of Jesus, God's presence was manifested by the same light. Also, the saying of the Prophet Isaiah: "A virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel," that is to say, "God is with us," was fulfilled. This same shaft of lofty light may have been the guiding light of the "Magi," that which filled their souls with desire to see the King Immanuel and brought them speedily to Jerusalem.

All these things, and the words of the angel, saying, "I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people," were to the shepherds on the Judean hillsides the beginning of a faith that has infused itself into countless thousands of Christian folk throughout the sin-racked world. These were words of hope and beauty. It is no wonder that the prophecy came in olden time in these words: "The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light: they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined" (Isa. 9:2). Many centuries later a kindred thought came from the ardent Apostle Paul in these words: "God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." Well did the Apostle Paul speak, for no other man in all the world's history had seen the Shekinah glory almost in its fullness as did he on the Damascus road. This converted him from dead works to worship the true and living God.

Today, the peoples of the world are sitting in darkness, under the shadow of death. A great and horrifying darkness is enveloping them, just as the Scripture designates. Nevertheless, a light, a great light, is going to shine out of the present darkness, and a daystar will rise in the coming of Jesus Christ to restore order and peace to the world.

While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks

By J. R. LeCrone

"There were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night."

NO VOCATION for a timid soul—keeping watch over the sheep by night! He who would keep the night watch had much with which to contend—renouncing the pleasure of a warm, comfortable bed and the sweet dreams of peaceful sleep in favor of the chill of the night and the unknown terrors of darkness. He must put thoughts of his own comfort and convenience behind him, and concentrate on the task of keeping his flock safe. Wild beasts, hungry and anxious for the kill, skulked in the shadows, ready to pounce upon any straggler that might wander away from the flock and escape the shepherd's watchful eye. He must be ready on an instant's notice to respond to the call of a terrified bleat, and rush to do battle with whatever enemy may have sprung from the darkness.

To such as these, first came the announcement of the birth of the Christ. "Lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid. And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord" (Luke 2:9-11).

Simple and untutored though they may have been, who could have been better able to grasp the significance of the announcement of the birth of "a Saviour, who is the Lord Messiah" (Diag.)? Who was better equipped than these men, accustomed as they were to watching over the sheep, to understand the mission of Him who came "to seek and to save that which was lost" (Luke 19:10) of God's human sheep? We, who are proud of our learning and softened by the luxuries and easy living that civilization has brought to us, may yet learn much from these men whom God chose to be the first recipients of the "good tidings of great joy."

It is not surprising to find this anointed Savior, sent of God, making the following announcement: "I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep. But he that is an hireling, and not the shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth: and the wolf catcheth them, and scattereth the sheep. The hireling fleeth, because he is an hireling, and careth not for the sheep. I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine. As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father: and I lay down my life for the sheep" (John 10:11-15).

Like the "good shepherd" that He was, Jesus forsook all of the comforts and conveniences of life, that He might devote all His time and energy to seeking the lost sheep and caring for those in the fold. Like the "good shepherd," He laid down His life, struggling against the enemy that would destroy His flock—sin.

When the time came for Jesus to ascend into heaven, He passed on His work of seeking and saving to His apostles in the familiar words known to us as the Great Commission: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned" (Mark 16:15, 16).

How deeply they felt this obligation is reflected in the following words of Paul: "Though I preach the gospel, I have nothing to glory of: for necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!" (1 Cor. 9:16.) Earnestly they sought the lost sheep, zealously they cared for the flock, and boldly they challenged its enemies. Whatever they may have been previously, their faith in, and love for, the gospel of Christ made them good shepherds.

Everyone who becomes a Christian, at the same time and by the same token becomes a shepherd. Does not the very obedience to the royal law, "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself," make each Christian, in a measure, responsible for the rest of the flock? Surely Paul had some such thought in mind when he admonished the Christians at Philippi to "look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others. Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus" (Phil. 2:4, 5).

Many Christians can remember "the good old days" when the churches were always comfortably filled, and when revival meetings were sure to bring out overflow crowds. Discouraged by the comparison of that time with the present, many of them have forsaken the flock. Though they deplore the darkness that has fallen and bemoan the loss of many sheep, they prefer the obscurity and safety of their homes to identifying themselves with the people of God. To do so would involve the danger of opposing the enemies of the flock, and they are too timid or lacking in faith.

The task of a shepherd by day may be an easy and pleasant task, but it is the night watch that tests the worth of a man. When the warm cheerful sunshine of the day is replaced by the chill and gloom of night, when every shadow looms as the potential hiding place of a dangerous foe, when a weary body and strained eyes long for the comforts of home and bed, then the love of the shepherd for the sheep and his devotion to the service of the Chief Shepherd are made manifest.

The world is in spiritual darkness, even the non-Christian agrees. As it grows darker and the stars of civilization wax dim and flicker out, new enemies bent upon the destruction of the flock of God spring out of the darkness. It is a time to try the faith of the most zealous shepherd, but let us remember that it is always darkest just before dawn, "and that, knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. The night is far spent, the day is at hand: let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armour of light" (Rom. 13:11, 12). (Turn to inside of back cover)

The Christmas Spirit

By S. J. Lindsay

---

THANKSGIVING DAY has been moved ahead a week, and so observed by the greater number of states, to give business a greater commercial advantage at Christmas Day. It is strange how patriotic times and Christian times of rejoicing are taken advantage of by commercialism. In relation to Christmas Day, there is no other people who are so strong for it as the Jewish people who have little or no interest in it, save from a financial viewpoint. Surely they mean no particular respect for Him whom they nailed to the tree nearly two thousand years ago.

How much more respect, if any, is shown by the Gentile unbelievers the world over? Is their observance of the Day out of respect for a Savior who came into the world as the Herald of salvation to all mankind? We fear that in too many cases the spirit back of it is no more noble than that of commercialism.

Next, let us consider the Christian world. How much better are we? Presents are often given with a view to receiving presents, and last year's presents may be passed on this year, until sometimes the giving of presents becomes boresome to both the giver and the receiver. Presents of value are given by those who cannot afford to give them, in the hope that a return favor of some kind may be obtained thereby. The giving of gifts in the spirit of love is all right, but if we are to be governed by the law of love, we shall come to know the Scriptural statement that it is more blessed to give than to receive. Those who give in this spirit are more blessed than any other.

Not a Christmas should pass in which we do not meet in our respective places of worship, there to enjoy together the festivities of the occasion with no poor, no rich present, but where all are on a sure basis of fellowship. As Christians, we should be rejoicing that a Savior has come into the world and that we, through Him, have received the best of all gifts, the gift of eternal life. May the people of the Church of God all come up to the feast days of the Lord in the true spirit of love and devotion to Him. "The Lord make you to increase and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men" (1 Thess. 3:12).

What We Would Have Without Christ

By Grover Gordon

DID you ever consider what the world would have been like, if Jesus had not been born? We can reasonably assume that it would have continued in much the same way as it had in times past. So, if we take a look into the past, we may get a picture of what it would be like if God had not sent His Son into the world to turn men from their sinful ways.

Man must worship something, so if he does not worship the living God, he will worship the work of his own hands or idols set up in his heart (Ezek. 14:3), or he might even worship self. The Record shows us that before Christ, the Gentiles were "carried away unto these dumb idols" (1 Cor. 12:2), even giving their children to the fire to appease the god Moloch (Jer. 32:35). Jeremiah, seeing Israelites copying the Gentiles' religion, said, "They have also built the high places of Baal, to burn their sons with fire for burnt offerings unto Baal" (Jer. 19:5). In those days people would "cry aloud, and cut themselves after their manner with knives and lancets, till the blood gushed out upon them," to try to induce Baal to hear their petitions. (See 1 Kings 18:26-29.) Moloch and Baal were only two of the many gods which were worshiped. Each nation had its own idols and its own superstition concerning them, until gods became so numerous that the people were afraid lest there be a god left out who would be offended. An altar was built "TO THE UNKNOWN GOD" (Acts 17:23). All this caused a great trade to be built up to make shrines and images to the various idols. When the people were taught to turn away from this form of worship, it caused a great stir among those engaged in that occupation, because it destroyed their business. (See Acts 19:23-27.)

In Acts 7:42, we read that men also worshiped "the host of heaven" (sun, moon, planets). We can see by the stamp this superstition has left on the world as to their number. For instance, the days of the week and the months of the year get their names, in most part, from some of the gods of the nations. Sunday is the day of the sun; Monday is the day of the moon; Tuesday is named after Tieu, the Norse god of war; Wednesday is named after Woden, chief of the Norse gods, who was believed to have led the Norse gods in a struggle with the gods of ice and frost. Woden was believed to have conquered them and, with the help of other gods, fashioned the earth, the sun, and the moon. Thursday is named for Thor, whose chariot of brass was supposed to make thunder; Friday is named after Freyja, wife of Woden, queen of the gods, and goddess of love; Saturday is named in honor of the Roman god Saturn, the father of Jupiter. Paul and Barnabas had a struggle to prevent the people of Lystra from sacrificing to them as unto Jupiter and Mercurius. (Acts 14:11-18.)

The months were named: January for Janus, the Roman god of doors and gates; February gets its name from Februaire—to make pure—because a feast thought to purify the land occurred during this month; March is named for Mars, the god of war. (March was, originally, the first month of the year.) April comes from the Latin word Aperire, which means "to open." In Rome, the buds open during this month. May is named after Maia, goddess of the plains and mother of Mercury; June is named after Juno, wife of Jupiter and queen of the gods; July is named for Julius Caesar; August is named for Augustus Caesar. The rest of the months retain their original names according to their number, that is, September (originally the seventh), Latin septem or septa, meaning seven; October, octo, meaning eight; November, novem, meaning nine; December, decem, meaning ten.

Then, there were those who possessed (practiced) "the spirit of divination" which brought in much gain to their masters (Acts 16:16). The masters of a certain damsel were aroused when Paul commanded the evil spirit to come out, and they saw that the hope of their gain was gone (vv. 17-24). This custom or art, if you can call it an art, is practiced today (necromancy), though it is forbidden by the Scriptures. (See Deut. 18:9-14.)

Even Israel, God's special people, failed to continue faithful to the one true God, who had shown them His wonders. They went after the gods of the nations. "Their land is full of idols," was a statement of the Prophet (Isa. 2:8). Though they continued a form of worship, they, too, came to commercialize on the sacrifices, until the Savior said: "Is it not written, My house shall be called of all nations the house of prayer? but ye have made it a den of thieves" (Mark 11:17).

When we look back on the world without Christ, we wonder if there are any—whether Christian or non-Christian—who could wish for those times to return.

Progress has always followed in the wake of Christianity. The church was built on the conviction that "Jesus Christ is the Son of God." (Matt. 16:16; Acts 8:37.) The school has followed the church, probably because Jesus taught the multitudes, and "the common people heard him gladly" (Mark 12:37). Before, there was class hatred and only the rich had the privilege of education. Likewise, the hospital has followed the church and school, probably because Jesus healed the sick (Matt. 14:14). Of course, Jesus did His healing differently and without cost, but the idea of doing something to relieve suffering has made a great deal of progress in the Christian Era. As in the other forms of worship, so commercialism has now crept into Christianity.

Let us examine the effect the news of the birth of Jesus had on the people of that day. The Wise Men traveled from a far country to find the newborn King, so they might worship Him (Matt. 2:1, 2)—a good suggestion for the wise men of this day. Herod and all Jerusalem were troubled (Matt. 2:3). At this season, it might be well if the rulers and all the people were troubled as to their standing in the sight of God, and to examine themselves whether or not they are worthy to stand before the Son of man. The shepherds were sore afraid; nevertheless, they went to see, and when they had seen, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child, that is, "I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord" (Luke 2:10, 11). We who say we see should make known abroad this saying now and ever. Simeon, who was in the Temple waiting for the consolation of Israel, when he saw Jesus, spoke of Him as "a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel," also "a sign to be spoken against." (See Luke 2:32-34.) The message to "them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, (is) Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God" (1 Cor. 1:24). Anna who was also in the Temple, coming in at that instant, "Gave thanks likewise unto the Lord, and spake of him to all them that looked for redemption in Jerusalem" (Luke 2:38).

Paul, in referring to the world before Christ and to its idol worship, said: "The times of this ignorance God winked at (overlooked); but now commandeth all men every where to repent" (Acts 17:30). At the present time, in the nations which are trying to do away with God and Christ, class hatred is being taught, rulers are seeking to

Peace on Earth!

---

THE heavenly chorus sang, "On earth peace, good will toward men," on that first Christmas night, some two thousand years ago. To those who were devout and believing Jews, what a wonderful song that must have been! They had read in the prophetic books of this wonderful event. They had read of the time prophesied in Isaiah 9, of the birth of a child who would be known by many wonderful names, one of which was to be "Prince of Peace." They had read further in verse 7 of this chapter, "Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end." At last this time had come, and those people wanted peace as much as we want it now.

It was not in God's plan, however, to bring to the earth a peaceful reign at that time, and some thirty years after the eventful birth of Christ, He died. This was a disappointment to many, but His resurrection brought revived hope to believers that He would come again to bring peace to the earth!

Today, as we are celebrating the anniversary of the "Prince of Peace," the world is embroiled in a struggle to the bitter end. Many are the peace efforts that are being made, but to no avail. Pope Pius XII, titular head of the Roman Catholic Church, has exerted every power to bring about peace, but has failed. Persistent reports at the time of this writing (December 6) come from Vichy, France, that the Pope and perhaps President Roosevelt will bring about peace, but from London comes word that only four members of Parliament favor any sort of peace negotiations. From Berlin, Hitler states, in his usual manner, that there will be no peace until Great Britain surrenders unconditionally. Such are the efforts of peace-making men, which only add to our belief in the Scriptures wherein is predicted several times that such will be. There will be no lasting peace in this age, but these "wars and rumours of wars," nations rising against nations and kingdoms against kingdoms, are only the harbingers of the coming of the "Prince of Peace."

At this glad Christmas time, then, let us look forward with eagerness and interest to that day when the heavenly host will again sing, "On earth peace, good will toward men," when "of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end." May God hasten that day!

God the Giver, and His Incomparable Gift

By R. H. Judd

"God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16).

PERHAPS someone may say, "What an unusual text to choose for a Christmas message!" It may be unusual, but it certainly is not out of place, for its central theme is concerning a gift, and giving surely has come to be recognized as the very essence of the Christmas spirit.

In all giving, two things, at least, enter into its recognition: the ability of the giver to give, and the need of the one given to; and where human relationships are involved, the reciprocal estimate of each of the other, and according to the measure so visioned of each, is the gift given and accepted.

It may be that to a certain extent we regret that the Christmas spirit—the spirit of giving—has become so largely commercialized. The business world has made a business of it. But, after all, on due reflection, so long as the profits are fair, and all is above board, and the spirit of Christmas duly manifested, why not? Surely the spirit of Christmas—the act of giving—has through it now become a source of joy to millions who never before knew the joy of giving. Thousands upon thousands have yearly been added to those who have found in very truth that "it is more blessed to give than to receive." If the commercialization of Christmas has done that, it has accomplished a world of good that can never be reckoned in terms of money. Indeed, so truly have we come to realize the blessedness of giving, it becomes one of our chief regrets that we are not able to give more.

Sometimes a gift may come to us unannounced, and we draw natural, but tentative, comparisons as to who the giver may be. Our text, quoted above, leaves us in no doubt on that score. The giver is God. All our illusions concerning ability to give vanish at once, for "as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are (His) ways higher than (our) ways. (See Isa. 55:9.)

The next word, the little word "so," is too often mistakenly supposed to convey a comparison (unnamed it is true), that will help us to measure the extent and value of the gift. Our reference above to Isaiah 55:9 has already shown us the impossibility of any such thought. This little word speaks to us more of the immeasurable and inexpressible intensity of the love of God. There are occasions in the lives of most of us when the very depth of our feelings have so overcome us that the expression of them cannot be uttered, and we strive to put the whole of our meaning into that little word "so." It would seem (humanly speaking) that in this wonderful verse our great Creator has Himself used this very method of expressing to us the greatness of His love for the world. Here, He first sees this world of ours, not as He made it, a world of life, but a perishing world, and it is that fact which calls forth the greatness of His compassion and His love. Can we wonder at the earnestness here so plainly revealed by God Almighty, when men and women so deceive themselves as to believe that they are not perishing, but immortal, and that they already possess in actual fact, eternal life?

What of the gift? I wonder if any of you have ever noticed that when in this wonderful verse God speaks of His Son as a gift, He speaks only of Him in connection with life, for in giving His Son, He gives eternal life. Before that, in verses 14 and 15, our Savior is spoken of as "the Son of man," and it is as "the Son of man" that He is "lifted up" to die, as was the serpent in the wilderness. He became the Son of God by resurrection to life—the first begotten from the dead. So, when in Romans 6:23, we read that "the gift of God is eternal life," we are stating in other words that "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." The gift is to all—to "whosoever will," but the fact remains that a gift is never yours until you take it. Until then it remains the property of the giver. "Whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely" (Rev. 22:17).

"'Whosoever heareth,' shout, shout the sound!
Spread the blessed tidings all the world around;
Tell the joyful news wherever man is found:
'Whosoever will may come.'

"'Whosoever will, whosoever will':
Send the proclamation over vale and hill;
'Tis a loving Father calls the wand'rer home:
'Whosoever will may come.'

"'Whosoever will!' the promise is secure;
'Whosoever will,' forever must endure;
'Whosoever will!' 'tis life forevermore:
'Whosoever will may come.'"

What Does Christmas Mean to You?

By Lottie E. Young

WHEN a baby comes to a royal family, especially if it is a prince, what preparations are made! How its advent is heralded all through the nation by the ringing of bells; multitudes acclaim the tiny creature as their coming king, and costly gifts from far and near are showered upon it. What a contrast is this to the humble birth of the Lord Jesus Christ! Think of the peasant mother, the stable home, and manger cradle, and the curious shepherds. Yet of the many princes who have been born into this world, even though their birthdays may have been observed during their lifetime, none are remembered now save that of the Babe of Bethlehem, the Prince of Peace. His natal day is honored by millions in some fashion.

Why did He come? What was His mission? Hundreds of years before the birth of this Christ child, His name was given—Immanuel, that is, “God with us.” So, He came as a revealer of God to man; as the Redeemer or purchaser of those who were helpless, for Jesus means “Savior”; as the Restorer of this world to its Edenic beauty, when sickness and sorrow, disappointments and heartaches, and even death—“the last enemy”—shall be unknown. Is it any wonder His birthday is still celebrated, although two thousand years have passed since His advent?

There are many answers which might be given as to what Christmas means to mankind. To the infidel, nothing, though he unconsciously keeps it. To the Christian, it means worship, although it is frequently omitted. To the merchant it means, “This is my harvest time.” To the buyer, “Have I sufficient funds to go around the family and friends?” To the small boy or girl, “What will Santa Claus bring me?” To the rich, it often brings a show of arrogance, or helpful philanthropy. To the poor, “How can we fill the children’s stockings?” To the cynic, boredom. To the optimist, an opportunity to bring cheer to “others.”

To the many, it is a time of anxiety, doubt, and worry; a time of hurly-burly, late hours, jostling crowds, each intent with that which involves his own home and family. But through it all runs the Christmas spirit, and if this can be retained, even in small measure, the “Day” will not have been in vain. But, as we celebrate the birth of this Wonderful Babe, it is well to remember that Jesus Christ, the Great Giver, never gave to the world a piece of money. He bestowed upon man not a solitary material gift. He carved no statue, painted no picture, wrote no poem, composed no song, built no edifice, founded no city, erected no triumphal arch; yet He stands in history as the world’s greatest giver. Silver and gold He had none, but such as He had, He gave; the gentle touch of a sympathetic hand, the healing love of a generous heart, the bracing energy of a courageous spirit. In all of our Christmas giving, are we giving the priceless things for which the world is so hungry? Are we giving an inspiring thought to someone who needs it, sympathy to someone who deserves it; kindness to someone who is starving for it?

Over the radio will come the Christmas carols with their messages of peace on earth, to all men good will, in spite of the awful conflicts now raging. The “unspeakable” gift of Jesus Christ to the world was the greatest blessing ever received, and as “in the fulness of time” He made His first advent, so some day, and we are praying it may be quickly, the following promise will be fulfilled: “Unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation,” when the whole world will know of His “good will,” love, and righteousness. Is each of us ready for that great Day?

Newsfan's Diary

By Arlen Marsh

IT IS the story of a town.

During the earlier portion of the second Rooseveltian term, a paternally-minded Government built the town in an Eastern State for the benefit of the below-average-income groups. Houses were to be rented cheaply. There was to be a recreation hall and theater, with weekly dances and sundry other forms of entertainment.

But there was to be no church. There could be no church, explained the Government, because the prospective inhabitants of the town could not afford a church. Of course, if Baptists and Episcopalians and Methodists and Presbyterians and Catholics and Jews would all unite their forces and have a union church, that might be permitted, experimentally. But denominational churches were out, definitely out.

So, not long before the recent presidential election, Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes took time out from his important work of campaigning for a third term and returned briefly to doing his duty to the taxpayers. The experimental town in the Eastern State, he announced, had just been sold to private interests. It had not proved a success. People with low incomes had been sickeningly indifferent to the delightful, low-rent houses available to them. But the Government, concluded Mr. Ickes brightly, hadn't lost more than a few millions on the deal.

Lockheed, one of the largest aircraft manufacturers, is proving it is more blessed to give than to receive by presenting a Christmas gift to the British Government, "in appreciation," say company officials, "of England's many orders."

The gift is the fastest, finest bomber Lockheed can build, complete with bomb sights, bomb racks, machine guns, and protective armor.

At a lecture Sunday evening, December 8, in the Church of the Open Door, Los Angeles, Dr. Louis Talbot spent an hour's time, a great many words, and a good seventy-five stereopticon slides in a diatribe against the nation's latest important cult: I Am. (The cult, which claims three million members in the United States and Canada, started from scratch in 1930. It teaches a combination of Christian Science, voodooism, Hinduism, theosophy, Unity, and pantheism.)

The cult, explained Dr. Talbot, was blasphemous; it taught, said Dr. Talbot, that any human being, by the process of his own concentration, could make himself a part of the Mighty I Am Presence. "Whereas," finished Dr. Talbot in some triumph, "every true Christian knows that Jesus and Jesus alone is the I Am!"

Hearst papers have forsaken the between-news-item line used several years ago ("Buy American") in favor of an equally insistent command: "Give More Gifts This Christmas." Superficially, this would appear to be giving commercialism a mighty boost; yet the fact remains that the more is bought, the more people go to work—and with some nine millions of people out of work in the United States, one wonders if a better Christmas present could be provided than a job that lasts even a short time. Certainly, the job would be infinitely superior to the standard Christmas basket, with its canned goods, turkey, and second-hand toys.

The shake-up in Italian military and naval commands has let vague hints get by European censors that all has not been well for some time in Italy. The demise of Balbo, mourned feverishly by the Italians, was attributed by Italy to British Royal Air Force flyers. But Britain steadfastly denied and denies any knowledge of how and when the perplexing Balbo perished. Correspondents are commencing to wonder whether or not Balbo and the two recently killed Italian generals represented unfortunate accidents or Rome-inspired murder. War does, after all, provide an excellent background for a purge of potentially dangerous politicians, friends, and army officers. King David furnished the precedent by his application of the principle of removal-by-war to Uriah.

Other towns may have their Santa Claus parades. Other towns may go for Christmas caroling. But Oregon, Illinois, is different. From the Ogle County Republican, Oregon weekly, comes this poetic exhortation, carried on one page of the picture of an open book:

"Let's shop early this year, friend,
So happiness and clerks may blend;
Let's help them love the Christmas time
By buying now in ev'ry clime."

And on the other page of the pictured open book is the delightful Yuletide blurb of a funeral chapel: "Our am-balance is ready for emergencies. Remember our telephone number."

Those with one foot in the grave, take notice: Shop early, and avoid the rush.

In common with Time, Pierre van Paassen, foreign correspondent extraordinary and author of the best-selling Days of Our Years, predicts that the climax of the current war will occur at or at least near Jerusalem. Van Paassen's reasons for his conviction, expressed not long since in Liberty, appear rather nebulous; but he is very dogmatic on the point. Guns, he insists, will crash in the Holy City; and bombs may crush thatched roofs in Bethlehem. Time was more general in its soothsaying; it held merely—during the summer of 1940—that the war eventually would have its apogee somewhere in the Near East or the Eastern Mediterranean.

A Wonderful Dream

By Mrs. William Stine

---

NEARLY all who believe in the coming of Christ to reign have at some time had a dream about this great event. They have seen themselves saved and glorified. Then, perhaps, in another dream they have felt the anguish of having been lost.

The past weeks of successful revival meetings caused our minds to center on the nearness of Christ's second coming and the fast-fulfilling prophecies. For this reason, and because of a talk with a friend about loved ones who had died, the following dream resulted.

We were in the company of friends when there appeared in our midst Grandmother Pearson and Brother Roll Brewer. These two, having fallen asleep in Christ several years ago, greatly surprised us by being alive and with us. Suddenly, we realized that Christ had called them from the dead, and that they were on their way to meet Him in the air. We were jubilantly happy. The church members began gathering together quickly. Soon we would see Christ coming with clouds. However, a shadow was cast over our happiness when we discovered there were some of our loved ones missing. What could be done about it at this late hour? It was then we remembered that our Lord "is longsuffering . . . not willing that any should perish" (2 Peter 3:9), also that the prayers of the righteous are heard and answered (Prov. 15:29). So, we prayed for the missing ones. Whether or not our prayer was answered we do not know, for it was then that the alarm clock awakened the dreamer.

A dream is seldom true; the second coming of Christ is Bible truth. Isaiah 9:6 proclaims the Christ child as the future King, saying: "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." Reading also the seventh verse, we understand that He will reign on the throne of His father David. This throne, as all know, was on earth, so Christ will come to earth to reign. The lowly manger baby who brought to the world its Christmas Day will bring peace on earth and good will to men at His glorious coming. Paul said of Christ, "Which in his times he shall shew, who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords" (1 Tim. 6:15).

The star in the east signified Jesus' birth; we are promised signs in the heavens prior to His second coming to the world (Joel 2:10). When the shepherds received news of the Savior's birth, the "glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid" (Luke 2:9). The brightness of His second coming will be as "the lightning (that) cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west" (Matt. 24:27).

When the world was destroyed by the Flood, only eight souls were saved because of their faith in God. At the destruction of Sodom, three faithful ones were saved. Shepherds, the Wise Men, Mary, and Joseph were the few who believed the glad tidings of Jesus' birth. "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" (Luke 18:8). "As it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man" (Luke 17:26), for "many are called, but few are chosen" (Matt. 22:14).

Yes, this wonderful dream came very near to being the truth, for "the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord" (1 Thess. 4:16, 17).

When our Lord comes, may we be among those who are "called, and chosen, and faithful" (Rev. 17:14).

The Gift in the Manger

By Mary Richardson

SHEPHERDS were guarding their flocks on this very eventful night. They did not know that on this night God's supreme gift was to be given to man, although they had long waited for the promised Redeemer. Suddenly, an angel appeared unto them, and they were very much afraid, but not for long, because the angel said, "Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." What do you suppose that this good news was? The baby Jesus had been born; and, being wrapped in swaddling clothes, was lying in a manger. The birth of Christ was good tidings of great joy, which were to be enjoyed by all people. When the good news of the gospel is accepted and becomes a part of an individual's life, there is cause for great rejoicing. There was also great joy among the angels, for they sang, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." We cannot expect to have universal peace until the Prince of Peace comes. From David's throne, restored in Jerusalem, Jesus will extend peace without end (Isa. 9:6,7).

"It came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us" (Luke 2:15). They had one aim, namely, to verify the truth of the angel's message, so they made haste and found Mary and Joseph with the Babe in a manger. No doubt, they were filled with an inner joy, for they reported the things told them concerning Jesus. The shepherds announced the findings of their search, thus proving the truth of the angel's message. They also told of the angel's appearance together with the heavenly host.

In Matthew 2, we are told of another class of people, the Wise Men, who had a divine revelation of the birth of Christ. The star in the East guided them to the place where Jesus lay. Evidently, this was a special star. When again "there shall come a Star out of Jacob" (Num. 24:17), it will mark the hour of our redemption. Though "all the tribes of the earth mourn" (Matt. 24:30), we, like the Wise Men of old, shall rejoice and hasten to worship the King. When the Wise Men finally found the One for whom they had journeyed many weary miles, they "rejoiced with exceeding great joy." "When they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down, and worshipped him." Then they opened their treasures, and presented Him with gifts of great value.

When in your search for Jesus you find Him as your Savior, give Him the worship He deserves, and present Him the gold of your heart's purest love. If you have not done so before, do so now, on this anniversary of His birth. Repentance and obedience in baptism are the first steps. Soon there is coming a day when the Savior will again appear upon the earth, not as a Babe, but as the Ruler of the world. Then everyone will bow before God's authority, invested in His Son (Isa. 45:22,23).

We know of no more impressive way in which God could have shown His love to the world, than in sending His Son into the world, that we might live (John 3:16). The individual, however, must meet a requirement if he is to come under that great love. No matter how great the love, it will do one no good, unless he believes to the extent that he accepts Christ as his Savior, is baptized into Christ's name, and lives a life acceptable to the Father. One of the great appealing attributes of God is love. From Him comes all the tenderness and mercy that make life worth while. It has been said that we show our love by our gifts. Certainly God showed His great love, for it was His plan that brought about redemption through His only begotten Son. Christ was the supreme gift to the world. He was given because of the great love the Father had for His children. We should praise God and give Him glory for the wonderful gift. This gift makes it possible for all of us to come into the saving grace of the Father through Jesus Christ.

What does God's gift mean to you?

WHAT WE WOULD HAVE WITHOUT CHRIST

be worshiped, and a return to the worship of the pagan gods is advocated, which will result in confusion. Those who are looking for the second coming of Jesus know that in Him only rests the hope of the world. Therefore, let us enter this season "holding forth the word of life" (Phil. 2:16), that we might rejoice "in the day of Christ," that we have not run in vain, neither labored in vain. "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him?" (Heb. 2:3). Which will you choose—the world without Christ, or the "new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness" (2 Peter 3:13)? The new age is described by David, saying: "In his days (Christ's days) shall the righteous flourish; and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth" (Psalm 72:7). It is no wonder that the angels sang, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men" (Luke 2:14). Isaiah, in speaking of that day, said the nations would not learn war any more, but that the "earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." (See Isa. 2:2-4; 11:9.)

The worship of the one true and living God should not be with "men's hands, as though he needed any thing," but because He is the Giver of all things. (See Acts 17:25; James 1:17.) Neither are we to suppose that our God is like unto gold, or silver, or stone, graven by art and man's device. (See Acts 17:29.) We have been given God's only begotten Son, who is the "express image of his (God's) person," and we are told that God has spoken unto us by Him; it is also said, "Hear ye him." (See Heb. 1:2, 3; Matt. 17:5.)

We are not required to make animal sacrifices to God, for He has no pleasure in them (Heb. 10:6), but we are told that to love God and our neighbor "is more than whole burnt offerings and sacrifices" (Mark 12:33)—yes, far more than giving our children for burnt offering to idols. We are asked to consider the mercies of God; then, because of His bountiful blessings, to give our bodies a "living sacrifice (not a dead one), holy, acceptable unto God, which is (our) reasonable service" (Rom. 12:1). That is, that we might "shew forth the praises (virtues, margin) of him who hath called (us) out of darkness (worship of idols and false gods), into his marvellous light" (1 Peter 2:9). Following are some of the "reasonable" sacrifices which are recorded in the Scriptures, and we are told that with such sacrifices God is well pleased: "Offer the sacrifices of righteousness, and put your trust in the Lord" (Psalm 4:5), and "O Lord, open thou my lips; and my mouth shall shew forth thy praise. For thou desirest not sacrifice; else would I give it: thou delightest not in burnt offering. The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit: a broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise" (Psalm 51:15-17).

Animal sacrifices were made by the priests, but Christ has become "an high priest of good things to come" (Heb. 9:11). "By him (Christ) therefore let us offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually, that is, the fruit of our lips giving thanks to his name. But to do good and to communicate forget not: for with such sacrifices God is well pleased" (Heb. 13:15, 16). Therefore, we can at least give God something at this season, which will be well pleasing, by thanking Him for the unspeakable gift of His Son, and for the hope we have in and through Him, not only in this present world, but in that which is to come. To Him be the glory, power, and majesty both now and forever.

SCHOOL LIGHTS

By Orris Mills

"UNTO us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever" (Isa. 9:6, 7).

I wonder to how many people in Germany these words have any meaning. I wonder how many people in France will hear the Christmas carols ringing out the glad news of the Christ. I wonder if the spirit of gladness and peace and love will be prevalent in The Netherlands. Will Denmark cheerfully decorate her city streets? Will the children of London play with their Christmas toys? Will the countries of Europe know they have a Prince of Peace?

On this man-ruled world, we have known peace only a few times, and then for comparatively short periods. Even that peace was not true peace, not the peace that we are persuaded Jesus Christ has for the world. From almost the beginning of time we have seen hate, envy, and killing. The first envy and killing of which we have record was the killing of Abel by his brother Cain. The last killing that we know will take place, will be the destruction of death itself.

When the world is not torn with war, destruction is taking place in some other way. We find crime and fraud and graft in almost every public office of the land. We find many professed friends undermining our lives, doing all in their power to mar our characters. How much better would remarks about one's weaknesses be, if they were addressed directly to the weak one. Paul said, "If a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted."

One who brought and still brings so much cheer to this cruel world truly must have had a wonderful and magnanimous personality. I believe He never went about with a long face, trying to find fault in someone else. He must have had a winning smile and an alluring countenance. He must have played and joked with the children, for they followed Him and loved Him. Children are the same today as they were centuries ago, and they like pleasant people.

Let us pray for the time when this same Jesus will be "KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS"—when "the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying" (Rev. 21:3, 4).

A Christmas Eve Wish

"I'd like to spend a Christmas Eve
In holy Bethlehem:
I'd like to stand where shepherds were
When angels spoke to them.

"I'd like to tread a path that led Unto a manger cave,
And then I'd kneel in thanks to God
For Christ, the Son He gave."

An Original Poem

As angels sang so long ago,
Let us today rejoice and sing;
For He, once Babe of Bethlehem,
Is coming soon to be our King!

—Jane Waller, an ECE Club girl.

Unending Joy

Two tired travelers tried to find a place to sleep. Joseph had walked, leading the donkey, while Mary rode on its back. Perhaps both of them walked part of the time. Now they were in Bethlehem; they could find no room—"there was no room in the inn"—so they slept in a stable. That night the baby Jesus was born, and laid in a manger.

In the fields, shepherds were watching their flocks by night. Then the angel of the Lord appeared before them. A great brightness, the glory of the Lord, was upon them. Until the angel said, "Fear not," they had no idea of the reason for this heavenly visit. The angel told them to fear not, for good news—great joy—was for them: "Unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord" (Luke 2:11). This was the sign so they would know the Babe: He was to be found wrapped in his baby clothes, lying in a manger!

Suddenly, the angel was no more alone, but a great, great number of angels were there. The heavenly host praised God and gave Him glory. Then they went away.

The shepherds decided to go to Bethlehem to see this Christ child. They left at once, "They . . . found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger," just as the angel had said. Afterward, they told abroad what they had seen and heard.

The Wise Men

The Wise Men are often in this Christmas story as told by man. However, by a study of the first eighteen verses of Matthew 2, we find that the Wise Men did not see Jesus in the manger. They saw Him just before Jesus was taken by Joseph and Mary into Egypt. King Herod had the children slain who were "two years old and under" (Matt. 2:16), so that tells us something of the age of Jesus at the time of the visit of the Wise Men.

God chose the lowly shepherds to see Jesus first. Afterward, by much study, the Wise Men, too, found Him. There is a verse that says unless all can become as little children we cannot enter into the Kingdom of God. The shepherds were more like little children, so eager to believe the angel! May we all be humble, childlike, and loving as this Christmas season comes to us once more, before the return of our King.

New Members

Winifred Tacket of Mount Vernon, Arkansas, joins our club. William David Savage of Waite Park, Minnesota, joins our Cradle Roll. Six grandchildren of Mrs. Clara L. VeNard of Macomb, Illinois, join. They are: Leland, Margaret, Dannie, Mary Lou, Patsy Joan, and Anna Lee VeNard. We now have two hundred fifty-eight members.

Favorite Bible Verse

Winifred Tackett's favorite verse is, "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap" (Gal. 6:7).

Books for Study

By Arlen Marsh, Los Angeles, Calif.

Have you ever thought that the complete series of senior Berean books makes the best treatise on Bible doctrine that the Church of God has ever published?

Some students have thought of this, and some churches have come to use the books as source material for general study, as well as for Berean study. In the Southlawn Park Sunday School, Grand Rapids, Michigan, for example, teachers are supplied with complete sets of the books to guide them in preparing Sunday school lessons.

No more thorough coverage of the "nature of man" and man's future immortality, has been printed by our church than the second book of the senior Berean series: Life and Immortality. The Kingdom is covered thoroughly in the third book, God's Kingdom. And the other three books of the series are just as comprehensive in regard to a wide variety of subjects, from the parables of Jesus to the standards of practical living which Christians should adopt.

Other churches have what are called "theologies"—voluminous tomes written with great labor and very little interest on the details of church doctrine. The Church of God, lacking such dull volumes, has the Berean books—which provide, not man-thought philosophy on what the Bible may or could be interpreted to mean, but actual Biblical references which let the reader himself learn exactly what the Bible means.

Whether you're an active Berean or not, if you're interested in Bible study and in increasing your knowledge of the things we must know if we are to have places in God's Kingdom, you'll find the senior Berean books a constant source of help. They're remarkably inexpensive, too—only twenty cents a copy for any one of the books in the series. They may be ordered from the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Illinois.

Dear Bereans:

I have just received the "Christian Worker's Kit" and believe that it is a very fine collection of tracts. You'll like them, too. In them is plenty of material for study during these long winter nights. Let's get the campaign under way.

Love Your Enemies

By Virginia Smith, Russellville, Ark.

It is written in Matthew 5:44, "I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you." Luke 6:31, says: "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise." To do this, our hearts must be filled with love and understanding. Solomon, the wisest man that ever lived, asked not for long life, gold, or the life of his enemies, when God asked what He should give him, but asked instead, "Give therefore thy servant an understanding heart to judge thy people, that I may discern between good and bad: for who is able to judge this thy so great a people?" (1 Kings 3:9).

Every heart has its secret sorrows which the world knows not, and we often call people cold and indifferent when they are only sad. If we could follow people home to see them alone, when their curtains are drawn, we would see anguish that is carefully concealed, and we would be more tender and love others more. "Whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother" (1 John 3:10).

After man disobeyed God, He loved us enough to give His only Son to die for us. "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16). Jesus spent His life helping, teaching, and healing His fellow men, yet never once was He gently led. He was led into the wilderness to be tempted by the Devil. He was led by men filled with wrath to the brow of the hill, that they might cast Him down headlong. He was led to Annas and Caiaphas, to the council of the elders and chief priests and scribes, then He was led away and crucified. While on the cross, He prayed for His enemies, saying, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do" (Luke 23:34). Stephen, while being stoned, cried with a loud voice, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge" (Acts 7:60). Those who in faith have tried the great rule of love, tell us of the wonderful results achieved. Even if no earthly blessings should follow, we are still promised a great reward—nearness to God. "Ye shall be the children of the Highest: for he is kind unto the unthankful and to the evil" (Luke 6:30).

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALENDAR OF EVANGELISM

July 29-August 10—General Conference at Oregon, Ill.
July 29-August 10—Illinois Bible School and Conference at Oregon.

PAY AS WE GO

Thus far the Bible Training School has been able to meet its bills, and we sincerely hope that with the cooperation of our brethren interested in the success of the School that this policy will be continued throughout the year. Nevertheless, at this writing our funds for the Bible Training School are the lowest they have been since this term began. Let us not allow a good work—one of the most important works—of our church to lag. We need your financial support for the Bible Training School. Sydney E. Magaw, Chairman, Board of Religious Education.

EXTRA RESTITUTION HERALDS

A goodly number of extra copies of this Christmas number of The Restitution Herald are available to those who might wish to order for their friends.

Also, should any of our readers so desire, we shall be pleased to begin new subscriptions with this Christmas issue, if your subscriptions are sent within a few days. One way in which you can evangelize is to send The Restitution Herald to those with whom you cannot speak personally.

Use the subscription blank on the opposite page.

NO HERALD NEXT WEEK

Each year fifty-one issues of The Restitution Herald are sent to its subscribers. In the present volume, which began with the first Tuesday in October, 1940, there is a possibility of publishing fifty-three issues. Inasmuch as the regular subscription is for fifty-one issues, you will receive no Herald under date of December 24.

The present issue is our special Christmas number; your next issue will be dated December 31, and will be the New Year's number. . . . Merry Christmas. The Staff.

CHRISTMAS THOUGHTS

By Catharine Davis

Christmas brings to our minds tender thoughts of another day, memories of Him who loved us first, and made it for us the best of all days. Whose is the Christian heart that is not stirred with Christian love and canticles of praise to Christ the living Word? This blessed feast that comes to us once a year is surely wonderful.

When we think of those who with us used to sing, our hearts rejoice in kindness. As we see candles flame in the windows and on the hearth, we thrill to the magic of His name. Precious Savior, we do praise Thee, the Light of men. All glorious art Thou. We hold Thy precious name dear, and at Thy coming all tears will be wiped away, for Thou shalt heal the broken heart. There will be no more pain or sorrow. No thorns or briars shall strew the way when the King reigns with justice, power, and might. Thou wilt bless the nations and make all things right.

These promises are to those who believe and obey His Word, and are found worthy in that glad day.

A TRIBUTE

With the closing of the life of Sr. Anna E. Drew, the Church of God has lost one of its most faithful and valuable workers—not even excepting its ministers. We had the privilege of working by her side for fourteen years. During seven of those years, we were president of the Illinois State Conference and she was the treasurer, which office she had held many years previously. For twenty-five years she was president of the Illinois State Berean Society, and that organization reached its highest point of development and service during her administration.

Sr. Anna's love for the truth as she understood it, and for the church which preached that truth was the outstanding passion of her life. She brought more boys and girls, as well as men and women, to Christ than a great many ministers ever bring. She was one of the finest women we have ever had the honor to know, and we are one of the many who with a tear-damp eye can say that they are better today because of having walked part of the way by Sr. Anna's side.

BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL NEWS

There comes a time in the life of every student, called vacation. The Bible Training School students are by no means neglected in this respect. Christmas vacation will start December 20, and will close when School resumes January 6, 1941.

Alan McLain and Francis Burnett are spending their vacation at their homes in Ripley, Ill. Richard Smith and Ellsworth Routson accompanied Emory Macy to Brush Creek, Ohio, where they are spending the two weeks. Emory Macy spent two weeks, previous to vacation, here at the Training School. Celaine Randall, accompanied by Eunice Zollinger, is at his home in Fonthill, Ont. Terry Ferrell is spending his intermission at Colo, Iowa, with Barbara Fish, at her home. The writer is staying in Oregon, Ill.

Friday, December 13, was enjoyed by the students and their guests at a Christmas party at the Students' Home.

CHILDREN'S QUARTERLY TESTIMONIALS

Sunday school workers, send today for a free catalog describing our Children's quarterlies. Address the National Bible Institution. Following are some testimonials:

"The girls and I find the Bible Foundation Quarterly very interesting. Every lesson in Bible Foundation is easy to put across to the girls, because it is so nicely written. The age of the girls in my class rank from seven to nine years of age. Our attendance is nearly perfect every week, so it shows that Bible Foundation must hold their interest to make them want to come back every Sunday. This is the first class I have ever taught, and without the aid of Bible Foundation I am sure it would be quite complicated for me."—Miss Earlene Richter, Teacher.

"Since using the Bible ABC's, the attendance in our class has increased and has kept up even during the summer. We have been so pleased with the results, that we are now starting on the story of the Creation. The children especially enjoyed the crayoning, and we believe that they have received more understanding of the stories by being able to see the pictures of the characters, and plan the coloring of their garments. It also has given us something to look forward to each Sunday, because the children have taken such a great interest in it. We now have enough material to last until next year. We pray that we might guide these little children into the fold, through giving them these lessons."—Mrs. Helen McMurtrie and Mrs. Adelo Onderdonk, Teachers.

THE VINEYARD WORK

On our trip to Mineral, Calif., we had the pleasure of visiting Sr. Lucy B. Groat of Hanford, also the two sons, Bros. Uriel and Edwin, in their respective homes. We regretted to find Bro. Uriel confined to his bed. He had a severe attack of asthma. We called on Mrs. White, Vinyard, Truesdell, and Page who live in and near Fresno. We found them all eager to talk of the things pertaining to the Kingdom of God. In Stockton, we spent a night with Srs. Fay and Lois Logan, formerly of Indiana. Sr. Fay is slowly recovering from a very severe sickness. Lois, who is a teacher in the Stockton schools, is very kind and devoted to her afflicted sister. We found Sr. Anna Cook of San Francisco strong in the faith of Christ's coming to establish the Kingdom.

Our friend and brother in Christ, W. B. Ward, came up to Mineral for an evening's visit to talk of the promises and the promotion of the gospel work. An evening Bible class, which included a number of neighbors in Mineral, was a great surprise to these strangers of the truth, as we explained to them the blessings that will be obtained under the millennial reign of Christ and the saints on the earth.

In Tulare we kept a late hour, discussing with the three faithful members of the Los Angeles church the prophecies relating to world conditions, leading up to the establishment of the Kingdom.

The work in Los Angeles is progressing in spite of much recent sickness. Bro. Arthur Mock has just returned from Santa Monica hospital where he submitted to an appendectomy. Sr. Leta Maeleod of Pomona is in the hospital for an operation for injuries received in an automobile accident in which her car was completely wrecked. Sr. Stearns has been suffering with bronchitis. The Bro. Juden family has been afflicted with the flu. Sr. Janet Reid, too, has been confined to her bed. Sr. Elizabeth Frier is also unable to be out.

Recent visitors to our services were: Bro. and Sr. F. L. Marsh of Oregon, Ill.; Bro. and Sr. Leland Marsh of Grinnell, Iowa; and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Marsh of Eagle Rock, Calif. Sr. Mary Laning of Mt. Sterling, Ill., is spending the winter with Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Laning of Hollywood.

The Sunday school officers are making plans for a Christmas program on December 22. Bro. G. E. Marsh delivered a very impressive and instructive discourse at the morning service, Sunday, December 1, to an unusually large and interested audience. The dinner in the pergola was enjoyed in the sunshine.

A Christmas cantata was presented by the choir Sunday evening, December 15. When we consider that even angels sang at the birth of Jesus, it should inspire every Christian to lift his voice in songs of praise and appreciation, at this season of the year.

The Sunday school will present its program Thursday, December 19, at 7:45 p.m. We trust that all the local brethren and nearby friends will attend this program. Your presence will encourage the little fellows in their childlike faith and service to the KING OF KINGS.

We shall miss the students of the Bible Training School while they are enjoying the Christmas season; all except one are for a few days leaving Oregon, but all will be back soon to resume their work.

Sydney E. Magaw, Pastor.

SHEETS - WOOD

At a beautiful, informal ceremony, Miss Frances Sheets and Mr. Floyd Wood, both of Blanchard, Mich., were united in marriage by the writer, Saturday evening, December 7. Before a carnation bedecked altar glowing with lighted candles, the wedding took place in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Sheets of Blanchard, in the presence of the parents of both bride and groom. The bride was attended by Miss Winifred Reynolds. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Walter Wood. A distinctive feature of the marriage service was an opening address taken from "Kate Carnegie," by Ian Maelaren.

When they return from a short trip, the happy couple will make their home in a lovely, modern home nestling against a forested hill two miles east of Blanchard. The groom is a road contractor. The bride is a loyal and devoted member of the Blanchard church, where she has served well in the Sunday school and on the official board. We join in wishing them success and true happiness in their journey through life together.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by National Bible Institution
Oregon, Illinois

The Restitution Herald is the official organ of the General Conference of the Church of God. It is published by the National Bible Institution at Oregon, Illinois.

L. E. Conner Business Manager
Subscription Rate.—51 issues per annum, $2.00.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him, (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

To all who read these lines: Merry Christmas to you. We thank God for the many blessings of the past year, and especially for the many promises that buoy us up during these troublous times when men's hearts are failing them for fear. The Master still whispers back to us through His Word, "See that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass" (Matt. 24:6); so, to us, these things prove that the Master's words were true. . . . We wish all a very Happy New Year, and may the work for the Master bring forth much "fruit" is our prayer.

George A. Waters and Wife,
Corpus Christi, Texas.

Greetings in the name of our Savior: May the Spirit of Him who gave His Son for the covering of our sins be especially upon you, and may the love of the Christ who made that sacrifice fill your heart all the days to come.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Krogh, Jr.,
Tipp City, Ohio.

To the readers of The Restitution Herald: At this happy season of the year, I wish to take this opportunity given me to extend to all of you—Christmas Greetings for 1940, and a wish that 1941 will be your best year in your service to Christ. Especially do I want to thank all of you who remembered me in any way during the past year. May God bless and keep all of us faithful unto the second coming of Christ!

Gerald L. Cooper,
Ah-Gwah-Ching, Minnesota.

Someone has said, "Oh, for a Thousand Tongues to Sing My Great Redeemer's Praise." I cannot even guess what the writer of the above words had in mind, but I was wondering what fifty words I could use with this one tongue of mine to express the blessed Master's care over me for one more year in His service, and for His brethren across this great continent of the United States.

J. Eagleston,
301 N. Euclid Ave., Pasadena, Calif.

As we approach this Christmas time, our hearts go out to the brethren everywhere with a wish for health and prosperity as God sees prosperity. May the spirit of the occasion be yours, and may you have a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Brother and Sister S. J. Lindsay, Tempe, Arizona.

"We love him, because he first loved us" (1 John 4:19). Our love is a fact worthy of our open avowal. Our love is a simplicity—He is so beautiful, so good, the supreme philanthropist. The mystery is why He first loved us. Our "brother, whom ye hath seen"—love him to show our love to Christ! Hence, these greetings of love founded upon love for one whose generation had "no room . . . in the inn." May you honor Him in the inn of your heart today.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Smead,
Blanchard, Michigan.

Scene Two. With the birth of Jesus, a new Scene glorified God's Stage of human development. Scene One had introduced Adam the mortal. Adam, Noah, Abraham, Moses, Nebuchadnezzar, enacted well their respective Acts. But with Christ the Scene changed. Begotten of the Divine, He became perfected, immortalized, empowered. He nor His like had ever before entered. Now a helpmeet of like status is in preparation—for redemption of Abraham's seed, and of Adam's posterity, to respective promises. Little wonder that glory songs heralded Scene Two.

F. L. Austin,
1705 S. Leer St., South Bend, Ind.

To the household of faith everywhere—greetings. I am proud at this time, almost the close of another year, that I am living and enjoying the blessings of our Lord. I enjoy the visits of The Restitution Herald with its able writers. Let us resolve to make the next year more prosperous.

R. L. Tice,
Morrilton, Arkansas.

May the true understanding and purpose of Jesus' birth be in your hearts. Give your whole life faithfully to His service, for He is coming to give eternal life to the faithful, that they may reign with Him, for which purpose He was born. (Luke 2:10, 11.; 19:13; John 18:37.)

Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Rankin, Cashmere, Washington.

May the Christmas season bring to each heart and home many choice blessings from the Father. Also, may we keep in mind while we are enjoying these blessings that Jesus is soon coming.

Brother and Sister T. A. Drinkard, Handley, Texas.

Greetings to the aged: May the Lord bless you, that your last days may be filled with happiness in hope of life in Christ. Also, greetings to all of like faith. God bless you in His service. Let us all thank God for this land where we can serve Him, that lasting good may be done in His name.

J. M. Morgan,
Bristow, Oklahoma.

Christmas Greetings to our brethren: May one and all, at this season of commemorating the birth of the blessed Babe of Bethlehem, be watching and waiting for His glorious return, and may the peace of God dwell in your hearts.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Jones and Delbert, Eagle Grove, Iowa.

God bless you all. We hear much these days about a war-torn world and the irony of such conditions, as we celebrate the birth of the Prince of Peace. But even aside from war is the constant heartache of separations. How much we need the Life-Giver! The year 1940, has seen a number of our faithful ones lie down in death. May we celebrate the birthday of Jesus with a full determination to do the best we can to fill the places of those who have fallen in the ranks of service.

Frank and Dorothy Siple and Family,
140 Celia, St., S.E., Grand Rapids, Mich.

We wish to extend to all who are of the household of faith, the season's greetings, and to join our voices with theirs in praising God for the greatest of all gifts, that is, the gift of His Son, and the promise of eternal life through Him.

Mr. and Mrs. Grover Gordon,
Springfield, Ohio, Rt. 2.

The angelic anthem of "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men" is seldom heard today among the songs of men. It is a message of hope, but the world is rapidly losing its hope. Our wish for the household of faith is, that this hope may become stronger in the heart of each member until it be fulfilled, in the "glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ." God bless all of you!

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Randall,
Fonthill, Ontario.

May God help each reader of The Restitution Herald to rightly read the signs about us, that we—like the Wise Men of old—may be found watching when the Babe of Bethlehem shall “appear the second time without sin unto salvation,” is the Christmas wish of

Elder J. R. LeCrone and Family,
Woodstock, Virginia.

With war in Europe and Asia, floods, earthquakes, disaster on every hand this Christmas season, we can think of no greater blessing than the promise of our Lord: “Surely, I come quickly” (Rev. 22:22). Our heartfelt best wishes to all our brethren for the coming year are well expressed in the words of John, “Beloved, I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth” (3 John 2).

Elder and Mrs. D. G. Harvey,
907 S. Waugh St., Kokomo, Ind.

Greetings to all: At this season of the year our thoughts again drift back to the star of Bethlehem which guided the shepherds to Bethlehem, and to our dear Savior, then in His infancy. Then, our thoughts go forward to the time when He will come again to restore all things. May God speed the day.

W. G. Moffet,
Magazine, Arkansas.

God might say, “I love men, My children, though they are wayward, oh, so haughty, and impudent. I will send My only begotten Son among them. Let Him do good only among them, yet will they murder Him; but when My (Adamic) children find that though they be thus wicked, I and My Son will forgive, if they will turn to Us only a little; surely then will they in contrition turn wholeheartedly to Us.” Then all can rejoice in company. Let all prostrate fall at The Cradle.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Anthon, Corvallis, Oregon.

The “Love for Truth” class of the “Blessed Hope Church of God” of Niagara Falls, New York, sends Christmas Greetings to their friends. About thirty of our friends will receive this Christmas Herald as a message from us. Read its messages of love which point to the One who will soon return to receive His own. Christian love prompted sending this gift to you.

Bernice C. Tinlin.

May you have the gladness of Christmas, which is hope; the spirit of Christmas, which is peace; the heart of Christmas, which is love.

C. E. Lapp and Family,
512 S. Madison, Macomb, Illinois.

Greetings in the name of our dear Savior: Again we have been spared through another year to send greetings to our brotherhood—to those of like precious faith. How thankful we ought to be that we are permitted to live in a land where we are free to worship God according to the dictates of our own consciences! May the rich blessings of God rest upon every one who is striving to do His blessed will and is waiting for the soon coming of Him who will redeem us from this sin-cursed world.

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Patrick,
Ashland, Ohio.

“Peace on earth, good will toward men” includes that peace of which the Apostle spoke in Philippians 4:7—“the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, (which) shall keep your hearts and minds through Jesus Christ.” May that peace be a present possession, regardless of what may be about us.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul C. Johnson,
Oregon, Illinois.

Ivan, Iola, Malcolm, Milo, Norma, and Sidney David join us in wishing you a Merry Christmas, and inviting you to the next General Conference.

Mr. and Mrs. Sydney E. Magaw,
Oregon, Illinois.

WHY THE CHURCH OF GOD?

By C. E. Randall

IS THERE any reason why the Church of God should be a separate denomination? Unless there are good reasons—Bible reasons—then we should cease all separate denominational activity and join forces with some larger body where resources would be greater, such as schools, printing plants, and territorial opportunities. That we are a separate people is an apparent fact.

First, in what particular way are we separate? To this question there can be only one answer. The reply is, “Our doctrines!” Believing that man is by nature mortal, we are unable to subscribe to the teaching of the immortality of the soul, and its twin—eternal torment. These latter teachings were abhorrent to our founding fathers. To them, truth was more important than association with a large body steeped in error. They could not mix truth and error and have clear consciences. They preferred to stand alone, though few in number, in order that truth might not become mixed with heresy. To them, “sound doctrine” was the means of salvation (Titus 2:1; 1 Tim. 4:16).

There were some in the early days, as there are now, who said, “It doesn’t make any difference what you believe or where you worship,” but these were not the ones who built the Church of God. The Church of God came into being because the founders had conviction on truth and were not willing to sacrifice that conviction. They loved the truths for which it now stands. Its present existence and future continuance depend on whether we have convictions on the doctrines which we believe.

WHILE SHEPHERDS WATCHED THEIR FLOCKS

Had those shepherds of Judea, guarding their flocks on the rugged hillsides, slumbered and slept, they would have missed the glorious announcement of the angels, and would not have enjoyed the precious privilege of being the first to see the Son of God. If we, the shepherds of today, put our personal comfort before the care of the sheep and be found spiritually asleep, we are in danger of missing the blessings that can be ours when “unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation” (Heb. 9:28).

“The elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder, and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed: feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as being lords over God’s heritage, but being ensamples to the flock. And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away” (1 Peter 5:1-4).

The Last Christmas

By G. E. Marsh

*The stars grew dim in the midnight sky,
A long, long time ago;
And earth was bathed in a mystic light,
And heaven was all aglow.
An angel came from the throne of God
And the shepherds shrank in fear,
But their hearts were thrilled with a strange new joy,
When he spoke these words of cheer:*

*"Fear not, O trembling ones," he said,
"Good news to earth I bring;
For unto you is born this day
In Bethlehem a King!
Long promised by your ancient seers,
He comes to bring release
To Israel's bound and scattered sons,
And to the whole world peace!"*

*Then suddenly angelic hosts
Appeared in heavenly light,
Their voices with hosannas rang
And echoed through the night:
"Glory be to God on High!"—
The vibrant tones increase—
"Good will to men who please the Lord,
And on the earth be peace!"*

*Two thousand years have come and gone
Since the echoes died away,
And glory faded from the sky
On that first Christmas Day.
And ceaseless Time still marches on,
War's ravages increase;
Fear fills the hearts of all mankind,
Vain seems the hope for peace.*

*But faith still burns, a deathless flame,
In the souls of those who know
That God is true, and soon anew
The heavens again shall glow
With the Shekinah light that filled the night
With glory long ago.*

*Soon He shall come, who is to come,
The dead in Him shall rise—
The living changed—together called
To meet Him in the skies;
With Him forevermore to be,
With Him forever reign,
Till every knee to Him shall bow,
And sin and death and pain
Be banished from His world-wide realm,
To never come again.*

*But sin and death and pain still rule
O'er all the tribes of earth;
No more we hear a voice to cheer
The hearts of men to mirth.
The children's dancing feet are stayed,
Their lilting voices stilled;
Clasped in their mothers' straining arms,
With dread their hearts are filled.*

*"How long, O Lord, how long!" we plead,
"Wilt Thou not hear our cry,
And send our great Deliverer back
From Thy right hand on High?"
Perhaps He'll hear—I KNOW He'll hear!—
While we His children pray;
And this may be, O blessed thought!—

NUMBER 13

All the Year Long

*"All the year long have my steps been attended
Surely by One who regarded my ways;
Tenderly watched over, sweetly befriended,
Blessings have followed my nights and my days.
Tears have been quenched in the sunshine of gladness,
Anthems of sorrow have turned into song;
Angels have guarded the gateways of sadness,
Summer and winter — yea, all the year long!*

*"All in the dark would I be, and uncertain
Whither to go, but for One at my side,
Who from the future removes the dim curtain,
Seeing the glory to mortals denied.
No other friend could so patiently lead me,
No other friend prove so faithful and strong:
With angel's food He has promised to feed me,
Who has befriended me all the year long.*

*"He will not weary — Oh, blessed assurance!
Infinite love will the finite outlast!
But for my heavenly Father's endurance,
Into the depths of despair I were cast.
This is my star in the midnight of sorrow,
This is my refuge, my strength, and my song,
Sorrow today, but there is gladness tomorrow,
And Jesus be with me all my life long."*

Happy New Year

We wish all readers of The Restitution Herald a bright, happy, and prosperous New Year. Especially do we hope that you will be successful in your work for Christ. Deplorable world conditions are challenging to Christians. Let your light shine; get out from under your "bushel."

The most certain way to have a happy new year is to use its every day in service for the King. Time that is not used reverently is wasted, and time that is used in service to God and Christ is most fruitful. Work for the Lord, and your wish for a happy new year will be fulfilled.

"Go Ye"

It is reported that "seventy-four million of the one hundred thirty-seven million people in the United States are in no way connected with Christ," and that "thirty-one million of those who have made some church connection, according to statistics, never attend the services of the church."

Though students of prophecy should not be alarmed by so evident disinterest in the religion of Jesus, we should be challenged by this disinterest to work more faithfully. Knowing well the sinful conditions in the world, Jesus said, "Go ye." To ask for places wherein to work is a confession of having little vision of the field and of having little appreciation of Jesus' Commission. One might rather ask, Where shall I not go?

Beautiful Sunsets

Only when there are at least a few clouds in the western sky does one behold the most beautiful sunsets. The sun peeping through the rifts, casting its component colors in varying degrees upon the moving and formation-changing clouds, and, as it were, giving its last testimony of the grandeur of God before settling down to rest beneath the horizon, paints more gorgeous pictures in God's blue heavens than artist ever daubed on his canvas.

So it is with life. In the closing years, when the western horizon may be broken with clouds, when, too, one is speaking his farewell before the sleep of death, his light, especially if he is a Christian, should shine through the clouds and upon the clouds, touching them with a hun-dered hues that have been the very making of his being. Then it is that his testimony for God can and should be the most beautiful.

So it is with the passing of the old year. There are some disappointments, of course; there are mistakes and sins that speckle the horizon of the closing year. Nevertheless, through all the dark and threatening clouds there shines the blessing of the year drawing to its close. We cannot complain; we, if we only look up to see the beauty, must thank God for the color, the warmth, the inspiration—all these speaking loud witness to us of the favor and glory of God. Our heavenly Father has not rewarded us according to our sins, but He has so forgiven and blessed that our clouds have become tinted with the glory of the Lord, and our tears are prisms through which the imagery of heaven is woven.

Three Hundred Sixty-Five Deeds

Every loyal Boy Scout plans to do at least one good deed daily. Now, it is not to be understood that Christianity is to receive pattern from a lesser, but being the greater, every loyal Christian should most certainly plan to do at least one kind deed daily. In such service, the Christian will not be thinking of any pledge to mortal man, but of loyalty to Christ, the Son of God. Further, in this service, there will be no thought of temporal remuneration, but there will be thought of "a better resurrection" (Heb. 11:35), for "thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just" (Luke 14:14).

A year is a very short while. When it is past, it seems to have been like a dream—real only while it lasted, and then lost with the mythical. Nevertheless, in one short year, he who will do one gracious act daily "only in the name of a disciple" (Matt. 10:42) will have added to his record of "treasures in heaven" (Matt. 6:20) three hundred sixty-five entries for which he may expect reward when Jesus comes (Rev. 22:12). "Let us do good unto all men, especially unto them . . . of faith" (Gal. 6:10).

Knowing heads sometimes wag at New Year's resolutions, but it is certain that no target will be hit without an honest aim. May every member of the Church of God aim to do at least one charitable deed daily through 1941.

Jesus Christ in the Psalms

By C. E. Randall

IF ALL the Bible were destroyed except the Psalms, one would still have a mighty revelation of the birth, life, death, resurrection, ascension, priestly work, the Second Coming, and Kingdom of our Savior Jesus Christ. It is simply amazing that a shepherd lad should be chosen to be the medium through whom such an unveiling of gospel truth should come. One cannot read the Psalms without early discovery that the "sweet singer of Israel" was a prophet of great worth. No matter how poor, obscure, or ignorant a person may be, when touched by the hand of God and endowed with wisdom from above, he becomes brilliant in his understanding of the deep things of God. By history, promise, and prophecy, and through prose, poetry, and drama, we have woven into the Psalter, the whole purpose of God as it centers in the Son of God.

It is impossible to consider all the approaches which are made in this Book concerning the King's Son. There are some which this season of the year calls forth for special treatment. The first consideration deals with Jesus as,

The Son of God

"Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee" (Psalm 2:7). One of the pivotal truths of the gospel is that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. No part of His redemptive work takes on the least semblance of importance, until He is acknowledged to be the "only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth." If He was not the Son of God, then He was just another good man. It was the voice of the "angel of the Lord" who said, "He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest." In all of His public utterances on the subject, Jesus maintained that God was His Father and that He was God's Son. It would be difficult to find plainer words than those recorded in Matthew 3:17, saying, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." God acknowledged with words that cannot be misunderstood, His fatherhood of Jesus, and that Jesus was His Son, whose action in being baptized by immersion was cause for joyful approval.

In presenting His claims to the children of Israel, Jesus said, "I am the Son of God" (John 10:36). The whole house of Israel understood Jesus to make this claim, and on the basis of His affirmation, they brought a charge against Him, and as He hung on the cross, they taunted Him by saying, "He trusted in God; let him deliver him now, if he will have him: for he said, I am the Son of God" (Matt. 27:43).

Speaking by inspiration, when Jesus asked the disciples, who they thought He was, Peter said: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God" (Matt. 16:16). This makes a fourfold confirmation of the Psalmist's words, "Thou art my Son." The four witnesses to the sonship of Jesus are: God, Jesus, Gabriel, and Peter.

Humanity of Jesus

Though Jesus was the Son of God by birth, He partook of the flesh, bone, and blood of His mother. He was conceived by the Holy Spirit, but this did not take away His humanity. "Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren" (Heb. 2:17). In speaking of this, the Psalmist said: "I will declare thy name unto my brethren" (Psalm 22:22). Jesus was considered one of the brethren. It is written of Him that He was not ashamed to call them "brethren." The early ministers of the Church of God in Minnesota had a saying concerning Jesus that always appealed to me, but which I seldom hear any more. It was, "Jesus Christ is our elder Brother." As Christians, we would do well to emphasize this thought more frequently. He is our elder Brother, and understands all our uprisings and downittings, and having traveled the way before, knows the problems and trials with which we have to meet and deal. Therefore, He is able to sympathize with us, and is "touched with the feeling of our infirmities."

It has always been a source of comfort to me to know that Jesus was the "Man Christ Jesus." It is this "Man" who is our Mediator and great High Priest. He has been much closer to me, since I have been able to look upon Him as my elder Brother. His concern for me seemed to be much more personal and intimate. Then, a few years ago in studying Him as our High Priest, I discovered a thought in the Syriac translation of Hebrews 7:25, which made Him all that my heart could desire. The rendering reads as follows: "He is able to vivify for ever, them who come to God by him; for he always liveth, and sendeth up prayers for them." His humanity is carried into His priesthood, and His love for the brethren actuates Him in all of His priestly work toward us. Having gone the way, He is able to succor all who follow after. When we are weak and weary, it is of great consolation to know that the "Man Christ Jesus" is praying for us. In this work, He will never leave nor forsake us, but will be with us always, even to the end of the age. Said Jesus, "All things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms, concerning me."

The Standards of Christ

By Mrs. Mae Nedrow

"For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved" (John 3:17).

THE first four books of the New Testament present a record of Jesus' birth, life, words, works, His death, burial, resurrection, and ascension. Matthew and Luke relate Christ's history from His birth, while Mark and John begin with His baptism and first public appearance. In these books we learn how to live according to the standards of Christ, how love is expressed through kindness, we learn about the new kind of greatness, the power to forgive, the life of faith, how we should pray, and many other like things.

The Bible is, indeed, a priceless treasure. It is like a mine whose veins are filled with precious ore. If we dig, we will find treasures untold. The more we study from God's Word, the greater is our surprise to notice the harmony that is manifested. What one writer omits, another supplies. We discover there are no contradictions in the Bible, and that any seeming contradictions are of our own making, when we endeavor to add something that is not there or take away something that is there. The Christian who is ignorant of God's Word is ill-equipped to go out into the world to preach the gospel.

Let us study Jesus: He loved righteousness and hated iniquities; therefore, He was exalted above His associates. Jesus was "meek and lowly in heart." We have His own testimony to this fact. (See Matt. 11:29.) Still, He spoke with authority. The teachers of His day dared not to speak as He did. Even the officers who were sent to arrest Him had to acknowledge, "Never man spake like this man" (John 7:46). Pilate, the Roman governor, could not classify Him with anyone who had ever come before him. Jesus was obedient even unto death. Obedience is the very essence of holiness, yes, it is the crowning grace of a true Christian.

Jesus never harbored any ill thoughts in His heart for anyone. He taught men holiness by His example and His words. Humility keeps the Christian from soaring up into self-conceit—he realizes that he is never so near the crown as when he staggers under the cross.

If our hearts are filled with jealousy and we treat one another unkindly, all our wisdom or learning amounts to nothing. Evil thoughts proceed out of man in the form of words and deeds. It is a common tendency of human nature to regard certain acts as wrong when done by others, but right when done by ourselves. We should be severe in judging ourselves, and charitable in judging others.

When speaking of the early life of Jesus, we have often heard the phrase: "The thirty silent years." Even after His baptism, He went into the wilderness to be alone for a while. Jesus took time to think and to pray.

When He spoke in His home town at Nazareth, the people "wondered at the gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth" (Luke 4:22). Unkind words would seldom be spoken, if we would realize how they might affect the person addressed. We need not wonder why the apostolic church was a success, when we picture Paul in his pulpit, Dorcas with her needle, and Lydia in her cloth store, all witnessing for Christ. They had a work to do, and they did it. They had a charge to keep!

A few words fitly spoken have often changed the course of history. Consider the words of Martin Luther in his examination before the Diet at Worms, when he said: "Here I stand; I cannot do otherwise. God help me"—just a short sentence, and the Reformation was born.

Many times we become discouraged and doubts creep into our hearts. We must never give heed to them for even a moment, but when they arise, turn from them. Doubts are inlets by which evil enters; let us never allow our faith to waver.

The book of Jonah, often called the missionary book of the Old Testament, has a practical application to our lives today. We, like the Israelites of old, have a tendency to dislike those of the world—outside of our immediate church circle. To the Jews, all Gentiles were (heathen) dogs. Today, many Christians pull their robes of self-righteousness around them a little tighter, when they meet one who is not a member of their church. We, too, need to be taught the lesson of the gourd, to help us see our selfish narrowness. How well Jesus understood the Scriptures! He was a friend to all. It is true, He had a small circle of real, intimate friends—His disciples, Lazarus, Mary, and Martha, and others—but He was also a friend to even the hated Samaritans. After His discourse with the Samaritan woman at Sychar, many believed and became His followers. (See John 4:5-42.) He chose Matthew (Levi), a publican, to be one of His apostles. (Matt. 9:9.) Jesus ate dinner at Levi's house with publi-cans and sinners. (Mark 2:14, 15; Luke 5:29.) When He ate at the home of Zacchaeus, another publican, many good people were shocked, and they asked His disciples, "Why eateth your master with publicans and sinners?" By way of explanation, Jesus said, "The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost" (Luke 19:10). It was through His friendliness, that He led sinful men to lives of righteousness and love. As He walked throughout the land, He said to all: "Come unto me."

Sometimes, it seems, His disciples were slow in understanding His meaning, and patiently He taught them, over and over again. With awe-stricken faces, they watched Him as He stood on the hill at Nazareth amid a crowd of enraged enemies—then slowly He walked from their midst. He stood on the deck of a storm-driven ship; calmly He said to the wind and the sea, "Peace, be still!" Unafraid, He faced the maniac among the tombs at (Gergesa) Gadara; and greatest of all, they saw Him, "set his face" toward Jerusalem, knowing full well that there He would be crucified.

After His death, burial, and resurrection, and before His ascension, Jesus' last message to His disciples was a command to go into all the world to teach and baptize—that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name among all nations. (See Matt. 28:19; Mark 16:15, 16; Luke 24:47.) As the disciples witnessed His ascension, two men in white apparel testified that He would return "in like manner" (Acts 1:11). Today, we await His return. He will then raise the dead saints, transform the living, and establish righteousness.

Although the Bible was written by many different writers, God is its author. We know it is true. Therefore, we try to be true witnesses, preaching the gospel to every creature we can possibly reach—to our neighbors, to those we meet in the stores when doing our daily shopping, and to people near and far away. If I thought I could help someone steeped in sin who had never heard the gospel, I would not hesitate to go into the vilest place of sin. Some of the greatest evangelists the world has ever known were once drunkards, groveling in the gutter, until some humble Christian stooped to lift them out of the mire and placed their feet upon the solid Rock.

Let us live, then, my brethren, according to the standards of Christ; may each member of the Church of God make a firm stand for the Lord; may we, too, say, "Here I stand, I cannot do otherwise; God help me."

Covenant Relationships

By R. H. Judd

"This month (Abib) shall be unto you the beginning of months: it shall be the first month of the year to you."

THE season of the New Year (the time of year varies with different nations) has always been looked upon as affording a suitable opportunity for retrospective consideration of the days that are past, and renewed purposes for the better use of the time that lies before. In nearly all nations, the New Year partakes somewhat more of a personal and religious festival than national or political, plainly showing that originally the character of the individual was considered to be the basis upon which the national character was built.

In proportion as the individual or nation wandered from his allegiance to God Almighty, the reciprocal responsibility of the individual to the state, and of the state to the individual, weakened; resulting in various standards of righteousness as at the present day. It is most interesting to note the stress and importance to both the individual and the nation which the Scriptures place on the observance of special memorial days, months, and years. "This month (Abib) shall be unto you the beginning of months, it shall be the first month of the year to you"

(Ex. 12:2). "In the month of Abib thou camest out from Egypt." (Cp. Ex. 34:18 and Deut. 16:1.) Again and again, Israelites were urged to "remember the day," "from year to year," "all the days of thy life."

Here, God places, in the "beginning" month of the year, a religious festival—the commemoration of the Passover—and there can be no evading the fact that it was intensely individual in character, and intensely national in application, for it represented the saving of the life of the individual and the nation. In the writer's opinion God never intended that the civil and religious welfare of the nation should be divorced from each other, splitting the nation and dividing its allegiance to God. There never will be true prosperity in this world that God has "given to the children of men," until the whole world can unitedly join with heart, soul, and mind in worship to the Giver—the One true and living God. (See John 17:3; Zech. 14:9.) God has Himself ordained these "days to be remembered" for the very purpose of uniting the whole nation, so that they may

Freedom and the Church

By Arlen Marsh

JOHN MECKLIN, professor of sociology, has pointed out in The Annals (of the American Academy of Social and Political Sciences) and in numerous books that the church, either in general or denominationally, has never sponsored freedom of speech. This, feels Mr. Mecklin, is undoubtedly a major cause for the moribund condition of religion today.

Superficially, the Mecklin hypothesis might be considered correct. But when it is understood that it is not the church's function to teach freedom of anything, that it is not the church's function to be broad-minded, that it is not the church's function to speak more or less wisely on politico-social topics, Mr. Mecklin and his views slide into pleasant obscurity.

Mecklin's somewhat virulent attacks, via The Annals, et al., on the position Christianity has taken in the past would not be worth mention in The Restitution Herald, were it not for the fact that the good professor has epitomized the opinions of a constantly growing section of religious leadership—and were it not for the fact that the modern press faces a crisis which rarely has been paralleled within the last five decades.

It was Gamaliel who proposed to the Hebrew Sanhedrin that it view the teachings of the early Christians with a calm eye and a broad mind. Gamaliel's theory, often held out to us as a prime example of how we ourselves should behave and of how the Apostle Paul should have behaved during his pre-Christian years, was predicated on the notion that if the patristical doctrines were true, they would grow and be quickly accepted under the beneficence of God, whereas if they were not true they would die of stagnation and disuse.

This same spirit animates much of Christendom today. New religious theories, it is argued, whether they be sponsored by liberals or conservatives, should be given every consideration. The church should forsake absolutism—adherence unbendingly to old-time doctrine—for the broad view. The Apostle Paul, instead of persecuting the early church, should have waited, like Gamaliel, to see whether or not the new teachings would prosper or perish from their own weight.

Underneath the surface, this is all nonsense. Paul, before he became Paul in reality, in one sense did precisely what he should have done. He was honestly convinced that the followers of Jesus were blasphemers; and, under the laws of God, it was his duty—inescapable and well defined—to see that the blasphemers were given the full penalties of the Mosaic code. That Paul was in error had nothing to do with the situation; his beliefs were wrong, but his practices showed his faith. It is notable that Jesus, in performing Paul's miraculous conversion, did not condemn the man; He asked merely, "Why persecutest thou me?"

The church was not created to preach freedom. It was created to teach the doctrines left it by the Christ and delineated in writing by the Bible. Stern warnings were issued by Scriptural writers against any divagation from the settled paths of thought; straying from established principles was to be "accursed," whether such straying was accomplished by the angels or by men.

Freedom of speech thus becomes inconsonant with Christian doctrine. Freedom of speech is a political and social, not a religious principle. The church is obliged to insist that its leaders teach only what the Christ and His immediate followers Biblically tell them to teach; the church is given no license to authorize or to permit idealistic wandering about in the name of Christianity.

When schisms occurred in the early church—as they are bound to occur in any group united for a specific purpose—they were settled by a general conclave of church authorities. Peter permitted his teaching to be swayed more by popular opinion than by what he knew to be truth; Paul hurled shafts of lance-tipped language at him for this deviation. Some felt circumcision must be continued; others felt the Mosaic Law was dead. A conference of leaders was called to settle the matter. It was decided there would be no circumcision. Thereafter, there was no circumcision. The church could not permit freedom of expression to every would-be interpreter of the gospel who was seized with a new idea.

Each denomination is firmly convinced that it is right. If it is so convinced—and it should be—it should insist upon its peculiar interpretation of the gospel regardless of virulent attacks from those who say that the dogmatic religionist is destroying, or at least endeavoring to destroy, freedom of speech and press. Whether or not the denomination in question is wrong is immaterial—it must, if it is to survive, insist upon its own doctrines, its own cultus.

All this is not to say that Paul would have been given a place in the Kingdom of God had he continued to persecute the early church. Nor is it to say that all denominations, of whatever creed, will have a place in the Kingdom. What is meant is simply this: that no church group has reason to seek guarantees of freedom of expression, except to insure its own ability to teach its own beliefs; that Christianity essentially is fanatic bigotry; that, however wrong a church may be in its interpretation of the Bible, it cannot—must not—permit wide divergence of openly expressed opinion to occur within its membership.

Paul would have lost his citizenship in heaven, had he not been miraculously converted. Millions of unfortunate "Christians" who have been honestly certain of the accuracy of their beliefs will have no place in the eternal Kingdom. God holds out no hope of salvation to those whose beliefs and practices are at variance with those He has given us to learn.

Yet the Church of God—speaking denominationally—like every other denomination, must not, on account of the promise of destruction in the event of error, turn about with every wind of doctrine. It must not be broadminded. It must not countenance unbridled freedom of speech. It must be comprised of bigots and fanatics. It must insist that its doctrines are the sole means of salvation for the world, and it must insist that those doctrines and those alone be taught by its authorities.

The Gamaliel-inspired theory was in error, although it had some modicum of truth. It should have been reversed. It should have said: "Attack this doctrine violently. If it be of God, it will continue anyway. If it be not of God, we are bound by divine law to do away with it at once."

Attack, used in open warfare, has never obliterated any religious code. If the doctrines which the Church of God attacks are right, they will survive in spite of any pressure; if, on the other hand, as we believe, such doctrines are definitely wrong, the Church of God will not have done its duty unless it hurls its weight against them. In the first case, no one will suffer except the Church of God itself; in the second—if the church fails in its duty—all will suffer, from the members of the church to those whom the church should have converted and did not.

Coming for His Saints; Coming With His Saints

By S. J. Lindsay

---

HAVING been asked for an article on the subject at the head of our effort, we now endeavor to give our understanding of the same. Following are some texts to be considered:

"Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints" (Jude 14). "The Lord make you to increase and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men, even as we do toward you: to the end he may stablish your hearts unblameable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints" (1 Thess. 3:12, 13). "Ye shall flee to the valley of the mountains; for the valley of the mountains shall reach unto Azal; yea, ye shall flee, like as ye fled from the earthquake in the days of Uzziah king of Judah: and the Lord my God shall come, and all the saints with thee" (Zech. 14:5).

The foregoing texts teach that when Jesus makes His appearance to the earth in all of the commotion of His appearing to the world, the saints will be with Him and make their appearance with Him as He comes in judgment. The Revelator (3:21 and 2:26, 27) tells us that we are not only to sit on thrones with Christ, but that we are to be a part of the judging body over the nations.

That the saints are to be saved from passing through the great tribulation, Isaiah has this to say: "Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast" (Isa. 26:20). David evidently referred to the same matter when he wrote: "In the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me up upon a rock" (Psalm 27:5).

While earth is undergoing the throes of strife and trouble because of the harvest of sin, God's people have provided for them a place where the strife of earth will not reach them, and when this strife is over and the Lord is ready to take His throne and rule in righteousness, the whole ruling power will present itself at the same time. The first few chapters of Revelation carry this thought, also. In chapter 4, we find John called upon to leave the scenes which he had seen behind him on the earth, and to ascend to the throne that was set in the heavens. Here we find the four living creatures and the four and twenty elders, representing the redeemed church. At least, in chapter 5, they are represented as singing the song of redemption. Not until after this song is sung do we find the seals of God's wrath being broken one by one, and His wrath spewed out against the earth in its wickedness. We are told that Christ's coming will be as His going. The world did not see Christ after His resurrection,

As Thy Need, Thy Prayer Will Be

By R. M. Abbott

WE HAVE prayed at times to be shown how to pray, that we might not make the mistake of praying amiss, but we have learned through many experiences that the need will produce the words that will get for us the needed answer. "As thy days, so shall thy strength be" is one fact in life, but another has proved itself true in the hard places in the way we have traveled, and that is: as thy need, thy prayer will be. Words are only the expression of an inward need, and we are reminded that God is not influenced by outward appearance, but that He looks upon the heart.

Faith is sometimes spoken of as being "our faith," but the truth in the matter it is not, correctly speaking, our faith by acquirement, but it is the gift of God. (See Eph. 2:8.)

We pray for more faith as though it would be given to us directly, not realizing that faith is directly increased through being exercised, and the results thus obtained are that which increases faith. Muscle is made stronger through being exercised, and it is the same with faith. Muscle unused will become useless and ineffective, and faith not used will cease to be faith, or it may be evidence that it is already dead. "According to your faith be it unto you" would cause us to be interested in having our faith at its most efficient fullness. Faith can be at its height in our lives only when it is exercised completely.

You have faith in your friend, and you depend upon him for some certain return because of that faith. He meets your expectation, and because he does, your faith in him is increased. From now on you will have faith to ask for greater things from that friend. The same holds true in the realm of Christian faith. The more we trust in Christ and God, the more we shall be blessed in that which we have in return for trusting, and this will increase our faith.

The truth of God's Word, when rightly applied in our lives, is the means by which our faith in His Word is increased. People who do not believe in the Word of God are those who have never been exercised by faith in any portion of promise, or commandment with promise, in the Bible.

Circumstances and experiences with which we meet along the way of life are a sort of scale that weighs our faith. Our difficulties are met and overcome in proportion as we have sufficient balance of Bible truth and faith in that truth. The principle that Jesus taught was, "According to your faith be it unto you," so we are to use all the faith we have in living any part of our Christian ways, and we are not to expect above our faith, for "whatsoever is not of faith is sin." "Lord, I believe, help thou mine unbelief," if prayed earnestly and from a pure heart, will change a double-minded man from being like a reed in the wind, and make of him a Christian character to be likened to a tree planted by rivers of water.

Jesus said, "Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of man also confess before the angels of God," and because of this promise of Christ, I desire to confess Him at this time.

In a number of times, outstanding needs of my life have been fully met in answer to prayer, and I am sure it could never have been that the particular words that were used brought the answer. It could be credited only to the Lord in knowing the need and His willingness to answer and supply the need according to His precious promises. Another great need has been prayed for, and there is no disappointment in the answer, for as always: "The blessing of the Lord, it maketh rich, and he addeth no sorrow with it" (Prov. 10:22).

One week ago yesterday, December 11, I was about twelve miles from home, and as I started to walk from a timber lot toward my car about one eighth of a mile away; my feet suddenly slipped, and going over backward I struck on the ground with most of the force striking my left hand and wrist. When I had gotten on my feet and saw the condition my hand was in, I was faced with one of the highest mountains to pray out of the way that I had ever met up with. Broken bones have been in my experience at different times before and prayer was made and answered then, but this was different. The hand was out of line with the wrist, there was a depression in one place and a raise in another in the back of my hand and wrist, and the hand and wrist were rigid. The pain was terrible. There was just one thing to do, and that was appeal to the one Source from whence cometh our help—which I began to do. As I walked toward the car, I was repeating over and over again, "O God, please straighten my hand." How formidable the opposition appeared! I am thankful, though, for at least the mustard-seed size faith that made it possible to believe that prayer was the only way out of my trouble, which was continued until the car was reached and until I had driven the twelve miles home.

On my arrival home, wife called a doctor and a friend who lives some distance from us, but about this time a warmth went through my hand and wrist, and much of the pain was gone. In just a little time more, the pain left. It was about this time that I noticed that my hand was straight and there was no depression or raise in my wrist or hand. I could then do nothing less than thank God for again being faithful in filling an urgent need in answer to simple but believing prayer, and we canceled the call to the doctor.

My faith in prayer and what it will do for us is increased through seeing another mountain removed, and that with no human help added.

"If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you" (Matt. 17:20).

Why Did We Keep Christmas?

---

By Florence E. Tuttle

THE universal keeping of December 25 as our Lord's birthday was recently acknowledged by Christians, anti-Christians, non-Christians, and infidels, alike. Shall we not say it was recognized and celebrated by the masses? Perhaps, that, too, was how the day received its name "Christmas," or, perhaps, the word came from the Eucharist in the Roman Catholic Church, called "Mass."

Writers have given through The Restitution Herald substantial proof that December 25 is not actually our Lord's birthday. Why did we, the true Church of God, hold so enthusiastically to it? Did we not possibly displease the Lord by doing so? Was it not, to a certain extent, upholding a proved lie? We who hold the truth as precious and dear, surely should not willingly do this, but should "abstain from all appearance of evil" (1 Thess. 5:22).

Christmas is supposed to be for merrymaking, and to spread joy, some may say, but many people could find little joy in the Day, if they had to omit the receiving of presents, and abstain from gluttonous eating and drinking. From our observation, this was the extent of what Christ's birthday recently meant to the masses. To the true Church of God, Christ's birthday had a sacred, far-reaching significance, for it meant to us "good tidings of great joy" (Luke 2:10) of the Kingdom of God so soon to be restored to this earth (Isa. 9:6, 7). If our lives were patterned according to our Example, it no doubt took the earthly or carnal joy out of the Day, but ushered in a spiritual joy which far outweighed in satisfaction selfish joy.

Yes, Jesus can give a gift that will never perish, through us, if we teach and convert people, as did Jesus, in the belief of the coming Kingdom of God on earth—a gift of life, to be lived on earth, and not in heaven. After all, it is Christ's birthday, not ours. Why not give Him a gift of saving mankind, for which He was born into the world and died? If all the money that was recently spent for worldly gifts had been used to give people the good tidings of the Kingdom of God to be established on earth, and if this principle would be practiced each year, how soon we might look for "on earth peace, good will toward men"! (Luke 2:14.)

Religion that costs nothing, does nothing. Some may have given a material gift at Christmas, supposed to have been given with love, yet these same persons will be little concerned about how the receiver exists the rest of the time until next Christmas. (Prov. 17:17.)

The little "gleaning" about Christmas trees and trimmings (see The Restitution Herald, December 3, 1940), and its reference to Jeremiah 10:1-10, was very interesting, and a good illustration of a worldly Christmas. There is much for the thoughtful, true believer to think of in that gleaning. We did not celebrate Christmas at our house as the world celebrated, because we can see that it is to the world only a heathen holiday, and is of Babylon. It is written, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him" (1 John 2:15).

Most people recently gave, hoping to be recompensed. It would be well for many a selfish person to take his Bible, and read Luke 14:12-14. There is rarely any love of a Christlike nature in the mere exchanging of gifts by friends and relatives, and so little is really given to the poor. "The poor is hated even of his own neighbour: but the rich hath many friends" (Prov. 14:20).

One cannot help feeling that a gift of spiritual food would have been more appreciated by an isolated brother or sister in Christ than were the material gifts. Especially is this true among the weaker ones, and the straying. When Jesus three times asked Peter if he loved Him, Peter answered, "Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee." Two times, Jesus said, "Feed my sheep," but first He said, "Feed my lambs" (John 21:15-17). Was not Jesus referring to spiritual food? He was telling Peter to preach, was He not?

Our reward lies more in spiritual giving than in material giving; but whichever way we gave, we trust it was in love for Christ. . . . Then the "King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me" (Matt. 25:40).

May we correctly honor the birth of our Savior every day through the coming New Year.

ARE YOU READY?

By J. Don Swartz

MOST of us today are looking for the return of our Lord very soon. A good many, however, are hoping that His coming may be postponed a little longer, because we haven't had our fill of good times yet.

How often is heard the statement, especially by the younger generation, "Oh, we're only young once. We've got to have our fling. There is plenty of time to get serious."

In Matthew 24:40, 41, Jesus speaks of a separation which shall take place at His coming. Do you think there will be such a separation when He comes and finds two persons together in a movie house? I think they will be among the "left ones." Do you think there will be such a separation of two Christians seated in church?

For a great many years, New Year's Eve has been a time of great celebration with all kinds of merrymaking. What a wonderful time for Christ to return to find out which of His children really are worthy of a place in His Kingdom! What is your guess as to the number of persons at theaters, parties, and dances, compared with the number of people in churches on New Year's Eve?

"But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only" (Matt. 24:36).

COMING FOR HIS SAINTS; COMING WITH HIS SAINTS

neither will the world see Him until He has gathered His saints out of the world in fact. Only saints saw Him as He went, so only will saints see Him when He first appears.

In 1 Thessalonians 4:13-18, we have this promise: "I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent (precede) them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

From 2 Thessalonians 2:7, it appears that there is a "letting," or hindering power in the earth that keeps the man of sin from developing himself fully until that power is taken out of the way. Is not that hindering power the Spirit of God as manifested in His church? When the world is in its worst agony because of sin, then the Lord with His host of heaven will appear to bring the sad scene to its close. What follows that is what we are looking for. Then the righteous King and His redeemed ones will have charge of earth, and from that time forward, the inequalities of this present age will have passed away, and the earth will go forth upon its longed-for age of peace. May it soon come!

THE VOICE OF PROPHECY

By D. G. Harvey

IN ADDITION to the prophecy of Psalm 48:7, "Thou breakest the ships of Tarshish with an east wind," and in addition to Isaiah's prophecy that the "day of the Lord of hosts shall be upon . . . all the ships of Tarshish, and upon all pleasant pictures" (2:12, 16), the following texts likewise seem to indicate trouble in England:

- (1) "Pass ye over to Tarshish; howl, ye inhabitants of the isle" (Isa. 23:6),
- (2) "Pass through thy land as a river, O daughter of Tarshish: there is no more strength" (23:10),
- (3) "Howl, ye ships of Tarshish: for your strength is laid waste" (23:14).

Joel 2:3-6 seems to be applicable to the modern flame-throwing tank.

Daniel 11:21 seems to refer to Hitler's rise to power. We believe Daniel 11 presents a picture of the period from 1914 to 1940. Verses 11-19 seem to apply to the fall of the German Empire. Verse 20 seems to refer to the short-lived German Republic. Verses 21-45 may refer to Hitler. Verses 28 and 39 seem to throw some light on the blitzkrieg. The present Russian and Balkan trouble may be prophesied in verse 24. Verse 45 surely tells of the "end" of earth's last wicked king, which will be followed by the coming of Christ (Dan. 12:1-3).

COVENANT RELATIONSHIPS

"remember all the way (not ways) which the Lord thy God led thee" (Deut. 8:2).

Special Days Regarded as Covenant Days

God looked on these memorial days as days of renewal of a covenant between Himself and the individual or nation. There was no exception made, each and all were under obligation to observe these divinely appointed landmarks in the calendar.

Turning to Deuteronomy 26:17, 18, we read that first the people avowed God to be their God, and then God avowed them to be His people. There must be first a turning of the individual and the nation Godward, before God can avow them to be His people. When that occurs, the act is shown to be wholehearted and voluntary on their part; and when that takes place, God is always ready to enter into covenant relationship with them.

The word "covenant" means "arrange together," and is, in fact, a defined agreement between the parties concerned. The word occurs some two hundred fifty times in the Scriptures, very generally having the solemnity of a vow. It was considered to be an act of dishonor for either side to break, or in any way disown the covenant. Young's Concordance gives us yet another meaning, namely, "a thing prepared, or eaten." A little reflection will show the reasonableness of the thought that a covenant may be "eaten." A covenant is a mutual understanding, and what is more natural and more frequently observed than the custom of ratifying a covenant by eating together? In the expressive language of the Chinese, to believe a doctrine is literally phrased "to eat the doctrine," to typify that that which is agreed upon becomes so much a part of the contracting parties that it enters into their very life and cannot be recalled.

That covenants have been in recognition since earliest times, and the date of each kept in constant memory, is clearly indicated in Hosea 6:7 (R.V.), where it reads: "They like Adam have transgressed the covenant." The reading given by the Authorized Version presents to us no comparison—"like men they transgressed a covenant"—for those spoken of were certainly men.

I have sometimes wondered if the underlying objective of making it necessary for man to eat to live, was to keep the thought perpetually before him that he can permanently exist only when in covenant relationship to God; the regularity of the seasons intimating that God in His goodness realized that, while it is good that man should be under regular and constant reminder of his relationship to God, each of these seasons carried with it a richness of blessing peculiar to themselves, so that David was able to say, "Thou crownest the year with thy goodness."

BUILDING YOUR LIBRARY

Book Reviews

By Arlen Marsh

It was nine years after the initial publication of T. E. Lawrence's Seven Pillars of Wisdom that the book first became available to the general public. Prior to 1935, it could be had only in a privately printed format at a price ranging up to $100 a copy.

Now, however, Doubleday Doran has produced the volume, in unexpurgated form, at only $3.00. The new edition carries all the original illustrations and all the original text.

Seven Pillars of Wisdom concerns itself with the adventures of Lawrence in Arabia during the last two hectic years of the first World War. It tells of the bloodless capture of Jerusalem by the British and Arabs, of the difficulties of maintaining order among Arab chieftains, of the problems of desert warfare and of the antics of a part of the world-famed Camel Corps.

The actual historical events with which the book concerns itself are narrated in a fairly captivating style; but as much cannot be said for the philosophy on "East is East and West is West, and never the twain shall meet" which occupies large portions of the Seven Pillars. Lawrence has a technique which by no stretch of the imagination could be called really professional; but he, nevertheless, succeeds in making most of his book interesting reading.

* * *

It is unfortunate that the nearest thing to a denominational history of the Church of God should come from the typewriters of seventh day keepers; but it is so.

A. N. Dugger and C. O. Dodd, in their History of the True Church, have concerned themselves primarily with the Seventh Day Church of God, of which they both are leading lights. The History (published by The Bible Advocate, Salem, West Virginia, at $2.50) is chiefly given over to the period from 33 to 1700 A.D.; but the last chapters give what seems like a reasonably authentic version of Church of God denominational doings. The whole, of course, is strongly flavored with Sabbath-keeping tenets and with excoriations of the Roman Catholic Church.

"Whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men . . . for ye serve the Lord Christ" (Col. 3:23, 24).

December 31

"The year is closed—the record made,
The last deed done, the last word said,
The memory alone remains
Of all its joys, its griefs, its gains;
And now with purpose full and clear
We turn to meet another year."

January 1

"Taint what we have, but what we give;
Taint where we are, but how we live;
Taint what we do, but how we do it—
That makes this life worth going through it."

—Selected by Mrs. B. A. Johnson.

Good Works

Christians are told to be filled with "good works." Different men and women of the Bible are spoken of as having done a "good work."

What are some of these "good works"? How can we be "full" of them?

In Titus 2 we read that young men, and older ones, too, are told to be "sober minded," to be "sincere," to use "sound speech." I think these rules also apply to young girls and women. The Lord wants a holy and pure people—"a peculiar people, zealous of good works." We are to be lovers of "hospitality," to visit the widows and sick, and to be "godly."

Now, just how can we show forth these "good works" in our lives this new year? We can try to be good and kind to all about us. We can try to think of not just "fun," but of the results of what seems like only "fun" will be. Look to the end of things, not just for the present. Be "far-sighted"—"sober-minded."

So many use unsound speech. Perhaps they do not curse, but every other word is slang—or idle words. By always being honest and sincere we will use more "sound speech."

Now, many people do not show hospitality to any except their friends. We should be kind to our friends, but, also, we should be kind to strangers—especially to brethren.

Some people talk of not having any talents. Now, are not talents accomplishments? We can develop the talent of being hospitable. Yes, invite the strange brethren, as well as the ones well known, into your homes. The Lord will bless you.

All of you know someone who is sick, crippled, or alone. We are told to visit such. That is a "good work."

Perhaps some of you girls can sew. You and your mother can make some clothes for a child in need. That is the "good work" for which Dorcas was noted, wasn't it? (Acts 9:36-40.)

Will you try to become full of "good works" this new year?

Morpheus Is Here!

* * * By Arlen Marsh, National Berean President

Some years ago I prepared an editorial for this department entitled, "To Arms! Morpheus Approaches!" which was designed to hit at the customary "summer slump" in church activity.

Apparently, Berean-wise, Morpheus already has arrived. During the last several years, semi-annual additions to the National Berean treasury have grown smaller and smaller, until—as reported at the last annual Berean conference—fewer than half the known local and State Berean groups contributed toward national expenses in 1939-'40.

As of November 30, 1940, Miss Lorna Macy, treasurer of the National Society, reported the treasury down to almost an all-time low: $16.85. Almost simultaneously, it became known that the last of the stationery of the Society had been exhausted, that postage, tract, and other bills (including those for the Berean Echo, continued this year by almost unanimous vote of the last Berean conference) were falling due and would continue to fall due.

All these expenses are essential. Correspondence committees bind together young and old members of the Church of God, sometimes induce prospective members really to be baptized, comfort the bereaved, encourage the doubtful and the weak. Mrs. Verna C. Thayer's home study work with juniors reaches not merely hundreds of children, but a good many parents as well. Tracts are distributed in considerable quantities and with excellent effect by both correspondence committees, by the publishing committee, and by other groups. Lesson books, which rarely have paid their own way at the prices for which they have been sold, must continue to be provided.

Under the constitution of the National Berean Society, local and State affiliated groups are bound to send the national treasurer one half the local dues. These dues are payable to the national treasurer on the first of January and the first of July of each year. The money so paid is used to defray the operating expenses of the correspondence committees, publishing committee, home study committee, and Echo.

Unless dues are paid to the national treasurer as they should be, all functions of the Society will have to be curtailed or suspended. The Society has no intention of ordering stationery or other supplies until it is capable of paying for them.

By the time this appears in print, it will be past January 1, 1941. If your local or State society, therefore, has not paid its regular dues, will you help continue the missionary work of Bereans throughout the United States by seeing that your treasurer does make the necessary remittance immediately? The National Society does not seek contributions—although they would by no means be discouraged!—but it does need the financial support guaranteed it by those local and State groups which have affiliated with it.

Just One Apiece and "Morph" Is Licked!

Comes Morpheus, and what is to be done? Some societies are thriving and expanding their membership, while others are slipping and need assistance to get back on their feet. The National Society is attempting to glean ideas that have proved to be good for the successful societies and use them to help societies that are dropping behind. Several plans have been considered to combat various problems that Bereans have to face, but we have run into one serious difficulty. We lack information which is absolutely essential to the success of any campaign. We need to know:

- (1) The location of each local society.
- (2) The names and addresses of the officers and teachers of each local society.
- (3) The membership and activities.

Surely at least one member of each local society will read this article. Will you who are now reading this page please communicate with the officers and members of your local society, and be sure that someone in your local organization writes a note to either the president, secretary, or editor of the National Berean Society giving the information requested above? Please hurry, for if we are to conquer old "Morph" we have no time to lose.

The Voice of Solomon: "A fool's voice is known by multitude of words. When thou vowest a vow unto God, defer not to pay it; for he hath no pleasure in fools; pay that which thou hast vowed" (Eccl. 5:3,4).

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALENDAR OF EVANGELISM

January 7-23—Evangelistic meetings at Ripley, Illinois.
 July 29-August 10—General Conference at Oregon, Ill.
 July 29-August 10—Illinois Bible School and Conference at Oregon.

HOLBROOK, NEBRASKA

The writer will speak at the Holbrook Church of God, Sunday morning and afternoon, January 5, 1941. The afternoon sermon topic will be, "The Resurrection of Christ?" . . . When was it?

Let's have a one hundred per cent attendance on this first Sunday of the New Year. Come, bring a friend with you. Dinner will be served in the church basement at noon. The afternoon service will convene at 2:00 o'clock. All are welcome at the Church of God.
 Elder E. E. Giesler.

CLEVELAND, OHIO

We are happy to introduce to the church Sr. Mary Margaret Patrick, wife of Bro. Cecil Patrick, who united with Golden Rule Church by baptism on Sunday, December 15. Her husband stepped forward at the same time to make a reconsecration of his life, and both were received into membership with joy.

These young folks have been married only a few months and live at 312 E. Broad St., Elyria, Ohio. We have known Cecil many years, as well as the rest of his family, and there has long been a close bond of friendship between us, hence we are especially glad to have him and his wife unite their religious life with our church and have them with us often. Mary is a most talented young woman of fine character whom we are all coming to like more and more. She quickly grasped the Biblical truths which make our faith so satisfying, and was anxious to act on it. May her obedience be blessed of the Lord and her Christian walk be fruitful unto the Lord's coming.

The annual Sunday school Christmas program was given Sunday night, December 22, to a full attendance. It was largely devoted to musical selections by several of our talented young people. M. W. Lyon, Pastor.

ALLIANCE, NEBRASKA

Bro. E. E. Giesler of Moorefield, Nebr., recently closed a ten-day series of meetings (December 6-15) at Alliance, Nebr. Much new interest was shown, which we pray will bear fruit. Words cannot express our deep joy and happiness of these meetings, as he comes only twice a year. How we all hunger to hear the Word of God preached! Sr. Giesler, too, was with us to help in the meetings.

Sr. Beulah Wilson of Longmont, Colo., was with us the first Sunday, but snow and bad roads prevented her coming the second Sunday. Although she teaches school forty-five miles from Alliance, she attends our Sunday school part of the time. She is a good worker in God's vineyard, and we are always glad to have her with us.

A business meeting was held after the evening services of December 15, at which time the following officers were elected: Bro. E. E. Giesler, part-time pastor; Bros. Lloyd Wiltsey and Morris Zeller, deacons; Sr. Laura McCann, pianist; Sr. Ollie Zeller, secretary and treasurer.
 Ollie Zeller, Secy.

RIPLEY, ILLINOIS, CHURCH

The Ripley church was the scene of a very lovely wedding, December 22, when Bro. Wayne Laning and Sr. Mildred Miller were united in marriage. They will reside near Ripley. Bro. Wayne's continued efforts with the assistance of his good wife will help much in our work at this place.

Bro. F. E. Siple will be speaker at a series of meetings January 7 to 21. We welcome everyone who can to attend these meetings.

Our annual election of officers was held December 11, the following being elected: elders—Loren Burnett and Wayne Laning; deacons—Francis Howell and Harold Burnett; deaconesses—Isabell Smith and Maggie Bray; secretary—Helen Lewis; assistant secretary—Mildred (Miller) Laning; treasurer—Edna Powers; trustees—Frank Laning, William Fey, and Fred Paisley. Also, the following Sunday school officers were elected: superintendent—Lozelle Burnett; assistant superintendent—Tessa Laning; secretary—Mildred Laning; assistant secretary—Marjorie Burnett; treasurer—Mildred Hetrick; assistant treasurer—Florence Howell; pianists—Hildreth Worley and Edna Powers; librarians—Lyle Dean Lewis, Orval Dale Lynd, Reva Hetrick, and Helen Burnett.

Helen Lewis, Secy.

ELDORADO, ILLINOIS

The annual business meeting of the Restitution Church of God convened December 12, 1940. We elected the following to guide and lead us through the coming year, beginning January 1, 1941: elders—Herbert Edmister, Wilbur Mosby, and Marshall Wiggins; deacons—Marshall Lloyd and Ray Barlow; deaconesses—Ida Overton, Berniece Leithliter, Rhoda Leithliter, and Lovena Barlow; treasurer—Maud Edmister; secretary—Lorene Wiggins; trustee—Ray Barlow, for three years; trustee to fill vacancy caused by death of J. C. Wiggins—Herbert Edmister for two years; Sunday school superintendent—Marshall Wiggins.

May God be the guiding hand in all that is to be done in the work of this church.

Marshall Wiggins, Secy.

POMONA, CALIFORNIA

Clare Courtney, son of Bro. and Sr. Courtney of Norco, Calif., was immersed at the chapel of the "Church of the Open Bible" early in November. We were all so pleased to have this young man willingly ask to come into the Christ family. We all pray he will be given strength to "run the race" that ends in eternal life at the coming of our Master.
 Margaret Adamson.

BRUSH CREEK CHURCH OF GOD

About a year ago we distributed little pamphlets containing a calendar for reading the entire Bible during the year. Six readers will have completed by the time you read this report. Two have read about half of the Bible, and twenty confessed that they read more than they would have if the pamphlets had not been given. We wish to thank those who have been so faithful in the reading of God's Word, also those faithful ones who read and study systematically just because they love the Word.

We realize that it is difficult to spend a great deal of time in diligent study if one is interested in merely reading through the Bible, but several stated that the reason they failed to complete the reading in one year was because they found too many interesting things which they stopped and studied out.

Sunday night after the Christmas program a group of the brethren went to five different homes and sang Christmas songs to the accompaniment of a trumpet duet. The two nights following others are to have gone to other homes to bring similar messages of God's great gift to us.

Don't forget to read your Bibles this year. Three chapters a day will enable you to know first hand what God has provided for us to study. If someone would give you a hundred dollars for your trouble, I'm sure that the blessing of closer fellowship with God would be worth more to you than the money ever could.
 Harvey Krogh, Jr., Pastor.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

Bible Training School students will preach for the Southlawn Park Church of God, Grand Rapids, Mich., while its pastor, Bro. F. E. Siple, is conducting evangelistic meetings at Ripley, Ill.

We are sorry to report the death of Sr. Lydia Railsback, which occurred December 27. Funeral services will be conducted by Bro. F. L. Austin, December 30, at South Bend, Ind., burial to be made at Argos. . . Faithful to the end of life, her final work in Truth Seekers' Quarterly appears in the Golden Text section of the lesson for December 29.

Bro. and Sr. C. Lacey Compton of Manassas, Va., announce the birth of a son on December 19, 1940. He has been named Charles Lacey Compton, Jr.

Students planning to enroll for the second semester of the Bible Training School should report at once. The second semester will begin January 27.

Considering how people count the shopping days before Christmas, Bro. Arthur Gilbey, Winona, Ont., writes: "It is good for the Christian to remember that the days for serving the Lord are passing away, one by one. Very soon, perhaps, the Christ of Christmas will appear and summon us to show what we have gained for him by trading (Luke 19: 15). Let us be diligent to 'buy up' opportunities ere the days of opportunity are forever gone."

Born to Bro. and Sr. Robert McInturff of Washington, D. C., a son, December 15.

SOUTHLAWN PARK CHURCH OF GOD
Grand Rapids, Michigan

On Friday, December 6, this church had its annual election of officers, and the results were as follows: elders—Lawrence Bridegam, Lloyd Stevens, and Martha Doan; deacons—Ralph Downing, Lyle Doan, Edward Dykstra, and Leslie Niles; secretary—Francis Van Fleet; treasurer—Gerald Niles; deaconesses—Eva Thomas, Mildred Dolph, and Miss J. Stevens. The superintendent of the Sunday school is Lloyd Stevens, and the superintendent of the Bereans is Dorothy Siple; Dorcas—Mrs. Earl Keyes; and the director of music is Evelyn Barr.

Thirty ladies of the Dorcas Society had a Christmas party in the church annex, Wednesday, December 11.

The Christmas plans for the church and Sunday school are well under way, with the choir having double practice seasons under the direction of Miss Evelyn Barr. It is also planned to have a special program at the Sunday school hour, all the classes participating.

On Christmas Day, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Skeels of 1216 Eastern Ave., will celebrate their sixtieth wedding anniversary at their home. "Mother" and "Dad" Skeels have long been active members of this church. We feel that the Church of God at large will want to echo our congratulation and best wishes to this grand old couple on Christmas Day.

Leslie Niles.

OREGON, ILLINOIS

Mid-week devotional services were conducted Christmas night at the church. Bro. Orris Mills of Eden Valley, Minn., preached a Christmas sermon, and Bros. Ben Carpenter and Harvey Krogh sang Christmas solos.

Bro. and Sr. Val Mattison, their daughter Cecil, and Mr. Walter Capes are spending the holidays with Sr. Mattison's parents, Bro. and Sr. S. J. Lindsay of Tempe, Ariz.

Bro. and Sr. Harvey Krogh are visiting at the William Reynolds' home, from which Harvey wooed Mary. Bro. Krogh is pastor of the Brush Creek Church of God near Tipp City, Ohio. He preached for us, Sunday morning, December 31. Come often, Harvey.

Sr. Hazel Reed is home from the Illinois Research Hospital, Chicago, but plans to return in February for further treatments which, it is hoped, may enable her to walk.

Sr. L. E. Conner is visiting with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Armstrong of North Hollywood, Calif., and with other relatives in the sunny State. Fortunately, her train followed the Christmas Special which was wrecked in Colorado. Bro. Conner spent Christmas at his farm near Macy, Ind., but will likely be back to his duties in Oregon, Ill., by the time these lines are read.

The Golden Rule family celebrated Christmas Eve with the pastor and family, as did Santa Evan Knodle.

Sr. Margaret Mattison, a student of the DeKalb Teachers' College, is vacationing at home.

Bro. Roy Blanchard returned home from The Hines Veterans' Hospital in time to celebrate Christmas with his family.

Bro. Ben Carpenter preached for the Dixon Church of God, Sunday, December 31. Amos, too, was first a farmer, yet later became Israel's most eloquent prophet.

The pastor and all his family were royally entertained at an evening dinner at Golden Rule Home, December 27, which climaxed as good a Christmas as we have ever enjoyed, and for which we are thankful to the Lord and to all His people who bountifully "laded us with such things as were necessary."

May the Lord direct and bless each and every member of the congregation throughout the HAPPY NEW YEAR.

Sydney E. Magaw, Pastor.

FRANCIS M. EVANS

Francis M. Evans was born in 1875, on a farm in Warren County, Ind., where he grew to manhood. On May 6, 1894, he was united in marriage with Miss Lettie Showeross of West Lebanon, Ind., to which union one son and two daughters were born.

A number of years ago he became a funeral director, in which vocation he was very successful, and continued in that vocation until some three years ago when on account of failing health, he retired from all his active business relations except vice president of the Cass County State Bank of Walton, Ind., in which capacity he continued to serve until the time of his death, which occurred at his home in Walton, December 5, 1940, leaving surviving, of his immediate family, his wife, Mrs. Lettie Evans; one son, John Evans; two daughters, Mrs. Ralph Mummert and Miss Helen Evans; and one granddaughter, Marjorie Evans, all of Walton; also one sister, Mrs. Lydia Railsback of South Bend, Ind., and one half-brother, Armstrong Evans of Williamsport, Ind., with many more distant relatives.

Bro. Evans was baptized into Christ some forty-seven years ago by the writer, who also solemnized his marriage in 1894. In his business and social relations he was unassuming, and it was truthfully said of him, that he lived a peaceable and quiet life, in godliness and honesty.

Funeral services were conducted in the late commodious home, and he now rests in Walton cemetery, awaiting the return of the Master "who doeth all things well."

JOHN DAVID FIELD

The last surviving member of the Grand Army of the Republic resident in Marshall County, Ind., deceased in the person of John David Field who, in his ninety-fifth year, died on December 1, 1940, in Plymouth, Ind. It was in LaPorte County, Ind., that the deceased was born to Richard and Mahalia (Harding) Field on September 26, 1846.

On March 24, 1864, he enlisted in the United States Army. He became a Corporal in Company G, 29th Volunteer Infantry, and was in Sherman's march to the sea.

His marriage to Martha Jane Stilson, in New Buffalo, Mich., occurred on May 18, 1869. To them were born five sons and two daughters.

For over sixty years Bro. and Sr. Field were members of the Church of God at Plymouth. Their home seemed to be always open to entertain evangelists and church workers generally.

Bro. and Sr. Field lived in their own home in Plymouth, she past ninety years of age, enjoying unusual strength of body and mind until a few days before he was taken to the hospital with a "tired heart," about two weeks before his death. Until a few days prior to his hospitalization, he was taking his daily walk over to town, a half mile distant.

Following religious and military services, interment was made in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Besides this aged wife and mother, now bereaved by the death of her companion of over seventy-one years, there survive to mourn his death four children and their families: Mrs. C. A. Bondurant of Plymouth; Willard H. of Springfield, Ohio; Melvin G. and Emmett D., both of East Chicago; seven grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren; besides a large circle of other relatives and friends, all of whom, though mourning the death of an honored loved one, yet have fond memories of his life and a joyful anticipation of his resurrection into the company of his Lord and Master. May it so be.

F. L. Austin.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32); the church to be joint-heirs with Him, (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

The Kingdom of Jesus Christ

By E. O. Stewart

"The stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth" (Daniel 2:35).

THE great image which stood before King Nebuchadnezzar in the dream-vision was in the form of man. Daniel, who stood before this Gentile monarch, said unto him, "There is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets, and maketh known to the king Nebuchadnezzar what shall be in the latter days" (Dan. 2:28). The image was composed of gold, silver, brass, iron, and clay. There was no "stone" in the composition of the image. As there was no stone in the composition of this image, and whereas the image was a mental picture of what man is to build up and worship; it is positive proof that the Kingdom of Jesus Christ, which was represented by the stone, does not exist in the works of mankind as a reforming process of the image, with which image man wars, toils, and spends most of his time to support. Let us remember that instead of the stone being within the image and working for its advancement, as the great religious leaders of today would have us believe, it is to smite the image from without, and so completely pulverize it that the wind will carry it away, and it will be found no more. We now leave the image for the time being, and shall attempt to show exactly what is meant by—

The Kingdom of Jesus Christ

The Lord spoke through the Prophet Isaiah, speaking "concerning Judah and Jerusalem," as follows: "It shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it" (Isa. 2:1, 2). Isaiah was prophesying of the establishment of the mountain (government) of the Lord's house, and he positively affirmed that he was telling of the future condition of, not the church, but "Judah and Jerusalem."

Unto the house of Jacob, which He called Israel, the Lord said, "Behold, I will make thee a new sharp threshing instrument having teeth: thou shalt thresh the mountains (governments), and beat them small, and shalt make the hills as chaff. Thou shalt fan them, and the wind shall carry them away, and the whirlwind shall scatter them" (Isa. 41:14-16).

E. O. Stewart

Again, the Lord spoke to the house of Jacob through Jeremiah, saying, "Thou art my battle axe and weapons of war: for with thee will I break in pieces the nations, and with thee will I destroy kingdoms" (Jer. 51:20).

According to these passages of divine Inspiration, the house of Jacob is the instrument in the hands of God with which He will break in pieces the nations and kingdoms of mankind. The house of Jacob is His battle axe and weapon of war. The house of Jacob is His sharp threshing instrument with which He will thresh the mountains and beat them small, and make the little hills like chaff, so that the winds carry them away.

There is so much similarity in these statements and those of Daniel 2:34, 35, that no one can fail to see that they refer to the same things. Daniel says, "Thou sawest till that a stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces. Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together (all at the same instant), and became like the chaff of the summer threshingfloors; and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them: and the stone that smote the image

Marvelous Works

By C. E. Randall

"Great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints."

HERE, there, and everywhere the glory of the Lord can be seen by those who are looking for it. It is a wonder that nearly all men fail to see the marvelous works of God. God is the center of all attraction. In Him all fullness centers. Turn to all the thirty-two points of the mariner's compass—look up and down as each point is reached, and what will you see?—the glory of God!

Encampment

The encampment of the Israelites around the Tabernacle was in reality an encampment around God. The presence of God in the Shekinah was the center of their dwelling. They tented with their faces toward the God of their deliverance. They lived where they could see the manifestation of God. It must have been a marvelous experience for those people to be able to see at all times in their march toward the Promised Land, the evidence of God's presence. Yet, this should not be considered a strange matter, for we today, in our pressing "toward the mark for the prize of the high calling" (Phil. 3:14), are surrounded with a "cloud of witnesses" that declare the glory of God, and we even, have an "earnest of our inheritance" to confirm us in our faith. With all the evidences of God's managing our lives in keeping with His purpose, we are without excuse if we remove our hands from the "plough."

The Israelites' communal life was God-centered, that is, when they walked with the Lord and obeyed His voice. Any other life is not worthy the name of God.

Zodiacal Standards

"Every man of the children of Israel shall pitch by his own standard, with the ensign of their father's house: far off about the tabernacle of the congregation shall they pitch" (Num. 2:2).

Each tribe of Israel had its own standard under which it was camped. Today, we would call it a flag. On this flag, or standard, appeared one of the signs of the zodiac. The zodiacal signs were the standards of the twelve tribes. The tribes and their respective standards were: Judah, Leo (a lion); Issachar, Cancer; Naphtali, Capricornus; Dan, Scorpio; Asher, Sagittarius; Benjamin, Gemini; Ephraim and Manasseh, Taurus; Gad, Aries; Reuben, Aquarius; Simeon, Pisces; Zebulun, Virgo. This arrangement is according to the Targum of Jonathan.

One of our early ministers in Minnesota, Elder C. D. W. Scott, was of astronomical turn of mind, and gave much study to the heavens. It was his contention that the whole purpose of God was written in the heavens as surely as it is written in the Bible. There are many profound students who hold to this same thought. It is unquestionably true, that "the heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handywork" (Psalm 19:1). The zodiac belts the ecliptic or sun's path. The heavens center in the zodiac. It is most fitting that this heavenly center should be the standard under which God's people encamped. Israel is the center of all nations. When God portioned to the nations their inheritance, "he set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel" (Deut. 32:8). It is evident that God's purpose with Israel is set forth in the zodiac. How marvelous are thy ways, O God!

Besides the tribal ensign, there was a standard under which three tribes camped. The tribes on the east side were under the standard of Judah, which was the lion; on the north was the standard of Dan, his was an eagle; on the west encamped three tribes under the banner of Ephraim, which was an ox; while on the south was the camp of Reuben with its standard being a man. Putting these four standards together, we have: a lion, an eagle, an ox, and a man. With these standards in mind, when we come to Revelation 4, and read about four living creatures that appear as these four, it is not difficult to note the similarity and determine from what group of people they come. This, of itself, should be sufficient proof of the benefit to New Testament interpretation of having a knowledge of the Old Testament. Each tribe was known by the ensign which it carried, and each group was distinguished by the standard (Please turn to page 10)

My All

By Iris Hall

If I have life,
It is God-given.
If I have love,
'Tis sent from heav'n.
If I have strength,
His power fills me.
If I know joy,
His Spirit thrills me.
If I show mercy,
His Son inspires me.
If I must speak,
His glory fires me.
If I grow wise,
His wisdom guides me.
If I would fail,
His mem'ry chides me.
If I am kind,
His grace entralls me.
If I reach up,
His sweet voice calls me.
If I should stray,
His Own hand holds me.
Throughout each day,
His love enfolds me.

Restful Sleep

By Harvey Krogh, Jr.

"Knowledge shall be increased" (Daniel 12:4).

IT WAS a broad statement the angel made to Daniel more than two and one half millenniums ago. Knowledge has greatly increased in every field of learning, and the greatest of these fields is the Word of God. It is not unreasonable to believe that men will continue to learn more and more of God's precious truth, right up to the very end of the age. We are not forgetting that Jesus inquired, "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" Faith and knowledge are two different things. Besides this, Jesus' question did not imply that no faith would be found.

An article in the Reader's Digest of May, 1938, entitled, "Death Has No Terrors," brought out many truths which the Bible has always confirmed, and showed man's increased knowledge of himself and God's creation.

Remembering that death is an enemy, in that it deprives the dying of well loved life and the living of a friend or loved one, we are convinced that death is an enemy in no other sense. The agony, the suffering, and the pain of dying are all parts of life, and may all be experienced a thousand times without death. The testimony of most of those who have nearly died and been revived is that life's very last moments are merciful.

A noted physician arranged to be present with every dying patient at a certain hospital and stated that "there is nothing terrible to the dying person in death itself."

The well-known Irvin S. Cobb one time came very near death, and told his feelings in the following words:

"At last I knew that I was very near the borderline between life and death. I began to sink. It was a physical feeling. I was sinking, gently, slowly, and easily, into a darkness which rose to meet me. There was something soothing, almost alluring, about this darkness. I knew that if I completely surrendered myself to it, I should rest. I accepted the prospect of impending death as most of us accept the prospect of continued life—as a matter of course.

"The blackness had almost completely enveloped me before a force within me asserted, 'If I quit now, I'm yellow. I'm leaving things undone.' Slowly, wearily I dragged myself up. I fought to live.

"Some may look upon death with a shrinking dread in their souls. To all such, I who have skirted the Valley of the Shadow say that we will face it without fear and without bitterness, without reluctance, and without repining, without suffering, whether physical or mental."

Bruce Barton was questioned after reviving from an illness that brought him very near death, "What did you think or feel?"

He answered: "Nothing! I had no interest whether I lived or died. I was just terribly tired, and I thought, 'Now I can sleep.'"

Only about one out of sixty of over a thousand recorded last words tell of any fear or pain. The other fifty-nine range from indifference to ecstasy.

The distinguished British author, Grant Allen, after being revived from a close approach to death by drowning, wrote: "The knowledge that I have experienced death has had a great deal to do with my utter physical indifference to it. Dying is as painless as falling asleep. It was only the previous struggle, the sense of its approach, that was at all uncomfortable, but even that was not half so bad as breaking an arm or having a tooth drawn. There was a total absence of craven shrinking."

Those who have experienced the effect of a general anesthesia have known what it would be like to die in that way. Not one has ever reported anything contrary to the Bible truth that death is like and is a deep sleep. More than twelve references to death as a sleep are found in the Bible. Several accounts are similar to the one found in 2 Samuel 7:12, saying: "When thy days be fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee."

In Jeremiah 51:57 we have this description of death: "I will make drunk her princes, and her wise men, her captains, and her rulers, and her mighty men: and they shall sleep a perpetual sleep, and not wake, saith the King, whose name is the Lord of hosts."

The most convincing evidence in the Bible that death is a sleep is the complete silence concerning anything about thoughts or activities of the dead. There is, however, a parable, the Rich Man and Lazarus, which when taken out of its setting and used as a literal example, tells the conversation of dead men as though they were conscious and physically active in death. In Judges 9:10, begins the account of a conversation between trees, but none are led to believe that trees really talk among themselves. Neither is there any real Scriptural evidence that dead men talk, unless it be by the lives they have lived and the works they have left.

Other evidence as to man's status in death is found in Psalm 146:3, 4, where David tells of man's thoughts perishing in the day of his death. Ecclesiastes 3:18-20 and 9:6, 7, 10, confirm the above truths.

Our greatest concern is that men may know the truth of God's plan by which one may sometime return from the death state. Jesus voluntarily entered the silent tomb that God might show His mighty power in bringing His Son again to life and granting Him all power, even the power to raise others who have died. By teaching this truth and many others, we desire to help people have the same firm confidence in God and His mighty power and precious promises that we have.

Do you fear death? You need not. We are glad that God has given us a glorious hope of eternal life.

Are you helping others to have this hope?

Caesar Versus God

By Alfred Anthon

---

"Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's."

GOD commands Christians to render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's. If we do not, we sin; we disobey God. What things, honors, belong to Caesar? Judging from Jesus' pattern of life, these would be our taxes and obedience to Caesar's laws against evildoers. An illustration of modern "laws against evildoers" is traffic regulations—others, against stealing, false pretense. The persons who are delegated, or authorized, to enforce these regulatory laws are paid, hired servants of Caesar. It is their duty to look after the welfare of the public.

Caesar also has the burden of combating nations by war. The soldiers for this work are hired servants. Many of these servants choose this work because they enjoy it—enjoy an opportunity to kill someone. Others accept it because they would rather have a soldier's somewhat easy, hilarious life to almost starving because of hard times; and others, because their country is at war, are drafted.

Now, we ask, what things belong to God? God says, in meaning, "Return good for evil. Pray for them that persecute you even unto death." The righteous took joyfully the spoiling of their goods when this spoiling was done because they were followers of Christ. Women refused to be delivered that they "might obtain a better resurrection" (Heb. 11:35). Vengeance is mine (God's); I will repay" (Rom. 12:19).

If vengeance belongs to God, and if we Christians take the vengeance in our own hands, do we not steal from God? We "puff up" ourselves to usurp authority that God does not authorize us to have; authority that belongs to God only? Are we not judging and condemning, though God commands us not to? "If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink" (Rom. 12:20). Jesus taught that if one should offend us, we should forgive him—even to "seventy times seven."

God will enforce all proper punishment; also, the very best punishment; the exactly correct one. Also, along with this, God will render to His people the proper blessing. At one time, one may not see just how it is going to work out; but rest assured that God will render the very best blessing to you—if not in this life, He will in the next. If you do not now obey God in this matter, there is no blessing—neither now nor in the future.

"If thine enemy hunger, feed him" good food—not lead! Do not kill him. God says, "He that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword" (Rev. 13:10). God will destroy in the lake of fire those who do not obey Him. (Rev. 21:8.) God also says that many of His followers will be killed (martyred) because they obey God. Thus, we see that God does not give His followers the privilege of killing their enemies to keep from being killed. Jesus said, "Whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it." He who disobeys Christ to save his life shall lose his eternal life.

God gave Adam and Eve a set of laws, to Noah another set, another to Abraham, others to Moses and David. Likewise, a very different set of laws have been given to Christ for His followers. Before Christ, plurality of wives was allowed; since Christ, this is not permitted. Also, circumcision was once commanded; now it is baptism. Again, this old law was "life for life," "tooth for tooth"; but now the law is, "If thine enemy hunger, feed him"—do not return evil for evil.

God never usurps authority over things that He has put into Caesar's hands, but Caesar does usurp authority over some of God's things. Caesar commands, "Return evil for evil. If thine enemy hunger, feed him lead, bomb babies, use poison gases on whole cities—starve them." God's Word teaches that they who obey Caesar when Caesar disobeys God will lose their eternal life.

Concerning Israel

By Emma C. Railsback

THE Apostle Paul recognized three classes of people: the Jew, the Gentile, and the Church of God (1 Cor. 10:32; Gal. 3:28). The Jews, as we know them today, are none other than the "whole house of Israel" (Ezek. 37:11; Rom. 11:25). In other words, the reunited two and ten tribes are called, throughout the New Testament, Israel and Jew—the terms being interchangeable. Just a few examples follow: Matthew 2:2, 6; 27:37, 42 and Luke 23:37; John 3:1 and 10; Romans 3:1, 2. True, the twelve tribes are not yet bound inseparably together by the bonds of the new covenant—for that is an event yet to take place, when Israel shall say, "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord."

Some of the prophecies concerning the Jews are frequently applied to the church by some students, using the term "spiritual Israel" instead of "church of God," but the Scriptures positively do not warrant such an application.

Israel's relationship to God is described in the prophecies as that of husband and wife (Ezek. 16:8; Isa. 54:5; Jer. 3:14, and so forth). By going into idolatry, Israel was called an adulteress; but she was brought back, she was cured of idolatry in the Babylonian captivity. Through the Prophet Hosea (chapter 3) God has said unto her, "Thou shalt abide for me many days; thou shalt not play the harlot, and thou shalt not be for another man: so will I also be for thee."

The children of Israel are still in the "abiding" or waiting time, for they were to remain for a long period of time, without serving other gods, yet separated from the true God, during which period of astrangement God would not enter into any marriage covenant with any other nation. "For the children of Israel shall abide (or dwell) many days without a king, and without a prince, and without a sacrifice, and without an image, and without an ephod, and without teraphim" (Hosea 3:4). But Hosea, as the other prophets invariably do, holds out a future hope for them: "Afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek the Lord their God, and David their king; and shall fear the Lord and his goodness in the latter days" (v. 5). During this long period of probation, God is testing Israel's repentance and disciplining her, until in God's own good time she shall again be restored, when she, as the Prophet Isaiah has said, shall no more "remember the reproach of (her) widowhood," for her "Maker is (her) husband; the Lord of hosts is his name" (54:5).

Before the returning and seeking time mentioned so often by the prophets, a greater "time of trouble" awaits her. It will be short, but very intense: "none like it," every face will be "turned into paleness," it is "the time of Jacob's trouble," Jeremiah tells us. (30:4-9.) Let us also note here that "the house of Jacob" and "children of Israel" are used interchangeably in reference to the twelve tribes. The Prophet Joel speaks of this day in which "all the inhabitants of the land (of Palestine) tremble . . . there hath not been ever the like, neither shall be any more after it" (2:1, 2). Daniel describes it as "a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation."

Let us see how it is to come about. The Israelites rejected Christ who came to them in His Father's name, and He foretold them that another would come in his own name, with whom they would make a covenant (John 5:43). This will be none other than the "man of sin," the "son of perdition," the Antichrist, the "Wicked" one, also spoken of as the "king of fierce countenance." He will cause them to "dwell safely" for a short time (Ezek. 38:8, 11, 14), which will also be a period of prosperity. (Dan. 8:25—margin; 1 Thess. 5:1, 2.) After this, he will break his covenant with them, and cause their (renewed) sacrifice and oblation to cease: he will demand that they accept his mark of allegiance to himself (Rev. 13:16, 17; 2 Thess. 2), to worship him (Dan. 7:25), or suffer immediate destruction. This is the cause of the trembling, the fear, the paleness, foreseen by the prophets.

But listen! Jeremiah said that "he shall be saved out of it"—saved out of this trouble. Daniel said that everyone of his people found written in the book "shall be delivered" out of this trouble. He also said that Michael, the archangel who stands for Daniel's people, would then stand up. No doubt, he is the one whom John saw with the seal of the living God (Rev. 7:2)—the seal of protection for all Israelites who have kept faith in the true God: twelve thousand out of each of the twelve tribes of Israel. They are seen after this by John before the throne of the Lamb (not on thrones) singing a song which no one else could sing (Rev. 14:1-5). They will be the first-fruits unto God and the Lamb of the mortal nations, subjects (not rulers) in God's Kingdom.

Now, if we desire to learn what percentage of those Jews who will have returned to Palestine and have entered into covenant relationship with the beast, the Roman prince, are to be protected through the awful time of trouble yet future, we can find the answer given by Zechariah 13:8,9: "In all the land, saith the Lord, two parts therein shall be cut off and die; but the third shall be left therein. And I will bring the third part through the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as gold is tried: they shall call on my name, and I will hear them: I will say, It is my people: and they shall say, The Lord is my God."

Unprejudiced minds cannot fail to see and understand that this is a brief outline of Israel's present and future condition; in reality, a part of the gospel.

God's Textbooks on Eternal Life

By David D. Blyth

ALL Christians recognize the Bible as our foremost textbook. (John 5:39; Acts 17:11; and 2 Tim. 3:16.) It contains the most authoritative written record that we possess. It instructs us in our present-day activities, and informs us of the future reward pending belief and obedience. The Bible is proved to be authoritative in these respects by the agreement of its record with history, science, archaeology, and current events.

The Bible is certainly one textbook, but are there others? Let us turn in our thinking to some six thousand years ago, and ask our first textbook the question, "What would have happened if Adam and Eve had not sinned?" Genesis 3:22 says, "The Lord God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil: and now lest he . . . take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live for ever." Can you imagine a newborn babe with the knowledge that there was such a thing as good and evil? This babe would have no knowledge upon which to base his judgment of what is good and what is bad, and, consequently, would call some things good that were bad and vice versa. Thus it was with Adam and Eve. God put Adam and Eve out of the Garden of Eden into the world with only the knowledge that there was a good and an evil. He gave them, however, two textbooks whereby they could learn what actually was good and what was evil. These two textbooks were, (1) man's environment, and (2) man himself.

Now, had man been able to obey God, he could have used his potentialities for learning, and could have learned all that there is to know about his environment and himself. Having accomplished this, God might conceivably have come to earth as man's Ruler, given him eternal life, and perhaps the correct knowledge of good and evil. Adam failed to obey, therefore God put into effect an alternative plan for obtaining the same ends. He turned man into his environment with little else to look forward to than death and the knowledge that he would have a "seed" (Gen. 4:25). Man had only the knowledge that there was good and evil. In the process of finding the good by experimenting with himself and his environment, certain men have developed in each age who understand God's purposes and have submitted themselves to God's judgment. Thus has God's knowledge served and will continue to serve men who obey God. All about God's people, other men are making a glorious mess of the once perfect environment, their physical bodies, and the potentialities of their minds in their blundering attempts to solve their problems.

What Does This Mean to Us Today?

Man must learn to subject his free will to God's will, which is the only will backed by complete knowledge. Can man do this by studying only one textbook—the Bible? Beyond all doubt, the Bible would be empty without the other two textbooks. For the man that is attempting to become a Christian and make himself worthy of a place in the Kingdom on earth, this means that he must study the two textbooks—man, including himself and his environment, as well as the Bible or First Textbook. (Job 12:7-11.)

The Bible as Revealed by the Sciences

The Bible, or parts of it, was written to be understood by all ages since Moses. For many centuries there was apparently no conflict between science and the Bible. Recently, science has become a household fact, and it apparently now conflicts with the early Bible writings. However, if we remember that these early books were written to be understood by men who had practically no understanding of their environment, we can understand why this Bible language does not conform to the teachings of modern science. If we can overlook the seeming defect in the way these Bible truths are expressed, then the teachings of modern science may reveal meanings in the Bible that have been long hidden from man because he did not know enough about himself or his environment.

The entire subject of God's purpose might be enlightened by looking at the Bible through the eyes of the modern sciences of man and his environment. Certainly, a

The Kingdom at Hand

By Alta King

WHEN JESUS was among men visibly, He preached and showed the Kingdom of God. (Luke 4:43; 8:1.) That is, He preached and showed the Kingdom which God shall have in the earth when Jesus shall sit on the throne of His father David in accordance with the angel's prediction to Mary. (Luke 1:31-33.)

He preached the Kingdom, in part, by saying, "The kingdom is at hand." He showed the Kingdom by enacting Kingdom works such as healing, teaching, raising the dead, and controlling the natural elements. His Kingdom works fulfilled His Kingdom message by bringing Kingdom activities "at hand"—within the experience of man. They depict the Kingdom in action and show forth its purpose and the activities by which that purpose shall be accomplished. This depiction is of first and primary importance to the believer's understanding of the Kingdom. It is the demonstration without which all teaching is weak and ineffective, and, as such, it gives a preview of the Kingdom that enables him to "see" it with an understanding that is otherwise impossible. And, since it is Jesus' own presentation of His Kingdom, it is the foundation of a true concept of the Kingdom and the criterion by which the believer should test all teachings concerning it. Manifestly, all Kingdom ideas should harmonize with what Jesus said and did to demonstrate it. Any interpretation of Scripture which ignores or denies this personal ministry of Jesus is on a sandy foundation.

The words and deeds that comprise the Kingdom at hand not only are a clear vision of God's rule in the earth as it shall be when Jesus shall sit on David's throne. They are also undeniable proof that Jesus is the Christ, for they are a fulfillment of prophecies which set forth the work of His Christship, such as Isaiah 61, and there could be no greater proof than fulfillment. Jesus referred John the Baptist to His works, when John asked for assurance of His Christship. It is important to note that it is not the fact of fulfilled prophecy that proves Jesus the Christ, but the works that fulfill the prophecy, and that even these works as a display of power finished in three years' time are not the proof. Their force as proof that Jesus is the Christ lies in the fact that they are the Kingdom at hand and, therefore, an earnest of the complete fulfillment of His Christship in and through the Kingdom.

The Kingdom at hand not only proves the Christship of Jesus. It also determines the meaning of "Christ" as applied to Jesus. Jesus summarizes the meaning in John 14:9-11. He says that the works He was doing are final evidence that He is in the Father and the Father in Him. Again, it is important to note that these works as a temporary display of power are not such evidence. They are such evidence only because they are Kingdom at hand works pointing forward to the Kingdom fulfillment of God's Fatherhood among men. He who fails to get this evidence of Jesus' Christship fails to get its essential meaning.

The Kingdom at hand has at least three fundamental values to the believer. It is a direct and concrete presentation of God's Kingdom in the earth under Jesus. It is the undeniable proof that Jesus is the Christ who shall rule the Kingdom. And it reveals the meaning of Christ as applied to Jesus. In view of these values, the believer should seek always for the Kingdom significance of Jesus' Kingdom at hand words and deeds.

With the thoughts of the foregoing study as a background, we wish to consider two events of the Kingdom at hand—Jesus' triumphal entry into Jerusalem and His subsequent work in the Temple—not as fulfilled prophecy with their meaning finished and in the past, but as a fulfilled prophecy which forms pictures of the Kingdom and places the richness of their meaning in the future.

Soon after Jesus had raised Lazarus out of death, He was on His way to Jerusalem accompanied by people who had witnessed the miracle. Much people were in the city for the Feast, and when they heard that He was coming, they took branches of palm trees and went forth to meet Him, because they had heard about this work of His saving power. (John 12:18.) They met Him riding on a young ass. Spreading their garments in the way for Him to ride over, they, with the multitude that followed Him, cried, "Hosanna to the son of David: Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord" (Matt. 21:9). "Hosanna: Blessed is the King of Israel that cometh in the name of the Lord" (John 12:12, 13). "Blessed be the kingdom . . . that cometh in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest" (Mark 11:10). The chief priests and the scribes and the chief of the people did not lend their voices to this glad acclaim. But Jesus made no attempt to appease them or to gain their favor, and He gave no heed when they rebuked Him for permitting the multitude to render Him such praise.

Accepted by the multitude as the King over the Kingdom of David, Jesus entered into the city and went straightway into the Temple of God and cast out all them that sold and bought, and overthrew the tables of the money-changers and the seats of them that sold doves, and said unto them, "It is written, My house shall be called a house of prayer, but ye have made it a den of thieves." Having cleansed the Temple of corrupt control and leadership, Jesus took command, and the blind and the lame came to Him and He healed and taught them daily, and all the people were very attentive. (Luke 19:45-48.) Even the children recognized His superior leadership and rendered Him praise. But the leaders were "sore displeased" (Matt. 21:15). Thus, Jesus forecast the inauguration of His Kingdom and its work. By this forecast, believers know that the Kingdom will operate under no less authority, and no other, than the authority of the name of the Lord. The King will set aside and ignore all other and establish His own without fear or favor. Without military, political, economic, or social backing, He will put out of commission all corrupt leadership and control, whether it is religious, political, economic, or what not (all phases of leadership in Israel centered in the Temple). Having cleansed the house of the Lord, He Himself will take command and use the power and the authority of the name of the Lord to carry on redemptive work among people. His commanding leadership will bring the people to the house of the Lord for prayer, for healing, and for teaching, and they will learn of Him the way of life. Through Him, the leadership and the spiritual and material resources of the Kingdom will go into constructive works of redemption, and multitudes of those who will receive of His salvation and of those who will hear about it, will render Him spontaneous and joyous praise. In no other way could Jesus have stated so forcefully that His Kingdom will carry on evangelistic and redemptive work than by giving this picture of its work. He who fails to get the import of this picture fails to get the vital message of Jesus' ministry among men.

And in no other way could Jesus have set forth so clearly the meaning and proof of His victorious Christship than by this picture of Himself at work in His Kingdom. By it, He gives meaning to the prophecy that God has given Him "for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people" (Isa. 55:4). Without it, the prophecy has no meaning, for it was not fulfilled by His three years of ministry among men. His status before the people at its close was not that of a commander and leader, but that of a defeated man who accepted shame at the hands of their false commanders and leaders. And it has not been and is not being fulfilled now. The begging, pleading Christ which Christendom accepts and presents to the world is a far cry from the commanding Christ cleansing the Temple, and then controlling its activities in the presence of hostile forces. Christendom's Christ is set forth as never taking an aggressive initiative to accomplish His mission as Savior. He only begs and pleads and waits. He does not and never will attack the organized corruption, the mental and physical heritages, the social conditions that block His work. He has the power to save, but He takes no first step to apply it and make it effective, other than to beg and plead. If begging and pleading do not bring results, His hands are tied. His mission fails of fulfillment. He is only a would-be Savior. Such a Christ is not a commander and leader. A beggar and pleader cannot command and lead, and he does not and cannot kindle in the hearts of people the reverence and homage of worship and its obedience. Christendom's Christ is not the Christ of the Kingdom at hand that Jesus enacted before men, and he is not, therefore, the Christ of God's Kingdom in the earth as it shall be when Jesus shall sit on David's throne.

There is no more pernicious teaching of the apostate church than the doctrine that Jesus takes no other initiative to fulfill His mission than to beg and plead for the souls of sinners. Such teaching makes a farce of His claim to be the world's Savior, and it devitalizes His influence as a world power. It presents a Christ whose Saviorhood can be no more effective than is the influence of pagan religious leaders and teachers now dead. It presents such a poverty-stricken concept of His Saviorhood that it presents a dead Christ. And the presentation of Jesus as such a Christ has been the objective of the apostate church since its beginning. This futile, dead Christ of the apostate church is the Christ of pagan Christianity, and pagan Christianity will come easily under the deception of the pagan Antichrist when he shall present his seemingly victorious work. No believer who sees, through the Kingdom at hand, the victorious Christship of Jesus as it shall be when He shall command and lead the people with redeeming power through His Kingdom, can be thus deceived.

better understanding of the perfection of the Kingdom would result from a study of man's errors in governing himself and using his environment. Strangely enough, man has worked out the solution to most of his errors, but because of the imperfections of individual men, the solutions cannot be put into effect. Perhaps I am all wrong, but I think God hardly wants us to segregate ourselves from the knowledge men have accumulated, since that would put us back with Biblical students of several centuries ago. I believe we are responsible for the progressive revelation of the Bible. We must watch carefully its content, since scientific light has and will bring forth Biblical light. This, in turn, will make it possible for more people to see the True Light.

CHURCH ATTENDANCE

"A day in thy courts is better than a thousand. I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness" (Psalm 84:10).

What My Absence Did

- (1) It made some question the reality of religion.
- (2) It made some think that I was a pretender.
- (3) It made many think that I regarded my spiritual welfare and that of others as a matter of small concern.
- (4) It weakened the effect of the church service.
- (5) It made it harder for the preacher to preach.
- (6) It discouraged the members present.
- (7) It caused others to stay away from church.
- (8) It made it harder for me to meet the temptations of life.
- (9) It gave the Devil more power over lost souls.
- (10) It helped the non-church-going habit.

What My Presence Did

- (1) It caused the people to have confidence in me.
- (2) It made people know that I regarded my spiritual welfare and that of others as a matter of great importance.
- (3) It had a good effect on the services.
- (4) It made my friends feel more welcome.
- (5) It encouraged the members and the minister in their work.
- (6) It caused others to come to Christ, and increased my influence for good.
- (7) It made my life stronger for the next week.
- (8) It removed stumbling-blocks from the sinner's path.
- (9) It pleased God, and I was happy.

under which it lived and worked.

It is no light thing to judge another, but our associations constantly reveal the banner under which we are serving, and it is not difficult to "discern . . . between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not." Like the children of Israel, we ought to be proud of our banner and our encampment. Moreover, as God placed each tribe of Israel in his appointed place, so He has set each member in the body as it has pleased Him (1 Cor. 12:18). This placement is toward the presence of God. He is the center of all true effort on the part of the members of this chosen and placed body. As Israel is a testimony of the marvelous works of God, so the church is a witness to the marvelous work of our Savior Jesus Christ. Like the heavens, day unto day and night unto night, both Israel and the church reveal the glory of God.

THE KINGDOM OF JESUS CHRIST

became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth."

This makes it clear that the house of Jacob is the stone in the hands of God, with which He will break in pieces and destroy all these kingdoms. "He shall cause them that come of Jacob to take root: Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. 27:6).

When Isaiah prophesied that "in the last days" "the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains," he simply meant that the government of the house of Israel shall be re-established, and become the Kingdom that shall rule the nations of the earth.

For the present age, the Israelites house is left unto them desolate (Matt. 23:38). God had foretold this condition in Hosea 3:4, thus: "The children of Israel shall abide many days without a king, and without a prince, and without a sacrifice, and without an image, and without an ephod, and without teraphim. Afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek the Lord their God, and David their king; and shall fear the Lord and His goodness in the latter days." Jesus declared, "They shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled" (Luke 21:24).

Jerusalem is not to be trodden down for all time, but "until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." When Gentile times are fulfilled, Jerusalem will be given back to the Israelites, and will be the capital of their Kingdom. Then the law will go forth of Zion, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem. The nations will respond to that law by beating their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks, and they will learn war no more. (Isa. 2:3, 4.)

As the nations respond to that law, the kingdoms of this world will become "the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ" (Rev. 11:15). Thus, the oppressive powers of earthly kings will be consumed, or destroyed, and the people and territories over which they ruled will behold a new day arising upon Mount Zion. Then "many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain (government) of the Lord . . . and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths" (Isa. 2:3). God hasten the day!

SCHOOL LIGHTS

By Orris Mills

WE ARE inclined to fold our hands and say, "What's the use?" when things do not go as we believe they should. When our church members seem disinterested in spiritual teachings, when they miss church to attend worldly entertainment, we are consoled by reading the prophecy of Paul, saying: "Perilous times shall come. For men shall be . . . lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God." This is to be expected; God said they would love things of this world more than things pertaining to Him. Likewise, parents and those of the older generation tend to take for granted the trend of the young people to shun church. Again they inspire themselves with, "Disobedient to parents" (Rom. 1:30).

The Jews took Jesus of Nazareth, and crucified Him. Peter said, "They that dwell at Jerusalem, and their rulers, because they knew him not, nor yet the voices of the prophets which are read every sabbath day, they have fulfilled them in condemning him" (Acts 13:27). Because they were fulfilling prophecy, did not excuse them. Peter also said, "Beware . . . lest that come upon you, which is spoken of in the prophets" (v. 40).

Because the Scripture foretells a falling away, are we justified in fulfilling that prophecy? It seems not. Let us again read from Paul, saying, "It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you: but seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles" (Acts 13:46).

Perhaps there is a reason why the Berean membership is not growing, perhaps there is a reason why people go somewhere other than church, and perhaps we are contributors to that reason. It appears that through all the ages human nature has not changed a great deal. He still has the same passions, the same likes and dislikes. Generally speaking, man's first thought is to do good; however, the tendency is to follow the path of least resistance.

Are we making our religion alluring? The gospel of Christ is an enticing religion, it can be presented in such a way that it is almost irresistible. Are we using cold Stoicism that would not have attracted us when we were youths? All good music is captivating, yet many great masters have not been recognized during their lives, because of their disagreeable personalities.

We are prone to tell people what not to do, without providing something better for them. The church organization should be the social center of the community. We should have enough activity in the church to afford no opportunity for people to entertain themselves with worldly pleasures. The young people, especially, should be given ample opportunity to gain entertainment through Christian contact.

Book Reviews

By Arlen Marsh

Although a large number of Bible story books for children of six-to-thirteen years of age has been published the last thirty years, perhaps the best is Egermeier's (Gospel Trumpet Company; $2.00).

Egermeier's Bible Story Book covers the entire Bible, from Genesis to Revelation, with a series of short-short stories based on events as they are narrated by the Scriptures. These stories are not so highly fictionized as to be doubtfully accurate, with the exceptions about to be noted.

It is, of course, impossible for those of the Church of God to buy Bible story books which they consider to be doctrinally correct in every particular. Egermeier's is no different from the rest in this—but it is much less biased toward orthodoxy than most of the other story books. Certain tales about Jesus and God, for example, point toward the Trinity; but any discriminating parent can see that these tales are either eliminated from the book or explained so as to destroy their erroneous significance for child readers.

Harper & Brothers present a new India paper edition of the famous Moffatt Bible—another modern translation considered by many to be superior to An American Translation and the Twentieth Century.

In some respects, Moffatt's version is less of a commentary than An American Translation, which was done by University of Chicago Theological School modernists. Moffatt's language is, however, a bit more stilted than that of Goodspeed and Smith.

Four new India paper editions are offered: B4, with genuine leather limp binding and gold stamping, at $6.50; B40, the same as B4, but with a thumb index, at $7.00; B8, bound in genuine blue or black Morocco with a leather lining to match, straight edges (limp binding), at $8.00; B80, the same as B8, but with a thumb index, at $8.50.

Older editions of Moffatt's version—all printed in readable type on standard paper—are available at from $3.50 (cloth, B1) to $9.50 (genuine leather gift edition, divinity circuit, thumb index; B60).

"Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?" (Matthew 6:25).

"Man of Many Ashes"

Hospitality is a Christian grace. The Christians are not the only ones who can make guests welcome. In the Near East, much honor is bestowed upon one who entertains visitors. They call the host "man of many ashes" because he has built many campfires to prepare coffee and food for his guests. These people live in tents, and, therefore, work over campfires.

The people who live in houses in the Eastern villages also entertain. They expect a guest to stay for three days! Of course, they don't visit or travel as much as we do here. Both rich and poor are very fond of entertaining guests.

In some villages east of the Sea of Galilee there are no hotels, but first one family and then another entertains the visitors who come to their town. The head man of the village tells the family whose "turn" it is to keep the guests. This is all done without cost to the guest.

One writer says that this custom greatly helped to spread the gospel.

Jesus Dined Out

Jesus went into the home of a chief Pharisee one Sabbath day, to dine. In the International Bible Commentary, the note says that the Sabbath day was "the usual day for entertainments"—and we thought people were just beginning to use our day of rest and spiritual development for pleasures and entertainments! This does not make it right. The godly people worshiped and rested on the Sabbath, as the Lord had told them to do.

Jesus placed people above things or days. He saw one sick—He healed him. Yes, on the Sabbath! This shows that Jesus was merciful.

Are you not glad that He is merciful to us today? We are not punished for everything we do that is wrong. If we are trying to serve Him, He overlooks ever so many things. If we believe, are baptized, and live godly, we shall be caught up to meet Him, someday. Our sins will all have been judged beforehand. O, that we may all be in that first resurrection! There is a resurrection later, when the other people will be judged—the ones who are left. Their sins will follow after them.

More Like Jesus

Let us this year develop a bigger, better, and more Christlike consideration for others about us. We are told to be especially good to those of like precious faith, "in honour preferring one another" (Rom. 12:10).

Here is a thought from The New Century Leader: "Hospitality, true hospitality, is more than an exchange of food. When you give a dinner, invite also the poor and unfortunate who are in no position to do as much for you."

Is it not true that we choose our friends and forget those who may be unhappy and alone?

Will you, with these deeds of kindness you can daily find to do, remember the Christian boy or girl is to be a leader—to lead others to Christ? There is a saying:

"What we gave, we have;
What we spent we had;
What we saved, we lost."

Cling to Your Ideals

By Mary Richardson

Youth is the stage in life at which our ideals are in the making. Our characters are then being formed. Thus, it is necessary that we have the best ideals instilled in us, so, as Christians, we may go forward in the Master's service. Parents need to realize the necessity of molding into their children's lives those ideals that will fit them to be better men and women. But alas! some parents fail to shoulder their responsibilities, and the children are lacking in the high ideals that promote happiness.

Jesus chose for His disciples men who were young. He understood that the minds of young men were plastic, and that their ideals were in the making. He also realized that under proper instruction the correct ideals would be formed. From the writings of the apostles, we know that under the guidance and teaching of the great model Teacher the disciples lived beautiful lives, and they gained those ideals that found expression in their lives. All continued true to their ideals except Judas, who betrayed the best friend he ever had.

As one grows older, the fight to maintain and uphold his ideals becomes harder. From all sides he feels the pressure that demands compromise. One's ideals may come into conflict with his family, friends, or traditions, but though they cause him to come into conflict with those he loves dearly, he should cling to his ideals. Others may be unfriendly toward one when his ideals clash with theirs. Ideals determine one's course in life. They are the birthplace of character, and failure here is fatal.

I am reminded of a story. "The American flags that fly from the Capitol in Washington, D. C., have never been replaced by new ones. They have been painstakingly, lovingly mended. When the wintry winds tatter them, they are brought in and repaired. When a stripe is torn off or a star blown out, new ones are promptly and reverently put in their places. Every shred of both of them has been made over—the same old flags, rejuvenated."

Do you see what a wonderful theme is interwoven in this story? We should hang to our ideals! Often we may meet a gale of temptation which may rip a "stripe" loose or tear a "star" from its field, but never take down your ideals. Always hold them aloft and abide by them. Never seek to compromise, for that may eventually lead to character disintegration. Continue true to that which has been proved worthy—the ideals of childhood that carried you safely through many a storm.

The great things in the life of mankind have been wrought by men who were willing to die for their ideals. Jesus went to the cross, and there He died. The very instrument of His defeat, the cross, became the symbol of His victory. His ideal is the watchword of a growing and ever-expanding Christian life: "He that loseth his life for my sake shall find it." Don't take in your ideals, but stand loyally by them in every phase of life.

What our modern age needs—what our churches need—what each individual needs, is a reinstatement of ideals. We need to get out of the old rut of sin and indifference and discouragement. We must learn to think in terms of the eternal, rather than the temporal. The valley of material experience must be forsaken. We must attain the mount of vision and faith.

Thy Will Be Done

* * *

By Mrs. William Stine

Lord, if Thou seest my need to be Trials, that will make me near to Thee,
Thy will be done.

Or, if it is sorrow I ought to bear,
The giving of something for which I care,
Thy will be done.

Perhaps temptations will make me strong,
If I must choose the right or wrong,
Thy will be done.

Only Thou, O Lord, knowest it all,
How to keep my soul or let it fall;
Thy will be done.

Whatever Thy plan for me may be,
Help me to pray with sincerity,
"Thy will be done."

"Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time" (1 Peter 5:6).

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALENDAR OF EVANGELISM

January 7-23—Evangelistic meetings at Ripley, Illinois.
 July 29-August 10—General Conference at Oregon, Ill.
 July 29-August 10—Illinois Bible School and Conference at Oregon.
 August 17-24—Ohio State Conference at the Brush Creek Church of God, near Tipp City.

FOR THE CAUSE OF TRUTH

January 27, 1941, is truly "just around the corner." That is the date for the beginning of the second semester of the Bible Training School at Oregon, Ill. As we go to press, we learn that Bro. Emory Maey, Troy, Ohio, will be one of our new students—this in addition to others reported on the editorial page.

We are now certain of at least eleven students in the School, but we have room for a few more young men or young women who are really interested in better equipping themselves to serve the KING OF KINGS—we have no room for idlers!

Students planning to come for the second semester should use the enrollment coupon on the opposite page. For the cause of truth—for the Lord's sake, the church's sake, and for your own joy and benefit, enroll in the Bible Training School. Sydney E. Magaw.

SOUTHLAWN CHURCH, GRAND RAPIDS

Christmas at Southlawn was an inspiring occasion. At the 11:00 a.m. period of Sunday, the 22nd, a musical program was presented by the combined senior and young people's choirs. Miss Barr, the director, had done a fine piece of work and a very inspiring program of Christmas music was presented, accompanied by brief remarks by the pastor. Sunday night, the children and young people of the Sunday school gave their program. The church was packed to the aisles, and all enjoyed deeply the varied program.

Christmas Day was the sixtieth wedding anniversary of our beloved Bro. and Sr. Skeels. They had open house and scores of friends new and old dropped in to extend their congratulations.

A New Year's Eve service was planned for the church, where young and old spent the evening together.

The pastor is now conducting meetings at Ripley, Ill., January 7 to 19, and Training School speakers will fill the Southlawn pulpit on the second and third Sundays of January.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The publishing committee of the National Berean Society has prepared and is now offering for sale a Christian Worker's Kit. This Kit contains sixteen of the leading tracts published by the National Bible Institution and National Berean Society, grouped as they support the seven essentials of doctrine outlined in the general tract, "The Church of God."

The Kit is designed to be exactly what the name implies, a work-kit for the Christian worker. The tracts are of uniform size, neatly packed in an attractive envelope. The names of the tracts and their authors, together with the section of the general tract they supplement, are printed upon each Kit so that, as tracts are given out in reply to questions, others may be obtained and the Kit kept complete. These tracts are not odds and ends, but the best we have on their respective subjects. When better ones are available to support these thoughts, they will be included in following Kits. It is an attempt to give the Christian worker, at one third their value, a complete sample of what we have for use.

Your use of this item will determine its future as a permanent feature. So, if you feel obliged to help that fellow next door find his answers, be sure to order one now. The cost is only twenty cents, and you may order from the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Ill.

James M. Watkins,
 Chairman Berean Publishing Committee.

ORDER YOUR BOUND VOLUMES

Write to the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Ill., if you are interested in either purchasing a bound volume of The Restitution Herald for the past year, or in placing an order for the present volume. In either case the price is $3.50. Also, we shall be glad to bind your own Heralds for any given volume, if you will send them to us—the price of which is $2.00.

CLEVELAND, OHIO

On the last Sunday of the year, at the evening service, Eunice Halls stepped forth to confess her Lord and was baptized into His saving name and received into our fellowship. Eunice is a young lady of high school age who has grown up in the Sunday school and church. She is the daughter of Bro. and Sr. William J. Halls, both of whom are among our active and trusted leaders. Her father is one of our elders and was superintendent for many years, and both he and Sr. Halls are teachers of long service. Their address is 1463 E. 133rd St., E. Cleveland, Ohio.

We rejoice with them in this happy experience of seeing Eunice follow in their footsteps of faith. She is already making her musical talent of service to the Lord in serving at the piano and organ at times. We pray that her Christian life may be rich and fruitful until the Lord's coming.

M. W. Lyon, Pastor.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

Bro. T. A. Drinkard, Handley, Texas, recently fell down some concrete steps, and though he temporarily hurt his left wrist and left ankle, he has fully recovered. Also, he is planning soon to contribute some articles for The Herald.

"My father, Bro. M. D. Newell, has not been able the past few weeks to be up in his wheel chair, his only way of getting about for many months. He enjoys The Herald, also letters and cards from the scattered brethren."—Bessie Jenkins, Blair, Nebr.

"The Christmas Herald does not take second place with any religious literature I have seen. Keep in the lead; let others follow."—So says faithful Bro. R. A. Curtis.

"I am glad the Bible Training School is progressing so well. . . . I learned many things in the Summer Bible Training School, and that was just a little of what a student could learn in the regular School."—Beth Hoganson, Spanaway, Wash.

The mouth of the Amazon River is two hundred miles wide, and though it in a sense speaks of God, it cannot preach the gospel which God would have proclaimed by other mouths.

We Missed It: Speaking about a recent editorial, Sr. Emma C. Railsback of Los Angeles writes: "Why didn't you bring some Railsback from Holland? Ha! We had a good laugh."

Send The Restitution Herald to your friends. The subscription price to new readers is $1.00 for nine months, or $1.50 for a year.

Gentle reproof to the strong: "If I can muster up courage enough to clamp my bent fingers on my pen, I shall send you an article for the Herald next month."—Rufus A. Curtis, Dayton, Ohio. . . . He will keep his promise.

A prayer for today: "O Lord, help me to keep my nose clean and out of other people's business."

"Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish" (Psalm 146:3, 4).

Modesty: Bro. George Loudenslager calls himself a novice stamp collector; he has collected over eight thousand varieties.

"We believe 'Maranatha' would be quite appropriate as a name for our Bible Training School in Oregon. We are hoping and praying for God's Spirit to so fill the teachers and students, as they study the Holy Book, that they may be able soon to awaken many good people among our neighbors and friends to the real responsibility of our Lord's soon coming . . . in short, make us a people in the world, but not of the world."—Mrs. C. L. VeNard, Macomb, Ill.

LOUISIANA CHURCH NOTES

We are pleased to announce that two more persons have been obedient to the message of the gospel and were baptized into the saving name of Jesus. Mr. Meredith McKinney of the Blood River church was baptized December 22. He is the father of a large family, many of whom are members of the church. He may be addressed at Springfield, La. Then on Sunday afternoon, December 29, Miss Joyce Laundry of the Happy Woods church was obedient in Christian baptism. She is a young girl of high school age, and may be addressed at Hammond, La. We pray God's richest blessings to be with these two, as they begin their new lives of Christian service.

There has been quite a lot of sickness here the past few weeks among the church folks, and at the present writing many are still unable to be out for services.

The young people of the Happy Woods church recently organized a Berean class. The class will meet Monday night of each week at the various homes, and will use Berean Book One. The following officers were elected: president, Iris Foster; vice president, James Siple; secretary, Marie Laundry. Warren Laundry and the writer will serve as teachers.

Harry Goeckler, Pastor.

"One is never so near the crown as when he staggers under the cross."—Mrs. Mac Nedrow.

The Restitution Herald is the official organ of the General Conference of the Church of God. It is published by the National Bible Institution at Oregon, Illinois.

L. E. Conner Business Manager
Subscription Rate.—51 issues per annum, $2.00.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him, (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

OUR MISSIONARY SOCIETY

Fredericktown, Missouri

It is the mission of our Women's Missionary Society to bring the women of our church into closer fellowship with one another. In Romans 12 we find one duty of Christ's believers is to "love one another." In John 13:34, 35, we read: "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one for another." We must not say that we love one another, when our actions show that we do not. We must try to our utmost to do His commandment.

There is no better way to come in closer contact with one another than in our Women's Missionary Society. Some of us who have the most faults find it harder to love, but we must try to help them to overcome their faults as they help us to overcome ours. "We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves" (Rom. 15:1). We can do much toward helping a weaker sister if we try, and how much it is appreciated later! "For what glory is it, if, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? but if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable to God" (1 Peter 2:20). Let us love one another, and all try to help one another overcome their faults.

Christ has said that if we do not obey His teachings, we are none of His. We never know how lonely some are, and how much they desire our love. "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself" (Matt. 19:19). How many of us do? If we love our neighbors as ourselves, we will do everything in our power for them, and not wonder what we are going to get in return. As a member of our Society, and as a follower of Jesus, always be ready to help everyone in need. Our Society's mission is to be kind and loving, looking for the things to do that will do the most for others.

In our devotional work, we try to do the very best. God has promised to give us every help, and if we put Him first we will be blessed. We must plan our earthly work so that we can render every sacrifice to Him. Let us love one another as ourselves and see, with God's help, what we can accomplish. "As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you: continue ye in my love. If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love" (John 15:9, 10).

Ollie Cooper.

— Tracts and Books —

"This gospel must first be published among all nations" (Mark 13:10).

The gospel of the Kingdom must be preached in all nations before Jesus will return from heaven. Every member of the Church of God can help to evangelize the world. Order a good supply of tracts; then send them to your friends. It costs nothing to slip a tract into a letter, and it may "save a soul from death."

The following tracts and books, most of them written by men prominent at some time in the Church of God, are for sale by the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Illinois. Send a self-addressed envelope or postage for tracts not priced. How many can you use?

Ambassadors for Christ

By Ellsworth Routson

WHO is an ambassador? He is one sent by a sovereign or state to another state—one who there conducts the affairs of his sovereign, state, or country. Are we not working for Christ, and in His stead, preparing others for the Kingdom which is to be established upon the earth? We are ambassadors.

In 2 Corinthians 5:20, the Apostle Paul speaks of ambassadors for Christ, saying, "We are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God." As true ambassadors, we should today serve Christ by preaching and teaching His truths. Are we doing Christ's will? Are we striving to fulfill His mission? He has commanded: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," saying further, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned" (Mark 16:15, 16). This is called the Great Commission.

We have many times seen signs of slackness on the part of Christians. One can often see the "remains" of once flourishing churches. Today they are no longer places of worship, though at one time people there sang glories to God and praised Him for His many blessings. Today, they are vacant and dead churches. Perhaps there are weeds growing about the buildings, partly hiding them, and boards may be nailed across the windows and doors. Some places, one will see a deserted church used for a corncrib or a storeroom—this is in the country. In cities, the conditions are much the same; large churches now dead are used as storerooms and warehouses. What did Christ say when He drove the money-changers out of the Temple? He said, "It is written, My house shall be called the house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves" (Matt. 21:13). Men were buying and selling for corrupt gain in the Temple.

Ellsworth Routson

In the Parable of the Sower, found in Matthew 13, we see the seed sown by the wayside where men ("fowls") devour it and then pass on. Some is sown upon stony ground, where it withers away because men fail to heed it. Some falls upon thorny ground, where the pleasures of this life choke it out. Nevertheless, some seed falls upon good ground, where it brings forth fruit; thirty, sixty, and a hundredfold—this representing those who become ambassadors for Christ.

In the Parable of the Talents, as recorded in Matthew 25, we read of three men being given talents by their lord before he went on a long journey. One man was given five talents, another was given two, and a third was given one, each "according to his several ability." The servant who had five talents gained another five talents, the one with two talents gained two others, but he who received one talent buried it in the earth to hide it. When the lord returned, the two who used their talents were accounted worthy, but he who hid the lord's talent was cast "into outer darkness" where "there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." . . . Brethren, have we used our talents to the best of our ability? Are we doing our best to build up our Sunday schools and the church? Can you, dear reader, teach, preach, or sing? Are you using your talents?

In John 15:1, 2, we read of Christ as the "true vine," of God as "the husbandman," and Christians are compared to branches—the ones to bear fruit, if the vine is to produce. Are we winning souls as true workers for Christ and for the church? Is the church growing today? Do we encourage the young people as we should by providing for their interests in our worship services? The young people are the backbone of the church and our faith. Are we ambassadors? Let us rally to the cause of Christ; let us provide for

“Times of Refreshing”

Jesus' return will not occur only that He may judge sinners and immortalize saints; He will return to bless “all nations.” God, who “cannot lie” (Titus 1:2), promised Abraham, “In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice” (Gen. 22:18). The Apostle Paul, knowing of this promise, wrote: “The scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed” (Gal. 3:8). Thus, we read New Testament confirmation of the Old Testament promise of blessing through Christ to all nations, and are plainly told that this promise is “the gospel.”

David prophesied of the world-wide blessing of Jesus, saying: “He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass: as showers that water the earth. . . . He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river (any river the reader might prefer) unto the ends of the earth. . . . Yea, all kings shall fall down before him: all nations shall serve him” (Psalm 72:6-11).

When grass is mown, it might die if it were not for the refreshing showers that soon give it renewed life and color. Today, warring nations are mowing one another; only the second coming of Jesus can save them. That He will come to save and to bless is the promise of God, and this promise is “the gospel.”

“Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and he (God) shall send Jesus Christ . . . whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution” (Acts 3:19,20). It is a blessing now to be forgiven of sins, but it will be a greater blessing to be “found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless” (2 Peter 3:14) when Jesus “shall come down like rain upon the mown grass: as showers that water the earth.” Prepare now to share in the “times of refreshing.”

Co-operation

Twenty Sunday schools are now waiting to receive their miniature Golden-Rule-Home banks, in which contributions will be made for the fund we are building to provide care for retired ministers and their wives. A little co-operation, however, is needed from these Sunday schools, as Brother C. L. Netts, who makes the banks, does not know to whom the banks should be addressed. He wishes to hear from the Sunday school secretaries of the following places: Albert City, Maxwell, and Stanhope, Iowa; Dutton, Michigan; Hector and Mora, Minnesota; Blush church at Fredericktown and St. Louis, Missouri; Hemingford, Nebraska; Delta, Geneva, and Unionville, Ohio; Guthrie Grove, South Carolina; Ateo, El Paso, and Floresville, Texas; Lester Manor and Richmond, Virginia; Cashmere and Puyallup, Washington.

Requests for banks should be addressed to Mr. C. L. Netts, 192 White City Trailer Park, St. Petersburg, Florida. Should there be any Sunday school in addition to those listed which should like to receive one of these banks, it, too, should request one by writing to Brother Netts. He has painstakingly made these banks for all our Sunday schools; may all use them.

Prospectus

President Roosevelt has wisely requested Congress to raise the unprecedented peacetime sum of $17,485,528,049 with which to grease the wheels of Federal locomotion during the next fiscal year. In all probability, it will be costing the people of the United States something like $33,267.75 per minute to be governed and defended during 1942. . . . The President's figure could be made more interesting by prefixing it with “only” and suffixing it with “.99”—making the figure more in keeping with the poor man's conception of prices.

Disputants, who a few years ago dared to object to the accelerating costs of government, are about stunned into silence—like one might first struggle against the rapids, but begin resting at the brink.

Nevertheless, the President has wisely asked Congress for $17,485,528,049. Everybody knows America has two coastlines to defend, everybody remembers the timely and congenial visit of King and President, and everybody knows the English Channel will get a little narrower this spring. . . . The Christian awaits, “without spot, unbuckable, until the appearing of our Lord” (1 Tim. 6:14).

A New Year Dawns

By Paul M. Hatch

A NEW YEAR dawns in the world. The burning question on many, many people's minds is: Will it bring the black-out of civilization? We have seen civilization crumbling away with the subjugation of each freedom-loving country in the year 1940 by a ruthless, unprincipled, and relentless march of totalitarianism. Certainly, we can expect to see more and more peoples coming under their sway in 1941 as the pinch of poverty and the prod of importunity come to bear upon them. It is not a very bright or happy prospect facing the world as 1941 dawns.

Many surprises have occurred in the past year of 1940. Astounding events have occurred to the once freedom-loving people of Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, and France. The pall of darkness is already upon them. These things have had a profound impression upon other freedom-loving peoples and countries, so that they have been put anxiously upon their guard. Each day's news brings new movements, new intrigues, new understandings among the rival principles of government.

In all these, the nation of Russia remains to be the enigma, or so news correspondents make it seem. This is due to the lack of open expression on the part of Russia and the extreme difficulty of any correspondent to enter Russia for the purpose of gathering vital news. This very fact gives basis to the thought that there are weaknesses in the Russian economy that Russia wants to keep secret. That there may be basis for this deduction is found in a study of the Russo-Finnish war. A furious fighting Finnish army was able to hold at bay a third-rate Russian army, until Russia employed two crack divisions of an army corps and succeeded in cracking the Finnish Mannerheim Line. Since then, Russia has been content to remain on the sidelines as far as actual fighting is concerned.

For all this, however, Russia cannot be dismissed as negligible in the present crisis in Europe. The whole psychology of the purposes of the Third Internationale is to foment revolution throughout the world, that eventually by the chaos created, Russia may take over and enforce her godless will throughout the world. Since Hitler has by his acts of aggrandizement created revolutionary movements in Central Europe, the whole situation is playing into Russia's hands, and she need not be aggressive at present to see her plans working out more rapidly than she ever hoped for—thanks to Hitler!

In the article "Skies Are Clearing" that appeared in the September 26, 1939, issue of The Herald, it was pointed out that the rapprochement and collaboration of Germany and Russia was of vital importance to the student of prophecy, because of the importance that the Prophet Ezekiel laid to their alliance in enacting the closing scenes of Gentile rule in the world, in which Russia is to have the dominant role. (See Ezek. 38 and 39.) That collaboration still continues in spite of the Russian check upon Hitler. Their tactics together, so far, have been that of the hammer and anvil. The role of Germany, of course, has been that of the hammer, and Russia that of the anvil. By this method, Poland was subdued and divided. Rumania has been and is now in the throes of the same tactics. We may expect other Balkan nations to undergo these tactics in 1941. The hammer and the anvil working together shape their victims as it pleases them. There is an axiom, however, that the anvil outwears many hammers.

Viewing Russia in another way, a more selfish picture rises. It is the picture of a jackal, skulking and snarling along a hill and watching with intense anticipation a battle of two stags in the vale below. Whatever the outcome of the battle, the jackal rests in confidence of a hearty meal. Russia is viewing the death struggle of two strong nations, and awaits the day when she can throw her immense armies into motion at a vital point to deliver the crushing blow. Being godless, she does not know of her impending doom, for God has declared through the Prophet Daniel that "in the days of these kings (governments) shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever" (Dan. 2:44).

In the case of Italy, speaking from a purely prophetic exposition, there seems to be no place for her in the camp of Gog and Magog. Two of her colonies are mentioned in the alliance, but Italy is not mentioned by name or hinted of in the account in Ezekiel 38 and 39, except possibly through two of her recently acquired colonies of Libya and Ethiopia. They are mentioned directly by their names as though they were independent nations. In view of these facts, it would not be greatly disconcerting to the student of prophecy to see Italy subdued by Great Britain in the year 1941. The case of Italy is an anomaly.

It's the Quality

By Arlen Marsh

EVERYONE has heard the old saw, "It's the quality, not the quantity, that counts." Nowhere has it a more fitting application than in church, Sunday school, and Berean work.

Numbers have, of course, their advantages. A real crowd is always more inspiring at a church service than a scattering attendance. There is more encouragement for further work in the rapidly growing or already large Sunday school or Berean society than in one that is small and apparently stagnant. But numbers mean little. Attendance contests, as a general rule, mean little. The problem is not to secure large attendance, but to secure productive attendance. A hundred inactive members are of less account than a half dozen who really work.

Too rapid growth leaves black holes in potatoes. Dry rot can strike at church organizations which grow too rapidly, too. It frequently has struck them. That group which is more insistent upon building attendance than upon building Christianity rarely has any success from the truly religious point of view.

It never was Biblically indicated that the church could convert the world. Indeed, it was flatly stated by the Christ Himself that before He could return, there must come a falling away, rather than a building up of church membership and morale. We must anticipate that conditions will become worse for Christian teaching, not better.

This is not saying that no effort should be made to counteract the trend away from religion. We should make such an effort, with every power at our command. But, simultaneously, we must face the facts without the benefit of rose-colored glasses. We must call spades, spades; we must call declines, declines.

The primary function of the church and its affiliates is not to build huge membership or attendance, but to select what undoubtedly will be a small, a very small, body to act as rulers and teachers in the coming Kingdom of God. It cannot be expected that the church group which devotes itself chiefly to this function will have the same attractiveness for the majority of human beings that the church will have which gives itself mainly to social activities and reform movements.

Some have pointed out that, in his missionary journeys, the Apostle Paul converted a few, then left them to form churches of their own. Isolated converts should be treated so today, in the opinion of these pointers out.

The theory is good, but the practice is bad. The Apostle Paul rarely, if ever, undertook evangelistic work in the sense in which it is undertaken now. When he preached in a strange place, he remained there long enough to see that his few converts were thoroughly settled in their faith. His was not the sawdust trail, here today and gone tomorrow, sort of conversion. He spent months, sometimes years, as a modern pastor would spend, in building a church which would remain an active body long after he had gone.

During the General Conference of 1940, the Church of God created a Temporary Committee for Sunday School Organization, to arrange for permanent formation of a union of all Church of God Sunday schools at the General Conference of 1941. At the National Berean Society Conference of 1940, a special committee to promote work among young people was established.

As secretary of the first committee and as chairman of the second, I have found the principal requests for information are two: how to build attendance, how to increase interest among children and young people. These requests are repetitious; they jibe pretty well with requests for advice which had reached me in ten years' prior experience in Berean and Sunday school work.

There is no good answer to the second of these eternal queries. The first must be settled largely in accordance with local conditions. A church located in a slum neighborhood hardly can use the same appeal in building attendance that a church located in a well-to-do agricultural community can use. Problems are entirely different, and a study of the environment, the personnel, the leadership, is necessary in order to arrive at an anywhere near satisfactory solution.

There is no good answer to the question of how to increase interest among children and young people simply because, by the time children and young people are children and young people of an age sufficient to be seriously considered in Christian work their habits should have been settled by their parents. In ninety per cent of the cases in which oncoming generations show disinterest in church work, it is due simply to parental weakness.

What young person is going to display great interest in the church if he has been brought up by being sent, rather than taken, to Sunday school? What young person, of his own volition, will show enthusiasm over Christian work if his parents have not, until he is fifteen years of age, insistently taught the importance of regular church attendance, of assuming a share of the responsibility for living and teaching the gospel, of considering religious faith as superior to secular success?

There are exceptions to all rules, but it is not without reason that Roman Catholic authorities have said, "Give us a child until he is eight years of age, and he will be a Catholic always." This theory envisions constant contact with the Catholic faith, and not merely one-hour-a-week (and that irregular) contact with it. It cannot be demanded of the young that they should possess an enthusiasm and an awareness, in respect to their religion, which their parents have never had.

Sunday school and Berean society should be the leading source of members for the church. They cannot be without the cooperation of parents. A mass attendance is spectacular, but it is almost worthless unless a large proportion of that attendance ultimately passes on into the church. And parents must be chiefly responsible for this passage. Solomon made no error when he wrote his famous proverb, "Bring up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it." This "bringing up" can hardly be accomplished in the Sunday school and Berean society alone.

The big problem, then, for the Sunday school and Berean worker is not to gain great attendance by high pressure methods, but to educate parents and young people alike in the desirability of and necessity for continuous awareness of Christian teachings and practices. Contests may build large attendances in record time, but large attendances are no assurance of large conversions. And it is the teacher's purpose not merely to talk, but to convert.

Recognition in the Kingdom

By Arthur G. Young

---

THE question frequently is asked, Will we know our loved ones in the future life? Many generations of Christian believers have asked this question, due to a wish to be assured affirmatively. It not only is not a new question, but it would appear to represent a deep-seated and continuous human desire for some authoritative answer. This very persistence of the question would appear to indicate there is no clear Bible evidence to support it; otherwise, by this time it would no longer be a matter of doubt.

In discussing this subject, therefore, may it be said this article is not written in any controversial or dogmatic spirit, but from the standpoint of bringing, if possible, some light to bear on the subject.

In the consideration of any question that involves conditions in the Kingdom of God, in the coming Kingdom Age, and the relationships of immortalized individuals therein, it is advisable to attempt to clarify the subject, as best one can, by first stating some certain basic beliefs relating thereto, together with the defining of certain terms.

By the terms "Kingdom of God" and "Kingdom Age," we refer to the political, economic, and social organization and economy existing on this earth subsequent to the second coming of Jesus Christ to this world as "KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS." In short, the Kingdom Age will be that period of time stated in Revelation 20 as one thousand years, during which Christ as King, together with His saints, will rule all things on this earth.

Further, the Bible teaches that as death is an unconscious sleep, the consciousness of dead Christians cannot be again existent until their resurrection to immortal life out from among the dead. The translation from this life to the immortal life of the living Christians will occur at the same time, namely, when Christ returns. (See 1 Thess. 4:16, 17). We believe in the survival of individual personality after death, though unconscious in death, in that that personality is kept separate and distinct from all others by the power and will of God, through the regiving of life to such individuals at the resurrection.

Many phases of this question arise, such as, How will minor children who die in infancy know their parents who through natural development change their looks prior to their death? It is not the purpose of this article to go into such details; rather, we shall see if we can throw some light on the underlying principles, not from our own imaginations or wishful thinking, but from the revelation of God as contained in the Bible. It would seem more important to consider whether or not the Bible reveals the operation of a declared law of automatic recognition of loved ones in the Kingdom Age, as we can safely leave the working out of details to Him who knows all things. If He solves the larger problem of retention of individuality through death and the resurrection, then these lesser problems will likewise be satisfactorily solved. As a thought in this connection, we would all accept as convincing the identifying of personalities by duly constituted authority in the Kingdom Age, and the possibility of this is indicated by Christ's words to those who followed Him when (Please turn to page 9)

The China Inland Mission and the Person of Christ

By R. H. Judd

(Review of an Article Which Dethrones God and Denies the Trinity)

WHO is Jesus Christ? The Bible answers the question, one might almost say, numberless times, and in many ways, and if the language of Scripture is allowed to have the meaning of the words used, there need be no dubiety whatever as to His identity. Briefly, He is: "the seed" of the woman (Gen. 3:15); "the seed of Abraham" (Gen. 12:7; Gal. 3:16); "a prophet," described by Moses as "of thy brethren" and "like unto me" (Deut. 18:15); and "the seed of David" (2 Sam. 7:12, Acts 13:23).

If we thus accept the fundamental teachings of the Word of God, we are left in no dilemma as to the person of Christ, for every seed brings forth "after its kind." The fact that Christ is a person will not be denied, and we venture to state the further fact that Christ's being "the seed of Abraham" and "of David" cannot be divorced from it. According to Peter, He was "a man approved of God," and by whom God did the works (Acts 2:22). In the words of Paul, He is even now "the man Christ Jesus" (1 Tim. 2:5).

Again we ask, "Who is Jesus Christ?" "Whom do men say that I am?" (Mark 8:27) are His own words. One would think from the varied expositions of learned men that no definite or satisfactory answer can be given to the question. Leaders of religious movements, and editors of religious journals vie with each other in their endeavors to "explain" the "mystery" of the person of Christ. Accepting the doctrine of the Trinity as an accomplished fact, but foregoing the necessity of producing the proofs, they become hopelessly entangled in their own endeavors to harmonize their teaching with the Scriptures, and with what results?

The United Church, which is by far the largest Protestant denomination in Canada, straddles the fence by publishing two official "definitions" of the Trinity, each of which is mutually destructive of the other, and both are distinctly at variance with and subversive of Bible statement. The China Inland Mission, which has been in active existence as a missionary body for over seventy years in England, and for more than fifty years in North America, with China's Millions as its official organ representing its doctrinal beliefs and methods of service, carries an article on the above subject in its issue of December, 1940. Without one single Bible passage given in proof, the author, H. W. Frost, Director Emeritus for North America, arrives at the astounding conclusion that "Jesus Christ is God, and He alone is to be worshiped and served" (italics are Mr. Frost's). These remarkable words just quoted, are not the unconsidered expression of a man deficient in knowledge, or unversed in grammar and literature. They are penned by one who glories in his connection with Princeton University, who is a D.D. of long standing, and an author of some repute.

Before further comment is made, let it be noted that Mr. Frost makes it clear he does not speak for himself "alone," but for the more than one thousand workers connected with The China Inland Mission. Another fact should also be borne in mind. The "doctrine of the Trinity," namely, the teaching that God consists of three persons (which cannot possibly be made to harmonize with the statement now made by Mr. Frost), is made a necessary item of belief for members and candidates of The China Inland Mission.

The writer of the present article has a list in his Bible of over fifty Bible passages which clearly deny that "Jesus is God," but as this leader of the forces of The China Inland Mission evidently does not care to quote Scripture in proof of his assertion, let us approach the matter from his own standpoint and examine its soundness.

Dr. Denny, in The Canadian Baptist, says, "The power to look at a sentence and see clearly the parts of which it is composed, and the meaning of the words one by one and together, is absolutely necessary for anyone who aspires to read the Bible properly, and to make any advance in the real knowledge of Christian doctrine." With these words in mind, let us review somewhat critically this statement of The China Inland Mission that "Jesus is God, and He alone is to be worshiped and served." To begin, if "Jesus Christ is God," then it necessarily follows that God's name is Jesus Christ. There is no escaping that conclusion. It is the natural deduction from the language used, but we think few, if any, of our "orthodox" friends would care to admit it. When the meaning of the name, or title, "Christ" is properly understood (namely, "anointed"), the improbability and absurdity of Mr. Frost's most recent theological proposition becomes manifest.

Next, we would call attention to the fact that The China Inland Mission already teaches that Jesus Christ is "the Second Person" of three persons in a trinity of Gods, each coeternal and coequal with each other. In view of this, the natural question arises: If Jesus Christ is "alone" to be "worshiped and served," is not "God the Father" thus automatically dethroned, and the whole of the Trinity thereby denied? Certainly, for the language of Mr. Frost presents no other possibility.

Often in the Authorized Version, and still more frequently in the Revised Version, the pronoun "himself" is applied to God, not to mention almost uncountable occurrences of "I," "me," "my," "myself," "he," "him," "thou," and so forth, which render impossible any thought that God is more than one Person. Scripture does speak of the Person of God, but never of His persons. Twice God says of Himself: "My glory will I not give to another" (Isa. 42:8; 48:11). The word "another" as here used can apply to one person only, and is both inferential and positive proof that God is not a Trinity. We repeat, this latest statement by Mr. Frost dethrones God—

"the only true God" (John 17:3), of whom and to whom Jesus Christ spoke. John 20:31 emphatically declares that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. Common sense, born of God-given reason, assures us He cannot be both.

We are in no sense denying the good that the China Inland Mission has accomplished, but its testimony would have been of infinitely more value had its fundamental doctrines been based on the plain, unequivocally stated Word of "the only true God," and of whom Scripture says, "Thou diest not." The writer has many times taken up this subject with some of the most prominent leaders of the evangelical denominations, and has yet to meet one minister or layman who can specifically and Scripturally defend and prove the doctrine of the Trinity or its opposing error as stated in this latest pronouncement of The China Inland Mission. In closing, I would in faithfulness, point the reader to Isaiah 44:8; 45:18, 21, 22; 1 Timothy 2:5; John 17:3; and John 3:16. Their correctness has never been questioned, and the language is such that it cannot be misunderstood. They give uncompromising contradiction to the words of Mr. Frost.

God's Second Great Textbook, Our Environment

By David D. Blyth

TURN back the pages of written history six thousand years to the situation into which God created man. The Garden of Eden was equipped with plants and with animals (Gen. 2:9, 19), of which the Serpent was an example. Do you suppose that these plants and animals were scattered aimlessly about, or did God provide a system whereby their numbers would be controlled and their relationships specified? Their numbers were controlled as the number of plants and animals in the wild are controlled today—by a marvelous system of checks and balances. As today one animal eats plants and another eats meat—in the Garden their relations were likewise specified.

Since plants and animals must be controlled, why not control them through their ultimate food source, which is energy from the sun, water, air, and minerals. God did. He provided soil and water to furnish part of the food, the climate which controls the soil, and water to furnish the other part of the food. Since all control is now centered in climate, let us examine climate in order to discover what controls it. Wind and ocean currents are caused by the earth's rotation; tides are caused by the attraction of the moon; the differences in the amounts of sunlight—night and day, winter and summer—are caused by the rotation of the earth on its axis, the tilt of its axis, and the revolutions of the earth around the sun; finally we find that the variations of the earth's climate from year to year are due to the effects of other heavenly bodies on the earth. This is our environment, and it is by means of these heavenly bodies that God exerts His control over the plants and animals.

Have you noticed that the climate is somewhat different each year? Have you heard that great sheets of ice once came down from the polar cap and covered Canada, Northern United States, Northern Europe, and Northern Russia? Have you heard that there was once a very dry period that killed most of the trees in Illinois, Indiana, and Western Ohio? Did you know that the layers of coal in Pennsylvania were laid down in a tropical swamp? Yes, over long periods of time, climate changes drastically. With changes in climate, soil and water change both in content and all their relations. Must not plant and animal life change if the climate, the soil, and the water change? God has provided that they should change. He made every living thing to be composed of cells, and in each cell is found a nucleus. The nuclei of the cells that allow plants and animals to reproduce contain chemical rods that specify (Please turn to page 10)

The Coming of Jesus Christ

By T. A. Drinkard

"Once more the watchings are directed to the telling importance of knowing the difference between the Presence of the Son of Man and the visible coming back to the earth to become its personal ruler and king. . . . The value of this knowledge is in knowing that there is more than one appearance in the return of Jesus."—The Prophetic Age.

OF ALL human theories, this one of trying to create a mystery over the word "coming" in its relation to the Savior's advent to the earth the second time takes the prize in its fanciful arrangement. Anyone with limited knowledge should know that Jesus Christ will be present after He comes again. The idea of Jesus Christ being present in the world before He comes is another story of religious fiction. I say it kindly, and without fear of successful contradiction. It was taught that Jesus Christ came in 1874, and was invisibly present in the world. The time came when its foremost advocate died, and was buried, though his brethren do not believe either. His successor decided that Jesus Christ did not come in 1874, but came in 1914, forty years later. I would not be surprised if he changes his date again soon.

It only shows us the trouble into which we can get, when we decide that our way may be better than the one given in the Bible. The idea that Jesus Christ will be present before He comes, or arrives! Time alone has proved its fallacy, aside from Bible evidence, yet men will continue to teach the theory. One might as well say that I can be present in Chicago before I arrive! It is one thing to affirm, and quite another thing to prove the affirmation. We ask for proof, not merely an assertion. Through the years, much has been written in favor of the two-phase theory, but to us the proof is lacking.

To us there is not one case on record where Jesus Christ ever referred to His coming as being divided into two phases. That is man's arrangement. To say that parousia refers to the so-called first phase, or the invisible presence of Jesus Christ, and not to His glorious visible manifestation, is misleading. We rest the matter upon the Word of God. When Jesus Christ comes I expect everybody to see Him. Someone says, "Will it be possible to see Him when He comes for His church?" Surely so! And why not? What could hinder this procedure? Have you studied the following words of Inspiration carefully and prayerfully? Let us read them exactly as they are recorded, "Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him" (Rev. 1:7). Behold! Behold what? Exactly this, that Jesus Christ, the Son of the eternal God, "cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him." We object to any system of interpretation that will tend to destroy the meaning of this passage of Scripture as given herein.

Men saw the Son of God leave the earth. If they could see Him leave the earth, could they not see Him coming with the clouds of heaven, as this passage of Scripture clearly teaches? What is there to hinder men and women from seeing the graves open, if they are near, and to see the saints of God ascend to meet their Lord? It took the Flood of Noah's day to convince an ungodly world that God was bringing them to account for their ungodly deeds. It took the destruction of Pharaoh and his army in the Red Sea to convince the Egyptians that God's army was marching on. It will likewise take the visible coming of the Son of God to convince men of this ungodly world that the judgment of God has overtaken them in their sin.

Somebody is going to wail because of Him! What will cause this? Nothing but the coming of Jesus Christ! To use parousia as referring to the invisible presence, and erchomai to the visible manifestation of the Son of God is doing violence to the Word of God. Let us study the use of the word parousia as it is used other than to the coming of Jesus Christ. In Philippians 1:26, Paul says: "That your rejoicing may be more abundant in Jesus Christ for me by my coming (parousia) to you again." Did Paul mean to say that he was going to visit them again, but his coming would be of a two-phase nature, that when he first arrived he would be invisible? Why not? for parousia is the word he used! Again, parousia is used in 2 Thessalonians 2:9, in relation to a certain wicked one being revealed, "even him, whose coming (parousia) is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders." Can this mean that this wicked one will be invisible at first, and later manifest himself? It does, if parousia only refers to invisible presence, and not to visible manifestation.

Another case: "I am glad of the coming (parousia) of Stephanas and Fortunatus and Achaicus" (1 Cor. 16:17). Was Paul here trying to tell these brethren that these disciples would be invisibly present with them, hence could not be seen? Later he mentioned "the coming (parousia) of Titus." Did he mean to say that Titus would be present with them, but invisible during his stay? It was the Son of God who condemned the invisible presence theory, in these words: "Behold, I have told you before. Wherefore if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert; go not forth: behold, he is in the secret chambers; believe it not" (Matt. 24:25, 26). Further, it was Jesus Christ who taught His visible coming, saying, "Then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory" (Luke 21:27).

Later the Master sent these warning words to the church at Sardis, saying, "If therefore thou shalt not watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee" (Rev. 3:3). "As a thief" could only mean, as indicated in this verse, in an unexpected manner. Hear these words: "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven" (Acts 1:11). I believe the inspired Word of God. We want to live to see the Son of God coming in His glory. Imagine, if you will, the commotion upon earth among the nations when that hour arrives. May we watch, and while doing so, prepare for the coming of Jesus Christ.

THIRST FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS

By Emory Macy

"HO, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come" (Isa. 55:1).

Isaiah could hear, in the streets of the cities of Judah, the cries of those selling wine from their dripping goat skins. The liquor merchants clicked their brass cups together, saying: "Ho, thirsty one! come, buy." Today, we see a similar picture—lights flashing on huge signs appealing to the people, "Come, buy our brand."

God calls, however: "Ho, every one that thirsteth . . . wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread?" (See Isa. 55:1, 2.) Why do we spend wealth, energy, thought, and time for those things "wherein there is no profit" (Jer. 16:19)? These carnal things will never satisfy, give rest, or peace. Only God can satisfy us: "He satisfieth the longing soul, and filleth the hungry soul with goodness" (Psalm 107:9). How foolish of man to devote all his time and labor for "meat which perisheth," forgetting and neglecting the spiritual food freely offered by our Savior, Jesus Christ!

Many thirst for worldly wealth, ease, pleasure; few thirst for the spiritual wealth and righteousness. In Psalm 42:2, David wrote, "My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God." Few have the desire to "draw water out of the wells of salvation" (Isa. 12:3). The blessings of salvation are only sought by those who feel their need of pardon, and who realize that all of their "righteousnesses are as filthy rags." To such is the invitation given, "Come, buy wine and milk without money and without price." God offers unto us the "milk of the word," the very nourishment needed to grow into "a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ" (Eph. 4:13).

Ho, everyone! There was Another, who stood in Jerusalem and cried, saying, "If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink" (John 7:37). "The water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life" (John 4:14).

RECOGNITION IN THE KINGDOM

He healed the Roman centurion's servant: "I say unto you, That many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 8:11). We have never met these ancient worthies; yet, there is clearly indicated that in some manner they will be identified. Likewise, in Luke 13:28, we read, "There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye (the Jews) shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out."

Of course, an easy answer to the foregoing question, is to say that God knows best and will do justly to every individual at the judgment and during the Kingdom Age subsequent to the judgment. Yes, this is admitted gladly, but still the question persists, namely, Do we now have any light from God's Word, the Bible, on the subject of automatic personal recognition in the Kingdom Age of those we knew in this life?

In our present mortal state, it would seem to be almost a universal desire to know our loved ones in the future life. This applies to those who believe, as stated above, that death is a sleep, also it applies to those who believe that the future life is a continuous one after death, and that judgment comes at death rather than at the second coming of Christ. This desire, however, would seem to have some limitations, as it might be noted that those who believe the future life is continuous after death in conscious personality do not care to refer much, if ever, to their desire to know or to be known by their relatives or friends in the place called "hell," which they define as a place of eternal torment in a burning, but never consuming condition. Their desire, rather, to know others and to be known is more frequently cherished by those who believe their future life will be in the place called "heaven," which is defined somewhat vaguely as a place of eternal bliss. However, it would appear fair to call the attention of those who believe in the judgment of the individual at death, that if future recognition is God's law and that everyone goes immediately after death to this "heaven" or "hell," the inference is inescapable that such a law of recognition would operate in both places, which would present some rather uncomfortable and undesirable aspects.

Please do not infer from the above that we deny that recognition between those who knew each other will exist in the Kingdom of God during the Kingdom Age, but why, if this is so, limit it to such a comparatively few? However, we do deny that the Bible teaches that human individuals are judged at death and are punished by eternal, conscious torment at any future time or place. We believe the Bible teaches that the judgment by Christ both as to reward and punishment is not at death, but at the resurrection.

However, we do have some clear indications from the Bible that personal relationships during the Kingdom Age will be different in many fundamental ways to the present relationships. The reason that not much is given in the Bible in regard to conditions of environment and relationship in the Kingdom Age is that we in our present life cannot visualize or comprehend those conditions, so we are given only glimpses of same. This can be best indicated by quoting 1 Corinthians 2:9, 10: "As it is written (quoted from Isaiah 64:4), Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God." (Concluded next week)

AMBASSADORS FOR CHRIST

the young people, so they will "carry on."

Some church members think that all they must do is to attend church, and help finance it, and they have done their share for the Lord. They say, "We pay the minister to preach and save others." But, no! my friend, it is your duty, too, to help in saving others, by living pure and clean for Christ. "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 5:16). Each individual has his place in elevating the church to show others that by working in one accord we are greatly blessed—thus bringing them to see Christ as their Savior.

What shall we gain by being faithful ambassadors for Christ? Eternal life and places in the Kingdom of God, where all tears and sorrow will be wiped away, where only happiness and peace will prevail, where the lame will walk, the blind will see, and the dumb will speak! (Read Isa. 35.)

Have you put on the "whole armour of God"? Shall we not gird ourselves, that we may be found true ambassadors for Christ when He returns?

GOD'S SECOND GREAT TEXTBOOK, OUR ENVIRONMENT

that the offspring of plants and animals will be like their parents. Occasionally, something changes the relation of these chemicals, and the offspring are different from the parents. We know, for instance, that certain rays from the sun can produce these changes—again the effect of a heavenly body. These changes are observed constantly in both plants and animals. They are small changes—the offspring still resembles the parent.

Suppose that a plant or animal changes a hundred or a thousand or more times—eventually the offspring will no longer even resemble the original parents. The five-toed, three-foot tall, dog-like horse has been traced to our one-toed beast of burden. Some plants and animals completely disappear. We recognize nothing today that resembles the dinosaurs, yet our elephants are much like the mammoths that lived in the extreme cold of the glacial periods. The trees associated with dinosaurs have also disappeared. The only concession we have to make is time—time which means so little in God's eternity. This process of change, controlled by the timing of the heavenly bodies, is one of God's greatest honors. To have so far removed the cause that produces the effects in our environment, that man must turn to the Creator and His Word (which is revealed by the application of the knowledge of the environment and man), shows that there is a superhuman Intellect selecting the few who realize the plan and submit their actions to His knowledge.

Have I said that man is the second cousin of an ape? No! What I have said indicates that a certain type of evolution or change has taken place and is taking place in the plant and animal kingdoms. This in no sense infers that man, although an animal, must also be a product of evolution. There are important differences that set man apart from all other animals. These will be considered in our next article. The important thing to see here is that change is occurring and is controlled by the heavenly bodies—God's tools. Is it not a greater honor to God to make all the living things come from a simple organism, such as a single cell, by producing change from afar, than to have to make them one by one? He reserved the personal creation for man, whom He made in His likeness.

A NEW YEAR DAWNS

speaking from confidential sources, did not desire to enter the present war, and they are very much averse to Germany being the hub of the axis. In fact, it is only fear and respect that they hold for Mussolini that keeps them in line, and in half-hearted collaboration with Germany.

Germany is using Italy as a tool at present; when the tool is worn out, she will discard it. Italy at present has to rely almost entirely upon Germany for raw materials to feed her war industries, and Germany is exacting a price for this aid in foodstuffs and other materials that are vital to Italy's well being. In view of these facts and the defeats she is suffering at the battle fronts in Albania and Libya, it appears that Italy is on the verge of collapse. If Italy does collapse, her Roman Empire, so much desired by Mussolini, will go the way of lost causes, and for it ever to be remotely revived will be a dream of the past.

It appears to the writer, as study is made along these lines of prophecies concerning Gog and Magog and the King of the North, that the last great battle eventually to be fought in Palestine for the control of the world will involve these races of people. On the side of aggression, the Slavish and Germanic peoples will lead with the Mongols as allies. On the other side and on the defensive, will be the British, Semitic, and Latin peoples with their various allies. If it was a contest to be decided by these antagonists on the field of battle, right well would a shudder of fear pass through the God-fearing peoples of the world. Those who study these things from a Biblical and prophetic standpoint and have the utmost confidence in that revealed Word are soothed and comforted in the words of the Prophet Joel: "The Lord also shall roar out of Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem; and the heavens and the earth shall shake: but the Lord will be the hope of his people, and the strength of the children of Israel" (Joel 3:16).

When the Lord enters the battle and with an overwhelming defeat destroys the might of armies and armaments, there will rise a paean of joy throughout the world, rising and swelling from innumerable throats of Christians and angels—

"Joy to the world!
The Lord is come;
Let earth receive her King;
Let ev'ry heart prepare Him room,
And Heav'n and nature sing,
And Heav'n and nature sing. Amen."

"Yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry" (Heb. 10:37, and cp. Hab. 2:3).

BUILDING YOUR LIBRARY

Book Reviews

By Arlen Marsh

No fewer than three versions of the New Testament, two of them in modern English, have been produced recently by the Judson Press, official publishing house of the Northern Baptists.

Oldest of the three is the American Bible Union Revision of the New Testament (60 cents in cloth; $1.25 in leather), a small book printed in only one edition and with rather difficult-to-read type. It is known as the "baptize" or "immerse" Testament, inasmuch as it translates the original Greek with an eye to the true method of baptism—immersion. For this reason, it makes a remarkably handy reference book for Church of God use.

The Centenary Translation, by Helen Barrett Montgomery, is a modern-language version; it is priced at $1.00 in cloth and at $2.00 in leather. The translation was made primarily to attract new readers to the New Testament by rearranging the terminology, punctuation, and paragraphing of the older versions into the style to which modern English-speaking peoples have become accustomed.

A. S. Worrell's New Testament ($1.50 in cloth; $3.50 in Morocco) is done in exceptionally large, clear type. Particular attention has been given to exact shades of meaning of the ancient Greek, which frequently contains nuances exceedingly difficult to transpose into current tongues. There is, as we see it, little to cause anyone to prefer Worrell's over Montgomery's or Montgomery's over the American Bible Union's version; yet any one of the three is valuable for comparison and study in connection with the better-known translations.

* * * * *

Arthur M. Depew's Cokesbury Party Book (Cokesbury Press; $1.75) is chiefly aimed at young people's and adults' groups. Party suggestions for all sorts of occasions are included in it—suggestions which easily can be adapted to the needs of almost any Sunday school, Berean, or church social need.

The same purposes are served just as effectively by Phunology (Cokesbury Press; $1.75), which has just appeared in a revised edition after years of proving its value in practical use.

"Come; for all things are now ready" (Luke 14:17).

Morning Prayer

"Father, we thank Thee for the night,
And for the pleasant morning light,
For rest and food and loving care,
And all that makes this world so fair.

"Help us to do the things we should,
To be to others kind and good;
In all we do and all we say,
To grow more loving every day."

—Selected by Mrs. Walter Skinner.

A Great Supper

We now call our main meal of the day "dinner." In olden times it was called "supper" and generally was the evening meal. This story is a continuation of our lesson of last week. Jesus is telling the story.

The general invitation to the supper had been given. Now the servants went to the guests to tell them all was ready for them to come. These guests had been considering accepting the invitation, but now that the time to go was at hand, they began to make excuses.

"I have bought a piece of ground, and I must needs go and see it," said one.

Another said, "I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them."

Still another said, "I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come."

Now there was no wrong in doing those things, but the "cares of the world" should not have kept these men from accepting the invitation.

The master of the house was angry when his servant told him these things. He said to go quickly and bring the poor, crippled, and blind. The servant obeyed, and returned, saying, "Lord, it is done as thou hast commanded, and yet there is room." The servant was then sent into the "highways and hedges" to compel people to come, that the house would be filled. The ones who had given excuses were not to be partakers of the supper. The master said, "I say unto you, That none of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper."

Our Invitation Is Given

God is the Master who is asking us to attend the great supper. We can let worldly cares or indifferences keep us from accepting Him. We can say, "I'd like to, but I can't," and refuse the invitation. So often we say, "I don't know how!" We know that God is able to take stones and make them do His bidding, yes, even to shout! (Luke 19:40.) So, why can He not give us what we need to do the work for Him that He wants us to do? Why not accept His invitation next time it is given?

The Jews refused to accept Jesus, then the Gentiles were asked. Today, people for His name are being called out to accept the invitation to be kings and priests and reign with Christ a thousand years. Choose today to accept the Lord!

Future Suppers

When the Church is caught up above the earth, we will be called to the "marriage supper of the Lamb." The Lamb is Christ. The church will be His bride. This is one supper we all pray to attend.

Another time we eat with Christ is when He eats the fruit of the vine with us in the Kingdom. We observe that service now as Communion or the Lord's Supper.

May we all be there, is my prayer.

Bible Study

Memorize the four Gospel books of the New Testament—the first four books. Review the Old Testament books often.

Singing Wind

"I love to run against the wind!
Into my ears it sings a song.
It makes me laugh and feel so good,
I'd like to listen all day long."

Speak No Evil

* * *

By Eunice Zollinger, Oregon, Ill.

Did we hurt someone today? Did we speak an unkind word to anyone? "The tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison" (James 3:8).

How sorry we are for hasty words; sorry too late! We do not mean to make cutting remarks, the words just seem to escape without our even thinking about them. When one touches his finger to a hot stove, it is a natural reaction to draw it away—not taking time to think whether he should or whether he shouldn't. This is the way it is with words. We do not think about what we are going to say. "Think before you speak" is a good proverb.

Why do we want to say unkind things? If we are of God and for Him, we should not. If our lives are spiritual, and "full of the knowledge of the Lord," we will say kind things, we will speak words of comfort, and if the occasion arises when we believe we cannot bridle our tongues for another minute, we might pray, asking God to help us. "Thou wilt light my candle: the Lord my God will enlighten my darkness. For by thee I have run through a troop; and by my God have I leaped over a wall" (Psalm 18:28, 29).

We do not like for persons to speak harshly to us—maybe the Golden Rule would apply: "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise" (Luke 6:31). Also, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you" (Matt. 5:44).

Yes, the tongue is "a little member, that boasteth great things. Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth!" (James 3:5.)

When writing a letter, a theme, or maybe an article, we may sometimes write something we wish to change. The eraser serves our purpose; it repents for that which was not meant to have been written. Oh, that we might have an eraser for our words! We will think, but it is not necessary nor kind to speak every thought. "If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain" (James 1:26).

At Eventide

* * *

By Virginia Smith, Russellville, Ark.

It gives me much satisfaction when bedtime comes to know that the day has been complete and full and worth while, that I have accomplished much, and to know that I have been a blessing to someone in Christ's name, and have done all that I could to make the day one of rich Christian service. I feel so at peace to know that as a result of my day's work I am fully prepared for the morrow and what it may bring forth. I know I shall rise early, refreshed, and full of renewed strength to meet whatever tasks God has seen fit to give me.

Such should be the mental outlook of every Christian as the night of this dispensation comes upon us. Night is falling fast and soon the "Son" will reappear. Are we ready for the new day? Have we proved ourselves worthy to carry on the work which will be presented to us? Are we filled with Christian energy, obliterating all else, or are we burdened with our petty worldly worries?

Let us make our day, our every day, one of consecrated Christian service and preparedness for that glorious morn when Christ will call us to do His work in the new day.

In Everything Give Thanks

* * *

By Hazel Reed, Oregon, Ill.

One of the traits by which every Christian should be known is the spirit of thanksgiving. We are living in a land today in which we have many things for which to be thankful. One of the most important is our freedom of worship. Every minute of the day we can think of something for which to be thankful.

We all have our trials and tribulations, sicknesses, and sorrows, but with most of us, when we count up our mercies and blessings, find they far outweigh those other experiences.

One of the most encouraging verses in the Bible is Romans 8:28: "All things work together for good to them that love God." These words have been proved true again and again. If we will trust God when trials come upon us, we shall know that they are true.

Let us, as Christians, resolve to press forward in 1941 "giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ" (Eph. 5:20).

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALENDAR OF EVANGELISM

January 7-23—Evangelistic meetings at Ripley, Illinois.
 January 31-February 2—Northwest Quarterly Conference at Corvallis, Ore.
 July 29-August 10—General Conference at Oregon, Ill.

ARKANSAS CITY, KANSAS

On December 29, 1940, our brethren were very happy to hear Bro. A. L. Corbaley of Puyallup, Wash. Bro. Corbaley is, at present, visiting in the R. A. Dart home in Wichita.

Speaking on the "Signs of the Times" at the close of Sunday school, Bro. Corbaley resumed the subject at an afternoon meeting and again at an evening service. Presenting his messages in a clear and understandable manner, they were received with receptive ears, and we agreed with the speaker that the time draws nigh when God's promises will be fulfilled and the second coming of Christ realized. It is regretted that more of like precious faith could not be in attendance because of the short notice, but we were glad that some of our outlying brethren could again be with us in Christian fellowship.

Florence Griffith, Secy.

FONTHILL, ONTARIO

The Fonthill Sunday school held its Christmas entertainment on Friday night, December 20. The basement was appropriately decorated for the occasion, and the program was entirely in keeping with the Christian ideal of Christ being the center of all Christmas activity.

The teachers who made the selections for their pupils deserve compliments for adhering to Biblical teaching in choosing material for presentation.

One feature of the program worthy of note was the recognition of faithful attendance during the past year. Seventeen members of the Sunday school had perfect attendance for the year, and with one exception all of the teachers have had perfect records. With such faithful service, God is well pleased.

More about our furnace: it has been installed, and it is proving to be all that we expected and more. The workmanship is par excellence and the men installing worked nearly day and night to get it in readiness for services on the Sunday following.

Another improvement was made which was much needed, and that was the baptistry. The former one had been poorly constructed and leaked. The new one was a gift to the church by Weldon Holland in memory of his grandfather, the late Thomas A. Weldon, who gave the first baptistry.

Our annual election of Sunday school officers was held on the night of January 3, at Bro. J. Fletcher's home. The following officers were elected: superintendent, Joseph Fletcher; assistant superintendent, W. H. Holland; secretary and treasurer, Rena Fletcher; organist, Winnie Lampitt; assistant organist, Fred Jones; and special social committee, W. H. Holland, Evelyn Payne, Harry Payne, Mabel Fletcher, and Maurice Anger.

May God lead and direct these officers, and may they be faithful to their offices throughout this new year.

Irene Holland, Reporter.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The publishing committee of the National Berean Society has prepared and is now offering for sale a Christian Worker's Kit. This Kit contains sixteen of the leading tracts published by the National Bible Institution and National Berean Society, grouped as they support the seven essentials of doctrine outlined in the general tract, "The Church of God."

The Kit is designed to be exactly what the name implies, a work-kit for the Christian worker. The tracts are of uniform size, neatly packed in an attractive envelope. The names of the tracts and their authors, together with the section of the general tract they supplement, are printed upon each Kit so that, as tracts are given out in reply to questions, others may be obtained and the Kit kept complete. These tracts are not odds and ends, but the best we have on their respective subjects. When better ones are available to support these thoughts, they will be included in following Kits. It is an attempt to give the Christian worker, at one third their value, a complete sample of what we have for use.

Your use of this item will determine its future as a permanent feature. So, if you feel obliged to help that fellow next door find his answers, be sure to order one now. The cost is only twenty cents, and you may order from the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Ill.

James M. Watkins,
 Chairman Berean Publishing Committee.

BIRTHDAY OFFERINGS

Bro. Delos Andrew, treasurer of the Illinois State Conference, expresses his thankfulness for the birthday offerings which he has recently received from the Fredericktown, Mo., church and Sr. Emma Eaton. Sr. Eaton celebrated her eighty-first birthday anniversary on January 8.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

"Too rapid growth leaves black holes in potatoes."—Arlen Marsh, 230 W. 103 St., Los Angeles, Calif.

"Germany is using Italy as a tool at present; when the tool is worn out, she will discard it."—Paul Hatch, Harvey, Ill.

"If everyone could send in a new subscription for The Restitution Herald, we would have done a good work, would be sowing the good seed, and what a happy new year it would make for those who would get to read it, as it has such valuable articles."—Anna A. Eidemiller, West Milton, Ohio.

"During 1941, I want to tell more about the coming of God's Kingdom. May all our brethren be a little more zealous in witnessing to God's plan for His children."—Mrs. W. J. McClelland, Harrah, Wash.

Bro. and Sr. J. H. Williams, Rochelle, Ill., now visiting with the G. E. Marsh family in Los Angeles, celebrated their fifty-sixth wedding anniversary, Tuesday, January 7.

MILLER-LANING

The wedding of Mildred Gertrude Miller, daughter of Mrs. Hilda Miller of Timewell, Ill., and Wayne Lee Laning, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Laning of Mt. Sterling, Ill., took place at 11:45 a.m., Sunday, December 22, in the Church of God at Ripley, Ill. The single ring ceremony was read by the writer.

The bride was lovely, dressed in a royal blue velvet dress and turban to match. She wore a single strand of pearls and a white carnation corsage. She was attended by Grace Laning, sister of the groom. Fred Miller of Peoria, brother of the bride, was best man.

The bridal party entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by Mrs. Frank Worley. Esther Laning of Peoria, sister of the groom, sang, "I Love You Truly."

After the service, a wedding dinner was enjoyed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Laning. The beautifully decorated wedding cake concealed a musical box which chimed the wedding march.

Both bride and groom were graduates of Mt. Sterling High School. Miss Miller was also a graduate of Gem City Business College of Quincy, Ill., and was secretary of the Brown County Farm Bureau for the past three years.

This new home being established will be deeply rooted with Christian principles, as both are faithful and active members of the Ripley church. Bro. Laning serves as deacon and Sr. Laning has her gift of song. They are held in high esteem by all who know them.

C. E. Lapp.

July 29-August 10—Illinois Bible School and Conference at Oregon.

August 17-24—Ohio State Conference at the Brush Creek Church of God, near Tipp City.

Bro. James W. McLain will begin his new pastorate at the Pennellwood Church of God, Grand Rapids, Mich., Sunday, January 26. A formal day of beginning is being planned for the first Sunday in February.

Bro. and Sr. Howard E. Huey, Plymouth, Ill., were visitors of the National Bible Institution, January 11. Come often; stay longer.

"Go ye": Five students of the Bible Training School preached Sunday, January 12, at various places as follows: Richard Smith, Dixon, Ill.; Celaine Randall, Koszta, Iowa; Alan McLain, Pennellwood church, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Orris Mills, Southlawn Park church, Grand Rapids, Mich.; and Francis Burnett, Rockford, Ill. We hope they made good ambassadors for Christ.

How many Sunday school teachers could report, like Sr. Eunice Zollinger, Oregon, Ill., that all students enrolled in their classes were present Sunday, January 12? . . . Total attendance at Oregon, Ill., was one hundred fifty.

WILLIAM WALTER COOPER

William Walter Cooper, son of William Edward and Rachel Curless Cooper, was born in Pittsfield, Ill., September 7, 1870. When Bro. Cooper was four years of age, he came to Iowa with his parents, and lived for several years on a farm north of Sac City. He attended public school in Sac City, and at an early age went to work for J. E. Robbins in the grain business, and was later taken into partnership.

In 1892, he was united in marriage to Ada May Staples. To this union there were born three children: Robert Wayne, Marian Fern, and Rachel Eloise.

In 1907, the family moved to Dakota, where he was in partnership with Orville Lee in the lumber business. In 1919 they returned to Sac City, where he became manager of the Independent Farmers' Elevator Co., and continued in the grain business until 1934. During his life in Sac City, he served on the city council and held other city offices.

Bro. Cooper was a devoted husband and father. His life was an exemplification of all that is noble and good, and he was held in high esteem by all who knew him.

When a young man, he became a member of the Restitution Church, and he kept the ideals of Christian faith through the years.

He had been ill for several weeks when death came as a release from pain and suffering. He is survived by his widow; one son, Robert Wayne of Chicago; Mrs. M. L. Peters of Nemaha; and Mrs. R. C. Levenick of Des Moines; seven granddaughters; four brothers, John of Sac City, Roland of Petaluma, Calif., Merton of Kelso, Wash., and Cecil of Ireton, Iowa; two sisters, Mrs. Nellie Mayclin of Kelso, Wash., and Mrs. A. T. Stafford of Hawarden, Iowa; besides other distant relatives and many friends who share the sorrow of the bereaved.

Funeral services were held December 26, by the writer, and we laid him to rest in the Sac City cemetery.

J. W. Williams.

FLORENCE CORDILL

After months of sickness, the peaceful death of Mrs. Alpha Cordill occurred on the forenoon of Friday, December 21, 1940, in the home which she and her companion had enjoyed for many years at 331 S. Eddy St., South Bend, Ind.

Florence was born to Benjamin and Emma Taylor, near Argos, Ind., on August 17, 1876, and was united in marriage with "Alf" Cordill on October 15, 1899. She was united with the Church of God at Argos nearly a half century ago, never changing her membership therefrom.

Besides her bereaved husband, she leaves to mourn her death her son Ludlow, and family, of Buffalo, N. Y.; her daughter Ruth, wife of Ernest VanCamp, and family, of 331 S. Eddy St., South Bend; four grandchildren; a brother, George Taylor, and family, of Argos; and a sister Lura, wife of James White, Argos; as also many tried and true friends.

From Hay's Funeral Home services were concluded at Highland Cemetery, where amid love's flowers she was laid at rest to await the call of Him who is the resurrection and the life.

F. L. Austin.

AMOS LEWIS BECKHOLT

Amos Lewis Beckholt of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, was born May 11, 1876, and died December 4, 1940. For a number of years he had suffered with arthritis, but suffered patiently until he fell asleep.

He united with the Church of God, August 11, 1921, to which he remained loyal to the end of life. He often said, "I am ready to go." What a comfort to his two daughters, two grandchildren, three brothers, and four sisters! He died in Christianity's hope, he sleeps in peace—therefore, we need not sorrow "as others which have no hope."

He was laid to rest in Union Grove Cemetery, awaiting the morn of the resurrection. He was often heard to say, "If we miss the resurrection, we shall have missed all."

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him, (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

Black-out

Year by year the anniversary that commemorates the birth of the Savior has come and gone. Years have grown into tens, hundreds, even thousands, yet each year, as at the very first, the lonely watch fires of shepherds have twinkled from the hills of old Judea. Under the great canopy of the heavens, they have reflected a trustworthy vigil that to the passer-by implied a day and night devotion to those flocks intrusted to their care. Every Christmas season has this been so—every season except 1940.

This year we are told that, under the increasing threat of enemy bombers, there were no lights shown throughout the entire city of Bethlehem.

To the mind of this writer, it implies so much more than a simple order to black-out. It implies that the world's ever-increasing darkness is reaching out its stygian hand, and choking out the hearts of men at the very seat of all that is right and just in the world. It implies that an ever-deepening shadow of darkness is stealing over the world, until at last the final glimmering watch fire must flicker out, leaving many a lonely wayfarer confused and stumbling upon an unknown and darkened path.

In the same ratio that the shadows lengthen and deepen, your responsibility and mine grows greater and greater. We have been given the care of the watch fires that assure the world of eternal vigilance over the flocks that have been temporarily committed to our care. Our vigilance must not cease, our watch fire must not flicker out, even if the great planes drone overhead, for the Good Shepherd has said that when the security of the flock is too greatly threatened He will go forth and lead them, flock by flock, into the safety of the fold in some obscure valley. At the first sign of adversity, do we have a right to allow our watch fires to vanish? Vanishing watch fires are justified in indicating only one thing, and that is that the flock has left for the security of the valley, under orders of the Head Shepherd. If the fires are out when He goes forth to call them to security, there may be many who can't be found in the ever-increasing darkness.

Fuel for the Fires

Thus, as we are speaking of the watch fires, we are reminded that this is the season of the year when much new fuel is added to the fires. We refer, of course, to the many new officers who are elected for service during the coming year. Whether the fire burns brightly or fizzles and flickers out will depend entirely upon you and the attitude you take toward your new responsibilities. If you are one of these, may I sit down for a minute and with the frankness of an old friend offer a few thoughts. Tempts are better than ten successes out of ten attempts to you. You need only say to yourself that I'm right or wrong, and, if I'm right, then say simply, you'll accept or reject those ideas.

"When the Church Builds Evangelism, Evangelism Will Build the Church."

(1) Impress upon your mind that you have received an office not to burden you with something, but because anywhere from twenty-five to one hundred fifty people had confidence in you as being the one to take everything in your stride and make your church a credit to God and your community. Dare you betray that confidence?

(2) It is not a duty to serve God, it is a privilege. Without that privilege, you are entirely without hope.

(3) Church board meetings are not to burden; they are to be looked forward to as an opportunity of advancing thoughts that show consideration for the future of God's plan. An attendance of only three officers out of fifteen at meetings does not show interest.

(4) Be prompt. Church members and Sunday school scholars do not arrive on time or show interest, when officers and leaders arrive twenty minutes late.

(5) Children have interest only to the extent that you are interested in them. Fight listlessness, disinterest, half-hearted attendance, at their source—that source is you.

(6) People boost their church only when they are proud of it. Give them something of which to be proud—something in works and sincerity.

(7) Do things. Fifty successes out of a hundred. Expect no one hundred per cent acceptance of your views, for you are willing to have the other fellow prove his with more and better ideas next year.

(8) Remember the hand of the Lord upholds sincerity and truth. Some things He'll take care of—in strange ways.

“GET THEE OUT”

By Paran W. Anderson

The Lord said unto Abram, “Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father’s house unto a land that I will shew thee” (Genesis 12:1).

GET thee out” is a commandment that God has been giving His people down through the ages. We read that Abram departed from his country and partly obeyed God, but not fully, as he took Lot with him. Moreover, God had nothing more to say unto Abraham, until after he and Lot separated (Gen. 13:14).

When God gives orders, He is very specific. He created the earth to be inhabited by man, but man brought sin into the world and sin brought death. Nevertheless, God created the earth to be inhabited, and His work will not be in vain. There have been times when sin has been so rampant among the people that God has brought destruction upon them, but He has always planned a way of escape for His people—as He did with Noah. Noah preached and warned the people of what was coming, but they payed him no heed. Only his own family believed; consequently, all others were destroyed.

Another time in which God saved the faithful few was when the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah were destroyed. One day as Abraham sat in his tent door, he looked up and saw three men near. He ran to meet them and bowed down before them, for they were angels. He then invited them in, and went out to kill a calf from which his wife prepared a meal. While the angels were with Abraham, they told him that Sarah would bear a son. Abraham enjoyed their visit so much that when they left he went part way with them, talking with them. It was then that the Lord said, “Shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do?”

So the angels told Abraham that the Lord was going to destroy the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah because of their wickedness. Abraham then asked, “Wilt thou also destroy the righteous with the wicked? Peradventure there be fifty righteous within the city: wilt thou also destroy and not spare the place for the fifty righteous that are therein?” The Lord answered, “If I find in Sodom fifty righteous within the city, then I will spare all the place for their sakes.” Abraham, however, was not sure fifty righteous persons were there, so he began to ask about the possible salvation of fewer righteous persons, until he had inquired about the possibilities if only ten were found. God said He would spare Sodom, if there were ten. The angels next went down to the city, to Lot’s house, and told him to get out, for the city was to be destroyed. Only four righteous were found (Gen. 19:16). Moreover, God said, “Look not behind thee” (specific orders), but Lot’s wife did look back, and immediately became a pillar of salt.

Today, God is calling unto you and me and all (“who-soever will may come”), saying, “Get thee out”—out of the worldly things. Is this a specific order? Yes! just as specific as it was in the days of Noah, Abraham, and Lot. We must come out of the world, wholly and completely, and not even look back, but keep our faces turned toward that Day which we know will soon come. We see the prophecies being fulfilled on every hand, and we are admonished to watch lest we be caught unawares. We are told that Jesus will come as a thief in the night, but the watchman who is faithfully watching will not be caught unawares. He will be ready, and will greet Jesus, and see Him as “the bright and morning star.”

There is a plan outlined in the Bible whereby anyone may share in God’s holy Kingdom which will be established when Jesus comes. (Please turn to page 10)

“The Lord Ordained”

Being a tentmaker, the Apostle Paul at least once during his ministry resorted to his trade to make a living. True, this did not reveal a lack of faith in the Lord as did Peter’s “I go a fishing” (John 21:3), but it was, according to Paul’s own testimony, a “wrong.” He wrote unto “the church of God . . . at Corinth” (2 Cor. 1:1), saying, “What is it wherein ye were inferior to other churches, except it be that I myself was not burdensome to you? forgive me this wrong” (2 Cor. 12:13).

In 1 Corinthians 9, the Apostle reasoned with the Church of God at Corinth, saying, “Who planteth a vineyard and eateth not of the fruit thereof? or who feedeth a flock and eateth not of the milk of the flock?” (v. 7.) The faithful shepherd is repaid with an abundance of wool. Likewise, the Apostle Paul said, “It is written in the law of Moses, Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of an ox that treadeth out the corn”; then curtly asked, “Doth God take care for oxen? Or saith he it altogether for our sakes?” He promptly answered his own question by saying, “For our sakes, no doubt, this is written: that he that ploweth should plow in hope; and that he that thresheth in hope should be partaker of his hope.”

Obviously, Paul’s reasoning is that ministers should receive their remuneration from the work in which they are engaged—though a servant of the Lord might be esteemed little more than an ox, it is not to be forgotten that the Law of Moses taught that an ox was fed by the grain which he labored to produce, and that the New Testament interpretation of this law says it was written “altogether for our sakes” (v. 10).

Furthermore, the Apostle Paul most clearly said, “The Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel” (v. 14). Dare lukewarm congregations change an ordinance of God?

The challenge of the Apostle’s reasoning, however, is as forcefully applicable to secular-working ministers as it is to tightfisted laymen. Inasmuch as “the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel,” it is, we believe, a direct transgression of this law for a minister to try to make his living in any other way than by faithfully laboring in his high calling. Whatever is the reason—whether lack of faith or selfishness or failure to correctly understand the Scriptures—many ministers, like the Apostle Paul, should say, “Forgive me this wrong.” Preachers of the gospel, God has not ordained that you make your living by selling life insurance, milking cows, or by raising an acre of potatoes, onions, or pumpkins! Work at your own trade, your own high calling, and God will uphold His ordinance.

“Timee”—“A Sum of Money”

The Apostle Paul wrote, “Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honour, especially they who labour in the word and doctrine” (1 Tim. 5:17). It seems that this “double honour” is thought by the public to refer, possibly, to chicken dinners or to some empty title such as “Reverend.” Actually, Paul had no such thought in mind. The “double honour” of which he spoke refers directly to pay.

Letting the Bible be its own interpreter, we discern that the Greek “timee” (pronounced tim-ee, and in 1 Timothy 5:17 translated “double honour”) is translated “a sum of money” in Acts 7:16. Abraham “bought” “the sepulchre” in which Sarah was buried; and we may be reasonably sure that the timee with which he bargained with “the sons of Emmor the father of Sychem” was definitely “cold cash” and not any such “double honour” as fried chicken or an unscriptural title. The word is, moreover, eight times translated “price”: for instance, “They took thirty pieces of silver, the price (timee) of him that was valued” (Matt. 27:9).

It is true that the word timee is more often translated “honour” than it is translated “sum of money,” or “price,” but that the word really refers to money in the “double honour” text of 1 Timothy 5:17, is obvious, for in the very next verse we read: “The scripture saith, Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn. And, The labourer is worthy of his reward” (v. 18).

If half-paid ministers suddenly received “double” timee, their salaries would have to be quadrupled—or are our arithmetic and theology both wrong? . . . In the meantime, may all ministers “labour in the word and doctrine.”

Christian, Watch!

By Lottie E. Young

THE word "watch" has an important place in the Bible, being used in many different ways, as its Hebrew and Greek roots show. It is used as follows: as a period of time (the morning watch), a guard, a charge, and to look out. The use of the word in this article, however, is best expressed in the thought, Be awake—"Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth." The last night of the year, which is called "watch night," may mean a theater party to see the new year come in, or even a drunken carousal, but to Christians it should mean we are watching or awake to the coming of the Lord, praying that the new year may bring His advent, and the consummation of the ages in the reign of the Prince of Peace.

When will Jesus come? Matthew 24:36, 44, says: "Of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only . . . Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." First Thessalonians 5:2 reads: "Yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night."

How will Jesus come? In 1 Thessalonians 4:16, 17, we read: "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord."

What should be the attitude of believers? "Watch ye therefore: for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cockcrowing, or in the morning: lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you I say unto all (even to us who are living so far down the stream of time) WATCH" (Mark 13:35-37). First Corinthians 16:13 says: "Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong."

We are told, "Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation," also "Occupy till I come"; so "watching" does not mean folded hands and longing hearts, but it does mean that we are to work for the Master until He is revealed. The Apostle Paul, in giving advice to Timothy, said, "Watch thou in all things." What are some of the "all things" for which we must watch?

W-ords. Have we followed the advice given in James 3 in regard to talking? This Apostle tells us, "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man. . . . The tongue is a little member, and boasteth great things. . . . The tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison" (3:2-8). How much happier everybody would be, if we heeded the command: "Let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath" (James 1:19).

A-ctions. All know the old proverb: "Actions speak louder than words," also, "What you do talks so loud I cannot hear what you say." Do we realize how closely everybody—family, friends, neighbors—are watching our actions, and how sometimes an inadvertent slip may make others lose faith, not only in us, but in our Lord? Men and women are reading our actions much more closely than they are reading in the Bible of the actions of the Master—"He went about doing good."

T-houghts. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh," and all know that the topic of conversation is that which is uppermost in our minds. Will it be the follies of this world, our pet spite against someone, murmuring as to our lot, harsh thoughts of those with whom we come in daily contact, or do our thoughts lead men and women to say, "They have been with Jesus and have learned of Him"?

C-ompanions. These have to be watched very closely, as we know "one cannot touch pitch and not be defiled." If we associate with those who take the name of the Lord in vain, frequent places of vice, or have those for friends who "occasionally take a glass" of something which makes them say and do very wrong things, we are not likely to bring forth the fruits of the Spirit: love, joy, peace, and the rest of this godly train.

H-omes. Everything goes back to the starting place in life. The boy's greatest influence at first is his mother, then it may be his teacher in school; when your boy reaches the age of twelve or thirteen years, it may be the "gang," or it may be his father. Later, it may be a loved friend, or one who is likely to bring disaster by his advice. Here the road diverges: one branch leading to honorable manhood, and the other to shame and often a miserable death. Good homes do not always produce good children, but even if wayward in youth, in later years the knowledge of the prayers of parents will often bring conviction, and a turning to the God of their fathers. If we watch our Words, Actions, Thoughts, Companions, we can be assured our Homes will exercise the same influence on the children therein as did that which made Timothy the "beloved son" of one of the greatest men the world ever knew—the Apostle Paul.

Thoughts Concerning Christmas, or Yule Day

By Sherman P. Baker

DID you ever ask yourself the following questions: Why do most people call December 25 "Christmas," or "Yule Day"? Why the two names? Those who seem to be informed on the subject tell us that it is not Christ's birthday. Then, why is it called Christmas? Again, why call it Christmas, if its proper name is Yule Day? If it is Christ's birthday, why is the "mass" added to Christ's name?

Many have said that no one seems to know when Christ was born, and we celebrate on that day because it has been the custom for many years. They seem to rest on this conclusion, and fail to investigate further on the subject. Years ago in England, many people refused to celebrate the Yule Day, and called it "Fools Day." Later, when they had settled in Massachusetts and Connecticut, and formed what has been called the "Blue Laws," they were strictly forbidden to celebrate on that day. Anyone found carrying holly on that day was subject to a fine.

More than two thousand years before the birth of Christ, at the time that Nimrod, the mighty hunter, had built the tower of Babylon and the great walls of the city, he died, and his son Ninas took the throne—the throne of the Babylonian Kingdom. At Nimrod's death, men made a god of him, built a tower four hundred eighty feet high, constructed an image of him and placed it on the tower; and there they bowed before his image and worshiped him as God, and he was called "Baal" for short because he had built Babylon. This was the beginning of paganism. The young King Ninas married, and a son was born to him. Shortly after, Ninas died. The son was too young to take the throne, so his mother took his place. She reigned for almost forty-two years and was an excellent queen. The people worshiped her. She became so exalted that she felt herself most divine, and called herself the "Queen of Heaven," saying that she was "an incarnation of the Divine Spirit, and the bride of the Supreme Father." The Chaldean Mysteries were instituted by her for the purpose of controlling her subjects in religious matters. She required all her subjects to renounce their several tribes, or their nationalities, and to devote themselves to her as the "Queen of Heaven." She appointed a pontiff, or high priest, to head her Mystical Brotherhood, and four hundred subordinate priests. The high priest was forbidden to marry, but the four hundred subordinate priests were allowed to marry if they so desired. History, however, states that they remained single. The next step taken was that all candidates were required to confess every thought; then they were sprinkled with "holy water" and given a cake called "Mola." Reference is made to these cakes in Jeremiah 7:18, where people worshiped the Babylonian goddess, whose real name was Semiramis. She was known under different names in different localities. She was called Astarte, Asphrodite, Cybele, Isis, Ashtaroth ("Ash-taroth," the name of her image), and the Goddess Diana. She required her worshipers to keep three feasts to commemorate important events.

"Together with direct references to the Bible, my main source of information for this article was obtained from the works of such great historical authors as Adams, J. C. S. Abbott, Josephus, Eusebius, Rollin, Jones, Gibbon, and others; also the 'World's Great Empires,' and best encyclopedias."—The author.

The first of these feasts was in honor of Semiramis' birth, was observed on the day corresponding with March 25, and was known as "Lady Day." The second was called the "Feast of Her Ascension," and was held on a day corresponding to September 8. The third feast was in honor of her son's birth, for she claimed that he was divine. This feast was held on a day corresponding to December 25.

Semiramis died at the age of sixty-two years, and left the Empire to her son Ninyas, whom she had claimed was divine, but he proved to be a degraded character. It is recorded that his successors for thirty generations were so corrupt and effeminate that every woman once in her life must offer herself to strangers publicly before the temple of Beltis, or Baal, for by this means the crowd of strangers in the city would be increased. Maidens were sold at auction, for thus the wealthy princes and libertines of the surrounding nations would be drawn to the unscrupulous market. The father or brother, with his daughter or sister, stood ready to barter for money the pleasures due only to love.

Babylon was the paradise of gluttony and lust. The banquet and feast brought drunkenness and revel. (See Daniel 5.) The palace halls were harems, for polygamy was the usage of the land and city. It is no wonder that the Apostle John saw in a vision this Harlot called, "MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH" (Rev. 17:5). The Babylonians were idol worshippers, paganized to the extreme. They worshiped the sun that shone from heaven, also the son that was to be their future king. The day of his birth was celebrated each December 25—down through the times of the Medes and Persians, through the days of Greece and pagan Rome, to the time that Pope Liberius concluded to say mass on that special day of the year 353, A.D., and gave it in honor of the Christ child, and was called "Christmas." In the year 366, A.D., the two feast days were combined, shifting Christ's birthday over to the main feast day, called "Christmas," or "Yule Day." The Nords were the ones to name it "Yule" in honor of their God Thor.

Christ was born on the day corresponding to our August 18. Josephus, the Jewish historian, on page 637, tells us that the new year previous to this time began on August 6. Twelve days later, Christ was born exactly on time, as can be proved by chronology and by nature. According to Ussher our time began 4004, B.C., and ran down the stream of time to 0. Then, beginning at 0, it has moved down to 1941.

Next, let us consider the evidence by nature. When John the Baptist first saw Christ coming toward him, he pointed his finger, saying: "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world"; and as a lamb, He was destined to be born exactly where it took place—in a sheep shed. The shepherds were out on the hills watching over the sheep by night. It was not best to disturb them with their lambs, for in so doing they would lose many of them. Consequently, the shed was empty. This was the place where (Please turn to page 10)

THE SPOIL

By Mae Nedrow

---

"Therefore the children of Israel could not stand before their enemies . . . because they were accursed" (Josh. 7:12).

THE Israelites never dreamed of defeat when going to battle against the Canaanites, because God's blessing was upon them, and they were sure of victory. Imagine their consternation when they received word that the three thousand had failed in their campaign against Ai.

The first city they had taken after crossing the Jordan had been Jericho; they remembered how the walls had fallen flat without a single blow being struck. Now, they watched these men returning, and saw their commander in grief and shame throw himself on the ground before the ark. They wondered what could be wrong. God knew; someone had taken of the "accursed thing." Therefore, they had gone to battle without God's blessing, and had come back defeated. They fought alone; hence, they fought in vain.

Under a certain tent in Judah's camp lay buried a Babylonish garment, some pieces of silver, and a wedge of gold—part of the spoil of Jericho. Regardless of Joshua's warning, Achan had taken of the spoil and buried it beneath the ground.

The Israelites knew that the law forbade them to take spoil for personal advantage. "The graven images of their gods shall ye burn with fire: thou shalt not desire the silver or gold that is on them, nor take it unto thee, lest thou be snared therein: for it is an abomination to the Lord thy God. Neither shalt thou bring an abomination into thine house, lest thou be a cursed thing like it: but thou shalt utterly detest it, and thou shalt utterly abhor it; for it is a cursed thing" (Deut. 7:25, 26).

If we have buried in our hearts some hidden spoil, some secret sin, we cannot hope for success until we rid ourselves of the "accursed thing." No church can be successful if there is an Achan within the camp. Almost every church I have ever known has had an Achan, disguised as an angel of mercy, secretly working to undermine the very structure of the church. We recall the words of Jesus when He said: "Ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte, and when he is made, ye make him twofold more the child of hell than yourselves" (Matt. 23:15).

When at last Achan was confronted by Joshua, he cried aloud in great agitation, "Indeed I have sinned against the Lord God of Israel, and thus and thus have I done: when I saw among the spoils a goodly Babylonish garment, and two hundred shekels of silver, and a wedge of gold of fifty shekels weight, then I coveted them, and took them; and, behold, they are hid in the earth in the midst of my tent, and the silver under it" (Josh. 7:20, 21).

This act of Achan's was a great tragedy, for others, too, were made to suffer for his disobedience and disloyalty. Achan paid with his life for a Babylonish garment, some pieces of silver, and a wedge of gold. His sin had found him out.

We may be able to deceive those about us, but we cannot deceive God, for He "is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart" (Heb. 4:12). Like Achan, our sins are sure to find us out.

Serving the King

Article One

By James M. Watkins

CHURCH of God doctrines advocate a working religion. The accepted basis of all future rewards, or of one's standing before God, is that of labor now performed in His behalf. These doctrines, in basic form, comprise an important part of almost every creed and are not necessarily limited to those of our own belief. Yet, in spite of their general acceptance among advocates of Christian precepts, there is nothing more sadly neglected in daily application.

Serving the King is not a world-wide duty imposed upon everyone. It is a blessed privilege that is a heritage of those only who have become a part of His purposes. When we consider worldly kings today, we must recognize, at least, some very obvious facts. One is, that an alien or a citizen of another land is not acceptable in any capacity as a servant of a king. Another fact is, that those who attain the most respected places in the service that gives the greatest rewards are those whose devotion and willingness to serve are without question. The great King drafts no man into His service, apparently feeling that the only faithful ones are the men or women who offer themselves, freely and unreservedly, serving not from force of duty or fear of punishment, but out of real love of service and devotion to cause. Would any king be deceived by an outward profession of service if the servant, although promptly obeying every direct command, constantly pretended not to hear certain little commands, rather than do anything more than is absolutely necessary? Or, is the true servant the one who constantly observes the interests of his king, that he may do the needed things to support the king's interests without asking?

This is a question before Christian people today. When we avoid little efforts in the Master's service, is it because we really feel that there would be little profit in our efforts, or is it that we simply don't want to be bothered? We should always remember, "The Lord looketh on the heart." Likewise, let us ask ourselves another question: When we say we don't believe a church should do this or that, is it because it is a definite part of our belief, or is it because we don't want to be bothered with the effort involved? The Scriptures are authority for the statement, "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." Is there anything that cannot be made a part of a well-rounded effort to serve the King, so long as its application tends to glorify God? To the Christian, there must be no disinction between his church life and his everyday life. Anything that is right to do in everyday life should be worthy of a place in church life.

How can we better serve the King? That is a question that is before many sincere Christians throughout the land. To answer this question, may we present in as simple and concrete way as possible what we consider a small example of the things that can be made parts of our service. We do not need a program where one individual does all the things suggested. What we need is a program where one individual concentrates all his time and efforts on the unusual things connected with one particular thing. Look over these suggestions. We consider their complete application, with many other ideas not mentioned, as being necessary before we can say there is nothing left to do in service. If you feel that effort will no longer bear fruit, then visualize a church where the personal interest of an individual has been directed to each of the following things, then estimate—if you can—the results that would follow. Are we standing still because there is nothing to do, or because we've done nothing toward a real unified effort of service?

(1) Bulletin Board Service Man. The bulletin board affords a good opportunity to advertise events or present little catchy messages. It can be adapted to almost any price or place. If one of the more expensive cannot be had, a very good substitute can be made by the purchase of gummed letters which come in a printer's font selection for ten cents. To the individual with ideas, these letters and a cheap piece of cardborad can be made to create much thought.

(2) Attendance Director. Getting people to come to church, especially new attendants, provides its own interesting compensation in service. The use of post cards, special tracts, newspaper articles that lead to interest, personal visitation, and so forth, can be parts of this work.

(3) Tract Distributor. This is one of our most needed offices in each locality. Little baskets in restaurants, tract racks in public places, as well as many systems of personal distribution, add much interest in the Lord's work to the person who desires to serve in this way. If a person would volunteer from each locality to assume this role for a year at a time, and would come in contact with those responsible for tract printing, I am sure many worth-while and inexpensive ways could be worked out.

Special printings could be made for our distributors each month, if arranged in advance, at reasonable cost.

(4) Restitution Herald Representative. One of the most effective ways to reach a great many individuals is through the medium of our church paper. At least one in each church group should be in charge of this work. Special lots could be ordered for personal distribution as individuals are interested in certain series, then subscriptions taken to insure continuance of the paper in those homes. Under such a plan, I'm sure you would find The Restitution Herald most willing to co-operate, so that it need not cost too much.

(5) Art Craft Director. One place in which we are failing is in organizing the talents of the Sunday school boys and girls. Little services encouraged for the Lord now means greater service later. Organized labor means continued interest. Each church needs at least three such directors as follows:

A. Labors along the line of repairing discarded toys for Christmas distribution among the needy, the making of woodworking novelties to assist with expenses, sign painting—church signs for directions to churches, also special road signs, and so forth.

B. Special printing and mimeographing, production of a church paper, bookbinding, and so forth, for expense money; also, producing special tracts for an attendance director or tract distributor. This last service is most essential.

C. Novelty sewing, novelty weaving, and special needlework conducted in the nature of a Junior Dorcas Society that could well encourage later efforts in these fields.

These directors could well combine their efforts in making cutout Christmas displays, or any special displays for store windows that would tell a simple Bible story. Such a venture would well serve the church, interest the children making them, and be of outstanding public interest.

The Nature of God's Third Great Textbook, Man

By David D. Blyth

---

TURN back the pages of written history six thousand years, once more. In Genesis 1:27, 28, we read: "God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them. And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth." In this statement are four ways in which man differs from every other plant and animal. They are as follows: (1) No other organism was made in God's image, (2) No other organism has been specially blessed of God, (3) No other organism has been allowed by God to multiply and occupy all parts of the earth, and (4) No other organism has subdued man—he has subdued all organisms.

In Genesis 2:7, we read, "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." There is no other organism that had the breath of life so given.

In Genesis 2:16, 17, God gave man his single commandment. We read, "Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat: but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." No other organism had received a commandment. Why? Had any other organism been given a mind which could comprehend a command? No! Man alone was made in God's image. This mind made it possible for man to modify the environmental changes—produced by God's control—taking place through the movements of the heavenly bodies. Man's mind even made it possible for him to overcome the law of the survival of the fittest, which is universal in the natural environment. Witness: the protection man must give domesticated plants and animals, the asylums for the mentally deficient, the hospitals for the physically weak, and war to kill the strong. God did not command any other organism not to eat of the tree of good and evil, since none other could comprehend good and evil. God feared that man might also eat of the tree of life (Gen. 3:22), before he knew enough to use eternal life righteously. God did not fear that any other organism would eat of this fruit. This same verse indicates that man was created a mortal, yet the entire Bible from here on is devoted to the explanation of what man must know, believe, and do, to gain immortality. Man is the only organism that may know, believe, and do, and thus gain immortality.

For these reasons, I believe that man was actually created from the chemicals that make up the earth, and God gave man life, a mind, and a hope.

Recognition in the Kingdom

(Conclusion)

By A. G. Young

FROM the creation of the human race to the end of this age, God has ordained that human relationships should revolve around the family, which is the center and core—all other human relationships are secondary thereto. When a man and a woman marry, there is no close blood relationship between them (marriage between first cousins or closer is biologically bad and is prohibited by law), but their children have the actual blood and life of both parents. This basic human relationship in and through marriage is God-given for this age, and as long as we are in it, we find it difficult, if not impossible, to grasp in fact (although those who believe in the Bible accept it in theory) what Christ said in Luke 20:34, 35, as pertaining to the future Kingdom Age: "The children of this world marry, and are given in marriage: but they . . . neither marry, nor are given in marriage."

The word "world," as it appears above, is better translated "age," and the Emphatic Diaglott translation of these verses is as follows: "The children of this age marry, and are given in marriage; but those deemed worthy to obtain that age, and that resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage."

Now, this gives us a clear view from the authoritative lips of our Lord that the institution of marriage does not exist in the coming age for those who are worthy to attain unto it. Therefore, a fundamental change in human relationships has taken place, and no longer are the relationships through the family tie the dominant ones.

Nevertheless, it would seem reasonable to infer that this change is to be all to the good for all concerned, as the coming age will be a better one than the present in every way. We should, therefore, view the future relationships hopefully rather than contrarily, even though the relationships, as stated by Christ, are impossible for us now to grasp or comprehend.

This change in the center of relationships is from something now existing, namely, the family, to something which is to exist, namely, Christ, or, as it is adequately expressed in the Bible, Christ is the "Head," and we who are His comprise His "body." This is a wonderful and perfect illustration of unity, therefore, in that coming age we will find the satisfying, complete relationship in Him, which it is impossible for us to find under present conditions.

It is inevitable that with such a basic change in relationship, other changes will automatically follow. While we do not now have a clear picture of their ramifications, nevertheless, it is perfectly reasonable to believe that all things will then be in harmony.

Perhaps it might be helpful to try to illustrate through making a comparison, even though it may be inadequate, drawn from our present life. This life goes through the stages of childhood, youth, maturity, and old age. Those of us who have reached the latter years of life will agree that we remember very little of our childhood, as, with years, we attain to a certain sense of perception, so that the thoughts and experiences of childhood, however vivid and real then, have since become almost insignificant in importance, and are mentally discarded and forgotten. In other words, we are now better able to value their relative importance to the larger issues of life that come with maturity. The lesser has been swallowed up by the greater. In some like measure, but more completely, much the same thing will happen to our minds, recollections, and relationships when we are immortalized and are occupied with the activities of the Kingdom Age.

Perhaps the broad, underlying principle can be stated, namely, only that portion, if any, of this life's experiences and relationships will be carried over to the immortal life in the Kingdom Age that is of value in that coming Age. We will then be living within the future conditions with all that is thereby implied. That which is not then of value will be eliminated. Therefore, in accordance with this principle, the question of recollection and recognition of our loved ones in the future life will depend upon whether in Christ's judgment there is any value in continuing same. It can be confidently asserted that if there is no value in this, then we will not regret its absence. On the other hand, all that is of future value will be retained to the glory of God as a contribution toward our happiness and usefulness during the Kingdom Age.

Isaiah 65:17 clearly declares that there shall be no remembrance of the present earth and heavens by those who will be present in the new heavens and new earth. This verse reads: "For, behold, I create a new heavens and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind." This text, however, seems to refer to conditions existing subsequent to the Kingdom Age, and possibly not in the Kingdom Age, as at its end, God through His power (see 2 Peter 3) first cleanses this earth and the surrounding atmosphere, or "heavens," by fire, and thereafter He brings into being those conditions referred to as "a new heavens and a new earth."

It can be safely stated that the Bible is given to us primarily as a book of human redemption, so the most important problem for each individual is, through belief in and obedience to Christ, to attain unto that eternal life in the Kingdom of God. Therefore, various views of such a subject, as discussed herein, are interesting and quite proper; nevertheless, we are all brought to the point in our thinking that we must trust God and have faith, that in bringing His plan of human redemption to completion our relationships, now imperfect, will be perfected.

As previously mentioned, these few thoughts are given in no controversial spirit, rather they are given to promote research and possible discussion by others. No intention is meant to take away anyone's belief, which some no doubt cherish very closely, that there will be recollection and recognition of loved ones in the life to come in the Kingdom Age. If there are clear texts in the Bible which prove such recollection and recognition in the Kingdom Age, same will be welcomed. Perhaps, therefore, this article, which is sent forth with prayer, will promote thoughts by others on this subject. If we hold any belief which we claim is based on the Bible teaching, then we should have every desire to clearly present the evidence. On the contrary, if in such belief, we cannot produce such supporting evidence, then we should be willing to modify our beliefs.

WORLD EVENTS IN 1941

By Arthur G. Young

WORLD events will move fast during 1941. Great decisions will come during the year, and though quite possibly the war will not come to a close, the issue will become much clearer. Germany must make a supreme effort in 1941 to smash Britain, as Germany will be at her peak this spring, and Britain and the United States have not yet reached their full war preparation. Hence, Germany's opportunity is to strike before they do so, and this means in 1941.

If once Britain and her Empire and the United States get fully organized for war as Germany now is, and Germany has not been able to crush Britain, then Germany's defeat is certain. However, we do not for a minute underestimate the seriousness of Germany's blow soon to come. It will shake the world.

Our hope is that the whole thing will end in the coming of our dear Lord and the commencement of His rule of righteousness on this earth. Oh, how our whole being longs for that above everything else!

"WHO IS THIS KING OF GLORY?"

By Nancy B. Robison

"Lift up your heads, O ye gates . . . and the King of glory shall come in. Who is this King of glory? The Lord of hosts, he is the King of glory" (Psalm 24:1-10).

WHO asks this question? Another important question is asked in verse 3: "Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord?" Answer: "He that hath clean hands and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully. He shall receive the blessing" (vv.4, 5). We read in Psalm 22:30, "A seed shall serve him; it shall be accounted to the Lord for a generation."

The Prophet Isaiah foretold: "When thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand. He shall see the travail of his soul, and be satisfied: by his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many; for he shall bear their iniquities. Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong." If we are strong enough to know His plan and purpose, and do His will, we are one of that generation—one of His by adoption. "This is the generation of them that seek him" (Psalm 24:6).

In Psalm 24:7, we hear the King of glory say, "Lift up your heads, O ye gates; and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in." Then, someone asks, "Who is this King of glory?" Who asks this question? Who would ask such a question? who, but the warring nations who will be gathered against Jerusalem to battle (Zech. 14:1-5)—there clamoring for Palestine, wealth, and world power.

What do these nations know about this King of glory? Not a thing! They have transported His Kingdom above the skies, rejecting Jeremiah 3:17, saying: "At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord; and all the nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the Lord, of Jerusalem."

In Isaiah 2:1-4, we find what this King of glory will do. Notice, this is what the prophet saw concerning Jerusalem: "Many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

How we need this King of glory, and peace of Jerusalem! (See Psalm 122:6.)

evolution, do not say, "I don't believe in it, because the Bible says that 'God formed man of the dust of the ground.'" Rather, ask them the question, "Evolution of what?" If they say, "Of plants and animals excluding man," then you can safely agree, since the Bible agrees and your own observations agree. If, however, they include man, the Bible does not agree, nor does science have any proof.

"GET THEE OUT"

Briefly, that plan is to believe the gospel and be baptized. Some of the essential truths one must believe are: that Jesus is the Son of God, that He died, that He arose, that He ascended to heaven, and that He will come again. Then the dead in Christ will arise, and with the righteous living they will be changed, will be caught up to meet Him, and will escape the time of trouble and the great battle that will be fought near Jerusalem. After this, Jesus and His bride will return to the earth, and will set up an everlasting Kingdom that will fill the whole earth.

Converts are to be baptized, and there is a specific form of baptism. It is just as dangerous to change that, as it is to try to change any of God's other plans or commandments. Please read Romans 6:3-5. One should read the whole chapter, but let us especially study the third, fourth, and fifth verses. "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?" We believe that Jesus died, wholly; then can we baptize partially? "Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death." Buried with a few drops of water? No! "For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection."

So, "let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us" (Heb. 12:1). By observing current events as they unfold before us, we believe the time cannot be very far distant when we shall stand before our Redeemer. My prayer is that He will say to every reader of this article, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant: . . . enter thou into the joy of thy lord" (Matt. 25:21).

THOUGHTS CONCERNING CHRISTMAS, OR YULE DAY

Joseph and Mary were sheltered the night that our Savior was born. Augustus Caesar had issued a decree that all the world was to be taxed (see Luke 2 for further details); hence, Joseph and Mary had come to Bethlehem.

Next, let us review the evidence by nature. The Prophet, speaking of Christ, compared Him to flowers as being—the "Rose of Sharon," and the "Lily of the Valley." The rose of Sharon is in full bloom in August, and the blossoms are red as blood—typifying that Christ was born at that time of the season, and later would shed His blood for the sins of the whole world. This birth came as prophesied (see Isa. 9:6; then read Isa. 5:3). Next, the lily of the valley blooms in the spring, exactly at the time that our Savior was to rise from the dead. It is pure and white, showing forth in type just how our Savior would be when He arose from the dead. White is the type of righteousness. Nature speaks louder than words in this case. Much more could be stated on this subject, but let us look back to the time of Christ's birth when Augustus Caesar called for a tax on all the world.

The Jews were burdened with a double tax, and many of the Romans were not paying any. This caused much strife. Jews were forced to pay tribute to Caesar, and they were duty-bound to pay a tithe to their priest. The Romans said, "You must pay our tax; let your priest go," and history states that many of them starved. Therefore, Augustus saw the need of equalizing the tax burden. There were 4,233,000 Romans registered at that time. By so doing, it brought peace to the Roman world. Consequently, they named the month of this season "August," in his honor. Jesus, in a conversation with Pilate, told him that He was born the very day that Augustus Caesar brought peace to the Roman world.

In conclusion, we believe that you have the answer concerning why there are two names for the feast day called Christmas, or Yule. The pagans celebrated this day, December 25, and worshiped the sun that shines from heaven, and a "son of a gun" on earth. History states that he grew up to be not divine, but corrupt in life, and indolent; and the Empire became weak and degraded while he rolled in luxury and participated in pleasures of the most criminating character.

We have searched for years for this wonderful truth, and since this discovery, we have no desire to honor that pagan day. Scripture states that this Roman power would seek to change times and laws, and it would be given over to them (Dan. 7:25); the Scripture also states in Revelation 13:3 that all the world would follow that Beast. How true this is today, including nearly all churches! Let us not dishonor our Lord by celebrating on a pagan day.

ABBOTT-GRAMS

By R. M. Abbott

We are as anxious to be saved as we are to confess our sins.

We can afford to forget our past only so far as God has forgiven it.

Shallow praying is sowing seed for shallow living.

Live today as you wish your whole life had been lived.

That person who is always seeing the dirt on his neighbor's doorstep, is likely to be the one who has an unused broom at home.

We must turn to old-time religion if we want to enjoy present-day salvation.

God's love is for those who act today, His judgment—for those who put things off until tomorrow.

Have your Christianity so deeply seated that the world, while rubbing against it, can't rub it off.

Praying in faith will increase our faith in prayer.

He conquers most for Christ who is most conquered by Christ.

Not over there, but right here is my task.

Home missions are foreign missions to him who will not p(r)ay.

A Christian is one so changed that he himself can see the difference.

If you are ashamed of the way you are living, you can be sure that someone else is, too.

The one hundred twenty were fit, but not fitted until Pentecost.

In any Christian program where the world sits in the saddle, the church will be following in its dust.

The static caused by worldly living will bring in a poor reception of Jesus Christ.

Nine times out of ten, when someone asks the minister if a certain thing is wrong for him as a Christian to do, it is because he is one hundred per cent persuaded in his own mind that it is.

The church will not win by putting on suppers and side shows, nor by using the ballyhoo of the world. Consecration, not desecration, will win for Christ.

If unbelief could save, many more church members would be saved.

Christianity is really real, or it is really not Christianity.

The one who is looking for a "second chance" is probably the one who has already had a hundred chances.

If we live today as we plan to live tomorrow, tomorrow will not be the disappointment we find it to be today.

Two families—two fathers. The family of God says, "Our Father." The other family says its father doesn't exist and never did.

Book Reviews

By Arlen Marsh

Although the Emphatic Diaglott, from years of use by our ministry, is well known to the Church of God, it still deserves mention here if only for one reason: the publishers (Watch Tower Bible & Tract Society, headquarters for embattled Jehovah's witnesses, who insist, officially, on the small "w") have announced that the stock of Diaglots is running low, and that no new edition is contemplated.

The Diaglott is, of course, the preparation of Benjamin Wilson, a deceased member of the Church of God. It consists of the original Greek text of the New Testament (based largely on the Vatican manuscript), with an interlinear literal translation in English. In a parallel column on each page is the Wilsonian personal translation into readable English—a translation justly viewed as one of the best examples of Biblical scholarship extant.

The now-available edition of the Diaglott is bound in brown embossed fabrikoid, printed on India paper, and priced at $2.50. Chief flaw of the edition is that some pages—fortunately not many—were given poor impression, and are rather difficult to read because of faulty inking.

• • • • •

No one-volume Bible dictionary can be really satisfactory; but among the one-volume efforts, the Oxford University Press edition of Davis' Dictionary of the Bible probably is one of the best. Its principal deficiency is a slightly modernistic tinge; but almost no Bible dictionary now in general use escapes this difficulty. On the whole, it is accurate, and comprehensive enough to meet the needs of most teachers and students.

• • • • •

Did you know that Ben Hur, General Lew Wallace's mighty story of the Christ and His times, can be had in a large-type edition for only $2.50? Issued by the original publishers of the story, Harper & Brothers, it obviates the only fault reviewers ever have found with Ben Hur—that the type was too small for easy reading. Reprint editions (Grosset & Dunlap) in this hard-to-read small type are still available at only 75 cents.

They Drew Near

The publicans and sinners drew near to Jesus to hear Him, although they didn't believe in Him.

As usual, the Pharisees began to find fault and complain. They were the "church people" of Jesus' time. They were very strict in doing all the things their church law required. The sad thing is that they were interested in doing only the things that people could see. In other words, they gave their alms to be seen of men so men would honor them.

As the "church people" of today, let us not be "respectors of persons." We should be as kind and thoughtful to the poor, or rich, as we are to our very best friends. May we hide God's Word in our hearts so we will not sin against Him. (Psalm 119:17.)

Godly Repentance

Jesus told two parables to those who listened to Him that day. They are recorded in Luke 15:1-10. Read them.

The Israelites did not accept Christ when He came to them. The Gentiles were then given the opportunity to accept Christ. He is now calling out a people for His name, to be His bride.

In 2 Corinthians 7:10, 11, we read of godly repentance. Find these verses in your Bibles, and compare with the reading from Wilson's Emphatic Diaglott: "The sorrow according to God produces reformation for salvation, not to be repented of; but the sorrow of the world produces death. For behold this very thing,—to be grieved according to God,—How much earnestness it produced in you! what an apology! what indignation! what fear! what earnest desire! what zeal! what a punishment! In everything you proved yourselves to be pure in this matter."

Let us study those verses. The kind of sorrow that is true repentance is sorrow that causes the person to make wrongs right. Perhaps you have restored something that you had which belonged to someone else.

This produces earnestness or a desire to restore. It often causes a person to make an apology. There is no pride left in one who is truly repentant! There is only fear of not making things right; of not being accepted of Christ.

Then comes the joy of full repentance. That peace that passes understanding fills the heart. Then "what zeal!" The wish to work, to bring forth fruits for the Master, is now filling your soul. May we all have the joy that is caused by "one sinner" repenting.

You've Got to Dig!

"Said the little red rooster: 'Believe me, things are tough; Seems that the worms are scarceer, and I cannot find enough! What's become of all those fat ones is a mystery to me; There were thousands through that rainy spell—but now where can they be?'"

"Then the old black hen who heard him didn't grumble or complain, She had gone through lots of dry spells, she had lived through floods of rain;

So she flew up on the grindstone, and she gave her claws a whet, As she said, 'I've never seen the time there wasn't worms to get.'

"She picked a new and undug spot; the earth was hard and firm. The little rooster jeered: 'New ground! That's no place for a worm!' The old black hen just spread her feet—she dug both fast and free. 'I must go to the worms,' she said; 'the worms won't come to me.'

"The rooster vainly spent his day, through habit, by the ways Where fat, round worms had passed in squads back in the rainy days. When nightfall found him supperless, he growled in accents rough, 'I'm hungry as a fowl can be; conditions sure are tough.'

"He turned then to the old black hen, and said: 'It's worse with you; For you're not only hungry, but must be tired, too. I rested while I watched for worms, so I feel fairly perk. But how are you? without worms, too, and after all that work?'"

"The old black hen hopped to her perch and dropped her eyes to sleep, And murmured in a drowsy tone, 'Young man, hear this and weep: I'm full of worms and happy, for I've eaten like a pig. The worms are there as always—but boy, I had to dig!'"

“Every Day and in Every Way”

* * *

By Arlen Marsh, Los Angeles, Calif.

Some years before the first World War, an Eastern admirer of the open air and physical exercise gained fame and some fortune by sponsoring a movement that encouraged people to tell themselves, “Every day and in every way I’m getting better and better.” Object: to give these repetitious citizens the psychological background for actually, as well as theoretically, improving their health.

Regardless of the failure of the noble experiment to cure chilblains and dandruff, it does have some application for us moderns. As every Berean should know, he got his religious name from those of ancient Berea, who searched the Scriptures daily and with real enthusiasm. Indeed, the motto of his national organization, together with its slogan (“Search the Scriptures Daily”; “We Stand for Unity, Truth, and Righteousness”), points to the origin of his present nomenclature.

But most Bereans, whether they know their origin or not, seem to have forgotten its significance. Few of them search the Scriptures twice a week, let alone once or more a day. Yet, it is through this means and this means only that they — we — can fulfill their — our — purpose. It is through this means only that Bereans can grow in knowledge, and (as Jesus grew) “in favour with God and man.”

It is here that the previously amorphous philosophy of every day and in every way, and so forth, can be made to take on definite form and meaning. Bible readers, and particularly careful Bible readers, can improve every day in every way if they are only willing. It was not for nothing that Biblical historians noted that Jesus grew in favor with God and man—it was for our personal benefit and application.

We cannot, of course, hope to attain to the exceptional knowledge of God-given religion which the Christ possessed. We have neither the means nor the mentality to do so. We can and should improve our knowledge of the Scriptures until, like Jesus, we can give an answer to any question that is asked us, until we can guide all important—and many unimportant—factors of our daily life by Christian principles as they are expressed in both Testaments.

It has been said with disgusting frequency that knowledge is power. It is, to be sure—but only when it is combined with wisdom and experience sufficient to use that knowledge as it should be used. Knowledge of the Bible is not, therefore, enough—it must be united with the firm determination to better ourselves daily by the practical application, in business, play, education, church, of those theoretical ideals which we have gathered from our reading of the Scriptures.

“Every day and in every way I’m getting better and better.” A repetition of those words, with an eye cocked toward Biblical standards and with a firm determination to make the philosophy be true, cannot avoid being salutary for us all.

Thy Opportunities Are at Hand

Bereans, how is your work coming along? What have you learned in the last six months that will better prepare you for a place in the Kingdom of God? Have you been attending Sunday school, Berean, and church services? What have you gained from these services?

On the other hand, what have you put into church work in the last six months? How many hours of Bible study do you have to your credit? With how many people have you talked about Bible subjects?

Are you happy in the service of the Lord, or do you feel that there is something lacking? Do you sometimes wish that somebody would give you a little different view on religion, so that religion would be more interesting?

If you are waiting for something to happen, you have a dreary future ahead. If you are satisfied with the conditions of this life and have no desire to live eternally under perfect conditions, do not study the Bible—it won’t do you any good. Of course, by following many of the principles of conduct given in the Bible you will have many more friends and be able to make more money, but be careful not to take things too literally—it might spoil your fun.

If you want to sacrifice pleasure for peace of mind in this life and a place in the Kingdom in the future, you must choose just the opposite course. Your opportunities are waiting for you. Your complete course in Christianity, sixty-six books of it, can be purchased at very little cost. Hard study will bring knowledge, and constant, everyday application will crown it with success.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALENDAR OF EVANGELISM

January 31-February 2—Northwest Quarterly Conference at Corvallis, Ore.
 February 16—California Conference at Pomona.
 July 29-August 10—General Conference at Oregon, Ill.
 July 29-August 10—Illinois Bible School and Conference at Oregon.
 August 17-24—Ohio State Conference at the Brush Creek Church of God, near Tipp City.

CALIFORNIA CONFERENCE

The next California Conference will be held February 16, 1941, the third Sunday in February. It will be held in Pomona.

The main speaker of the morning will be Sr. E. C. Railsback. The young people will give sermonettes in the afternoon, and Bro. G. E. Marsh will give the sermon in the evening. Charlotte Rahn, Conf. Secy.

LAST CALL FOR STUDENTS

The second semester of the Bible Training School will begin at 8:30 a.m., Monday, January 27. This is our last call for students who may wish to begin their work in the School this second semester. New students will be admitted as late as Wednesday, January 29, but this late date is allowed for those students only who may be coming from a distance.

The Bible Training School,
 Oregon, Illinois.

MACOMB, ILLINOIS

The church at Macomb is very much encouraged by the fact that our building fund has mounted to $437.00. Since this fund was started only a year ago, we know that the Lord has blessed us abundantly.

On Sunday, December 29, Bro. John P. Mercer officiated at both morning and evening services.

Two young men of our number confessed Christ as their Savior and were baptized on Tuesday, January 2, at Glenwood Park. Those immersed were Virgil A. VeNard, 429 S. Madison St., and Charles W. Mercer, 529 W. Piper St. What a grand way to start the new year!

During Bro. Lapp's absence on January 5, Sr. Louise Lapp delivered the morning sermon, and at the evening service short sermons were given by Sr. Louise Lapp and Bro. Walter Croxton. These services were enjoyed by all.
 Gladys E. Mercer, Secy.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Mrs. Lola Drake; Mrs. Mattie Vinyard; Albert Siple (self & others); Marie Brown Schreiber; Dr. J. W. Lent; Azalia Winfrey (for another); George O. Renner; Bentrice Walter; Mrs. Lydia E. Miller; William Lindsay; Mrs. H. H. Kent; A. F. Schultz; Mrs. L. M. Kiger (for another); A. Weldon McCoy; Theron Murphy; Mrs. O. H. Lewis (for others); Mrs. G. C. Wrenn; Gerald Niles; Hazel Blyth; Clarence Poland; Mrs. Ada Updike; Catharine Davis (for another); E. C. Miller; Glen Hoskins; Mrs. Clayton Magee; Orpha LeMasurier (for another); Mrs. Bettie Michaels.

SOUTHLAWN PARK CHURCH OF GOD

Grand Rapids, Michigan

Members of the Southlawn congregation were pleased to have with them on Sunday, January 12, two members of the Bible Training School at Oregon, Ill., during the absence of the pastor, Bro. F. E. Siple, who is conducting a series of meetings in Ripley, Ill. Bro. Orris Mills brought the message of the morning, while Bro. Alan McLain preached in the evening. It was a pleasure to hear these young men who are fitting themselves for the Lord's service, and we wish them Godspeed as they continue their work.

Sympathy is extended Bro. and Sr. Homer Conrad in the death of their year-old grandson, Allen Keith Larson, on January 9.

Elsie Barrows, who has been in a Grand Rapids hospital following an automobile accident, is expected to return home this week.

A large class of young people of high school age and younger is being developed in the Berean group, and we are rejoicing in having them. A young people's choir has also been organized by Sr. Evelyn Barr, music director, and this adds immeasurably to the evening services. Keep it up, young folks!

J. Lyon, Reporter.

BAPTISM AT KOKOMO, INDIANA

On January 12, Mr. Samuel Strouse confessed Christ as his Savior and was taken to the water and baptized by the writer into that all-saving name of Jesus Christ. Mr. Strouse is in the declining age of his eighty-eighth year; and we feel that he is very sincere in the step he has taken in his last days. He asks the prayers of the brethren everywhere to help sustain his faith in the living Savior.
 O. J. Parker, Pastor.

PENNELWOOD CHURCH OF GOD

Grand Rapids, Michigan

We wish to extend to the staff and readers of The Restitution Herald our best wishes for a very happy, healthy, and prosperous year in Christian service in 1941. May our united efforts do much for the cause of Him who gave His life that we might live.

Many thanks are extended to the students of the Bible Training School who have made the long trip to Pennellwood, and rendered such kind service during the past four months. We have enjoyed fellowship with them, and honor them for the profession they have chosen to make their life's work. We urge every church which has no pastor to give each of these students a trial.

On February 1, James W. McLain will assume the duties of pastor of the Pennellwood church. Will you mingle your prayers with ours for the work here?

Mrs. L. F. Slocum, Secy.

WATERLOO, IOWA

The "Live Wires" Sunday school class of the Church of God in Waterloo, Iowa, has also organized a Junior Berean Class. The first meeting was held on Sunday evening, January 12, at the home of Mrs. C. W. Howe, who is the teacher of the class.

The members who were present at the first meeting were: Amy Lou Moss, Billy Sizer, and the writer. We hope to have additional members to report by another week. Officers were chosen during the Sunday school session on January 5. They are as follows: Billy Sizer, president; Amy Lou Moss, vice president; and the writer, secretary-treasurer.
 Yvonne Peterson, Secy.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

"I Wonder: white robes, the Bible teaches, will be given to those of faith. What! No tobacco stains or holes from cigarettes? Funny, isn't it? So much different from this world!"—T. M. Savage, Waite Park, Minn.

"We must anticipate that conditions will become worse for Christian teaching, not better."—Arlen Marsh, Los Angeles, Calif.

There can be no eternal torture of the wicked in a Dante's inspired hell, unless the Devil has the power to give eternal life to his dupes.

Bro. H. H. Hawkins and family, Cleveland, Ohio, are planning a trip to California via Tempe, Ariz., leaving home the last week in January.

Bro. Tom Savage, Waite Park, Minn., preached Sunday, January 12, for the Church of God at Mora, Minn.

"Bro. C. E. Randall's article about 'Christ in the Psalms' was very instructive; also Bro. S. J. Lindsay's article about the 'Second Coming of Christ.'"—Bettie Michaels, Nevada, Mo.

"I think we must have had a hundred attendants at service Sunday morning, January 12."—S. J. Lindsay, Tempe, Ariz.

Bro. G. E. Marsh, pastor of the Los Angeles Church of God, writes that he is beginning a "series of Sunday morning sermons on the fundamentals." His address is: 230 W. 103 St., Los Angeles, Calif.

Torment to vegetarians: "Two hogs buried under snow and straw since the November 11th blizzard at the Floyd Mills' farm (Eden Valley, Minn.) made their appearance after being buried for forty-six days."—The Paynesville Press.

Betty Jean Zittle, daughter of Ione Zittle, was born at Oregon, Ill., May 16, 1940, and died January 12, 1941. Funeral services were conducted January 15, by the editor—speaking from Jeremiah 31:15-17.

Sr. Thomas Lewis, secretary of the Ripley, Ill., Church of God writes that the meetings being conducted there by Bro. F. E. Siple "are being well attended and much interest is being shown."

HILLISBURG, INDIANA

Sunday, January 12, being a fine winter day, we had a very good attendance at Sunday school and a very interesting lesson. It was election day, and the following officers were chosen for 1941: Sunday school superintendent, Otto Dick; assistant superintendent, Don C. Huffer; secretary, Gloria Snyder; assistant secretaries, Opal Huffer and Billy Dick; treasurer, Lota Huffer; pianist, Bessie Huffer; and assistant pianist, Deloris Snyder. The following teachers were chosen: adult class, Don C. Huffer—assistant, the writer; young people's class, Alva Huffer—assistant, Otto Dick; primary class, Deloris Snyder—assistant, Bessie Huffer; and the kindergarten class, Blanche Dick.

So, with the help of God and our Sunday school, we officers hope to do our very best to serve our Sunday school to the best of our ability, and may we work together in unity.
Lota Huffer, Reporter.

LYDIA ALVERTA RAILSBACK

Lydia, who was born to David D. and Catherine Evans in Jordan Township, near West Lebanon, Ind., March 4, 1865, and who was married to Richard C. Railsback of South Bend on May 9, 1900, fell asleep in death on December 27, 1940, following a long period of failing health. It was in early fall that she, though very weak, requested to be taken to Walton to visit her brother Francis M. Evans, then critically ill. The brother's death soon followed. It was in the home of her deceased brother, and under the loving and gentle care of his bereaved widow and daughter, that Sr. Railsback was compelled by weakness to continue until death.

At the age of eighteen years, the deceased consecrated her life to her Master, being assisted in baptism by the late esteemed Elder J. M. Stephenson. Many are the indications that she faithfully continued that consecration. Her life, as also that of her husband, was one of constant and abiding faith in the Christ as "the resurrection and the life." She strove to the full of her understanding to live the life that would please Him. For years she devoted much of time and labor and means to the promotion and upbuild of Berean work. Some fifteen years ago she became a helper in preparing copy for the Truth Seekers' Sunday School Quarterly. Her final copy of the "Golden Text" was the Sunday school lesson for Sunday, December 29, 1940. From that study scores of Sunday school students were receiving aid from her last penned thoughts on the very day that she lay in death in her home which for forty years had been her home of researchful reading, of writing, and of household duties.

It was on May 29, 1928, that Bro. Railsback preceded her in death, making it necessary for her to face the trying changes of recent years, companionless. In her death the South Bend Church of God loses the last charter member of its organization under the ministrations of Elder A. H. Zilmer, in the winter of 1900-1901.

Of a large family born to her father from his two marriages, the deceased leaves but one surviving brother: Bro. Armstrong Evans, now past ninety years of age, of Attica, Ind. Otherwise, she leaves a large number of relatives and friends.

Following funeral services in Hope Chapel Church of God of South Bend, Ind., our beloved sister was laid at rest at Argos to await the call of God's Son of resurrection and of might.
F. L. Austin.

MINNIE PROSSER

Minnie Ogden Prosser died at her home at Newport, Ore., January 6, 1941. She was born at Rice, Minn., September 13, 1873. While she was yet a girl, she came with her parents to Oregon. In 1892, she was united by marriage with H. J. Prosser. Their only child was Harold O. Prosser of Portland, Ore. Besides husband and son, she is survived by two granddaughters, and three sisters, Allie Rich-ey of Portland, Irene Smith of Bellingham, Wash., and Winona Ramsey of Bluffton, Canada.

Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, using Romans 8:11—"If the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you." Alfred Anthon.

WILLIAM GALE GRAHAM

William Gale Graham, small son of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Graham, was born at Fredericktown, Mo., July 6, 1938, and died January 3, 1941, at the Ironton Hospital.

He was known to his immediate family and friends as "Billy." Billy, along with a number of other children, was examined on June 12, 1940, by the State Health doctor, and received first place. In recognition, he was presented with a small silver cup. His death came as a shock to all, for very few knew of his illness.

Those left to retain the precious memories of his short life are: his father, mother, four sisters—Fern, Helen, Joyce, and Lillian; also two brothers—Homer and James; besides many other relatives and friends.

Internment was made at the cemetery near Oak Grove.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him, (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

— Tracts and Books —

"This gospel must first be published among all nations" (Mark 13:10).

The gospel of the Kingdom must be preached in all nations before Jesus will return from heaven. Every member of the Church of God can help to evangelize the world. Order a good supply of tracts; then send them to your friends. It costs nothing to slip a tract into a letter, and it may "save a soul from death."

The following tracts and books, most of them written by men prominent at some time in the Church of God, are for sale by the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Illinois. Send a self-addressed envelope or postage for tracts not priced. How many can you use?

Let Your Light Shine

By Ruth Hoskins

A TRAVELER lost in the woods at night wanders here and there in the darkness, almost in despair, until catching a glimpse of a dim light in the distance, he takes courage and struggles toward it. Though he stumbles at times, the light grows steadily brighter, and he at last reaches home. Likewise, a sinful person groping in the world of darkness is without hope and without God. When he begins to realize his lost condition, he may be compared to the lost traveler in the woods: if he can see even the dim light of a lowly Christian, he may be led by it to the saving truth of God's Word.

What, though, if the Christian's light has ceased to shine? As never before, it is now necessary for the Christian to let his light shine in this world of turmoil and strife. Let your life radiate the light of Christ to the dying world. Said Jesus, "Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid" (Matt. 5:14), and "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father" (v. 16).

A Christian's life is also like a book, an "epistle . . . known and read of all men" (2 Cor. 3:2). The world is not reading the Bible, but it is reading you and me. No one likes to read a book having soiled pages; so, as the Christian writes a page each day, let him be sure that the pages are clean and clear and that every deed recorded, as a guiding light, might lead some wayward soul out of darkness and despair.

Let no Christian be ashamed of his light, nor hide it under a "bushel." Let no Christian be ashamed to kneel in prayer or to testify for his Lord. In youth we were ashamed to so witness for the Lord, fearing what friends might say, but now we fear what our heavenly Father would think if we failed to so honor His name. Jesus said, "Whosoever . . . shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven.

But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 10:32, 33). The Apostle Paul said, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to . . . Jew . . . and . . . Greek."

Ruth Hoskins

The hope of the Christian, like a light to a lost traveler, should be a real blessing to one lost in the world. When Jesus ascended, angels promised the apostles, "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven" (Acts 1:11). These are comforting words to those who believe. The Savior will return "in power and great glory," and He may come very soon.

That will be a Day of glory for those who are in Christ, but a day of sorrow to the world. To some, Jesus will say: "I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity"! (Matt. 7:23.) Therefore, the true Christian should let his light shine out into the darkness, that lost ones still groping in the world might come to repentance, and accept and walk in the Light that saves. "Sad, sad, that bitter wail—'Almost, but lost!'"

When Jesus returns, "God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end" (Luke 1:32, 33). Certainly, the throne of David was not in heaven, but upon the earth; and when Jesus inherit's David's throne, He will reign from the city of David, Jerusalem, which Jesus Himself called, "The city of the great King" (Matt. 5:35).

Being children of light, and not walking in darkness, we should not be asleep to the nearness of Christ's coming to the earth. Though "men's hearts (are) failing them for fear" (Luke 21:26), Christians should "look up, and lift up (their) heads; for

“Unclean, Unclean”

An Israelite who became leprous was judged by the priesthood as to whether or not his leprosy was contagious. If it was judged contagious, the leper was declared “defiled,” and compelled to “dwell alone, without the camp.” We read, moreover, “The leper in whom the plague is, his clothes shall be rent, and his head bare, and he shall put a covering upon his upper lip, and shall cry, Unclean, unclean” (Lev. 13:45).

Thus, the Israelites ostracized one who was vilely leprous. The “covering upon his upper lip” was a sign to the public that conversation with this person was forbidden. If, by accident, anyone approached the leper, he would quickly flee at the leper’s own warning cry: “Unclean, unclean.” Such outcast lepers commonly dwelled among the tombs outside the city—the tombs affording their only shelter. Thus were lepers pathetically denied any access to the Sanctuary, and they were considered dead while yet alive—dead in leprosy. (Cp. Num. 12:12.)

Inasmuch as Jesus’ fame spread throughout Palestine, it is certain that lepers—despised, rejected, and barely existing among the waiting tombs—heard of the wonderful healings of Jesus. Moreover, when anyone, through no sin of his own, is rejected by society, he can well appreciate a friend—someone who might dare to give a tender kiss upon the cursed lip. What leper did not hope to someday see the Healer? The Bible records that some lepers were healed, and, knowing that Jesus did many miracles which are not recorded, it is reasonable to believe that many lepers were healed. In fact, Jesus said, “The lepers are cleansed” (Matt. 11:5), as though the healing was general. When a leper cried, “Unclean, unclean,” Jesus was the one and only Friend to draw closer, that He might heal a soul so woefully afflicted. Only a foolish leper would have shunned Jesus.

The Israelites were as sinfully loathsome in Christ’s sight, as was any vile leper before a priest; yet Israel, standing sin-condemned before the Priest, never cried, “Unclean, unclean.” Faithful Isaiah, though, had acknowledged: “We are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags; and we do fade as a leaf; and our iniquities, like the wind, have taken us away” (64:6). It is similarly written of all people, even of Christians: “All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God” (Rom. 3:23).

There is much difference between mercy and justice. Mercy transcends justice as the Spirit transcends the flesh. If God were only just with His children, we would be driven outside the camp of saints—there to pine away in our leprous sins, and at last to die. It is through God’s mercy that, though we are commanded to publicly testify of ourselves, “Unclean, unclean,” the true Friend draws closer—not to condemn, but to abundantly forgive and bless. “If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness” (1 John 1:9). “This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners” (1 Tim. 1:15).

Nevertheless, it seems that we, like lepers, have shamefully wandered from the camp of saints out into the tombs. The city of God is forsaken. The tombs are crowded with the dying and dead. No kinsman comes near to leave a basket of food, then hasten away. Sores canker to the bone, and gnawing pains at last strike at the vitals. Like lepers, we look in disgust upon our carnal selves, and, haunted by the half-filled tombs, we cry aloud, as if to smother persistent fears: “Unclean, unclean”—for there is nothing else to cry. “All flesh is grass”; “dying, thou shalt die”!

Is there “no man . . . no intercessor . . . clad with zeal as a cloke” to plead the cause of the dying and dead? “Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world.” “The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all.” “Come unto me,” He calls, and promises, too, “Ye shall find rest unto your souls.” There walks a Priest, not in the Sanctuary alone, but out among the tombs—a Redeemer to save the dying and the dead from tombs of eternal doom.

A blessed Friend is Jesus
 To lepers: one and nine.
 The one returns in praises—
 Christ calls, “Where are the nine?”

GOOD NEWS

By Rufus A. Curtis

WE ARE each animated or depressed by the news that reaches us daily. "As cold waters to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country" (Prov. 25:25). "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth" (Isa. 52:7). "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things" (Rom. 10:15).

The above citation of texts is God's own definition as to what constitutes His gospel. (2 Cor. 4:17, 18.) It is "good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people" (Luke 2:10). This is "the glorious gospel of the blessed God," intrusted to the ministry of Paul, the most zealous advocate of all Christ's proclaimers in the galaxy of good soldiers of Jesus Christ. (See 1 Tim. 1:11, 12; 2 Cor. 11:5; 12:11; 2 Tim. 2:3.) Because the tidings are good, and the joy, in its limitless vastness, is so great that it "worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory" (2 Cor. 4:17), "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek" (Rom. 1:16).

In the opening of Jesus' ministry at Nazareth, He "found the place where it was written, The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord. And he closed the book, and he gave it again to the minister, and sat down. And the eyes of all them that were in the synagogue were fastened on him. And he began to say unto them, This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears" (Luke 4:17-21). Jesus was quoting from Isaiah 61:1, 2, and in this instance, He gave an incontrovertible example of "rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Tim. 2:15). In quoting the second verse, He stopped His quotation in the middle of the sentence, and omitted to quote: "And the day of vengeance of our God." Had He included that statement in His quotation, He could not have truthfully said, "This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears." Many centuries have elapsed since that memorable event occurred at Nazareth, and our God who "is gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness," is still holding in abeyance that "day of vengeance," for He is "longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance." (See Joel 2:12, 13; Isa. 63:4; 2 Peter 3:9.)

It behooves us, dear brethren, in these "perilous times," when "darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people," to "watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong" (2 Tim. 3:1-5; Isa. 60:2; 1 Cor. 16:13), "therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye stedfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord" (1 Cor. 15:58). "His anger endureth but a moment; in his favour is life: weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning" (Psalm 30:5). The ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion, with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away" (Isa. 35:10).

Do not your aspirations, like Christ's include "the path of life," with its culmination in God's presence, where will be "fulness of joy," and at His right hand, where will be "pleasures for evermore" (Psalm 16:11)?

So precious is the good news of Christ, that all who hear the gospel should be inspired to "seek . . . first the kingdom of God" (Matt. 6:33), to walk in "the way everlasting" (Psalm 139:24). "The path of the just is as a shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day" (Prov. 4:18); so "ponder the path of thy feet, and let all thy ways be established. Turn not to the right hand nor to the left: remove thy foot from evil" (vv. 26, 27).

No Sorrow There

By Rufus A. Curtis

There's a place that knows no sorrow,
There's a place that knows no pain,
Where 'tis all one glad tomorrow,
And we ne'er shall part again;
'Tis a city God has builded
For His children one and all,
For He loves them and He wants them—
Don't you hear His loving call?

Oh! This world is full of trials,
And this world is full of care,
And life's bitter disappointments
Often fill us with despair.
But our heavenly Father's builded
For His children dear a home,
Where temptations never enter
Disappointments are unknown.

Are you sad and are you lonely,
Do you feel you've lived in vain?
Do not be so much discouraged,
You will surely live again.
In that City there's no failure,
There's no unbelief or fears;
God has promised to be with us,
He will wipe away our tears.

Serving the King

Article Two

By James M. Watkins

CONTINUING our study of ways in which to develop church interest and usefulness, we suggest:

(6) Church Librarian. A work that could be well advanced among our churches is some form of library effort. As a study group, we could make good use of many worth-while books to supplement our studies. Though the church or any individual can hardly afford to provide books, here is a little secret: the students of your church should be more than willing to contribute a dime for a week's use of a book. Hence, if there are ten or fifteen students in your group, the individual who will start such an effort will not only do the students a service, but can build himself a worth-while library at no personal cost.

(7) Choir Director. Those who have any special talent in this field can serve a very great need. We need to build up our vocal prowess even to the extent that we might teach certain vocal lessons. Prompt and businesslike practices, organization, and added special interests are needful.

(8) Junior Choir Director. Here, again, we are falling down by failing to interest the little folks in a life of service. A most worth-while service would be to organize children from the least to the oldest into a choir effort. What is lacked in the ability to sing will be gained in forming the habit of regular practice and tendency toward later choir effort. Allow them to serve as a choir for Sunday school. Sunday school is our teaching ground—why not teach the children all phases of service?

(9) Musical Director. As the choir director serves in vocal work, so someone needs to serve in arranging musical instruments—even to the extent of a small orchestra. There are few groups that do not have a few who could give many special selections to add to our services, but, in most cases, the benefit we reap from these talents is nil. This is a good place for someone with musical ability to organize this effort. It is also a good place for those who are able to render special selections not only to benefit themselves with practice, but help our church efforts.

(10) Class Teachers. This is a most important place for service. We cannot expect children to continue to come to Sunday school and maintain an interest when a superintendent has to get up before them each Sunday, and plead with someone to teach them. It creates the impression that we look upon them as a bother, rather than anything else. If you want to run a Sunday school out of business, a good way is to take no interest in teaching those who come. Teachers, as ministers, should serve their classes, not on Sundays only, but for seven full days. It is the extra interests that reap rewards.

(11) Berean Director. In times past, the greatest helps to our church have come from our Berean workers. In fact, much of our tract work, new members, and so forth, have come from this effort. At the present, we are losing out completely in this field. This group has done much of the work that should have been done by the churches, and if it fails we are on the downgrade. Each group needs someone to create a new and vigorous effort among the high school ages in this field.

(12) Home Study Director. The presentation and grading of special written lessons to "shut-ins" and those not able for some reason or another to attend church could be a very profitable aid to our efforts in every local group, and could better be served by the local group than by a national effort.

(13) Home Bible Classes. Here is a venture that we think should be a necessary part of our local work, not only for the good it does the classes, but for the new interest it gives the ones conducting them. The organizing of a few families into a weekly class at their various homes is the most interesting way of service we know. You will be surprised by the number of persons attending such classes who will later attend regular church classes. A complete class of nonmembers is very easily formed, and it requires very few weeks of effort until you will find them in church classes, willing to hear more. If you have enough teachers, a dozen such classes might well be organized, as each teacher is certain to have his own friends and neighbors. These classes could well double your church attendance in a year. Suggestion: keep your classes small, possibly fifteen members; too large a class loses that personal touch that is the benefit of these home classes.

(14) Entertainment Director. One of the most neglected and needed positions is that of an entertainment director. Good, wholesome recreation is a necessity for our young people. Clean recreation can better be provided by us than to depend upon the type provided by our worldly opposition. Skating parties, sledding parties, picnics, hay rides, and many other pastimes are worth while, if properly supervised. If we offer no interests in the church, we should have no complaint when the young folks go where interests are found.

(15) Dorcas Society. Dorcas Society work, whether one is a leader or simply a member, provides pleasant Christian contacts for the ladies of the church. In addition to special fund-raising ventures, many members find a special interest in remaking clothes for the needy, or working in homes that have sickness or death.

(16) Public Friends. For the men, what better service could be rendered than that by an organization of public friends? Make an organized effort to be exactly what that name implies—a friend to everyone who needs a friend. This need not imply the spending of a great deal of money. Simply make an organized effort to be present at death, fires, or disasters, quietly and unpretentiously lifting burdens from those (Please turn to page 10)

Giving Is a Gift

By T. M. Savage

---

"The promise, that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith" (Romans 4:13).

DOES the verse at the heading of this article mean anything to us who accept the Lord as our Savior, who are living in the day when darkness is cast aside, knowing that the Master is coming again, and soon? Abraham lived before Christ and had to look forward to Him, but no one can even now look back and see and know the things that add so much to our hope. We know that the faith of Abraham was truly great; but it had to be Abraham, himself; and we will have to do the same in shaping our lives for our hope of eternal life.

Abraham paid his tithe to Melchisedec long before the Law was given. Now, do not forget that Melchisedec was a high priest, or one who was God's servant on earth. Abraham paid his tithe through faith, by looking forward to Christ, for "there ariseth another priest" (Heb. 7:15)—not Melchisedec or a seed of Melchisedec, but Christ Himself.

Did Melchisedec die for Abraham? No! Yet, Abraham paid his tithe. We can look back and know the things the Master taught, the miracles He performed, and the sacrifice He made for all of us sinners. Then, can we still say that tithing is not taught in the New Testament? Does your love for the Master cause you to keep a tight hold on your pocketbook?

Does God clothe the grass of the field? Read Matthew 6:30. God will also clothe you. Abraham had this faith. We are the seed of Abraham by "adoption" (Gal. 4:4, 5), because Christ fulfilled the Law. Does this mean that because we are under Grace our burden is lighter, that Christ's mercy is expected to be of less degree, that salvation can be had by less faith? If you have never tithed, won't you please try? "Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give, not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver" (2 Cor.

9:7). If we wish to be loved of God, here is one service whereby we can win God's love.

Giving is a gift. In Romans 12:6-8, we read, "Having then gifts . . . he that giveth, let him do it with simplicity . . . he that sheweth mercy, with cheerfulness." Many of us know that the gifts of prophecy, of ministry, of teaching, and of healing are out of our reach; but God gives every Christian an opportunity to have a gift; one of giving, and one of mercy. Just think what we could do with those two gifts!

Now, do you not think that we should try to do the lesser deeds, before we seek for greater things from God? No one expects to reach the high places at one step. God has given us a few simple things to try us first; if we are worthy, then surely we can be in position to accept better things. Just the simple gift of giving, and that willingly, would greatly benefit all, yet our churches suffer for the proper willingness of this simple gift.

"Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap" (Gal. 6:7). If we give little, we will reap little; if we give much, we will reap much. We must remember that in sowing grain, if we reaped only as much as we sowed, surely no one would plant. So, you see if we give willingly, we shall reap more abundantly.

Win others for Christ. Help others over the rough places in this world! Can you now see that giving is what God wishes us to do? where faith is built on works? where we can qualify with Abraham for the Kingdom?

Maybe you have heard sermons on tithing, and thought that the minister was speaking for himself. Please forget this, and know that when you give, you are giving unto the Lord, so that fullness and cheerfulness may abound. "Keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life."

Implications of God's Three Textbooks— The Bible, Our Environment, and Man The Nature of Sin and Baptism

By David D. Blyth

IN ACTS 2:38, Peter told the people what to do to receive the gift of the Holy Spirit: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." In Mark 1:15, we find Christ preaching, "Repent ye, and believe the gospel." In Mark 16:15, 16, Christ says, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." (Also read Acts 20:21; Luke 8:10-18; John 1:7, 12; 2:22; 3:15, 16, 18, 36; 4:42.)

Can it be that repentance and belief are the same thing? If so, the greatest sin would be unbelief. What is unbelief? In Hebrews 5:11-14; 6:1, we find the words: "repentance from dead works." Unbelief may then be dead works. Just what are "dead works"? There seems to be no "work" more dead than man's efforts to solve his own problems. Youth invariably starts out to "lick the world" or "right all wrongs." Invariably, he bumps his head against the stone wall of man's selfish nature and human inertia. The setback received gives him a chance to think. He then either decides to keep bumping his head a little less hard, continually for the rest of his life, or he is able to comprehend God's plan. He sees how perfectly God rules the plants and animals, and how meddling man has all kinds of trouble controlling them. He sees that man is able to discover what is right, but cannot make the right universally accepted because he is unable to educate other men to see the right. He sees that Christ and the Bible represent the truth as revealed by the Father, and the promise that God will provide the way and means for solving man's problems. Then youth submits himself to God's rule and lives the way of Christ.

Since sin is belief in man's power to solve his own problems, is it possible for man to truly repent until he has experimented and found that man must fail? Youth must have a chance to experience man's defeat before true repentance or belief in Christ can take place. Can baptism take place before repentance or belief? Baptism should not take place until a person can say, "I know that man must and will fail to solve his problems, and I know that God has provided the way and means for solving them. I will, therefore, subject my actions to His will and knowledge. All of the goodness and rightness is contained in the Bible. From now on I will bring all of the things I experience to the Bible and God, to see if they are good. The more experiences I have with my environment and other men, the more I will come to know about what God expects me to do and the reward He has prepared for those who follow His will."

The Parental Responsibility

In a previous article, I said that man was responsible for the progressive revelation of the Bible. Man is constantly learning more about himself and his environment. Our schools are every day teaching more about man and his environment. There are, however, few teachers and school directors who comprehend God's plan and admit man's failure. Consequently, they teach that by understanding our environment and ourselves, we can eventually solve all of our problems. Therefore, they conclude that there is no superhuman deity or inspired Bible. It then becomes the work of the truth-loving parent to provide experience that will show youth that man cannot solve his problems without God's help. Even with the correct knowledge at hand, he cannot put it into effect. The parent should show how God has in the past helped the men who ask for His guidance, also that God has promised to continue guiding and directing. When youth begins to see the impossibility of man-made "salvation," it is time to let him find the perfection of God's Kingdom on earth and eternal life.

The parent should never say, "Your teacher is all wrong"; rather, he should explain that most people, including teachers, do not understand God's plan, consequently, they have only the knowledge of two textbooks—man and his environment—upon which to base their judgments. Those who realize God's plan have three textbooks—man, his environment, and the Bible—upon which to base their judgments.

Parents should not condemn knowledge as a dangerous part of the world of sin. God gave us a mind in order that we might learn and understand. The parents' task, then, becomes one of bringing about a satisfactory adjustment between the scientific facts of man and his environment on one hand, and the Bible or God's plan on the other.

Since "old dogs cannot learn new tricks," this task calls for a rejuvenation of parents. Parents must regain their openmindedness, so that when Johnny comes home with an apparent Biblical contradiction, they will be able to say, "Let us first find out what evidence the teacher has to back her statement." Having asked a librarian, a government official, or other authority, and having found the teacher to have sufficient evidence, the parent then turns to the Bible to discover how this information fits in with God's plan.

Of course, it is much easier to say to Johnny, "Your teacher is all wrong, because she knows nothing about the Bible." At what cost, though, does a parent say this? Johnny is forced to accept either the teacher's word or his parent's word. If he accepts the teacher's word, he is likely to become an unbeliever; if he accepts his parent's word, he is left with only one textbook—the Bible. You may say that this is sufficient. However, God's plan encompasses the world. The man who lives wholly within the Bible is living back in the days when the Bible was written. Since that time, God has revealed many things through the sciences of man and his environment. We are expected to know these revelations and to use them as teaching tools. Even if we wanted Johnny to accept only the Bible and to reject the other two textbooks, it would be impossible to have it so. Johnny is doomed to grow into a thinking individual. As he performs his share of the world's work, he will be bombarded by the necessity of dealing with the other two textbooks. Eventually, Johnny will become an unbeliever by accepting only the two textbooks and rejecting God's Word, or he will find the true relation that exists among the three. There is one further alternative that Johnny has. He can stop thinking. When this happens, Johnny stops growing spiritually and begins losing his grip on his conviction and salvation. The products of cessation of thinking are decadent churches where the young people fall away, and where those who remain are of one mind—that of their leader who does all of the "thinking."

Let us remember that the real Bible student never becomes so narrow that a new truth from the world will not bring forth new light from the Bible. We must also remember that Johnny does not learn by being told, but by experience and by being led to find. (Concluded)

Revive Us Again

By R. M. Abbott

---

"YE ARE the light of the world," are the words of Christ. He also said that we were not to hide our light under a bushel. Many have been faithful in being shining lights, but it is sad to notice lights that go into a spiritual eclipse, now and then. The only reason for this condition is that the body of sin comes in ahead of the body of Christ.

While the world is being led to believe there is no God, it is the great privilege and duty of the church to prove there is one God, and Christians will do this by their lives, providing their lives are perfect copies of the Word of God put into action.

Words may never convince the gainsayer or the foolish, but Christlike deeds will do miracles in convincing men that God "is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him" (Heb. 11:6). On the other hand, one failure on the part of the professing believer to live a holy life is a strong reason in the mind of the world to believe that there is no God, and that religion is only an opiate that raises false hopes.

This is not a time to "twiddle" thumbs over things of little or no import, but it is high time that we live as Jesus taught us, so our lives may be in bold contrast to worldly lives. People and nations that have turned cold against God are gaining their ends through zeal. Members of the church of Jesus Christ in some instances, however, would feel greatly embarrassed if they were required to show any display of enthusiasm over the cause they profess to love. Not that any should act as though they were enthusiastic when they are not, for "whatsoever is not of faith is sin"! There was a great demonstration when the birth of Christ was heralded, and some of the joy of the people at that time is the joy of new creatures in Christ today.

Jesus said, "Joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance" (Luke 15:7), yet on earth, and especially in the church there must be no excitement or enthusiasm when a sinner is changed from an old into a new creature in Christ.

On Saturday, the deacon and the elder and possibly the parson are shouting loud and furiously over the fact that a pigskin filled with air has gone past a goal post, but on Sunday they must not be emotional when a human being passes from death in sin to life in Christ. They seem to think it may be all right for the angels of heaven to rejoice, but it would never do for them to lose their dignity by doing so. May that person pray earnestly for God's forgiveness, who sees more reason in being enthusiastic over a game than he does when (Please turn to page 10)

New Jerusalem, the City of God

By E. O. Stewart

"There is a river, the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God, the holy place of the tabernacles of the most high" (Psalm 46:4).

THE city referred to here is, no doubt, the city for which Abraham looked, "whose builder and maker is God." It is the city which John saw in vision, descending out of heaven from God, which will find a resting place upon the new earth, after the present heaven and earth have fled from the face of Him that sits upon the great white throne, after the sea has given up its dead, and is no more.

The Prophet Isaiah spoke of the new heaven and new earth, and the new Jerusalem, saying: "Behold, I create new heavens and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind. But be ye glad and rejoice for ever in that which I create: for, behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy. And I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my people: and the voice of weeping shall be no more heard in her, nor the voice of crying" (Isa. 65:17-19). Peter, no doubt, referred to Isaiah's prophecy, when he said, "Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness" (2 Peter 3:13).

John said: "I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God shall be with them, and be their God" (Rev. 21:1-3). As John continued his description of the Holy City, he said: "He shewed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. In the midst of the street of it (the city), and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations" (22:1, 2).

If John was describing the endless state of perfection, when Christ will have delivered all authority and power to the Father, why do we have mentioned the throne of God and of the Lamb? Will the Lamb have a throne after He has delivered up the Kingdom to the Father? If John was describing the conditions as they will exist eternally, why should the river and the tree of life with its healing leaves for the nations be seen in a perfect state, where all rule, authority, and power has been abrogated? Why should the gates of the city be opened for men to bring the glory and honor of the nations into the city? (See Rev. 21:25, 26.) Why should the invitation be extended, "Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely" (22:17)? Why should it be said, "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city" (22:14)? Surely, no one would affirm that those who keep the commandments in this present age, and who will be caught up to meet the Lord in the air, and receive immortality more than a thousand years before the new Jerusalem descends upon the new earth, will have to take of the tree of life in order to live. If anyone should think so, we should like for them to explain by what means Jesus Christ and the angels in heaven have been living all these centuries without the aid of the tree of life.

In Ephesians 2:6, 7, Paul spoke of "the ages to come" for a display of "the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus." No doubt, the age to come will be the thousand-year reign of Christ, but the plural ("ages to come") stretches beyond the thousand-year reign, and reveals another age in which God is to show the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness toward us through Christ Jesus. In Romans 5:17; Paul declared that they which receive "abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness" shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ. The abundance of grace, and the exceeding riches of His grace, are God's special favors bestowed upon the church which is Christ's body during the ages to come—the special favor being the right to reign in life by one, Jesus Christ.

The moment we undertake to divide eternity into ages of time, we unconsciously show utter disregard for the meaning of words. Eternity is not composed of ages of time. An age has both beginning and end, but eternity has neither beginning nor end. "Thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity" (Isa. 57:15) clearly puts eternity in a realm all its own, with only One being as its inhabitant, and that is God. His beginningless and endless existence is the cause for the existence of eternity. It is true that Christ is made after the power of an endless life, but let us remember that He was made that way, hence had a beginning. A very popular phrase with orators is, "The ceaseless ages of eternity," which has no foundation except in the fanciful imagination of one who unconsciously disregards the real meaning of the words.

Paul spoke of a period which he termed the "dispensation of the fulness of times" in which God is to subject the universe to His Son. He wrote: "Having made known unto us the mystery of His will, according to His good pleasure which he hath purposed in himself: that in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in him" (Eph. 1:9, 10). This brings us, in thought, to the last dispensation in which time will be reckoned, for it speaks of the dispensation of the "fulness of times." The time will then be ripe for the Son to turn the Kingdom over to the Father, that God may be all in all. This cannot be done until God will have succeeded in putting all things under the feet of His Son, which is described in the Hebrew letter thus: "Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that he put all in subjection under him, he left nothing that is not put under him" (Heb. 2:8).

As long as the river of water of life shall proceed from the throne of God and of the Lamb, Christ will not have delivered the Kingdom to the Father, and as these are seen in the new earth it forever settles the question, that Christ does not surrender the throne and authority to the Father at the end of the thousand-year reign: but reigns for another age beyond the thousand years, in which the nations can be healed by the leaves of the tree of life, which is still more proof that all things will not be subdued unto Him during the age to come, but it will take the ages to come to make preparation for surrendering all authority to the Father.

The Tree of Life

By Florence E. Tuttle

---

"HE shewed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations" (Rev. 22:1, 2).

What is the "tree of life"? Proverbs 3:19, tells us that wisdom is the "tree of life," but this does not mean worldly wisdom, for it is "foolishness with God." (See 1 Cor. 3:19).

There is something lovely and appealing about a little child before he gets worldly wise, which leads him away from God.

We find in Isaiah 45:7 that God says He created evil, but in the beginning He intended that man have only the knowledge of good, if he obeyed Him. God knew that the knowledge of evil would blight and serve to destroy perfect happiness. "Of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die" (Gen. 2:17). Do we earthly parents like our children to know things that might cause them to be unhappy?

Jesus says, "Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein" (Mark 10:15). The knowledge of evil causes bitterness and grief. "Doth a fountain send forth at the same place sweet water and bitter?" (James 3:11). Verse 17 says, "The wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy."

We learn in Isaiah 8:7, Revelation 8:10 and 16:4, that "river" symbolically means a body of people. Who are these people? "I looked, and, lo, a Lamb stood on the mount Sion, and with him an hundred forty and four thousand, having his Father's name written in their foreheads. And I heard a voice from heaven, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder: and I heard the voice of harpers harping with their harps: . . . In their mouth was found no guile: for they are without fault before the throne of God" (Rev. 14:1, 2, 5). So we learn these pure people are the twelve tribes of Israel. God has promised to gather them out of all countries and bring them back into their own land. He will blot out their transgressions and remember their sins no more. (See Isaiah 43:25.)

Overshadowing these people will be the "tree of life" which is Jesus and the immortalized saints, for Jesus said to His followers, "I am the vine, ye are the branches: he that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without me ye can do nothing" (John 15:5). The twelve manner of fruit which the "tree of life" bears is represented by the fruits of righteousness:

faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, kindness, charity. (2 Peter 1:5-8.) In Galatians 5:22, 23, we find others: joy, peace, longsuffering, meekness. "(For the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness and righteousness and truth;) proving what is acceptable unto the Lord" (Eph. 5:9, 10).

Twelve symbolically, denotes completeness, as twelve months make a complete year, or twelve hours a complete day, or as the earth goes around the sun in a perpetual circle, so will the "tree of life" yield her fruits.

The work and beauty of a tree are the unfolding of its leaves; likewise, the work and beauty of Jesus and the immortal saints are the unfolding of God's righteousness, which will cover the earth and be for the healing of the nations. (See Isa. 11:9.) "As the earth bringeth forth her bud, and as the garden causeth the things that are sown in it to spring forth; so the Lord God will cause righteousness and praise to spring forth before all the nations" (Isa. 61:11).

SERVING THE KING

who need burdens lifted. Cards in public places inviting strangers in town to call for friendly help or advice would be an outstanding part of this service. The appreciation for sincere and trustworthy advice about hotels, finding help in time of need, or help in finding friends in town would be inestimable. A church group who will do this work completely will never need to suggest its Christian intentions to the townspeople, or invite people to church—they will be there.

(17) Special Projects Director. There is a growing movement to serve the Lord by many special projects, such as gardens, field-crop allotments, special poultry and livestock ventures, and so forth, the proceeds of which should go into special efforts for the Lord. Such efforts are to be highly recommended, not alone for the financial benefits derived, but because the youngest to the oldest can find a seven-day-a-week interest in these services to the Lord. Each local church has need of a director to encourage these efforts.

(18) Press Representative. This part of our work is sadly neglected. Many people would find a devotion to this work very interesting. Special items of news interest should be sent to The Restitution Herald at least once a month from each group. Proper notices of regular services should be sent to local papers, as well as reporting special activities. Handbills, and other advertising of special services, using the printing and mimeographing department, should also be a part of these duties. All of these things are necessary to promote general interest in your local work.

ABIDING IN CHRIST

By Mrs. Miles Tritabaugh

WHAT is meant by the phrase, "Abiding in Christ"? It means living in obedience, living in prayer, forsaking the world, and keeping in such close contact with Jesus that one's heart will burn within him as he walks along the journey of life with Jesus. (Cp. Luke 24:32.)

As I carefully read and think about Jesus' words, "Abide in me" (John 15:4), there comes to my mind that not only those Christians who have nearly reached perfection, but others also, can testify to His saving grace. The necessity of abiding in Christ certainly puts salvation on the basis of one's faith in the grace of God, more than it does on one's accomplishments in the realm of service.

The Apostle Peter wrote, "Grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ" (2 Peter 3:18). To grow in grace, one must abide in Christ. Peter's words are a heart appeal to blood-washed children of the Lord to grow, and to strive for deeper riches and sweeter experiences, that they will not be ashamed when they see the Savior's blessed face. We read in 1 John 2:28, "Now, little children, abide in him; that, when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming."

All Christians should remember that redemption came by the blood of Christ, and not by any good works of men. John says, "If we walk in the light, as he (God) is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin" (1 John 1:7). Nevertheless, if one's conversion is genuine, there will cease to be desire in his heart to continue wrongdoing when temptation assails. Prayer will be the key that will open the door of faith to the riches of God's infinite grace. Strength and power will be given the children of the Lord—power with man and power with God. Strength will always be given those children who sincerely and earnestly desire to "abide in him."

REVIVE US AGAIN

a prodigal comes home, or when a sinner is brought to life through the power of the Spirit of God. If the minister, in his sermon, happens to emphasize some certain truth, and someone in the congregation answers with an "amen" or "hallelujah," that person is pointed out as a fit subject for some institution where people of weak minds are kept, although a majority of the congregation may have been shouting through the week for things the world has to offer.

The Psalmist said, "Let all those that put their trust in thee rejoice: let them ever shout for joy" (5:11). Is your trust in the Lord? Has it ever produced a shout from you? If not, it must be that you haven't anything to make a noise about, though the same writer said, "Let us make a joyful noise to the rock of our salvation," and make a joyful noise unto him with psalms" (95:1).

Wherever there is much noise, a crowd will be sure to gather, and the noise will be the outward expression of inward enthusiasm. Maybe here is the reason that the church is so often complaining that the people show so little interest in church services and their attendance is so irregular.

The church may be in need of evangelism, but its greatest need is an up-to-date, Bible-directed revival. To evangelize means only to instruct in the gospel, while a revival is to bring about a renewal of life or activity. When evangelism advances into a revival, the church will show growth numerically, financially, and best of all, spiritually; but as long as it continues in a purely evangelistic state, we shall have machinery, but it will not be in operation. Until head-learning has brought about heart-living, we shall have religion without Christianity.

Jesus called His disciples and then said to them, "I will make you fishers of men." This makes us think of another incident. When Jesus needed money to pay a certain debt, he sent a servant to catch a fish, and in the mouth of the first fish caught, the needed coin was found. Now, since ministers are termed fishers, the ones converted through their preaching would be fish. It is easy to see that when enough fish are caught who will open their mouths, support will be forthcoming to meet the needs of the church, both financially and spiritually.

It does require enthusiastic fishermen to do the fishing, and they are going to do a little shouting about the catch when it is made. "Likewise, I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth" (Luke 15:10).

"Wilt thou not revive us again: that thy people may rejoice in thee?" (See Psalm 85:6.) "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him" (Psalm 126:6).

"Hallelujah! Thine the glory, Hallelujah! Amen; Hallelujah! Thine the glory, revive us again."

(their) redemption draweth nigh" (v. 28). By preparing for Jesus' coming, we shall become more and more like our Pattern, and our lives will shine brighter and brighter to travelers lost in the night—travelers who are seeking some faint ray of hope in Christians you and me.

BUILDING YOUR LIBRARY

Book Reviews

By Arlen Marsh

Maybe I'm addicted to the "Bible Books for Small People" series because one of the co-authors, Miss Mary Entwistle, once tried to teach me public speaking in the course of a hectic junior high school year.

Miss Entwistle and Miss Muriel Chalmers have produced, however, in the Bible Books series, a really valuable collection of stories for children. Each book of the series is 25 cents (published by Thomas Nelson & Sons), each is bound in heavy cardboard with gay paper jackets, and each has three-color pictures on every page.

There are twelve books in the series: The Song the Shepherds Heard; The Star of the King; When Jesus Was a Boy; The Shepherd and His Sheep; The Lost Coin; The Farmer and His Field; Samuel, the Temple Boy; Baby Moses; Isaac of the Tents; The Nobleman's Son; Jesus, Friend of Little Children; Hosanna to the King.

In most cases, the titles are self-explanatory. Some obviously are based on Biblical narratives of actual events; others are founded on parables of Jesus. In all cases, the books should be acceptable in any Church of God home—doctrinal errors, in the rare cases of their existence, are minor.

* * * * *

Something unique in religious publications is the collection of eighty watercolors by William Hole, an internationally famous artist. This, too, is published by Thomas Nelson & Sons ($6.50).

The eighty watercolors concern the life of the Christ exclusively. They are, of course, reproduced in full color, and are accompanied by explanatory notes drawn from observation of the countryside in which Jesus lived and worked.

Although the price may seem high, it is in reality fairly low for a collection of this size. The pictures may be used for class work with both children and adults, and are a very worth-while addition to the library of any Christian family. A preface by the Archdeacon of London is included in the book.

Title: Jesus of Nazareth. Binding: cloth. Chief appeal: entertaining education for children.

"Abstain from all appearance of evil" (1 Thessalonians 5:22).

Do You Know:

That alcohol is a poison? Do you believe it? Some girls and boys know alcohol injures them, but they think they are too wise to be fooled by such a mocker. No one knows who may become a drunkard, if the poison is taken into the system. It is taken in many forms, as: beer, wine, mixed drinks, whiskey, rum, brandy, cocktails, and even added to fruit punch.

No One Knows:

How much it takes to make one a slave to it, so don't drink any!

Everyone Knows:

Alcohol cannot give you the "habit" if you never touch it! Yes, and all know you cannot keep from "all appearance of evil" if you take a drink, even one, now and then.

Everyone Should Know:

The Bible teaches us to touch not the unclean thing! That "wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging: and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise!" (See Col. 2:21; Prov. 20:1.)

We Know:

That in order to be a follower of Christ one cannot be a slave to evils in this world. Anything that may "get the best of you"—or form a habit which will be very hard to break—is best left alone. We must take good care of our bodies, for they are the temples of the Holy Ghost. We must have the "rule" over our bodies. Alcohol rules when a drink is taken. It causes a thirst. More drinks add only a greater thirst. The whole being cries for "more."

When this happens, the drunken car drivers see no one walking across the road or street. More "hit and run" accidents are happening all the time. Or, perhaps there is a car coming. The drinking driver may see two cars side by side. If the driver tries to miss both cars, the car he is driving may go into a ditch, or if he tries to miss the two cars and stay on the road, he may hit the oncoming car, causing death and sorrow either way.

Do you see why we must not drink even one drop?

Paul said that life is like a race. It is also like a battle. Paul battled with his own self—his body—to make it obey his will. He said that he ran surely and fought, keeping his body under control. He ruled his body so that he would not be lost. (Read 1 Cor. 9:26, 27.)

The Best Music

"There are many kinds of music,
But the kind I like the best
Comes not from the feathered songster,
That sings beside its nest.

"'Tis not the music of the winds,
That murmur through the trees,
Nor the soul-stirring music
That comes from strings or keys.

"Though all of these be pleasing,
None brings the thrill of joy,
Like the cheerful, joyous whistle
Of a happy carefree boy."—Selected.

Lasting Beauty

There is a dazzling beauty in a snow-covered landscape. The snow, however, vanishes quickly in the heat of the sun. There is a more subdued, but deeper beauty in the green of the grass and trees of summer. It takes a lot of steady, intense heat to mar the beauty of a green landscape.

We can have a lot of fun in this world. Entertainment of all kinds holds forth in dazzling beauty for all to follow. Yet, when trouble comes, we are brought to earth with a jolt, and the beauty vanishes.

The deeper, lasting beauty is shown in a Christian life. Trouble after trouble and disappointment after disappointment can beat upon that life, and it does not fade, but seems to gather richer tones.

What have we chosen as our color? If we have chosen the elusive snow in the past, we still can change. The more lasting beauty of summer follows the shorter beauty of winter. Our source of the greater beauty is the Bible. Study!

To Be Noble, Search the Scriptures Daily

* * *

By Corine James, Piedmont, S. C.

Berea. What does it mean? Peloubet's Bible Dictionary defines it, "Well watered. A city of Macedonia mentioned in Acts 17:10-13. It is now called Verria or Kava Verria, and is situated on the eastern slope of the Olympian Mountain Range. From the fact of their searching the Scriptures, the name is now often given to classes for Bible study."

Acts 17:11 says, concerning the Jews of Berea, "These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so." They did as Jesus admonished us all to do in John 5:39, "Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they (the scriptures) are they which testify of me." Are we doing this if we go home from the Berean class, lay our Bibles and Berean books on a shelf somewhere without studying or thinking about them again until the next meeting? No! A Berean class is for the same purpose as a Sunday school class, to increase knowledge and give inspiration of the Bible. Neither can one do this if he keeps his Bible on the shelf and stays away from the classes.

We, as members of the Berean Society of the Church of God, should strive to be as noble as those Jews of Berea by using the Berean motto, the motto that they used: "Search the scriptures daily." If we do this, we would know and better understand the gospel.

If Wishes Were Horses

* * *

By Ruth V. Gesin, Oregon, Ill.

Ambitions, wishes, and desires play a great part in our accomplishments. These alone cannot fulfill our dreams, for they must be carried out by patient, hard work.

The old proverb says, "If wishes were horses, beggars might ride." If, by merely wishing, we could have what we want, our lives would be very easy. If all our ambitions, wishes, and desires were granted without any hard work on our part, we would not become self-reliant, have any reason for self-denial, or reason to stick by our ambitions and desires.

One of our great ambitions at this time is to keep our Bereans a live and growing organization in every church. This will require a great deal of hard work, patience, and self-denial. We cannot sit back quietly, fold our hands, and wish. We can never hope to derive something worth while for nothing. After all, the things for which we work the hardest are those things we appreciate most. We shall not receive any benefit from the Bereans or any other organization unless we contribute something. The rule many of us follow is—take all you can get from the church and daily life and give nothing. Remember, Christ gave His life for us.

If interest is at a low ebb in your Berean organization, perhaps it is your fault. Are you attending each service possible and taking an active part? We cannot all be leaders, that is true; but we can serve in some capacity, if only to bring a friend, speak to a newcomer, or just be present with our Bible, notebook, and pencil in hand.

Get behind your Berean organization with full force and give it all you have. This will be one good way to serve our Lord and Master. We shall gain only by what we give. We must pay the price, if our ambitions are to be realized. True greatness is the reward of service.

RIPLEY, ILLINOIS

Since January 7, Bro. F. E. Siple has been in our midst conducting a series of meetings. There was a very good attendance each night, considering that sickness and bad weather and roads prevailed. The interest was very good. We were given much food for thought concerning practical Christianity, doctrine, and prophecy.

During the meeting two young people made request for baptism, namely, Miss Shirley Logsdon, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Albert Logsdon, Rushville, R.F.D. and Acel Robins, son of Bro. and Sr. Jesse Robins, Mt Sterling, R.F.D. They are both indeed helpful additions to our membership.

Sunday, January 19, the closing day of our meeting, was a full day. We had Sunday school at 10:00 a.m., preaching at 11:00 a.m., basket dinner at noon, baptismal service at 2:30 p.m., and the last service at 7:00 in the evening. May God add His blessing to the work at this place.

Mrs. Helen Lewis, Secy.

One of the most interesting series of meetings that it has been the writer's privilege to hold was concluded Sunday night, January 19, at the Ripley, Ill., church.

During the two weeks of meetings, about every possible variety of weather was encountered: some days almost perfect for any time of year were enjoyed, and some days which rendered both the atmosphere and the side roads almost impossible of passage. But throughout it all, the attendance was surprisingly good, and an enthusiastic spirit of co-operation prevailed.

There is a great field here for a splendid church work, and we do hope and pray they may soon be able to arrange for a suitable pastor.

We were very glad to have Bro. C. E. Lapp with us on two different evenings during the meeting. On the closing Sunday night the Christian church withaled their meeting, and both the pastor and congregation came over to our meeting.

The two young people baptized on the closing day, were baptized in a pond from which we had chopped four inches of ice. We pray God's blessing upon these splendid young people, and upon the Ripley church in its efforts to serve the cause of truth and righteousness.

F. E. Siple.

TO THE BRETHREN EVERYWHERE—GREETING:

We are humbly thankful that the Father has given us the vision of work to be done in a new field. It is with prayerful hearts that we, few in number but mighty in faith and determination, announce the establishment of "The Morning Star Church of God, of the Abrahamic Faith."

We have purchased two lots in a growing community north of South Bend, Ind., which has no close church facilities; and the neighbors have welcomed us, not only as a church, but as an asset to their community. We expect, with God's help, to build next summer.

Our church is founded on the predication that the Almighty Father, being an unchanging God, has not for a single instant ceased to exercise His protective power over His Holy Word. We believe and teach that the same power that inspired holy men of God to write the Holy Scriptures, has guided those men who translated from the original manuscripts.

We affirm that that guiding power has kept the book we know as "The King James Bible" free from all translator's errors, and that it is from cover to cover inspired from God, and, as such, is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness.

We organized with a membership of twelve, a number fraught with blessed significance. Recently, two more have added their membership. We are meeting for Sunday school at the home of Bro. and Sr. Dale Rouch, 1710 Medora St., and are holding our Bible classes in the several homes, having an average attendance of sixteen. We trust that God will increase that number. We know that we are admonished to sow the good seed, and the Lord of the harvest will give the increase.

Following are our church officers: elders—Dale E. Rouch and Paran W. Anderson; deacons—Harold and Lonnie Anderson, and William Porter; deaconesses—Minnie Porter, Nora and Deloris Anderson; secretary—Fannie M. Anderson; and treasurer—Doris Rouch.

Fannie Anderson, Secy.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

At the annual business meeting of the Los Angeles church, the following officers were elected: trustees—George J. Rahn (three years), E. C. Railsback (two years), and J. Homer Overholser (one year); elders—E. C. Railsback, and G. E. Marsh (by virtue of election to service as pastor); deacons—C. Carlson, Clyde Long, and Wayne Thompson; secretary—the writer; and treasurer—Betty Rae Hummel.

The treasurer's report showed the most prosperous condition that this congregation has ever experienced.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

New students enrolled in the Bible Training School for the second semester are: Vernelle Lawrence, Omaha, Nebr., Emory Macy, Troy, Ohio, Robert Hardesty and Warren Knodle, both of Oregon, Ill.

The influence of the Bible is evidenced in the many Bible names which are to this day commonly used among us, such as: James, John, Martha, Mary, Peter, Paul, Thomas, David, Ezra, Sarah, Esther, and many others—even an occasional Adam! In this issue of The Herald, a Ruth appears on the front page, which reminds us, too, that an Orpha, Eunice, and Paul are co-workers with us daily at the National Bible Institution.

Bro. Richard E. Parish, a member of Golden Rule Church of God, Cleveland, Ohio, will graduate from high school January 30. He hopes to enroll next fall in the Bible Training School.

Bro. and Sr. George Loudenslager, residents of Golden Rule Home, are visiting at Hammond, La., and other places in the South. Later, they will motor to California.

"We have the little Golden-Rule-Home bank on a pedestal near the front of the church. . . . We told the brethren we thought it well to use the bank on their birthdays. . . . Sunday morning, there were five who braved the ordeal, and another added his offering in the evening."—S. J. Lindsay, Tempe, Ariz.

Sr. T. J. Ellis, Waterloo, Iowa, is visiting with friends in California.

Bro. and Sr. Leslie LeCrone and son Charles Claar, enroute to Gary Ind., from Kenuard, Nebr., visited with friends in Oregon, Ill., January 23.

"We can surely see the working of the hand of God in all that is transpiring. We think daily, 'How long shall it be to the end of these wonders?' (Daniel 12:6)."—Eldridge Ellis, Waterloo, Iowa.

SPEAKING OF HEAVEN

By D. G. Harvey

"Every word of God is pure . . . Add thou not unto his words, lest he reprove thee, and thou be found a liar" (Proverbs 30:5, 6).

"I AM SO homesick for heaven," sang a radio voice. "What a beautiful thought!" many have said. "Beautiful," perhaps, but so unreasonable! How could one be sick for a home he has never seen? Could any location not seen, be a home? If one is to be homesick for heaven, one must spend a part of his life there. Our radio voice must be an angel (Matt. 28:2), or perhaps Lucifer (Isa. 14:12), or our Lord, Himself (John 6:33). As no such claims are made, we must then conclude that the voice on the air is that of a man, a mere mortal.

Do his words ring true, or does this man attempt to bring comfort to those in misery, without knowledge? In speaking of heaven, God has said, "The heaven is my throne, and the earth is my footstool" (Isa. 66:1). Is it in reason, then, that mere man, a mortal, can ever ascend to God's throne? Man has no right, and no promise to ascend to God's throne. Jesus said, "No man hath ascended up to heaven" (John 3:13). Again speaking to His faithful disciples, He said, "Whither I go, ye cannot come" (John 13:33).

If such men as Peter, James, and John could not follow their Master to the Father's throne, into heaven itself, how could you or I be so rewarded? Let us await Christ's coming, for He said, "I will come again, and receive you unto myself" (John 14:3).

"They that trust in the Lord shall be as mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth for ever. As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people from henceforth even for ever" (Psalm 125:1, 2).

THE STREET

The street placed its hands on the life of a boy--
The seething street, the soulless street.
It stole all his portion of childish joy--
The street.

The church did not see the boy as he passed--
The busy church, the bustling church--
Did not see his face growing old too fast--
The church.

The Christ looked down from the heavens high--
The risen Christ, the reigning Christ--
And said, "For these least I was glad to die"--
The Christ.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The publishing committee of the National Berean Society has prepared and is now offering for sale a Christian Worker's Kit. This Kit contains sixteen of the leading tracts published by the National Bible Institution and National Berean Society, grouped as they support the seven essentials of doctrine outlined in the general tract, "The Church of God."

The Kit is designed to be exactly what the name implies, a work-kit for the Christian worker. The tracts are of uniform size, neatly packed in an attractive envelope. The names of the tracts and their authors, together with the section of the general tract they supplement, are printed upon each Kit so that, as tracts are given out in reply to questions, others may be obtained and the Kit kept complete. These tracts are not odds and ends, but the best we have on their respective subjects. When better ones are available to support these thoughts, they will be included in following Kits. It is an attempt to give the Christian worker, at one third their value, a complete sample of what we have for use.

Your use of this item will determine its future as a permanent feature. So, if you feel obliged to help that fellow next door find his answers, be sure to order one now. The cost is only twenty cents, and you may order from the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Ill.

James M. Watkins,
Chairman Berean Publishing Committee.

TEXTBOOKS FOR SALE

As the first semester of our Bible Training School ends, we have a few textbooks that were not used by the students and which we offer for sale, postpaid, to any of our brethren who may be interested in keeping pace with our School. Should orders be received for more books than we have on hand we shall, nevertheless, fill all orders by ordering anew from the publishers. The books are:

- "The Apostolic Age" by Purves $2.50
- "The Twelve Minor Prophets" by Robinson 2.00
- "Story of the Christian Church" by Hurlbut 1.00
- "Principles of Religious Education" by Fickes 2.00

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him, (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

"This gospel must first be published among all nations" (Mark 13:10).

The gospel of the Kingdom must be preached in all nations before Jesus will return from heaven. Every member of the Church of God can help to evangelize the world. Order a good supply of tracts; then send them to your friends. It costs nothing to slip a tract into a letter, and it may "save a soul from death."

The following tracts and books, most of them written by men prominent at some time in the Church of God, are for sale by the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Illinois. Send a self-addressed envelope or postage for tracts not priced. How many can you use?

"That They May Be One"

John 17:11

By S. J. Lindsay

WE may search the writings of man from ancient times to the present day, and we shall find nothing to compare with the sublime sentiments of the prayer uttered by our Lord as recorded in John 17. From youth, He had been in close touch with the Father. The Father had given Him a task to perform, and until that task was performed He could not be the Savior of the world. The task He had been given was to bring Himself into oneness with the Father by overcoming perfectly the flesh, until He had overcome all things. At the time of this prayer, He had completed all this, so that He could say, "I have glorified thee on the earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do." He stood before God the first perfect creature that had ever lived on the earth, for He was made perfect through the things He had suffered.

Two things Jesus was to finish. The first, living perfectly, had been completed; there still remained the other. Here was a life that could accomplish the second task. Jesus now could say what no other man that ever lived could say: "No man taketh it (life) from me, but I lay it down of myself" (John 10:18). When Jesus rebuked Peter for his attack on the servant of the high priest, He said to Peter, "Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to my Father, and he shall presently give me more than twelve legions of angels?" Jesus understood perfectly the will of the Father, and was at one with Him. He and the Father were one even unto the death of the Son. It was when Jesus stood thus at one with the Father, that He gave utterance to this remarkable prayer. Why, then, should we not find it the sublime masterpiece that we do?

Brother and Sister S. J. Lindsay

In this prayer, Jesus was not concerned in Himself, but He was concerned for the welfare of others. He Himself had overcome all things and need not be concerned further about that, but here were those whom He had chosen, who were still in the trial period of their existence. He was about to go out of the world to the Father, but these were to remain in the world and to pass through the refining process necessary to make them, also, at one with the Father. Jesus knew through what experiences they must pass to attain unto that oneness. He knew that they must have the help of the Father to attain this, so He prayed the Father on their behalf. His prayer, however, went beyond the Twelve. He prayed also for them who would believe on Him through their word. That reaches down to you and me. Throughout this prayer, His thought was of all who would believe on the Son of God through the words the Twelve would speak. It was a petition meant for ME. Christians are to be at one with Christ, and in being at one with Him, we become also at one with God. This oneness is set forth elsewhere as the oneness that exists between husband and wife.

Paul writes as follows: "I am jealous over you with godly jealousy: for I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ" (2 Cor. 11:2); and, "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be (Please turn to page 10)

Realities

Everything God created was real, and nothing was ever created not real. It is man, foolish in his wisdom, who has imagined intangible ghosts, imps, and apparitions that see clearly in the dark though they have no eyes, that hear every whispered secret though they have no ears, that talk without tongues, feel without feelers, and run without runners. God made the heavens and earth, but man, not content with God's creation, has filled the universe with his nothingisms. He who knows there are ghosts because he has seen some was either frightened by pranksters in sheets, or needed a Daniel to interpret his dream. It is, moreover, possible that he who knows there are ghosts because he saw some, lacking a story to keep himself in the party, lied.

Jesus was real both before and after His resurrection, and it was He who died that was raised from the tomb—"neither his flesh did see corruption" (Acts 2:31). He ate before the disciples, and they "handled . . . the Word of life" (1 John 1:1). The ascension of Jesus, too, was most real. He foretold that He would ascend, and men saw Him "carried up into heaven" until "a cloud received him out of their sight" (Acts 1:9). It is this same Jesus which, according to God's promise, "shall appear the second time" (Heb. 9:28). While the disciples "looked stedfastly toward heaven as he (Jesus) went up" (Acts 1:10), two angels said to them: "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus . . . shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven" (v. 11). We conclude that Jesus will be as real when He returns as He was when He ascended. He will be a very real Christ, and a very real King to rule in a very real Jerusalem, which will be the capital of a very real Kingdom. "At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord; and all the nations shall be gathered unto it" (Jer. 3:17).

"This same Jesus" will return, not as a ghost-King of a spirit world, but as a literal "KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS" (Rev. 19:16) to have "dominion . . . from sea to sea, and . . . unto the ends of the earth" (Psalm 72:8). By what reason can anyone suppose that Jesus' Kingdom will be any less real than is He? Pray, tell! just what would comprise a spiritual Kingdom? If I, a real being, must be faithful to win a reward in the Kingdom, what other than myself should receive the reward? No ghost will have any right to that for which I labor. After Jesus' resurrection, He denied being a spirit, saying: "A spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have" (Luke 24:39), and "we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him" (1 John 3:2), for He "shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body" (Phil. 3:21).

Did a ghost ever eat either real or spiritualized bread? Jesus prophesied: "Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God" (Luke 14:15)—indicating real joy in a real Kingdom of the real and only living God.

Furthermore, the goal being so definitely real, Christians should sense that they are running a very real race. There are truths to learn, enemies to forgive, passions to be controlled, sinners to be converted, and sheep to keep in the fold. "Let us lay aside every weight . . . and let us run with patience the race that is set before us."

Take Your Choice

A young man who was a member of the Church of God tried to explain to his lady friend what the Bible teaches concerning death. He quoted to her such texts as: "The dead know not any thing" (Eccl. 9:5), "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest" (v. 10), "In death there is no remembrance of thee (God): in the grave who shall give thee thanks?" (Psalm 6:5), and "The last ENEMY that shall be destroyed is death" (1 Cor. 15:26).

The young woman was somewhat shocked and disappointed to learn that her friend believed in the sleep of the dead until the resurrection morning, and exclaimed:

"Why! John! Are you a soul sleeper?"

John, not at all ashamed of his convictions and knowing that his friend believed in eternal torture of the wicked, calmly replied:

"Yes, Darling, I should rather be a soul sleeper than a soul roaster."

They married, fortunately, but not each other.

Essential Doctrines

By C. E. Randall

A SERIES of lessons on the "Essential Doctrines of the Church of God" is being given by the writer at the weekly Bible classes held in the district of the Niagara Falls, New York, and Fonthill, Ontario, churches. By request, these lessons are being prepared in article form for the readers of The Restitution Herald. The lessons are being presented in the form of propositions, and will be thus submitted for the study of the readers. Each lesson is independent of the others, but the propositions will be numbered from the first lesson.

It is our understanding that the doctrines of the Church of God are essential to salvation. If the doctrines as taught by the Church of God are not vital to salvation, then the reason for our being a denomination ceases to exist.

As these lessons are about "Doctrine," our first approach will have to do with the subject of "Doctrine." There are some Christians who seem to have a horror of doctrine. There is, however, no need to be frightened at the mention of doctrine. The word "doctrine" simply means "teaching." If there appears in any of the propositions a Scriptural weakness, it will be appreciated if the one observing such, will communicate with the writer.

PROPOSITION 1: Every believer should be able to give a Bible reason for the hope, which he or she possesses (1 Peter 3:15).

The ability to give unto every person inquiring of our faith a Bible reason for it, is necessary, if our spirituality and hope are to be worth while. "I think," or "I believe," does not carry the weight of, "Thus saith the Lord," or "It is written." We should not only be always ready to give a reason for our hope, but direct our conversations so as to encourage people to ask concerning our faith.

PROPOSITION 2: The doctrine of Jesus astonished the people (Matt. 7:28, 29). His teaching was a "new doctrine" (Mark 1:21, 22, 27).

The people were amazed because His teachings were new and different. Had Jesus fallen into line with the teachings of the day, and had He taught the same things as set forth by the rabbis, there would have been no particular or just reasons for His voice. He gave new and unproclaimed truth.

PROPOSITION 3: The doctrines of Jesus were in opposition to the doctrines of men (Matt. 15:7-9).

The commandments of men are to perish (Mark 7:7-9; Col. 2:20-22). This means that those who hold to these doctrines will likewise perish (Matt. 15:14). Jesus stated that those who worshiped according to the commandments of men, were worshiping in vain. Vain worship is a worthless service. It does not, however, free us from responsibility.

PROPOSITION 4: The apostles taught certain doctrines which were strange to the people (Acts 2:42; 5:28).

These doctrines were strange to the people, because they were different than the teachings of their religious leaders. The truth of God has always seemed strange to the masses, due in a large measure to its scarcity. According to Scripture, this dearth is caused by the teaching and preaching of vain philosophies, rather than the doctrine of the Lord Jesus Christ.

PROPOSITION 5: The teachings of Paul, the apostle to the Gentiles, were considered by the Athenians as something "new and strange" (Acts 17:19-23).

It is stated of the people of Athens, that they "spent their time in nothing else, but either to tell, or to hear some new thing." All the religions of the world were to be found in Athens. In comparison to all the religions known to man, the gospel which Paul preached was different—so different, that it was both "new" and "strange." If the pure gospel was so unlike the religions of Paul's day, is it to be wondered if people of our generation think of the gospel of the Kingdom as being diverse and something new and strange?

PROPOSITION 6: No other doctrine than that which Paul preached should be given to the people (1 Tim. 1:3).

This doctrine is termed "sound doctrine" in verse ten of the above chapter, and in chapter 4:16, it is stated as being the medium of salvation. In his second letter to Timothy, Paul foresaw the day when his teaching concerning the church and the Kingdom would be supplanted by fables. (Read 2 Timothy 4:1-4.) Those who teach other doctrines than the gospel which Paul preached come under a curse (Gal. 1:6-9).

PROPOSITION 7: The doctrine of Christ is the only teaching worthy of our moral, physical, financial, and spiritual support (2 John 9-11).

According to the foregoing scripture, anyone who teaches or preaches another (Please turn to page 11)

Christ's Coming, Our Only Hope

By Howard H. Hawkins

PAGES upon pages have been written about the return of Christ, yet this subject is always new. When Christ comes again, the history of human governments and nations will close. His coming will mark the passing of man's disastrous, age-long rebellion against God, and bring about a new order of righteousness to cover the earth.

Men should rejoice to know that Jesus has been here once. This is the biggest fact in history, and our lives are worth living because of it. Then, add to this, that His coming has brought the only genuine hope of a future. If He had never come, we could see only darkness, gloom, and hopeless despair ahead of us.

It is a sad condition that so many today scoff at the promise of a personal return of Christ. How can men deny the truth of His return? Men cannot dispute it, though they may ignore it. Living as we are in the "last days," we may learn of His return at any moment. Why is He coming back? Jesus went about preaching "the kingdom of God" (Luke 4:43). This was only another way of preaching about the "restoration" and "restitution" of the things God has promised through the prophets. If, therefore, we wish to know what the promises are, we must consult the prophets' writings—inspired of God. They tell us that "the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea" (Hab. 2:14; Isa. 11:9).

It is imperative that Jesus return to the earth to establish the Kingdom of God and to restore the throne of David, if lasting peace is to be established. Jerusalem will then be "the city of the great King," and the "law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem . . . nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more" (Micah 4:2, 3).

The foregoing text gives us a glowing picture of the age to come, when Christ "shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth . . . all kings shall fall down before him: all nations shall serve him" (Psalm 72:8-11). We find the same testimony in the New Testament: "He must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet"—"when he shall have put down all rule and all authority and power," and "the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." (See 1 Cor. 15:24-26.)

The Word of God is emphatic in its teaching that Jesus is now in the heavens, but will come again. It is emphatic that when He comes, He will establish the Kingdom on the ruins of the kingdoms of men, and bring peace to this troubled world. If we believe the Bible, we cannot accept any other gospel than that which has been handed down to us.

Men today, more than ever before, ought to stop to realize that even the present degradation of the world demands the return of Christ. If there is anything that needs His return, surely it is this poor, sin-cursed world of ours. Look at it; and what do you see? A world everywhere racked with suffering and out of joint; a world convulsed with misery in which nations have been wiped out in a few days or weeks, hundreds of war vessels have been sunk, and human lives destroyed upon a scale heretofore unknown. We are witnessing the greatest upheaval in all recorded history, all entailed by the curse of sin; a world now in its very death throes, with even hope vanishing.

We know that the world is afflicted with difficulties—political, social, and religious. It is merely self-deception to ignore them. To ignore them does not put them out of existence. Humbly speaking, they appear to be unsolvable, as man has been trying for centuries to solve them, yet he is constantly baffled.

There is a way out, for God "hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead" (Acts 17:31). "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever" (Dan. 2:44).

Many great and speedy events are taking place at this very hour, and, no doubt, they will be more rapid as we are nearing the end of "Gentile times"; but the greatest event of all events will be the return of Christ, which will fulfill the one hope that has sustained His followers in all ages since His first coming. He has been expected in all generations. He was looked for eagerly in the days of the destruction of Jerusalem, when His followers were persecuted as they have been so often persecuted at the hands of their enemies. His followers have always been stimulated and encouraged by this belief.

The fact that the disciples believed that the return of their Master was near at hand strengthened their hope, and their lives were transformed. The nearer the realization of one's hope, the greater becomes one's faith, for nearness brings clearness and a greater depth of appreciation. Although they died, "not having received the promises," their lives were abundantly enriched because they believed that Christ's return was near at hand. We, of this day, seeing what is transpiring, should rejoice and say He is at the very door.

The many prophetic signs indicate that we are nearing the end of a great time period which will soon usher in

His coming. Nothing else can cure and restore our ruined world, but Christ at His coming. He alone can regenerate this old, sin-smitten, tear-stained earth. The second coming of Christ is the world's greatest need; it is the solution to the political, social, and economic problems that now harass mankind.

"Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh" (Matt. 24:44).

Nebuchadnezzar's Other Dream

By Gerald L. Cooper

---

THE dream of Nebuchadnezzar concerning the great image has been a theme for countless sermons and articles, but another dream that he had is not as well known. It is this latter one that we wish to consider at this time. It is recorded in Daniel 4, being written by Daniel as it was told to him by the dreamer, several years after its fulfillment.

Nebuchadnezzar dreamed a dream that he could not understand. Remembering the prowess of Daniel in the telling and interpretation of his "image" dream, he called in the Prophet to make known to him the meaning of his latest. The dream was this: Nebuchadnezzar saw a tree—a very tall tree—in the midst of the earth, and it grew and flourished. Its leaves were fair, the beasts of the field had shelter under it, even as the birds of the air nested in its branches. He also saw a "watcher" come down out of heaven who gave orders to "hew down the tree, and cut off his branches, shake off his leaves, and scatter his fruit: let the beasts get away from under it, and the fowls from his branches: nevertheless leave the stump of his roots in the earth, even with a band of iron and brass, in the tender grass of the field; and let it be wet with the dew of heaven, and let his portion be with the beasts in the grass of the earth" (Dan. 4:14, 15). Also, God said, "Let his heart be changed from man's, and let a beast's heart be given unto him; and let seven times pass over him" (v. 16).

Daniel explained the dream to Nebuchadnezzar, telling the great king that the tree represented him, that he was a great king and that the whole earth was dependent on his existence. His greatness was to end, however, and he was to be driven from his kingdom, being forced to live with the beasts of the field, and to become as one of them for seven years.

As Nebuchadnezzar later told the story, he said that this is exactly what happened to him, but even as there was to be a stump of the great tree left in the ground, that his kingdom was saved unto him and he once again took charge of it. At the end of those seven years, while he was as an insane man dwelling with the beasts of the field, Nebuchadnezzar was abased and was not the proud king that he was before. In fact, God had sent this affliction on him in order that he should see that God would do with him what He desired, and that God controlled the kingdoms of the earth. The lesson "took" with the once proud king, for he proclaimed to all the world that God was the Ruler of the universe, ending with these words: "Those that walk in pride he is able to abase."

As we view history from the time of Nebuchadnezzar forward, we see that the words that God told him in this memorable dream have ever been true. The words to which we refer are: "That the living may know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and setteth up over it the basest of men" (4:17). It was only a little while after, that the grandson of Nebuchadnezzar lived—the infamous Belshazzar who was even more proud than his ancestor had been. We remember that God abased him, giving his kingdom to the Medes and Persians. History tells us that this kingdom was later taken by the Greeks, and still later by the Romans. In every case, when the nations began to think they were greater than God, He took away their power and gave it to someone else. Coming down to the history of our own country, we find that the man who was the ruler of our colonies in 1776 lost his right to rule them. Many of us remember the menace of Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, who openly boasted that he intended to conquer the world. God had a different idea, though, and we truly believe that God debased the Kaiser as He did Nebuchadnezzar of old.

Now we have a menace that is the greatest that the modern world has known, and perhaps the greatest in history. I mean, of course, the man who is known as Der Fuhrer, Adolf Hitler. Yes, (Please turn to page 11)

Serving the King

Article Three

By James M. Watkins

CONTINUING our study of ways for the church to better serve the King, we suggest:

(19) Educational Director. Christians forget many times that the church is an educational institution. In order to educate others, we must keep abreast of things, ourselves. Each church needs someone to foster such things as extension courses, special lectures, Bible motion pictures, museum trips, teachers' training classes, and so forth. It is surprising how little such things would cost by co-operating with others; also, how many outsiders will help support worth-while lectures at your church.

(20) Athletic Director. A sound body creates a sound mind. Both are a glory to God. We see no reason why we need to neglect this item in our labors. Basketball, football, baseball, tennis, and other sports can all be used to add interest and make better young men, especially if they are used to encourage fair play, good will, and right living.

(21) Musician. An indispensable part of our services is that of a regular musician. It is necessary, in fact, to have one for both church and Sunday school—the Sunday school musician substituting for the church. This is a good way to lead a younger person into later service.

(22) Gospel Unit Director. Much good can be done and interest created by a gospel unit. This group, organized to put on special church services at schoolhouses and unused churches, can provide much interest for the talents of the young people. Singing, instrumental, and speaking talent can be used, and they will add interest and benefits to all.

(23) Quartette, Trio, Etc. Many churches are known simply by a well-organized quartette, or trio. It is the best way for a few, with even a reasonable amount of talent, to accomplish a great deal of good. Every church should have at least one group of this nature. With a small amount of talent and proper practice, this would not be difficult to accomplish.

(24) Janitor. The most important job in the mechanics of our church is that of being a good janitor. Upon him rests a great responsibility. A tidy house, well cleaned and dusted, lights on at least thirty minutes ahead of services, room at a comfortable temperature, are all necessary for a successful service of any sort, and have a profound effect upon the newcomer.

(25) Ushers. No church is too small to make use of ushers. They are indispensable at funerals and special occasions and, of course, must be ready before needed. For this reason, we should encourage a regular system of ushers. A pleasant greeting, a manifested interest in their coming to church, and consideration for their placing are most necessary things to the continued interest of strangers—a very good way for either young men or young ladies to serve.

(26) Junior Church Director. A most valuable asset to most churches would be to have someone direct a junior church. These services could be held in the basement or Sunday school rooms while the morning services are being held, thus relieving the parents of a divided attention between services and the smaller children. It would, in addition to various teaching efforts, encourage a habit among the children of staying for regular services in later life.

(27) Sunshine Friends. Many organizations have a system of drawing secret names of individuals, and then devoting their attention to them—bringing little rays of sunshine by small special gifts, and little secret kindnesses. What better place to practice such an idea than among our brethren? Either organizing or taking part would be very worth while.

We do not pretend to have covered the field of the possibilities of service to the King. Neither have we included the regular duties of officers of churches or Sunday schools and the many unique and original ideas that may be presented as a part of their duties. We propose to simply ask the one who says there is nothing left to do, or no progress in doing it, one simple question: Would any church which put into practice the foregoing fail to be an outstanding success? The answer, of course, is clear—we would lead every church in every vicinity. Are we dying on our feet because there is nothing to do, or simply because we have done nothing? We have, nevertheless, covered probably no more than fifty per cent of the things that could be done.

The Church of God needs a working church. Where we have working groups, we need never fear that there will be a lack of continued interest. Neither need we fear any prospect of dissention. The busy person has no time to concern himself with the faults of his fellows, he is too pleasantly occupied with his own interest in service. We hear much of the proverbial faultfinder; personally, I question if there is any such thing. In most cases we rate him thus, simply because we have not given him something in which to become interested. There is a place for every interest or talent in the King's service. Help the faultfinder or the knocker to find his interest, show him that the labor suggested by his interest is just as worth while as the other person's. In most cases, he will then be so interested in his part of the general success that how much or how little the other person accomplishes won't mean a thing. (Please turn to page 9)

Sinai or Jerusalem?

By A. Nichols

---

"Prove all things; hold fast that which is good" (1 Thessalonians 5:21).

SOME people believe that God gave the seventh-day Sabbath and the Ten Commandments to man from creation, and that they are binding on all of God's people through all ages. We read, however, that "the law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawless and the disobedient" (1 Tim. 1:9). Moreover, Paul tells us that the law was added because of transgressions. For how long? "Till the seed should come to whom the promise was made" (Gal. 3:19). According to Exodus 16:4, God gave the children of Israel a law to see if "they (would) walk in (his) law or no." In Deuteronomy 5:2, 3, we read: "The Lord our God made a covenant with us in Horeb. The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day." "Wherefore then serveth the law?" (Gal. 3:19). Paul answered his own question in these words: "It was added because of transgressions, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made. . . . Is the law then against the promises of God? God forbid: for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law. But the scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe" (Gal. 3:19-22). Now we have found that the law was given, the Seed came. No one will deny the "seed" as being Jesus Christ!

In Romans 10:4, we read: "Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." To everyone? No! Just to those "that believe." Dear reader, we want to say to you that all of the promises of God are of no effect to you if you do not believe what He says.

We read in Colossians 2:14: "Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross." 2 Corinthians 3:7-14 shows positively that the glory that attended the giving of the law to Moses was "to be done away." Romans 7:4, 6, shows that we are "dead to the law" and that the law is dead that we might, or could, be "married to another." We believe that when a man or anything dies, it is dead. The foregoing shows that the law is dead. We are asked, What then? Are we better than they? The answer is, No, in no wise, for we have proved that both Jews and Gentiles were all under sin, but "now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ. For he is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us" (Eph. 2:13, 14). We are all one people in Christ.

In Hebrews 7:12, Paul tells us: "The priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law." "Now, after ye have known God, or rather are known of God, how turn ye again to the weak and beggarly elements, whereunto ye desire again to be in bondage? Ye observe days, and months, and times, and years. I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed upon you labour in vain" (Gal. 4:9-11). "Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law, do ye not hear the law? For it is written, that Abraham had two sons, the one by a bondmaid, the other by a freewoman. But he who was of the bondwoman was born after the flesh; but he of the freewoman was by promise. Which things are an allegory: for these are the two covenants; the one from mount Sinai, which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar. For this Agar is mount Sinai in Arabia, and answereth to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children. But Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all" (vv. 21-26).

"Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage" (Gal. 5:1).

"Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit; after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ" (Col. 2:8).

Now, dear reader, we have not tried to harmonize God's Word, but to find harmony in it, by which Word we are all to be judged—whether we believe it or not.

Women of the Bible

By Grace Skinner

THE women of the Bible are for the most part Hebrew women, so we shall now consider some of the Hebrew women's general characteristics. Beginning with the Hebrew woman as a bride, we learn the betrothal was made by relatives of the bride and groom. Representatives of each were the contracting parties, and the engagement was ratified by oaths and presents to the bride. By this procedure, the couple was, as far as the law stated, married, but to complete the ceremony the bridegroom must come someday with festive rejoicing to take his wife home. The bridegroom prepared himself with garlands and spices. The bride would don a veil which covered her from head to foot, having a peculiar girdle, and a chaplet on her forehead, beneath which her hair was left to hang free. The ceremony itself was celebrated with pledging the wine-cup (fruit juice was called wine in those days), an invocation of blessing, and the company marched around the bridal pair chanting hymns and throwing rice. The home-going was in the evening, the bridegroom and his attendants playing on musical instruments and carrying torches accompanying the bride and her maidens to the new home. Festivities followed, which lasted from seven to fourteen days, and at which the guests were provided with garments at the expense of the host. (Evidently there was no depression at that time.)

To the Hebrew bride, the word "home" was one stirring deep affection and of great significance, for the goal of every true homemaker was to "become a mother of men from the Lord." Childlessness was considered a curse as well as a sorrow; witness the prayers of such persons as Rachel (Gen. 30:1), Hannah (1 Sam. 1:9-11), and Elisabeth and Zacharias (Luke 1:13), parents of John the Baptist.

The influence of the women upon their children was much greater than that of the men, due to the rather general practice of polygamy. We are thankful today that polygamy is frowned upon, and that our children may know the more balanced training that both parents give. However, it is still a woman's task in many homes where the husband and father must spend most of his waking hours at work away from home. How fortunate are farm boys in this respect, that they may work side by side with their fathers, during their formative years, and learn from them the many things not taught in books.

The dress of women of those times differed little from that of the men. Both wore an inner, tight-fitting, sleeveless garment, reaching only to the knees, and comparable to a present-day shirt, but called a "coat." When wearing only this garment, the wearer was reckoned naked. A second "coat" which extended to the feet and had full-flowing sleeves was worn over it. For a wrap, an outer mantle or shawl, resembling a scotch plaid in shape, was used to wrap the body, or throw about the shoulders and over the head. For women, this was ample to cover the head and feet.

Much jewelry was worn. There were bands of various metals used as anklets, often joined by a chain, causing the wearer to take short, mincing steps and making a tinkling sound as she walked. We read about them and the opinion the Prophet had regarding them in Isaiah 3:18-20. Armlets, too, were popular. They were bands of ornamental metals used in such profusion as to almost cover the arm in the case of the wealthy; they were very heavy. Bracelets for the wrist were worn by both men and women, and their value marked the wealth of the wearer; thus, they became symbols of vanity or pride of wealth.

Earrings, generally of gold in circular shape, sometimes with jewels attached, were worn by nearly everyone. They were originally adopted as amulets having some superstitious significance, and they were often of great weight.

The veil, as an article of dress, was not worn except by a bride during the ceremony or by a woman of loose moral character.

There were no shoes; everyone wore sandals. A sandal was a mere sole fastened to the foot by thongs. These were often embroidered. They were not worn in the home, but only when walking abroad. They were always removed in sacred places and before important persons.

One very odd service women were hired to perform was that of making a great clamor with musical instruments and loud, wild cries at funerals. This was done, of course, by professional mourners.

A custom of the women was to gather at the wells in the evenings to fill their pitchers for household use, and to exchange news of the day. Here, also, they sang their songs, perhaps to the accompaniment of the lute or timbrel. To draw water from the well was an honored task. The gathering and carrying of firewood upon their heads was another feminine task.

The ideal Hebrew woman is described in Proverbs 31:10-31. She is described as a helpful, loyal wife, a wise mother, a generous mistress to her servants, a faithful friend, a successful business woman, and a religious influence in home and community. Does she not fulfill nearly all the aspirations of the well-balanced homemaker of the twentieth century?

So much for Hebrew women in general. Now, let us consider the life story of one in particular? Let us study Miriam, the sister of Aaron and Moses and a religious leader of her time, as an example.

All know the story of how Miriam watched patiently while her baby brother, Moses, was adrift in the rushes, until Pharaoh's daughter found him, and how she came up and offered the suggestion that the baby have a Hebrew nurse, and then bringing their own mother. There is implication of her attractive personality, and the ability to inspire confidence in the fact that the Pharaoh's daughter listened to her advice and acted according to it, at once.

In the second scene of her life story (Ex. 15:20), we find her using her gift in music, her skill in song and dance (which was used religiously at that time) to lift the people emotionally, to inspire them morally, and fill them with religious fervor. Miriam was well fitted to be an adviser to Moses and his assistant as leader of the women.

Miriam was possessed of the quality known as "religiosity," a trait seen in many of the great Jewish leaders. She had a deep sincerity and was sometimes called a prophetess. Her sincerity was emphasized by the next act of her history. This is recorded in Numbers 12. Moses, it seems, had married an Ethiopian woman, whose influence was feared and resented by Aaron and Miriam. So, they desired to take the leadership away from Moses. We find them speaking thus: "Hath the Lord indeed spoken only by Moses? hath he not spoken also by us?" (Num. 12:2.) The story continues to tell that the Lord was displeased, and Miriam was stricken with leprosy. Aaron pleaded with Moses to restore her, admitting they both had acted foolishly. Moses prayed for Miriam and she was healed after seven days. There is a reference here which shows Miriam's influence upon the people, for in spite of her reproof and discipline, they waited patiently for her recovery. Scripture records, "The people journeyed not till Miriam was brought in again" (12:15).

It seems somewhat strange that not one of these three great leaders—Moses, Aaron, and Miriam—was permitted to enter the Promised Land, but Miriam died at Kadesh, near the place where "there was no water for the congregation" until Moses was given power to bring it forth from the rock. (See Num. 20:1.)

Miriam was the wife of Hur, son of Caleb, and one of the captains of the divisions of the people, made by Moses. Josephus wrote that Miriam was in her fortieth year from the Exodus when she died, that a public funeral was held for her, and that for thirty days the people mourned her death.

There have been many beautiful interpretations of Miriam in art, music, and literature. William Hensel's, "Miriam Leading Her Maidens" is a fine picture; Schubert's "Song of Miriam" adapted by Novello is listed among classical music; and Thomas Moore paraphrased the ode attributed to her and Moses, with rhythmic accents:

"Sound the loud timbrel o'er Egypt's deep sea!
Jehovah has triumphed—His people are free.
Sing—for the pride of the tyrant is broken,
His chariots, his horses, all splendid and brave,
How vain are their boasting! the Lord hath but spoken,
And chariots and horsemen are sunk in the wave.
Sound the loud timbrel o'er Egypt's deep sea!
Jehovah has triumphed—His people are free."

Lastly, we wonder, was not Bezaleel, the man so skilled in many kinds of artistic workmanship in constructing the Tabernacle, Miriam's grandson? We read in Exodus 31:1, 2: "The Lord spake unto Moses, saying, See, I have called by name Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah: and I have filled him with the spirit of God, in wisdom, and in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship, to devise cunning works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass, and in cutting of stones, to set them, and in carving of timber, to work in all manner of workmanship."

You will notice he was the grandson of Hur, who was the husband of Miriam. If he was also her grandson, surely her versatile talents were passed on to him.

So it is, lives of great men and women remind us that we, too, may pass on some good if we will serve the Lord with all our hearts, for "only he who serves is truly great."

SERVING THE KING

The chronic complainer is largely the product of an inferiority complex. It is induced by the feeling that the other person's labors are considered more important than his own. Perhaps, he feels that the other person is a better teacher or speaker. In most cases, we are guilty of making these matters worse by constantly pushing and encouraging the talented person, while we make no attempt to find a niche for the less talented to fill. Out of the many things that can be done in service, we should encourage the backward person to find his place and satisfy his interests. Such a person will never worry over how good a teacher the other fellow is, if there is a subconscious knowledge that he can outplay him on the coronet. The blame then rests on us, if we have failed to encourage him to play the coronet. Do not look upon the complainer as one having no desire to serve, but remember that in most cases he is a person whose desire to serve has not been gratified.

So, again, I stress our need as a one hundred per cent working organization. Put every man who shows an interest in something to work, regardless of what his interest is. If you haven't any such work, jump at the chance to provide such. Our biggest fault is that when the backward person timidly suggests a possibility, those in front immediately frown him down and, accordingly, there are no more suggestions from that source. Immediately chronic symptoms of complaint begin to develop, and we frown harder and the matter gets worse and so on. Perhaps it was our fault in the first place. Where there are one hundred jobs for one hundred people, there is one hundred per cent interest. Where there is one hundred per cent interest, there is no need to worry about the outsider not being interested in you. When the outsider is interested in you, there is no need for the attendance director—but do not put him out of work; encourage him to join the ushers, you will need an extra one.

Kingdom-in-your-heart theology, close relative to ghostology, has a pitifully lame interpretation of such scriptures as Isaiah 60; Ezekiel 34:11-16, 23-26; Daniel 7:27; Matthew 19:27-30; Luke 1:32, 33; and Matthew 25:31-46.

"THAT THEY MAY BE ONE"

holy and without blemish. So ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself. For no man ever yet hated his own flesh; but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church: for we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones. For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh. This is a great mystery: but I speak concerning Christ and the church" (Eph. 5:25-32).

To make a successful home, the husband and wife must work together as one. In fact, it cannot be home where there is division of purpose between the two. In the foregoing language, Paul used the one to aid the other. As husband and wife must be in harmony to succeed, so Christ and the church must be one in purpose. The Revelator expressed the figure nicely in the following language: "I John say the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband" (Rev. 21:2). Again: "There came unto me one of the seven angels which had the seven vials full of the seven last plagues, and talked with me, saying, Come hither, and I will shew thee the bride, the Lamb's wife. And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and shewed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God" (vv. 9, 10).

In this picture we see not only the perfected Son of God, but the perfected body of Christ, His wife. Here is oneness in perfection. The Son of God has perfected Himself, and His bride is now in process of perfection. They who would become members of that holy body must be engaged in that work now. There will be no wood, hay, nor stubble in that holy city. When Jesus comes, the church will go out to meet Him. These are the new Jerusalem, the holy city, seen coming from heaven by John.

ARE YOU SLEEPING?

By Barbara Fish

"Jonah was gone down into the sides of the ship; and he lay, and was fast asleep" (Jonah 1:5).

GOD asked Jonah to go to Nineveh and preach against the wickedness of the Ninevites. Jonah, believing he could flee from the presence of the Lord, set sail for Tarshish. Jonah felt so confident that he would soon be away from the Lord's sight, that he went into his cabin and fell asleep.

As we who are Christians journey along our paths, let us stop—even this very day—and check ourselves. Perhaps a few years ago we gave our lives to our Father and were baptized. At first we studied our Bibles, prayed, and went to church, but as the newness wore off, did we not gradually forget God and slip back into our old paths? God knows whether we remained true or whether we have forgotten, for in Psalm 139:1-4 we read:

"O Lord, thou hast searched me, and known me. Thou knowest my downsitting and mine uprising, thou understandest my thought afar off. Thou compassest my path and my lying down, and art acquainted with all my ways. For there is not a word in my tongue, but, lo, O Lord, thou knowest it altogether."

As we examine ourselves today, do we find that we are asleep, or are we getting drowsy? If we are, let us once again go to church, for God's Word is the sweetest alarm clock we can ever hear.

"All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the Lord: and all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before thee. For the kingdom is the Lord's: and he is the governor among the nations" (Psalm 22: 27, 28).

ESSENTIAL DOCTRINES

doctrine than the "doctrine of Christ," creates in so doing "evil deeds." In other words, it is wrong to present a different message. Now, it is plainly stated, that anyone who bids "God speed" to such a promoter of other doctrines, is also a party to the "evil deeds." There is one way and only one way to avoid such participation, and that way is, to keep aloof from all "divers and strange doctrines" (Heb. 13:9).

The foregoing propositions have been set forth for the purpose of establishing the vital principle of sound doctrine. That which constitutes sound doctrine must follow later. The first step in acquiring truth is to recognize its absolute importance. When truth is considered essential to our being set free (John 8:32), then it is that we begin to develop a love for truth. With the coming of love for truth, our hearts and minds begin to reach out, search out, the answer to Pilate's question, "What is truth?"

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S OTHER DREAM

Hitler is now on the top of the proverbial heap, and has openly defied God and man. God, though, is not asleep, neither has He forgotten the lesson that He gave to the ancient king—that lesson which was intended for all men. God will abase Hitler in His own good time either by raising up another earthly king, or, better still, by sending His Son, Jesus Christ, who will rule the world in righteousness.

Thus we see that God, through the medium of a dream to a wicked king, has shown us that He is the ruler of the universe. It seems that there is another lesson in this story. You will remember that in the dream of Nebuchadnezzar, the stump of the great tree was to be left in the earth, with a band of iron and brass around it. To the king this signified the fact that after seven years of insanity, he was once again to be the ruler of his kingdom. To me, it typifies Israel. God has scattered the nation of Israel, once the proudest and greatest nation of all, throughout the world, but He has around the "stump" of that nation the "iron and brass band" of His promise that He will regather the Israelites, and bring them into their own land, Palestine. This He will do, for His Word is sure and true. Then will come the time when the nation of Israel, as well as the nations of the world, will say as did Nebuchadnezzar of old: "Those that walk in pride he is able to abase."

That it may please God to abase those who walk in pride today, and usher in the Kingdom of His Son, is my earnest prayer.

BUILDING YOUR LIBRARY

Book Reviews

By Arlen Marsh

Odd, perhaps, to review in this column books as well known as those published by the National Berean Society. But are they well known? Only a few have used them as they should be used, and still more rare have been those who have applied the books to most of their potential uses.

There are five lesson books in the Berean Senior Series. Each is twenty cents a copy. Prepared by the best talent in the Church of God available at the time of publication, the books cover the Bible doctrine more exhaustively than any other printed matter issued by this denomination or its affiliates.

Other churches have their theologies—dull, voluminous tomes of great technical accuracy and of little interest to anyone except the ministry. The Church of God, on the contrary, has the Berean books—which may be used by anyone who wants to know more of the gospel.

Some have recognized this fact and have put it to good use. One Sunday school supplies its teachers with complete sets of the Senior Berean Series to help those teachers in presenting doctrinal ideas to their students in the course of their regular Sunday school lessons. A good many Church of God ministers, Bible class teachers, and writers have drawn liberally upon the books for information regarding texts and outlines on specific subjects, from the unity of God to the behavior expected of young Christians in everyday living.

Personal study of the Bible obviously can be given powerful help by the combining of Berean lessons. Unguided study not only is difficult, but sometimes is definitely misleading. Few have either the time nor the reference material to assure to themselves really thorough study of any given Biblical topic. The Senior Berean Series fills the need for satisfactory help.

There is no important doctrinal subject not touched at least once—and most subjects are covered several times from several different angles and by different authors—by the Berean books. Outlines are authentic; few Biblical references are mismentioned, and these only because of extremely rare typographical errors.

"He said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead" (Luke 16:31).

The Pharisees

Jesus had been talking to His disciples about a "steward" (Luke 16:1). The disciples were not the only ones who heard Jesus say, "No servant can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon" (Luke 16:13). "The Pharisees also, who were covetous, heard all these things: and they derided him" (Luke 16:14). To "deride" means to "scorn" or mock; the Pharisees "made fun of" Jesus, didn't they?

It was then that Jesus told the Pharisees that they were the ones who tried to make everything they said and did seem righteous and just before men. However, God saw their hearts! He can't be fooled. He knows all about us!

The Pharisees wouldn't accept Jesus. They were the ones who lived in luxury and the best of everything from a worldly view; but, sad to relate, they forgot to give their hearts to God. They went to church often and made long prayers in public to let men know they prayed. The Bible teaches us to pray, but it tells us to go into our closets and shut the doors. That is the place for our longer prayers: all alone with no one to see or hear us except God who hears us through Jesus Christ, His Son. (Matt. 6:6.) We read, also, that we should not use vain repetitions, but the Bible assures us that God knows what we need, even before we ask Him! (Matt. 6:7, 8.) So our prayers should be sincere and full of thanksgiving.

This educated group of Pharisees, as I picture them were the "socially correct" of their day. Their garments were correct and spotless; their manners, very proper outwardly. They forgot judgment, mercy, and faith, though, for Jesus told them so (Matt. 23:23). They were not genuine, for Jesus called them "hypocrites" (Luke 11:44).

The Rich Man and Lazarus

This is a parable. It could not be taken literally. There are different beliefs among our own church people as to what it teaches.

We know that the rich man was very self-satisfied. He forgot a great many things he should have done. He was too proud to notice the man at his gate. We find his earthly blessings coming to an end with his death. How very uncertain are worldly riches and very foolish is the one who puts his trust in such things. (Matt. 10:23, 24.)

There is a verse which tells us to hide God's Word in our hearts, so that we will know right from wrong, and not sin (Psalm 119:11). We are not to keep the Word hidden there, though, we are to share it with others—preach, teach, and live it. (Psalm 40:9, 10.) When we have done our best, we shall still be able only to cry, "I am poor and needy"! (Psalm 40:17.) Yes, this rich man forgot to do many things.

Many liken Lazarus to Christ. He was wounded for our sins. His feet and hands were pierced for us; His side riven. He was not accepted by His people.

"Abraham's bosom" is a term used in that day to tell the seat of honor. The people reclined rather than sat to eat. The one who was in "Abraham's bosom" was the first one. Lazarus was held in Abraham's bosom when He died.

The Gentiles were called "dogs" before they were given the opportunity to accept Christ.

The rich man, in torments, began to think of his brothers. Father Abraham told him that they had Moses and the prophets. If they wouldn't hear them, they would hear no one, even though one should "rise from the dead." Jesus died and was raised before their very eyes, yet not accepted! May each of us accept Him today.

God First

* * *

By Zelda Cooper, Fredericktown, Mo.

God should be put first in everything. He will bless His people in many ways, if we do this. In Matthew 6:33, Christ told His disciples: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."

We put God first in our prayers. He is all-powerful and merciful. We look to Him for everything in this life and in the life which is to come, and have so much for which to thank Him. So many of us are continually asking for blessings, and forget to be thankful for what we have.

We should never fail to attend church services, always being ready to serve in our places—giving our lives wholly to Christ. We should never let anything come before God's work.

In Matthew 26:41, Christ warned Peter, saying, "Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation." Paul, in 1 Thessalonians 5:22, exhorted the people to "abstain from all appearance of evil." When we repeat the Lord's Prayer, we are praying for God to lead us not into temptation. Do we earnestly mean what we say in all our prayers?

In Biblical times, God asked for the firstfruits and the best of everything. He asked for the best lamb of the flock—one without spot or blemish. We know, also, that He was to get a tenth of all the income, or a tithe. We read in Malachi 3:8: "Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings." God wanted His people to take this tenth out first, and not do as some people of today who pay their other bills first and give what is left to God's work.

We are looking forward to the day when Christ will come to set up His Kingdom upon the earth, as is prophesied in Revelation 22:12: "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." We must put God first, that we may be worthy of this reward in the Kingdom.

Strike Two!

Do you know that Frances Munshaw wrote the article, "Why Go to Church?" which appeared on the December 3 Berean Page, and that Iris Hall and not Virginia Smith wrote, "At Eventide" on the January 14 Page? We do now, and we apologize and retire to our den to ponder over 1 Corinthians 14:40.

The Broad View

* * *

By Arlen Marsh, Los Angeles, Calif.

Ever since practical psychology came into power as a driving force behind business and personal relations, religion has degenerated—and is continuing to degenerate—in many sections into the merest drivel.

There have come into being, for example, such groups as the National Conference of Jews and Christians, dedicated to the proposition that all men, whatever their distinctive interpretation of the Bible, are equal in the sight of God. Tolerance—the broad view—has come to replace acute denominationalism in the field of religion the while nationalism has come to replace tolerance—the broad view—in the field of international relations.

Actually, nothing could be more opinionated than true Christianity. Tolerance has no part of it. When tolerance enters, dogma departs: and when dogma departs, so do multitudes of church members who are honestly seeking spiritual guidance, and not simply an improvement in their relations with the heathen Chinese.

Jesus was not tolerant. He excoriated the Pharisees as few Nazis could excoriate democracy. He laid down dogmas which, He said, must be accepted by the Jews and by those Gentiles who would later follow Him. And He predicted the age-long punishment of the Jews for their crime of not accepting Him and His teachings. Tolerance was something for those who would condone hypocrisy, for those who would fraternize with Roman idolaters as freely as they would with Jewish monotheists.

Paul emphasized this whole idea when he declared in Ephesians 4:14 that we should "be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine." Tolerance, as the United Church of Canada discovered to its sorrow, breeds ignorance—a discarding of all the old doctrines in favor of the broad view, in favor of an ethereal belief in Something Better but in Nothing Much. Bigotry, practised wisely, confirms belief; tolerance destroys it.

EDEN VALLEY, MINNESOTA

It has been a long winter, and we have had plenty of snow. It began snowing November 11, and we have not seen the ground since. We now have from two to five feet of snow, blocking the way of the people who live in the country, but our attendance has been good. Sunday, January 12, we had about a hundred attendants out for church. We hope to keep them coming, and when the roads are open again would like to see the church filled.

We are planning some special meetings to begin March 24 and ending April 13. We hope that much good can be done, and that new ones will be added to the fold.

The parsonage has been blessed with new built-in cupboards, sponsored by the Ladies' Aid. They add to the looks of the kitchen, and help the wife as she prepares the pastor's meals.

We have a wonderful spirit here. The people have been very good to us, as we have been doing our little bit. While we were visiting in Illinois, the local church had a wood-cutting bee, and a good supply of wood awaited us when we returned. We hope to be able to repay this in some way.

The newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Elmo Gaspar, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Mills, and Mr. and Mrs. Carrol Bennett, are as busy as beavers about their new homes. May the Lord continue to bless them.

The new additions to the church are showing the way to some of us older ones in faithfulness. Old Man Winter has a difficult time blocking their road to church. More like these is what we need. Guy and Augusta Mills will soon be in their new home. These two are living examples of what it means to "walk in newness of life" (Rom. 6:3, 4).

Walter Wiggins, Pastor.

TEXTBOOKS FOR SALE

As the first semester of our Bible Training School ends, we have a few textbooks that were not used by the students and which we offer for sale, postpaid, to any of our brethren who may be interested in keeping pace with our School. Should orders be received for more books than we have on hand we shall, nevertheless, fill all orders by ordering anew from the publishers. The books are:

- "The Apostolic Age" by Purves $2.50
- "The Twelve Minor Prophets" by Robinson 2.00
- "Story of the Christian Church" by Hurlbut 1.00
- "Principles of Religious Education" by Fickes 2.00

POMONA, CALIFORNIA

The brethren in Pomona conducted a series of meetings in January. On January 19, it was our privilege to speak to them on the subject, "Christ in a Changing World." We did our best to awaken them to the times in which we are living, to the changing conditions which mean nothing to worldly people, but which are so significant to us who are looking for the coming of our Lord. At the end of the meeting, Bro. Norman J. Macleod, president of the California Conference, presented us with a lifelong ministerial certificate, for which we are thankful. Previous to this, we had for six years held a ministerial certificate from the Pomona church. We believe that to those whose ears and eyes are open to the truth, it makes very little difference whether or not a minister has a stamp stuck on him, but it helps to have credentials if a minister wishes to apply for a clergy fare certificate on a railroad, crossing the international line, receiving bus privileges, or traveling abroad.

Our only ambition is to continue to serve the brethren, as we have done in many places. The Lord willing, we shall be starting sometime in April on another round trip across the Continent. Our blessed Lord has most wonderfully supplied all our need, and we can firmly trust Him another year—come what may.

J. Eagleston.

MRS. LAURA E. LAKE

Mrs. Laura E. Lake, beloved widow of the late Jasper M. Lake, who died in Morris Hospital of Plymouth, Ind., on January 20, 1941, was born near Richard Center, Ind., on August 26, 1860. She was the daughter of Amos and Mary Price, and was united in marriage with Jasper M. Lake, November 2, 1879. On June 22, 1937, he preceded her in death.

Both had long been members of the Church of God at Argos, Ind.

Surviving are eight children: Mrs. Nora Helsel, Plymouth; Mrs. Clara Stults, Argos; Mrs. Orley Zerbe, Hanna; Orvin, Argos; William, Plymouth; Arnold, South Bend; Mrs. Olive Kline, Culver; and Milburn, South Bend—all of Indiana. There also survive her seventeen grandchildren, and fourteen great-grandchildren: a brother, Ora Price, and a sister, Rosa Irwin, besides other relatives.

Funeral services were held in Poplar Grove church which was filled to capacity by friends of the surrounding neighborhood where Sr. Lake's entire life had been given. Aware of approaching death, the deceased asked that verses 25, 26, of the 11th chapter of John's Gospel be used as expressive of her faith and hope. Rev. Kline, of Chicago and Plymouth, assisted in the services.

In the hilltop cemetery beside the church, on its gentle slope toward the rising sun, near her lifelong residence, Sr. Lake was laid away in death, beside her life's companion, to await the call of Him whom she confidently trusted to be "the resurrection and the life." May the time till He calls be short. F. L. Austin.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

Bro. James McLain's new address is 46 Pencil Road, S. E., Grand Rapids, Mich. We pray that he will have a profitable pastorate with the Pennellwood brethren.

"I hope to be able to do more real active work for Christ this year."—Virginia R. Kincheloe, Fairfax, Va.

Bro. Alan McLain has been elected reporter of the Bible Training School for the second semester, and will begin his new duties as a scribe next week.

Bro. Charles Netts reports that he has twenty-five more miniature Golden-Rule-Home banks about ready to send out to Sunday schools which may wish them. They may be obtained for the asking; write Charles Netts, 192 White City Trailer Park, St. Petersburg, Fla.

"Born to Bro. R. M. Cox and wife, January 7th, an eight-pound girl. They gave her the name of Helen Aletta."—W. G. Moffet, Magazine, Ark.

"Father and Mother Williams plan to leave for Rochelle next Tuesday night and arrive in Rochelle, Ill., Saturday (February 8)."—G. E. Marsh, 230 W. 103 St., Los Angeles, Calif. . . . We shall be glad to have them back home.

Bro. and Sr. Charles Lindsay, formerly of Pearl City, Ill., are now residing at Milford, Kans.

"I should like to express my appreciation through The Herald of Sherman P. Baker's article, 'Thoughts Concerning Christmas, or Yule Day.'"—Florence E. Tuttle, Geneva, Ohio.

The Frederick Claussen family, accompanied by Orpha and Diane LeMasurier, all of Oregon, Ill., visited Sunday, February 2, with Sr. Claussen's sister, Pearl Hatton, Granville, Ill.

"An evangelist cannot do much in a dead church, except to preach its funeral."—Nancy B. Robison, Arkansas City, Kans.

BERRY — WEGNER

It was the pleasure of the writer to unite in holy matrimony Miss Lilly Berry of Lester Prairie and Martin Wegner of Waconia, Minn., Sunday, January 26, using the double ring ceremony. The wedding was performed in the Church of God, Eden Valley. Miss Mildred Kirkpatrick was bridesmaid, and Edwin Wegner was best man.

We pray God's richest blessings upon this new home; they will be at home to their friends at Waconia, Minn.

Walter Wiggins, Pastor.

LEVI COFFIN

In the passing of Bro. Levi Coffin, a life-long resident of Lenawee County, near, Adrian, Mich., the church has laid away one of the last of the once active members of the group which Bro. Levi Chase preached for through many years. This church constituted the first pastorate of the present writer, and the home of Bro. and Sr. Coffin was the writer's first home there when he served that church as a boy-preacher.

Bro. Coffin died of pneumonia on January 20, 1941. Had he lived four more days he would have been eighty-three years of age.

On December 30, 1885, he was married to Hattie Stephenson of Saline, Mich. To this union only one child was born, a daughter who became Mrs. James Preston and died thirty-two years ago. The only grandchild, Miss Ruby Preston, was reared at the home of Bro. and Sr. Coffin, and she lovingly and faithfully cared for the aged couple in their declining years. Sr. Coffin died in the summer of 1938.

This loyal and generous couple were among the best workers of the onetime active church near there, and after the local church disbanded they continued to co-operate with the state and national work. They were like a father and mother to the writer, and were loved and respected by a multitude of friends and neighbors.

Today they sleep side by side in beautiful Oakwood Cemetery, awaiting their Master's return.

F. E. Siple.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The publishing committee of the National Berean Society has prepared and is now offering for sale a Christian Worker's Kit. This Kit contains sixteen of the leading tracts published by the National Bible Institution and National Berean Society, grouped as they support the seven essentials of doctrine outlined in the general tract, "The Church of God."

The Kit is designed to be exactly what the name implies, a work-kit for the Christian worker. The tracts are of uniform size, neatly packed in an attractive envelope. The names of the tracts and their authors, together with the section of the general tract they supplement, are printed upon each Kit so that, as tracts are given out in reply to questions, others may be obtained and the Kit kept complete. These tracts are not odds and ends, but the best we have on their respective subjects. When better ones are available to support these thoughts, they will be included in following Kits. It is an attempt to give the Christian worker, at one third their value, a complete sample of what we have for use.

Your use of this item will determine its future as a permanent feature. So, if you feel obliged to help that fellow next door find his answers, be sure to order one now. The cost is only twenty cents, and you may order from the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Ill.

James M. Watkins,
Chairman Berean Publishing Committee.

GEORGE BRIDGES

Funeral services were conducted Friday, December 6, at the Church of God in Eden Valley, Minn., for George A. Bridges, aged pioneer resident who died suddenly at his home north of Eden Valley.

Bro. Bridges was born in North Dakota, August 5, 1861, was one of the first white children born in the then "territory" of North Dakota.

He leaves a widow, Mrs. Nettie Bridges, one son, three daughters, thirteen grandchildren, and eight great-grandchildren.

Bro. Bridges was a well qualified Bible student. At one time he attended the Mendota, Ill., Adventist college.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer, using the words of Job 19:23-27. Interment was made at Annandale, Minn., where he awaits the call of the Life Giver at the resurrection morning.

Walter Wiggins.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him. (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

MRS. CHRISTINA KREIDER

Funeral services were held December 21, 1940, for Mrs. Christina Kreider. Mrs. Kreider died at Fergus Falls, Minn., having been in poor health for the last few years.

Mrs. Kreider was born in Indiana, September 15, 1857. She made her home in Minnesota since 1899. Since her husband's death in 1927, she had lived alone.

The writer conducted the funeral service from the Church of God in Eden Valley, using Proverbs 31:10-31. She was laid to rest in the Eden Valley cemetery, to await the call of the Master.

Walter Wiggins.

Mysterious Melchizedek

By F. E. Siple

ONE of the most interesting things about the Bible is its unique way of teaching some of its lessons. Some things are taught in direct statements, some by illustrations in parables, and some by types or by certain personalities or facts in the life of one person being shown to illustrate points in the life of another. This latter appears to be the main purpose for which mysterious Melchizedek is mentioned.

So little is told us in the Bible about Melchizedek that it would be impossible to construct a life story of consecutive events, yet some very outstanding things are told about him. Things of such import are told that one is amazed and begins to realize that some definite purpose was behind such a revealing of facts.

That definite purpose is plainly and frankly stated by Paul in Hebrews 7:17, and by the Psalmist in Psalm 110:4. So far as a historical figure is concerned, Melchizedek means little to us—Moses revealed only a few facts in Genesis 14:18-24. We would be only a little wiser, and not the least benefited, even to know whether such a person ever lived or not. From the standpoint of typical value, however, and insofar as Melchizedek illustrated the life and work of Jesus, he at once becomes of great importance.

Further, since Jesus is the outstandingly important character of the Bible, whom to know is life eternal, it must be recognized that any person or fact which adds to a better understanding of Him is, indeed, important. It is only by making use of the many lessons and illustrations of Jesus that we are able to comprehend Him in His completeness.

The mystery surrounding Melchizedek was deliberately arranged, that the facts given might accomplish their purpose. Had his father and mother been named, the occasions of his birth and death given, and his ancestry stated, the force of the whole illustration would have been lost.

He would then have become just a man in the eyes of men. In presenting him as though he had neither father nor mother, beginning nor end, he holds his place not because of human ancestry, but because of God's appointment to a position. Hebrews 7:3 thus presents him in such way that he is a proper type or illustration of Jesus, who came not according to the human order of birth, but divinely produced by miracle of God.

F. E. Siple

Not being a descendant of any known line of mankind, Melchizedek fitly illustrated Jesus as a priest, not on the line of Levi, nor according to the Levitical priesthood. That the Levitical priesthood had failed to bring necessary aid and succor to the human race is testified by Jesus' parable of the good Samaritan. Mankind lay robbed and half dead by the side of the road. The Mosaic law and the priesthood had come and passed by, leaving man still prone and helpless. It was then time for the priest "not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life" (Heb. 7:16).

Another astounding fact about Melchizedek is that he was superior to Abraham. The great man of faith, and father of the faithful, stood and stands revered by all, yet he, himself, paid tithes to Melchizedek and bowed for a blessing. Paul explained in Hebrews 7:6,7, that "the less is blessed of the better." In this, again, Melchizedek becomes the proper illustration of Jesus, the Priest greater than Abraham.

Perhaps the one point in which our mystery man of God most completely illustrated the mission and purpose of Jesus is that he was both king and priest. In early Israel, Moses had charge of the executive end, and Aaron the religious. These were very separate and distinct tasks, and through the later history of the nation Saul and succeeding kings took charge of (Please turn to page 11)

“Male or Female”

God inspired Moses to write concerning an Israelite's peace offering: “If his offering for a sacrifice of peace offering unto the Lord be of the flock; male or female, he shall offer it without blemish” (Lev. 3:6). Though the Passover lambs were males only, one errs in concluding thereby that all sacrificial animals were males. The important specification of a peace offering was that the animal be without blemish—whether “male or female.”

The Apostle Paul seemingly taught that women should have no voice in the church. He said: “Let your women keep silence in the churches; for it is not permitted unto them to speak . . . and if they will learn any thing, let them ask their husbands at home: for it is a shame for women to speak in the church” (1 Cor. 14:34, 35), and “Let the women learn in silence with all subjection . . . I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence” (1 Tim. 2:11, 12). Plainly as these texts seem to teach that women should be utterly silent in church, a study of God's calls to womankind and of the historical background of these texts reveals that God is no misogynist.

In Old Testament times, Deborah, not only a woman, but the wife of Lapidoth, was called of God to be a “prophetess” (Judges 4:4), and forty years she served as one of Israel's best judges. Several other Old Testament women were likewise called of God to serve publicly as prophetesses: Miriam (Ex. 15:20), Huldah (2 Kings 22:14), Noadiah (Neh. 6:14), and the wife of Isaiah (Isa. 8:3). God did not command these women to sit decorously at home, listening to their husbands.

In the New Testament, we read of the Prophetess Anna, who served in the Temple (Luke 2:36-38); of the repentant woman who, before several witnesses, kissed Jesus' feet and washed His feet with her tears—thus winning the praise of her Lord (Luke 7:37-50); of Dorcas, whose service in the church extended far beyond her own doorstep (Acts 9:36); of Priscilla who, with her husband, “expounded . . . the way of God more perfectly” to Apollos who was already “eloquent . . . in the scriptures” (Acts 18:24-26), and Paul wrote of her: “Greet Priscilla and Aquila my helpers in Christ Jesus” (Rom. 16:3). Likewise, Paul wrote of another woman: “Greet Mary, who bestowed much labour on us” (Rom. 16:6). We read of Philip's four daughters who could prophesy (Acts 21:9), and of Phebe who was “a servant of the church . . . at Cenchrea” (Rom. 16:1). Second John was addressed to “the elect lady and her children” (1:1). Philippians 4:3 suggests that Christian women, even in Paul's time, did more than sit at home to “learn any thing” from their husbands, for the Apostle greeted certain women—evidently public workers—saying: “Help those women which laboured with me in the gospel . . . whose names are in the book of life.” First Corinthians 5:11, 13 indicates that women publicly prayed and prophesied in the “churches of God” (v. 16); and 1 Timothy 3:11 is, at least, a fair shot in the dark to license the office of deaconess.

How, then, shall we interpret Paul's learn-at-home texts? The church at Corinth was in several respects a naughty child of Paul's. There were divisions there (1 Cor. 1:10-13), unthinkable fornication (5:1), and so many of the zealous sisters tried to talk in tongues, that Paul cried out: “God is not the author of confusion” (14:33), and, “I speak with tongues (languages) more than ye all: yet in the church I had rather speak five words with my understanding . . . than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue” (vv. 18, 19). He further shamed Corinth's noisy women with the plain charge to “keep silence,” and to “let all things be done decently and in order” (v. 40). “It is a shame for women to speak in church” (v. 35) really meant: “It is a shame for women to chatter in the church” (Int. Bible Com.). Only by quieting the women, was the Apostle of God able to get in “five words” edgewise.

Basically, 1 Timothy 2:11, 12 does not prohibit a woman from public Christian service, but teaches that, first of all, she must be discreet, modest, a keeper of the home, and “not usurp authority over the man.”

“There is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus” (Gal. 3:28). Whether “male or female,” every soul offered to God must be “without blemish”—character means tenfold more to God than sex!

A Study on Immortality

By C. E. Randall

CONTINUING our study of essential doctrines of the Church of God, we consider several propositions relative to immortality.

PROPOSITION 8: Bible subjects should be expressed in Bible language, and in harmony with all Scripture. "To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them" (Isa. 8:20).

This proposition is set forth as an introduction to this study. If all the basic teachings concerning immortality were set forth in Bible language, the confusion that now surrounds this subject would be eliminated. It has been a traditional policy with the Church of God to speak where the Bible speaks, and to be silent where it is silent. Our mission is to "preach the word." If we confine ourselves to this task, and limit ourselves to the Word of God as being the only authoritative source of the gospel of "life and immortality," our access to the truth that makes men free will be insured. To us, a "thus saith the Lord" should be the end of all questioning.

PROPOSITION 9: Immortality is something to be sought by patient continuance in well doing. "To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honour and immortality, eternal life" (Rom. 2:7).

A proper understanding of the life and work of Jesus Christ is vital to a proper faith—a Biblical faith. Unless one understands immortality, he cannot apprehend the life and work of Jesus. Well did W. Brookman, in "The Words of Eternal Life," published by J. O. Woodruff, say: "Here I am bold to say that no one can clearly understand and declare the great and central doctrine of the atonement, and Christ's wonderful love, whose views upon life and death and immortality are clouded by this false philosophy of 'natural immortality.'" If we are to seek after immortality, it is evident that we are not already by birth or nature in possession of it. The seeking implies non-possession. Belief in the natural immortality of the soul removes the cause for seeking immortality, as admonished by Paul. Further, it eliminates man as being in need of immortality; and, therefore, makes him independent of Jesus Christ in respect to eternal life. In this connection, the eminent theologian, H. H. Dobney, said: "The Bible is silent on the point of an absolute and unconditional immortality of all men."

PROPOSITION 10: Immortality originates with God, and He, therefore, is said to be the sole Possessor of this blessing. "Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see: to whom be honour and power everlasting" (1 Tim. 6:16).

This is the second occurrence of the word "immortality" in the Bible. In the first instance it was set forth as something for which men should seek. Here, it is applied to God. Olshausen, the commentator, said: "The doctrine of the immortality of the soul and the name are alike unknown to the entire Bible." Not once does the Bible speak of man as being immortal.

Elder J. M. Stephenson, one of our early workers, in his book, "God's Plan of Salvation," says, "Where may we expect to find the origin or existence of a deathless nature in man, if not in the Record of his creation, trial, and execution? If God put in Adam an immortal soul or deathless spirit, there is the place to find it. And what must be the astonishment of the advocates of immortal-soulism, if in the entire Bible record of these great events, we shall fail to find a single intimation of the origin or existence of any distinct nature apart from the man formed out of the dust of the ground?"

PROPOSITION 11: Christ brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. "But is now made manifest by the appearing of our Saviour Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel" (2 Tim. 1:10).

The gospel becomes the medium of revelation of "life and immortality" which God is pleased to bestow upon those who by continuance in well doing seek for it through Jesus Christ. Hence, the gospel becomes "the power of God unto salvation" (Rom. 1:16). If Jesus had not been born into the world and brought immortality to light, mankind would have had no source to which to go for this unmerited blessing bestowed through grace.

John Cargile, outstanding Advent Christian minister, in his book on "True Theology," says, "The doctrine of natural immortality robs Christ of much glory. He it is through whom we must get it, if we ever possess it. As long as men think themselves immortal, as a natural consequence they will not come to Christ that they might have eternal life."

The earlier believers of the Church of God and other Adventist bodies were thoroughly convinced that a right understanding of "life and (Please turn to page 11)

Christian Deportment in Ungodly Governments

Abstract of an Address by Robert G. Huggins

INTRODUCTION: Human governments are civil powers under God. They are used by Him in the government of the world. Their subserviency under God appears from Job 12:17-23: "He leadeth counsellors away spoiled, and maketh the judges fools. He looseth the bond of kings, and girdeth their loins with a girdle. He leadeth princes away spoiled, and overthroweth the mighty. He removeth away the speech of the trusty, and taketh away the understanding of the aged. He poureth contempt upon princes, and weakeneth the strength of the mighty. . . . He increaseth the nations, and destroyeth them: he enlargeth the nations, and straiteneth them again."

Through successive centuries of man's delegated rule of nations on earth, God has kept His sovereignty clearly before them. "The Lord most high is terrible; he is a great King over all the earth" (Psalm 47:2). Democratic elections do not change God's sovereignty, "for promotion cometh neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the south. But God is the judge: he putteth down one, and setteth up another" (Psalm 75:6, 7). God's Kingdom in heaven always governs the kingdoms of men on earth. "The Lord hath prepared his throne in the heavens; and his kingdom ruleth over all" (Psalm 103:19). He changeth the times and the seasons: he removeth kings and setteth up kings: he giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that know understanding" (Dan. 2:21). In a word, He "ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will," and sometimes He "setteth up over it the basest of men" (Dan. 4:17). "The heavens do rule" (v. 26).

Christian Respect for God and Man

(1) Disrespect to human rulers in church or state indicates a depravity in man lower than any beast has yet fallen. Jude says of those who "defile the flesh, despise dominion, and speak evil of dignities . . . these speak evil of those things which they know not: but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, in those things they corrupt themselves" (Jude 8-10). The unjust judge who boasted that he "feared not God, neither regarded man" (Luke 18:2), is the ne plus ultra sinner in the New Testament, for his sin was both Godward and manward. Murder is prohibited in Genesis 9:6, on this ground: "In the image of God made he man." This "image" consists largely in the exercise of "dominion"; that is, rulership. "Thou shalt not revile the gods, nor curse the ruler of the people" (Ex. 22:28). Saul, not recognizing the vestments of the high priest Ananias, perhaps on account of impairment of his eyesight (Acts 9:9; Gal. 4:15), transgressed this commandment unwittingly, for which he promptly apologized in sincere Christian courtesy. (Acts 23:4, 5.)

Both the editor and business manager think it unwise to publish any rebuttals to these articles, at least for six months or a year. Consider well the testimony given.

(2) There never has been a Christian who was not a good citizen; who did not honor both God and man; who did not love God and his neighbor. The law which said, "Honour thy father and thy mother" (Ex. 20:12), also said: "Thou shalt rise up before the hoary head, and honour the face of the old man, and fear thy God" (Lev. 19:32). Please do not miss the significance of this compound statement: "Honour the face of the old man, and fear thy God: I am the Lord." To the questions, "Who shall abide in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in thy holy hill?" David answered immediately: "He honoureth them that fear the Lord" (Psalm 15:1, 4). A Christian cannot bless God one minute and curse man the next; for man was made "after the similitude of God" (James 3:9, 10). Those who disrespect and sin against Christ's brethren, "sin against Christ" (1 Cor. 8:12). "This commandment," says John, and it is a commandment we have from Christ, "That he who loveth God love his brother also" (1 John 4:21). "Honour all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honour the king," is an apostolic summary of Christian duty. (1 Peter 2:17.)

(3) In a more elaborate form and with more clarity, divine authority commands us to be subject to civil governments because they "are ordained of God." Follow Paul's argument closely in Romans 13:1-7:

"Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God. Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation. For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same: for he is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil. Wherefore ye must needs be subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience sake. For this cause pay ye tribute also: for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing. Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honour to whom honour."

For the sake of clarity we will recapitulate the salient points in this remarkable scripture:

1. "The powers that be are ordained of God."
2. These powers are not called "ministers," but they are three times called "the minister of God."
3. We are told two times to be "afraid" of them.
4. Those who resist them "shall receive to themselves damnation."
5. We are not only commanded to be "subject" to them generally, but definitely to pay them Tribute, Custom, Fear, and Honor: all of which is their "due."

Christian Deportment in Ungodly Governments

(1) A political government is a civil power, supreme in its sphere; the church is a religious power, and is supreme in its sphere. They are incompatible powers, and must not be mixed. Saluting the flag is a civil act, and is as much due Caesar as saluting a friend is his due. When the church invades the rights of the state, she becomes a usurper; and when the state invades the rights of the church, it is guilty of usurpation. Keep the church and the state distinctly separate; then we have clear thinking, and can render honor to them both in their respective spheres.

(2) Christ had a clear-eyed perception of Christian obligation and duty to the state within its legitimate prerogatives. Asked at Capernaum by a Roman tax collector, who represented a pagan and warring power, if his Master paid tribute, Peter answered, "Yes." Then Christ made the comment that if the assessment was for strangers, then "the children were free" and added: "Notwithstanding, lest we should offend them"; and paid the tribute. (Matt. 17:24-27.)

(3) At another time and place, Jesus was asked point-blank by the Pharisees and Herodians: "Is it lawful to give tribute to Caesar, or not?" His reply was concise and to the point, separating distinctly our duty to state and church: "Shew me the tribute money. . . . Whose is this image and superscription? They say unto him, Caesar's. Then said he unto them, Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's" (Matt. 22:15-22).

(4) Therefore, when Caesar demands the "things which are his," render to him his due; but if he demands "the things that are God's," we have no choice but to refuse. We cannot give to Caesar the things which belong to God. When the state by law required the worship of an image of Nebuchadnezzar, or destruction in the fiery furnace, the three Hebrew children responded kindly but firmly: "We are not careful to answer thee in this matter. . . . Be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up" (Dan. 3:16-18). Daniel prayed to God three times a day; and when the state prohibited prayer, he went on praying "as he did aforetime" (Dan. 6:10). When the state interdicted preaching the gospel, the disciples continued preaching, and said: "Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye. For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard" (Acts 4:19, 20). "We ought to obey God rather than man" (Acts 5:29).

Christian Opposition to War Vindicated

(1) In a democracy the people are sovereign. When they elect the president and the congress by vote, they transfer their sovereignty to their representatives, which gives them power to declare war. We, as Christians, do not vote. Not having transferred our sovereignty to others, they do not represent us when they declare war. Therefore, we justly claim exemption from combative service in war, which is declared without our representation.

(2) Success in war depends upon the qualification and fitness of the soldiers to fight. Governments recognize this fact; therefore, they "train" enlisted citizens in the art of war before they engage in it. Good citizens are not in the habit of killing people, so they have to be "trained" to kill. The technique of war is now so complicated, the mediocre mind cannot master the science of war. And no amount of "training" can convert a sound-minded saint into a soldier; for Christ has taught Christians: "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you" (Matt. 5:44). How can a saint, imbued with such a gentle and benevolent spirit toward enemies, make a success of killing them unprovoked? Were all this loving, blessing, doing good, and praying done on the field of battle before the wholesale slaughter begins, war would be stopped before the first gun is fired.

(3) "The children of God" are "scattered abroad"

(John 11:52) among all nations and under all kinds of governments, where they live in peace and helpfulness with "the powers that be." Some of them have served in these "powers" actively and officially; while they have prayed for the peace of Babylon (Jer. 29:7), and "for kings, and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all goodness and honesty" (1 Tim. 2:2): as Joseph, to whom Pharaoh said: "Thou shalt be over my house, and according unto thy word shall all my people be ruled; only in the throne will I be greater than thou" (Gen. 41:40). Daniel, too, was identified officially with a pagan government; and of him it is written: Nebuchadnezzar, the king of Babylon, "made Daniel a great man, and gave him many great gifts, and made him ruler over the whole province of Babylon, and chief of the governors over all the wise men of Babylon" (Dan. 2:48). In a famine, Joseph fed the Egyptians; Daniel was a blessing to the Babylonians in statecraft. But neither Joseph nor Daniel, nor any other child of God, no matter where "scattered," nor when, ever joined hands with any government, whether pagan or "Christian," in a crusade of war and destruction upon either enemies or friends. Like their Master, they are here, not "to destroy men's lives, but to save them" (Luke 9:56).

(4) The Kingdom of Israel in the past was the Kingdom of God on earth. (Ex. 19:6; 1 Chron. 28:5.) God Himself was Israel's King, who reigned over the Israelites by vicegerents. (1 Sam. 8:7.) Therefore, when God declared war against the Canaanites, the Israelites fought, because divine authority commanded them. But, even when this militant nation was polled for enlistment in war, "from twenty years old and upward, all that (were) able to go forth to war in Israel" (Num. 1:3), one whole tribe was exempted from military conscription. The reason is given immediately, which please consider with care: "Only thou shalt not number the tribe of Levi, neither take the sum of them among the children of Israel . . . the Levites shall pitch round about the tabernacle of testimony, that there be no wrath upon the congregation of the children of Israel" (Num. 1:49-53).

(5) "Ye call me Master and Lord," Christ said to His disciples, "and ye say well; for so I am" (John 13:13). To the Christian, Christ is exclusively his Master. He said Himself: "No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon" (Matt. 6:24). Now war-service and Christ-service are mutually exclusive: the one excludes the other, and precisely the same things, and to the same extent. "No man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life; that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier" (2 Tim. 2:4). The war lord is not "pleased," in fact he demands that the innocent citizen must separate himself from all "the affairs of this life," and do the work of a soldier exclusively. He must give up his business, family, wife, children; his mind, freedom, independence, individuality, judgment, ideas of right and wrong; his life; "to please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier." This kind of a life was not the voluntary act of the citizen: the war lord chose it for him. He never decided himself to be a soldier; that privilege would give him the power of choice, decision, freedom, the manhood of self-action. No; he is "chosen" without his consent; overnight he falls under coercive power, and is reduced to an automaton. Unnamed, he makes the supreme sacrifice at the behest of another, and fills the earth with husbandless wives, fatherless children, and visits upon others poverty, starvation, pestilence, and premature death. He sends back home, after the war is over, thousands of helpless, suffering cripples, who die gradually by inches. He kills at sight thousands of innocent people, no one of whom he knows. He slays brothers, sisters, and babies. To achieve these terrible results he makes the "supreme sacrifice" of himself.

(6) On the other hand, the Christian makes the "supreme sacrifice" for his Master. He forsakes his wife, children, lands, and life itself to save himself and others. He cannot serve two masters like these, because their demands are exclusive, and because he cannot make the "supreme sacrifice" twice. "Ye are not your own," Paul wrote, "for ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's" (1 Cor. 6:19, 20). Having been "bought with a price," we do not own ourselves. We are God's property by purchase; and we must "render . . . unto God the things that are God's" (Matt. 22:21).

(7) Conscientious objectors are the ultra patriots of all nations. They love their nation superlatively, and for this reason they try to restrain it from military violence. From authentic history, we learn at least one thing, namely: war is a nose dive to destruction. Assyria goose-stepped and died. Babylon Almighty fought and gave up the ghost. Medo-Persia, militantly aggressive, was destroyed. Greece, civilized and refined, expired in battle. All the world empires of the past died fighting. About twenty years ago we engaged in a war to make "the world safe for democracy." Ever since then democracy has been unsafe, and becomes *unsaf*er every day. We waged war then "to end war." From that day to this we have had no respite from war. Today it is spreading like a prairie fire blown by the wind, and it threatens to enwrap the world in flames. When will war lords learn that war breeds war!

(8) Lastly, we give a summary of Bible teachings on the holy disposition which God requires of His people, their aloofness from the sordid work of war, and the fatal penalty which shall befall them if they are unfaithful to the God of peace who, by the great "Prince of Peace," has called them to be the sons of peace. (Phil. 4:7; Isa. 9:6.)

Read with prayer and understanding.

"I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves" (Matt. 10:16).

"Put up again thy sword into his place: for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword" (Matt. 26:52).

"The Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them" (Luke 9:56).

"Recompense to no man evil for evil. . . . Avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord. Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink: for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good" (Rom. 12:17-21).

"The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God" (2 Cor. 10:4).

"Do all things without murmurings and disputings: that ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation" (Phil. 2:14, 15).

"From whence come wars and fightings among you? come they not hence, even of your lusts that war in your members? Ye adulterers and adulteresses!" (James 4:1, 4.)

"Not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing: but contrariwise blessing; knowing that ye are thereunto called, that ye should inherit a blessing" (1 Peter 3:9).

"He that leadeth into captivity shall go into captivity: he that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword. Here is the patience and the faith of the saints" (Rev. 13:10).

God's Remnant

By Gerald L. Cooper

---

A REMNANT is generally thought to mean something of little value, or something left over. Recently, I discovered that in a standard dictionary the word had still another meaning, which is: "a small number of people." There is an anecdote told of a dry goods merchant who advertised as follows: "Remnants—20 cents a yard." His sales were very few, but when he changed his sign to read, "A limited supply of fancy goods; while they last at 40 cents a yard," he sold out his stock in a short while. So it is with God and the world. To the world a remnant in any sense of the word is valueless, but God now and in the past has often used a "small number of people" to further His cause. Let us go to the Word to find out if this is not true.

In an early story of the Bible we read that Noah was a preacher of righteousness, having very few people to listen to him. God "repented" that He had made the world and the people in it, and decided to destroy it with a great flood. To Noah alone was the word given that this was to be done, and to him was given the task of saving a remnant of the people to propagate the race. While building the ark, Noah did his best to convince the people that the end of the world was coming, but when the time came to enter the ark there were only eight people who believed him—and they were members of his family. Further reading of the account shows us that with this remnant God furthered His plans, and it is the belief of Christians who take the Bible literally that all races have developed from Noah and his three sons. Thus, we see that God used a remnant, something of little value, a small number of people to advance His great work.

The story of Lot is not a noble story such as the one of Noah, but in Genesis 19:37, 38 we read that Lot became the father of the Moabites and the Ammonites after the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, in which destruction only Lot and his two daughters were saved. Again God saved only a remnant to further His plans, and to create two tribes of people.

Probably the greatest example of the remnant occurs in the story of the children of Israel, the people God chose for His own. In the first place, we know that God chose Abraham to be the father of His nation, and that Abraham's grandson, Jacob, was later named Israel and became the father of the twelve tribes of Israel. Many years afterward, when the people of Israel were coming out of Egypt where they had been enslaved, they sinned, and God punished them by condemning to death all over twenty years of age. (Num. 14:29.) In spite of this, God brought the remainder into the promised land of Canaan, and there the remnant lived and thrived for many years—becoming under the reign of Solomon one of the greatest nations of all times. Not only that, but from that remnant God will again bring into being a great nation of Israel, one that will be respected and admired by all the nations of the world. Truly, God does not look upon a remnant as something of little value, but uses this small number of people to bring about His ways.

An almost amusing story is (Please turn to page 10)

When Brimstone Fell

By Arlen Marsh

ACCORDING to Ussher, it was about 1900 B. C. Probably it was earlier, perhaps it was later. Who can tell? For this purpose, Ussher's guess is as good as yours or mine.

The Vale of Siddim stretched deeply north of the Gulf of Akaba, and separated from the gulf by a stretch of dry land. A hundred years before, nine kings had, in it, rebelled against the rule of Chedorlaomer, tyrant of Asia Minor and master of one of the greatest empires ever to appear in the Near East. The Vale was salty, wet. Near it stood ten cities, and two of them were famous: Sodom and Gomorrah. The ten cities were called the Cities of the Plain, for the surrounding country was flat.

In the year 1898 B. C. (according, as has been said, to Ussher) Sodom and Gomorrah and their companion, smaller, cities were centers of commerce. Population was not large as population is counted nowadays, but it was large for a time when most peoples lived in tents and moved about with the freedom of jackals.

The Jordan River flowed near by. Down at the northern tip of the Gulf of Akaba, it spilled its waters, gathered from springs and wadies in the far north, into the sea. It was not a rapid stream; its current was sluggish, for there was little fall in the river.

With commerce and industry had come evil. The city dwellers were wicked; those who lived along the Jordan were wicked; the few who penetrated the marshy saltness of the Vale of Siddim were wicked.

But there were two exceptions. Abraham had come and gone. Lot was still there. And Lot had by this time a large family—daughters, and sons-in-law, and grandchildren. Lot liked Sodom; it was a delightful place to live despite its homosexual inhabitants. You could make a fortune when you lived in Sodom.

And then, one day, two men came to call on Lot. The Oriental attitude toward hospitality, still evident among tribes who roam the desert, came to their rescue. Lot refused to consent to their maltreatment at the hands of men of Sodom. The visitors, in self-defense, blinded those who tried to break into the house in which Lot lived; and they warned Lot to take himself and his entire family into the distant hills, inasmuch as God intended to destroy the city.

But Lot's sons-in-law were native Sodomites, and they laughed at the warnings that Lot gave them. So the visitors instructed Lot to take his wife and his two daughters and leave at once.

Sodom was a delightful place to live. Lot hesitated about going. So his visitors forcibly removed him and his wife and his two daughters from the city, and urged them to run for their lives. They were not to take even sufficient time to look behind to see precisely what was happening; they were to leave the entire plain behind them.

And then what must have seemed like hell turned upside down broke loose. Dante in all his fevered nightmares could have conceived of nothing worse. Herculaneum and Pompeii, lying far in the future, were to die peacefully and easily in comparison with the Cities of the Plain.

For centuries, volcanoes had smoldered and occasionally erupted near the Vale of Siddim and the Cities of the Plain. For centuries, minor earthquakes had infrequently rocked the region. Now, in the year 1898 B. C., the volcanoes simultaneously belched forth such an outpouring of red-hot ash and rock as has been paralleled but twice in all recorded history.

Fiery flakes poured down like drenching rain on the crops about the cities. Flames burst into life for miles along the plain. The acrid smell of burning rock swept like a noxious gas across the level ground, and down into the Vale of Siddim. Lot and his wife and his two daughters raced madly for their lives, while behind them fissures opened in the earth and spewed out smoking asphalt.

Lot's wife was curious, and her curiosity overcame her dread. She hesitated, turned, and stared backward toward the city. Ash fell about her, a cloud of gas drifted close. And then, from somewhere, came a stream of molten lava, carrying the salts which had appeared on the surface of the ground down in the Vale of Siddim. Lava and ash and gas—and she was dead, almost as quickly as thirty thousand were to die when Mount Pele erupted four millenniums later. Salt-encrusted, ash-encrusted, she became a pillar. And Lot and his two daughters raced onward to the hills.

As the eruption grew worse, the earth began to rock. The plain stood where it was. Land lifted, sank, rolled like a heavy swell at sea. And the burning and the smoking carried on. . . .

It was done. The volcanoes were still. Forty centuries later, only a vestige of them was to remain. But throughout Old Testament times, they were to continue to smoke and mutter.

The landscape had changed. Where once had been a fertile plain was now a barren desert. The ten cities stood in ruins. All life for miles had been destroyed—a disaster quite as thorough and quite as deadly as that which laid waste Lisbon, Portugal, in 1755. But at Lisbon some survived; in the Cities of the Plain, there were now no living things.

The Vale of Siddim suddenly became a lake. The earth, lifted higher between the Vale and the Akaba Gulf, turned back the Jordan River from its bed. And the Jordan, like any water seeking its own or a lower level, poured into the deepened, salt-founded valley.

A depression spread along the land. Rock faults, hundreds of miles below the surface of the earth, had slipped enough to let an entire valley form. The Jordan swept down from the Lake of Galilee, new-formed by the convulsions of the ground. The lake was resting six hundred twenty-six feet below the level of the Mediterranean on the west and the Gulf of Akaba on the south; and the Jordan leaped from it to the lowered Vale of Siddim and made a great Salt Sea, thirteen hundred feet beneath the Mediterranean-Akaba surface line.

This is the story geologists have found. It is the story told by Moses. Even in Jeremiah's time, volcanoes roared in the Ded Sea region, and may sometimes have rained fire and brimstone down from heaven.

Can it literally be that, as an introduction to the return of Jesus to the earth, "the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley; and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south" (Zech. 14:4)? Can it literally be that, at the same time, water will flow "toward the former (eastern) sea"—that there can be a watery connection between the Dead and Mediterranean Seas (Zech. 14:8)?

It can be literally true. Volcanic explosions and earthquakes already have remade completely the topography of Palestine and Moab. It can be done again.

A Discovery

By S. J. Lindsay

NOT long ago we attended a meeting of ministers of various denominations. We had attended these meetings on occasion before, but never had matters come up in such a way as to engage us directly. Among other things, a "Church of God" minister of the holiness sort asked us about our Church of God. We explained to him that our church designation was "The Church of God of the Faith of Abraham." He said that didn't mean anything to him, but wanted to know if we were Pentecostal or Holiness. We told him that we believed in Bible holiness and sanctification, but not the emotional sort commonly so called. He failed to understand. We finally said, "If you know what Abraham was taught and what he believed, then you know what we believe and teach." The look in his eye showed that we hadn't reached him yet.

After a time, another one present said in an aside, "Abraham and Solomon lived long before they had heard that there was a heaven to go to." Not being addressed directly on this point, we kept our peace, but on the way home we fell to thinking of the worth of such men to God and His truth. Here was a man, a minister, who knew no more about God's plan than to make a wisecrack like that.

So far as that criticism goes, we find others of a later date, writing in Holy Writ, who seemed to know no more than Abraham and Solomon as to going to heaven. Paul was one of them. He tells us that we are to walk in that faith of our father Abraham. Again, he tells us that if we are "baptized into Christ (we) have put on Christ," and are become the heirs of the promise made to Abraham. Jesus, too, said, "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth." Then, again, in Revelation we read the redemption song: "Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth" (5:9, 10).

The question is asked, "How can people be so ignorant of the plan of salvation as to make such statements?" There are ministers who know nothing about the plan of God. The reason is that in many cases they do not study the Bible, but accept other men's estimations of the Bible. They have studied away from the Bible.

A young man of our acquaintance some years ago determined to prepare himself for the ministry, so placed himself in one of the theological universities of our land.

(Over)

After a year and a half he quit short. Upon being asked why, he said, "I have spent better than a year in the university and have had no instruction on the Bible, but I have studied all kinds of heathen religion and matters pertaining to almost everything else than that I planned to study, so I'm through." He is in business today.

INSURANCE IN CHRIST

By Delos Andrew

INSURANCE in Christ is necessary to one's eternal salvation, but life insurance, so-called, is not necessary to a Christian's protection. In the Sermon on the Mount, Christ taught implicit faith in God. Jesus, moreover, had that complete faith, as was proved by His faithfulness unto death. Jesus knew that God's way was best, and He put His faith in God's great plan.

Christians are now asked to show a little of that same faith. We are expected to put complete trust in Christ and in the things He taught. In fact, our salvation depends upon having that faith. Christ tells us to take no thought of our lives—of what we shall eat, or what we shall wear—and we believe He means exactly what He says. Being faithful unto Him, we should throw our whole effort into the work of Christ, letting everything else come second to His work.

There is a promise which is passed down to us if we forsake all for Christ, the promise first having been given to the disciples. It is: "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world" (Matt. 28:20).

So-called life insurance is a good thing to have as a means of saving the surplus that God may be gracious enough to give one, but if a Christian must deprive the church or his family of proper support in order to pay for life insurance, we believe that he is doing wrong in that he shows a lack of that faith which is so necessary to salvation. We are taught in the Lord's Prayer to ask the heavenly Father for the things necessary for the present, not the things we might wish for some future time.

Doubtless, incidents can be cited which show that insurance has helped many widows and their families, but God has many ways—not appreciated by the world—in which to direct the lives of His faithful ones. God will direct and bless everyone who is faithful to put complete trust in Him.

The insurance in Christ is the best insurance of all, for it insures for all eternity. The premium is complete faith and consecration of life. Those who subscribe to this insurance will receive everlasting life in a Kingdom of perfection ruled by the perfect King, a Kingdom in which there will be no death, neither sorrow, nor crying (Rev. 21:4). Such promised conditions should be much appreciated in this present time of war and bloodshed.

GOD'S REMNANT

told in the Scriptures in regard to Elijah. This ancient prophet of God had done his work well, but he was beginning to think that it was of no avail, that all the people had forsaken the words of God and had become worshipers of Baal. Imagine his surprise when God told him: "Yet I have left me seven thousand in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him" (1 Kings 19:18). We will come back to this story a little later in this article.

Returning to our consideration of the nation of Israel, we read that after several years of prosperity the nation was divided, because of internal trouble, into two separate kingdoms of ten and two tribes. The two tribes became the Jews, only a few people, but from this remnant of a once proud nation came Jesus the Christ. We know what that means, for Christ has brought salvation to anyone who will accept it from Him. The Jews today are considered of little value to most of the other nations of the world, but God will, in His own good time, bring them to exaltation, and the very nations that now persecute the Jews will bow down to them. Jesus will be their King; He will establish the Kingdom in Palestine, and "all nations shall flow unto it" (Isa. 2:2).

Since the time that Christ was on the earth and founded the Christian church, God has "added to the church daily such as should be saved." At many times through the centuries, things in general have looked very dark for the church. During the so-called Dark Ages, the Word was known to only a very few, and those few preached to the people only what they wanted them to know. However, Martin Luther, who was truly one of God's servants, took it upon himself to defy the strong Catholic Church, and he started the Reformation whereby the Scripture was given again to all people. Since that time, the Protestant movement has "bogged down" at various times, but it is still moving along strongly. Today, Protestants are in the majority, but as many writers have pointed out, "The Protestant church no longer protests." There are a few people today who take the Scripture to mean what it says, and who have the Scripture alone for their "creed." We are proud to say that our own small church group is among that number.

It would be foolish to believe that we have never been discouraged. We have been discouraged many times, and will be again. The statement has been made a number of times to ministers who have attempted to evangelize a community, or who have tried to establish a permanent work: "But we are too few in number. We can't get anywhere on that account." Brethren, remember that God has shown us in His Word that more often than not He has chosen a few, the remnant to further His cause.

Remember that Elijah thought that he was alone in his belief in God, but later learned that God had saved seven thousand others. Again we hear of many being discouraged because the world considers the church of little value—in fact, looks down upon it. Again, we refer you to the Scriptures to show you that those whom others ignored, as being of little value, God took and with them furthered His plans.

Yes, we are few in number, but God is our strength, and we should not in the least be discouraged. Someday this remnant, this small number of people, will be rulers of the world which now ignores it. The faithful remnant will rule with its King, Jesus Christ. May the great God hasten that day!

“Except the Lord of hosts had left unto us a very small remnant, we should have been as Sodom, and . . . Gomorrah” (Isa. 1:9). . . . “Sing with gladness . . . Shout among the chief of the nations: publish ye, praise ye, and say, O Lord, save thy people, the remnant of Israel” (Jer. 31:7).

MYSTERIOUS MELCHIZEDEK

the regal work, and the priests after the order of Levi administered religious rites. Melchizedek, however, had been both king and priest, and as such illustrated the complete work of Christ. (See Heb. 5:6; 7:1.)

Thus, we see our Lord coming soon to put an end to human government and bring all nations under His jurisdiction as “KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS”; but we also see Him coming as the great religious leader, to direct in teaching the people, in healing them of their diseases and sins, and bringing them to full and complete lives.

Melchizedek, the man of mystery, is, in what few things we are told of him, a picture of Jesus our Lord and Savior.

A STUDY ON IMMORTALITY

immortality” through Christ was essential to salvation. One could not listen to one of their sermons, read an article or peruse a book of their writing, without discovering almost immediately that they stood for life only in Christ and were definitely opposed to the popular teaching of the immortality of the soul and the offshoot doctrines. They were positive in their convictions and soundly doctrine in all their teachings on life and death. Their championship of these doctrines naturally made them a separate people. If we are faithful to our ministry of truth, the same results will obtain with us!

BUILDING YOUR LIBRARY

Book Reviews

By Arlen Marsh

An unusual approach to the religious theme is contained in Business Men of the Bible (National Publishing Company; $1.00), a 112-page opus by one James C. Muir.

It is not a book of sermons. It is intended, rather, to give a fair appraisal of actual Old and New Testament characters in the light of their business dealings—with a fair admixture of historically accurate discussions of commerce, industry, and merchandising as they were carried on during Bible times.

Although the Biblical narratives and descriptions of the ancients are treated with reverence, Mr. Muir endeavors to present more an idea of those long-dead characters as they must have appeared to everyday business associates than as they now appear in the light of religious developments.

The whole makes exceedingly interesting reading—and exceedingly instructive reading as well.

Best of the smaller concordances is Cruden's, now available as a John C. Winston publication at only $2.00. Formerly, editions of Cruden's—the first of all anywhere near complete concordances of the King James—have been printed in type so small as to make them almost unusable by anyone with eye trouble; but the $2.00 Winston edition is done in blackface type that can be read with ease. Thumb index: 50 cents additional.

Among the inexpensive Bible helps is Nelson's (Thomas Nelson & Sons) Concise Bible Dictionary and Combined Concordance at $1.00. It contains a fairly complete (although by no means exhaustive) concordance, a subject-index, and a Bible dictionary—the same assortment of helps to be found in most Nelson's teachers' Bibles in the King James Version.

Of the same approximate completeness is Oxford's (Oxford University Press) Cyclopedic Concordance—a cloth-bound edition of the helps to be found in any Oxford teachers' Bible. Price, $1.00. Also available in leather, in a slightly larger size (5 1-2 x 8 1-4 inches), with round corners and gilt edges, at $2.50.

PREPARED BY MADGE SAVAGE

Waite Park, Minnesota

"Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."

Be Thankful

When we pause to consider that only one leper returned to thank Jesus, yet all ten were glad to go to show themselves to the priest, and be healed, should we not wonder if we are thankful?

How glad we are to be at peace! We have no fear of going to school without gas masks! We fear no enemies' guns or airplane bombs. We need not go hungry or cold.

We can remember to thank God for food at our tables at meal time. Not many remember to say "Thank you" to God and to ask His blessing upon the food.

Good health is another thing for which many of us should be thankful.

A Picture of Contrast

We have been thinking of some material blessings common to us all who live in the United States. In one foreign country, that is not at war now, we read of little boys and girls who know nothing of God.

For many reasons there are large numbers of children without homes. They have no one to care for them. Many are between the ages of four and eight years. They steal for a living! They snatch purses, hats, gloves, and so forth. Some things they sell to buy what they want.

There are camps for older children. They are sent to work for their government, if they are well and have both legs and both arms. Yes, many have one, only one, for they do not live in one city, but travel from city to village on the trains. Yes, they "hook rides," and often get a limb cut off in getting on or off the train.

These children sleep anywhere. Several sleep crowded together for warmth. Once in a while a lady will give them an old covering, if they will sleep under her porch and keep other bothersome children away from her house.

That isn't a very nice picture, but I believe you ECE Club members should know something about how some boys and girls live in a country where God is not known.

ECE Bible Study

Learn the next five books—all beginning with "T"—following Colossians: 1 and 2 Thessalonians, 1 and 2 Timothy, and Titus.

Membership Call

Many have joined the Everyday Christian Expression Club, but we need you, too.

While the ECE Club was formed for a Children's Page club, one group organized a real club. I saw one example of their work which was a map exhibited at General Conference last summer at Oregon, Illinois. They also sent a group of dolls dressed in different costumes. Perhaps you saw the exhibit, too. They worked as well as read, in Cleveland, Ohio.

To everyone who joins we send a Membership Card. The aims stated on the card are: "To read the Children's Page every week, to study the Sunday school lessons or have other Bible study every day, to study with others in your family if possible, to pray and sing, to learn to love God more, to try to do kind deeds every day, to have a Bible motto on your wall, to regularly attend Sunday school and church."

Those aims are ones everyone should be working on every day. The motto of the ECE Club (which was selected by the Cleveland, Ohio, club) is also stated:

"I'll always speak the truth,
I'll watch each word I say,
I'll try to do the things I should
To please God every day."

New Members

John Phillips, William Sizer, and Amie Lou Moss of Waterloo, Iowa, and Yvonne Peterson of Cedar Falls, Iowa. These names, of the "Live Wires" class, are sent by their teacher, Mrs. Charles W. Howe of Waterloo, Iowa.

Some Things Don't Change

* * *

By Mary Richardson, Hammond, La.

In September the season changes from summer to fall. Leaves turn brown and fall to the ground. The temperature drops lower and lower, and in some parts of the country the weather grows very cold. After the fall weather, winter sets in with its ice, snow, and cold rains; but one thing is certain—the winter will not always remain, for spring will emerge in March or April, and things will seem to have new life. Summer will not be long in making her appearance. This is the cycle of the seasons which are ever changing.

Fashions change from year to year. The things we purchase this year may be entirely out of fashion next year. A certain design or pattern may be all "the rage" this year, but next year it will be replaced with something new to meet the fancies of people.

Customs and habits change from time to time. A certain custom established by our grandparents may be considered old-fashioned by the younger generation. Habits that young folks have in this age of machinery and industrialism may be frowned upon with disdain by the older folks. Each generation has a different environment, because invention makes this possible. Their surroundings are as new and different as that of a foreigner when he is transplanted to this country.

Some things, though, do not change. Man is always in need of God's guiding hand and protecting care. There is always the need for forgiveness, because of the frailty of human nature. We are ever subject to temptations and human weaknesses and, therefore, we need to rely upon One higher than ourselves. Often, man is prone to not realize this great need. God's love for us is just as great today as it was when the disciples lived and walked among men. He extends to all the invitation to eternal life, but it is the individual's responsibility as to whether or not he will accept it.

God is always in need of helpers in spreading His Word. Today the harvest is truly great, but the laborers few. The church always needs workers, but this need is not always met, because men have become lovers of themselves rather than lovers of God.

Man is always in need of prayer, for through prayer the spiritual life is strengthened and renewed. In times of trouble, sorrows, and death, man may come to God through prayer and there find comfort and solace.

God is always desirous that man live a clean and unspotted life. The Christian should live at all times as one who waits for his Lord's return. Our standard should be Romans 12:1: "Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."

The goal of the one pursuing a worthy life is permanent and abiding. These worthy purposes result in lasting satisfaction. The path to greatest usefulness and fullest happiness is through a life that will glorify God and His Son in devotion to those about you. Such a life loses none of its appeal as the years increase.

Some things don't change—man's need, God's love.

Take Up Your Cross

* * *

By Iris Hall, Alto, Mich.

Christ said, "He that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me" (Matt. 10:38). "Cross," according to Webster, is "any suffering borne for Christ's sake." Does each one of us have a cross to bear? Are we sacrificing personal desires, worldly pleasures, and friendships for the sake of our Christian principles and beliefs?

What is your cross? It may be a self-willed, impetuous disposition, an unruly temper, or, though we are apt to be unaware of it, our cross may be mental or physical afflictions which monopolize our thoughts, making it impossible to truly follow Christ. Can we not put these things at the back of our minds and let the light of the Christ-life in us shine through to brighten the way for ourselves and others? Are we not able to bear our crosses without grudging, regardless of the intense pain they may inflict? Of course, we cannot—without the strengthening aid of God, for without Him we are as helpless children.

Paul said, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me" (Phil. 4:13). That is a reassuring thought for every Christian, if he will only believe it. "I can do all things"—control my temper, forget selfish desires, overcome mental misery—"through Christ which strengtheneth me." May we take up our crosses anew, and "let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not" (Gal. 6:9).

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALENDAR OF EVANGELISM

February 16—California Conference at Pomona.
 June 18-29—Indiana Bible School and Conference at North Salem.
 July 29-August 10—General Conference at Oregon, Ill.
 July 29-August 10—Illinois Bible School and Conference at Oregon.
 August 17-24—Ohio State Conference at the Brush Creek Church of God, near Tipp City.

NORTH SALEM CHURCH OF GOD (North of Plymouth, Indiana)

Beginning December 1, 1940, and continuing to December 15, the North Salem Church had the privilege of enjoying services conducted by Indiana State Evangelist, J. W. McLain.

His subjects and main line of thought were about Christian living and leadership, and he gave lectures by chart and pictures on prophecies of Daniel and Revelation. He also conducted services on the first and third Sundays, until and including January 19.

On January 19, we had an all-day meeting arranged by the North Salem group. This meeting was conducted by Bro. McLain, who was assisted by Bro. F. L. Austin of South Bend. The church was filled with interested listeners. The churches of Burr Oak, South Bend, and North Salem, offered their appreciation and thanks to Bro. McLain for his good work accomplished in Indiana.

The following week, Bro. McLain and family left for Grand Rapids, Mich., where he will pastor the Lord's work. Bro. Austin was chosen to finish the evangelistic work at this place.

Our pastor, Elder J. H. Anderson, conducts services every fourth Sunday, in the afternoon. We have Sunday school every Sunday, Berean study every Thursday evening; at present we are having Bible study on Friday nights, conducted by Bro. F. L. Austin, and preaching services the first and third Sundays by same, in the afternoon.

Hazel Logan, Secy.

SOUTHLAWN PARK CHURCH OF GOD Grand Rapids, Michigan

Upon returning from two weeks of evangelistic work in Illinois, the pastor was called to Adrian, Mich., to conduct the funeral of Bro. Levi Coffin, January 22.

The Wednesday evening devotional meetings for the three weeks were conducted by Bro. Lloyd Stevens, Sr. Martha Doan, and Bro. Leslie Niles.

The congregation enjoyed getting acquainted with four of the Bible Training School boys, and appreciated their sermons. Bros. Orris Mills, Alan McLain, Celaine Randall, and Richard Smith, each, gave one sermon.

During the past year the Parent-Teacher Class has sponsored improvements to the annex. An outside stone chimney was built, that the center chimney and post could be removed, and now the main room floor has been painted.

Much sickness among school-age young people, as well as adults, has been prevailing, but a faithful attendance is maintained.

The choir is already busy on Easter music, and we look forward with joy to the "Resurrection season." F. E. Siple, Pastor.

The Summer School

Plans are being made to conduct a summer course of the Bible Training School, June 17 - July 25, provided twenty or more students enroll by June 1. The Board of Religious Education believes the Summer School should be self-supporting; therefore, it will be necessary for at least twenty students to attend. There will again be the best possible teaching talent, and the tuition complete for the six weeks will be only thirty dollars. Announcement of the teachers will be made within two or three weeks, but in the meantime we wish to hear from the students who are already planning to come. Address, The Summer Bible Training School, Oregon, Illinois.

Sydney E. Magaw, Chairman
Board of Religious Education.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

Sr. Orpha Sanford, 4714 Highland Ave., Downers Grove, Ill., is convalescing from an attack of pneumonia. May her full strength be regained.

Bro. C. L. Netts, 192 White City Trailer Park, St. Petersburg, Fla., reports sending out seven more miniature Golden-Rule-Home banks. Sunday schools not yet using these banks may obtain the same by writing Bro. Netts. They are to be used in making offerings for a fund to provide care in Golden Rule Home for our aged ministers and their wives.

Bro. Fred Larsen, Wyman, Mich., is in the Veterans' Hospital, Dearborn, Mich., recovering from an operation.

Bro. Delbert Jones, Upper Iowa University, Fayette, Iowa, writes that he recently attended a Sunday school class where he could not agree with "the teacher's viewpoint of a good hot sizzling hell." Significantly, in the same letter, Bro. Jones ordered a dozen tracts entitled, "Hell, What Is It?" . . . By investing twenty cents, you, too, may help twelve souls to learn the true temperature of hell.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

The Sunday services on February 2 were of unusual interest. Bro. Marsh's sermon on "The Incarnation of God in You" was full of food for thought for all who have a desire for the indwelling of God's Spirit. The Memorial service which followed was characterized by thoughts gleaned from John 13:10. "He that is washed," completely cleansed by the blood of Christ, does not need another complete cleansing, but Jesus adds "save to wash his feet," which Christians can do for each other in reproving, rebuking, exhorting each other to keep clean from the contamination of the daily walk.

After the greetings and handshakes, particularly with the visiting brethren, a picnic dinner was enjoyed outside, under the pergola. The sun was warm, and the weather ideal for the time of year. Upon making a few inquiries, we learned that eleven states and Canada were represented at this dinner.

At 2:00 p.m., Bro. Arlen Marsh gave a discourse on, "The Prayer Perfect." Before this is in print, some of our eastern visitors will have returned to their homes, namely, Sr. Arthur Johns of Schribner, Nebr., and Bro. and Sr. J. H. Williams of Rochelle, Ill. We have very much enjoyed their company and presence at all our services. Sr. T. J. Ellis of Waterloo, Iowa, has recently come to this section, also, and we trust she will remain with us indefinitely. Bro. and Sr. Holzhauser of the Dixon, Ill., congregation are also sojourning in Los Angeles, and they attend services occasionally.

Our Sunday school, Berean, and Doreas Societies are all functioning regularly, and showing some growth.

Emma C. Railsback, Secy.

Send The Herald to your friends.

Extra Heralds. Send us names and correct addresses of persons to whom you may wish to send this week's Herald. We have a good supply of extras which we shall gladly mail out for you at five cents each. Or, if five or more are mailed to one address, they may be purchased for three cents each; possibly your church can distribute twenty-five or fifty. Rouse up that slumbering missionary spirit!

Writers who wish to help us in preparing the Easter number of The Herald should send us their copy not later than March 15, and we could use it if it were here now. Yes, the world is too fast, but the church is at least a "jiffy" too slow. (Cp. Luke 16:8.)

"I lost my car January 19. I had to leave it beside the road because of a flat tire, and when I returned to it about an hour later, it was a blazing wreck."—Vivian Kirkpatrick, Blanchard, Mich. . . . That prompts an idea about my '29.

"Pray for our little congregation here at Austin, that our faith may continue, and that we may be fruitful."—Mrs. Julia Bay, 308 1-2 Bowie St., Austin, Texas.

THANK YOU, MINNESOTA

In appreciation of the kindness the brethren in Minnesota have shown this writer, I wish to thank you for financial support which has permitted my attendance at Maranatha College this past semester.

Hoping to see many of you folks in a couple of weeks, I conclude with the words of John as they are recorded in 3 John 13, 14. Orris Mills.

FONTHILL, ONTARIO

Bruce Douglas, born to Ruby and Don McCombs, Fonthill, on January 3, was ill in the Welland hospital for nearly two weeks, trying to win the victory over a painful and severe ear infection, but the enemy of all. Death, prevailed, and baby Bruce passed into sleep on Friday, the 31st. The baby's mother, Sr. Ruby, is the daughter of Bro. and Sr. Horace Haines of Fenwick. She and her husband have our deepest sympathy. The private funeral was conducted by Bro. C. E. Randall from the home of the grandparents, Bro. and Sr. Haines, on February 3.

How glad we will all be when "there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain!"

On Friday night, January 17, our church held its annual supper and business meeting. The election of officers resulted as follows: elders—Joseph Fletcher, Jr., and William Holland; deacons—Maurice Anger and Herbert Lampitt; assistants—Peter Standing and Alfred Payne; deaconesses—Addie Haines and Ella Beemer; trustees—Horace Haines and Velmer Bousfield; secretary—Howard Beemer; treasurer—Irvin Barnhart; auditors—Marion Brown and Pearl Brown; ushers—Horace Haines and Joseph Fletcher, Jr.; property committee—Lillian Railton, Rena Fletcher, Maurice Anger, and Wilson Kirkwood.

The average weekly church attendance, as recorded by Bro. Holland, showed an increase of eleven over last year. Eleven baptisms were reported from the Niagara Falls, N. Y., and Fonthill, Ont., churches.

By unanimous request, Bro. Randall begins his eleventh year as our pastor.

The Fonthill choir held its practice at the Fletcher home on January 23, and, after the sing, joined Mabel in celebrating her birthday with a "hunkie" shower. Lunch was then served by the family.

The David Elliott family is moving into the Ashbury house near Fonthill. This will provide easy access to the church, and the children to Sunday school.

Evangeline Brown of Welland is confined to her bed with rheumatic fever. Our wishes are for a speedy recovery.

Our weekly Bible studies are being held in the homes this winter. The purpose for which the change was made, that of going into the homes where various church members could invite their friends to attend, seems to be meeting with success and splendid response. Meetings held in the homes seem to have a personal warmth of good fellowship, and our attendance, to date, has increased from about twenty to close to forty. We know, of course, that quantity is not the most important thing, but we are praying that each one attending these studies will grow spiritually. To the brethren everywhere, we would say, Read and obey the admonition given in Hebrews 10: 22-25.

If The Herald readers want to partially share in the spiritual feast we are having at our studies, read Bro. C. E. Randall's series of articles about the essential doctrines of the Church of God.

BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL NEWS

The Bible Training School is now in the third week of the second semester, and every student is enjoying the Bible training. Only by such training are we able to equip ourselves for life's duties and the work of the ministry. Too many people think a minister does not need special training, but this is a mistake, for the best is none too good for the Lord. Every vocation requires leaders as well educated as possible; this is also true in the ministry.

Bro. Emory Macy, one of the new students, attended about five weeks the first semester. He and his family are staying with Bro. and Sr. S. E. Magaw. He is planning to stay only a part of the semester.

Two of our freshmen, Sr. Verneille Lawrence and Bro. Robert Hardesty, are talented in music.

Bro. Francis Burnett, another of our new students, has recently recovered from the mumps. We are glad to have him again attending classes. Fearing that Verneille might contact the mumps, a room was temporarily provided for her at Golden Rule Home, but she is now residing at the Students' Home.

The Ambassador Bible Class recently had a sleigh-ride party at the Schier farm. The Berenu society, also, had a party. By fellowship we become better able to understand one another. A famous writer said, "To know a person is to like him."

Our basket ball team has been getting some good practice. We have a good team, considering the little amount of practice we have had. We have our new suits: trunks of royal blue, jerseys of gold and having blue letters which spell "Maranatha" across the fronts. We recently played a local team, and though we lost, the score was close: 32-27. Those who played were: Celine Randall, Orris Mills, C. Alan McLain, Ellsworth Routson, and Emory Macy. Terry Ferrell and Francis Burnett have been practicing with us, but were unable to play in this game.

The following courses are being taught this semester: by Bro. L. E. Conner—"Orthodoxy," "The Bible and Archaeology," and "Business Administration of the Church"; by Bro. S. E. Magaw—"New Testament Interpretation," "Progress of World-wide Missions," "Religious Journalism," and "Public Speaking." Also, Sr. Leila Mae Doeden conducts a class each week in music and voice culture.

Subscription Rate.—51 issues per annum, $2.00.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him. (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

Quarterly Conference at Ripley March 29 and 30

Now is the time to plan for the Quarterly Conference to be held, D.V., in the Church of God in Ripley, March 29 and 30. All who were present last year will remember the blessing and uplift received by meeting with the brethren from other churches over the State. We hope to have the program arranged and published so you will have more of an incentive to come.

Ripley is the most centrally located church of all the churches working with the Illinois State Conference. Will your church send at least one carload as a delegation to this first Conference of 1941? Following is the approximate driving time you will need to be at the Ripley church on Saturday morning, March 29, at 9:00 a.m.: Rockford—4 1-2 hours; Oregon—4 hours; Dixon—3 hours, 40 minutes; Macomb—50 minutes; Bosworth, Mo.—3 hours, 45 minutes; St. Louis, Mo.—3 hours; Fredericktown, Mo.—5 hours; Eldorado—6 hours; Marshall—5 hours; Casey—4 1-2 hours. The time is short, so hurry while the announcement of this Conference is fresh in your minds. Make plans and come!

Bubbles Burst, but—

God never fails to keep His word. One year ago the Macomb church was slightly in debt, was not supporting a regular worker, had no church and small hopes of getting one. Within one year over four hundred fifty dollars has accumulated in the building fund, rent on a small building has been paid regularly, the allotment to the State Conference fund has been paid each month, and there is no debt. When the very small membership is taken into consideration, there is only one solution to the whole thing. The windows of heaven have been opened! God, and God alone, is to be praised!

All of us have been joyfully surprised to see how the building fund grows. Have you guessed the secret? It is found in Malachi 3:8-10. With some misgivings and a few doubts, about ten of us joined ourselves together at the beginning of the year into a "tither's club." A number have testified that they personally have been blessed, and have been made very happy to see the building fund grow. This church can never be accused of being wealthy, for only two in the entire congregation drive cars. Without fuss or bother, each individual is put on his honor before God to give Him what belongs to Him, and the result has been far beyond our greatest expectations.

If you are among the skeptics who are struggling to make God's finances meet expenses, we can heartily recommend God's way as the surest and best because Paul said, "My God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." Our testimony is that God is able, and has done "exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think."

Evangelism Will Build the Church."*

The job is not complete. We still have to meet in a very undesirable, little, tar-paper-covered building, but God will supply if we keep faithful. Pray for us that we may all be faithful.

Is Your Sunday School 100 per cent?

Too often our churches do not grow because the Sunday schools do not furnish them with potential members. Many church members of today are faithful because they were trained to be faithful in the Sunday school.

If you should grade yourself as a Sunday school worker, how high would you stand? Give yourself a test. If you are always present, count 30 per cent; on time, 10 per cent; give an offering (not a collection), 10 per cent; take your Bible, 10 per cent; stay to church, 10 per cent; and study your lesson before Sunday school, 30 per cent. Now, how do you stand? A good many are surprised to find that they are not even 50 per cent efficient.

Jesus went to the Temple to be about His Father's business, or to be about His Father's employment. "Not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord" was written for Christians, not the world. Our greatest need is to be zealous in the business of teaching people about Jesus, and above all, of having that warmth of heart to win the lost. Ours is the task of seeking and saving the lost. We shall be successful only if we are 100 per cent efficient for the Lord and His work.

The God We Serve

By G. E. Marsh

"God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness."

"WHAT we have in us of the image of God is the love of truth and justice," declared Demosthenes some three hundred years before Christ. To reverse the order of the old Greek's statement: What we have in us of the love of truth and justice are lingering marks of the character of Him after whose likeness we were made. Because such impressions of divine origin are ineradicable, the hearts of men instinctively turn Godward, groping in the darkness for a glimpse of Him in whose image they were made. Directing attention to the scientists and their increasing interest in religion, Dr. Edward H. Cotton in his recent book, "Has Science Discovered God?" says: "These men know full well that no quest in which man can engage can, for a moment, equal in interest the search for God through His universe. . . . Telescopes, microscopes, laboratories, expeditions for research, are only means—the end is the discovery of the First Cause, the Value of Values." From

G. E. Marsh

"The poor Indian, whose untutored mind Sees God in clouds, or hears Him in the wind," to the Einsteinian scientist and the Voltarian philosopher, consciously or unconsciously, thoughtful men throughout all ages have been seeking for God. The Psalmist but voiced this universal desire when he cried in the Forty-second Psalm:

"As the hart panteth after the water brooks,
So panteth my soul after thee, O God.
My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God."

Who is this majestic Being,

"Who sees with equal eye, as God of all,
A hero perish or a sparrow fall,
Atoms or systems into ruins hurl'd,
And now a bubble burst, and now a world"?

What mortal man with finite mind can comprehend God, the eternal Creator and Sustainer of the universe? Jesus realized the magnitude of the task men undertake when they try to come to a satisfactory understanding of God. He agreed with the writer Herrick, who said, "Tis hard to find God, but to comprehend Him as He is, is labor without end." And because Jesus appreciated this difficulty, because He knew that "threescore years and ten" is much too brief a period for men to come to fully comprehend the being and character and qualities of God, He said, "This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God" (John 17:3). It will indeed require endless ages of spiritual and intellectual development, which only immortality can provide, for men to come to know God in all His glorious reality. That is why God has promised eternal life to those who love Him, that they may have all the time they need to come to know Him better and to love Him more.

Who Is This God We Worship?

The gift of future immortality is not the only provision God has made in order that His children may know Him fully. Dr. Young has rightly said, "A God alone can comprehend a God." That is why God, wanting men to know Him, purposes to confer upon us, who were made in the beginning but "little lower" than Himself (Psalm 8:5, A.R.V.), His own divine nature, that we may be of godly stature and godly understanding, capable of really knowing God.

To you and to me, who have thought much on the problem of God from a Biblical standpoint, Paul expressed the basic fact on which all other definitions of God's nature must of necessity rest, when he said that "to us there is but one God, the

“Be Ready Always”

The Church of God, assembled in General Conference, August 17, 1922, adopted a resolution concerning conscientious objection to military service. This resolution appears in full on page 15. Sections 3 and 4 provide that the General Conference “take steps to keep the government properly informed of those thus conscientiously opposed to military service,” and “use at all times its every good office with the government in an effort to secure to each such registrant those exemptions from military service to which such persons are Constitutionally entitled.”

Accordingly, and being so counseled by an attorney, we have reported to the War Department, Washington, D. C., the names and addresses of all who from the time of adoption have signed this resolution. Others who may yet sign the resolution will also be reported. Lest, however, anyone should believe signing the resolution to be sufficient testimony wherewith to gain exemption from either military training or service, we quote part of a letter received from the Adjutant General’s office:

“If the individuals who are interested are liable for service under the Selective Training and Service Act, it is suggested that they advise their local boards in this connection, inasmuch as the matter of selecting individuals for service under the provisions of the aforementioned Act comes under the jurisdiction of such officials.”

Thus, two things of interest stand out: 1) the War Department, in acknowledging receipt of names reported, does not say that it is useless to report the names of conscientious objectors; giving us, thereby, reason to believe that it is well to continue reporting the names of such objectors as may yet so declare themselves; and 2) every conscientious objector is expected to personally report his convictions to his local Selective Service Board.

Well did Peter charge Christians: “Be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear” (1 Peter 3:15). No pastor will be permitted to plead another person’s cause before the Judge of all the earth; well would it be for every youth to so sincerely study the Bible as to become qualified to explain the hope before any man.

Test Yourself

Without the privilege of using their Bibles to read more of the texts, Bible Training School students were recently required to explain the following quotations:

- “Every cow” (Amos 4:3).
  - “Beauty for ashes” (Isa. 61:3).
  - “That great city” (Jonah 3:1).
  - “Cleanness of teeth” (Amos 4:6).
  - “Burdens of wheat” (Amos 5:11).
  - “I have surnamed thee” (Isa. 45:4).
  - “The day of the Lord” (Zeph. 1:7).
  - “They are greedy dogs” (Isa. 56:11).
  - “The lady of kingdoms” (Isa. 47:5).
  - “Out of the belly of hell” (Jonah 2:2).
  - “Not a famine of bread” (Amos 8:11).
  - “I will make thy grave” (Nahum 1:14).
  - “The Sun of Righteousness” (Mal. 4:2).
  - “His visage was so marred” (Isa. 52:14).
  - “Though it tarry, wait for it” (Hab. 2:3).
  - “Called my son out of Egypt” (Hosea 11:1).
  - “Dust shall be the serpent’s meat” (Isa. 65:25).
  - “Wages . . . into a bag with holes” (Hag. 1:6).
  - “They were not called by thy name” (Isa. 63:19).
  - “Multitudes in the valley of decision” (Joel 3:14).
  - “The desire of all nations shall come” (Hag. 2:7).
  - “Ephraim is also like a silly dove” (Hosea 7:11).
  - “Plowman shall overtake the reaper” (Amos 9:13).
  - “There was no man . . . no intercessor” (Isa. 59:16).
  - “Who shall stand when he appeareth?” (Mal. 3:2).
  - “Calling a ravenous bird from the east” (Isa. 46:11).
  - “Ye shall eat the riches of the Gentiles” (Isa. 61:6).
  - “A plumbline in the midst of . . . Israel” (Amos 7:8).
  - “His feet . . . upon the mount of Olives” (Zech. 14:4).
  - “Shall abide many days without a king” (Hosea 3:4).
  - “So will we render the calves of our lips” (Hosea 14:2).
  - “As a cloud, and as doves to their windows” (Isa. 60:8).
  - “Pressed under you, as a cart . . . of sheaves” (Amos 2:13).
  - “Whose goings forth have been from of old” (Micah 5:2).
  - “One I called Beauty . . . the other . . . Bands” (Zech 11:7).
  - “I will make Jerusalem a cup of trembling” (Zech. 12:2).
- If you know all, you are above average.*

The Messianic Covenant

By James A. Patrick

IT WOULD seem from the verses quoted in the inset, that the prophets of old "enquired and searched diligently" trying to determine when the Christ should come into the world, just as prophetic students of today are trying to determine the time of His second appearing.

At the birth of Christ the whole world was looking for some great event, and the faithful in Israel, like Simeon and Anna, were looking for "the consolation of Israel."

On what did they base their hope? On the words of the prophets, scattered here and there throughout the Old Testament. As soon as sin came into the world there came the promise to the Serpent, direct from God, "I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel" (Gen. 3:15). These words, whether spoken in thunderous tones or not, have reverberated down through the ages, until they come to us as clearly and forcibly as when they were spoken to the Serpent. From that day forward, other words were spoken by God through the prophets, words that have come ringing down through the ages, and can be heard today by those that are attuned to God, as clearly as when they were spoken.

I wonder what Balaam meant when he said of Israel, "The shout of a king is among them"? Balak had bribed Balaam to curse Israel, but instead of a curse, God put a blessing in Balaam's mouth. In Numbers 23:21, it is recorded that Balaam said, "He (God) hath not beheld iniquity in Jacob, neither hath he seen perverseness in Israel: the Lord his God is with him, and the shout of a king is among them."

I am wondering if, when Balaam said, "The shout of a king is among them," he didn't have in mind the same Person as when he said, "I shall see him, but not now: I shall behold him, but not nigh: there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel, and shall smite the corners of Moab, and destroy all the children of Sheth. . . . Out of Jacob shall come he that shall have dominion" (Num. 24:17-19).

So, throughout the Old Testament, we have illuminating flashes like the foregoing.

"Receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls. Of which salvation the prophets have enquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you: searching what, or what manner of time the spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow" (1 Peter 1:9-11).

I once heard it said that there was a golden thread running through all the cordage of the British Navy, that would identify the smallest piece. I wrote Brother R. H. Judd, and asked him if this were true. He said that according to all the evidence he could obtain, it was not true. However, even if it isn't true, the thought will serve as an illustration in this case. There is a scarlet thread running through the whole of the Old Testament, that points to a certain Personage that is so necessary to the eternal life of the world, that it is well we follow it closely. It received its first color in the blood of the animals slain to provide skins for the covering of our first parents' nakedness, and was colored again and again in the blood of the animals slain in the Jewish sacrifices till the spilling of the blood of the great Sacrifice on the cross of Calvary.

Why all the blood spilled in the offering of the sacrifices? Because "almost all things are by the law purged with blood; and without shedding of blood is no remission" (Heb. 9:22). Why should sins be remitted? Because "the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom. 6:23).

In Genesis 12:3, we are told that God said to Abraham, "I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed." Likewise, God said to Isaac, "In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed" (Gen. 26:4), and in Hebrews 11:18 it is said, "Of whom it was said, that in Isaac shall thy seed be called." Again, we read in Galatians 3:16, "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ."

In a former article, we stated that Adam was created to be a king. "God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth" (Gen. 1:28). Adam failed to attain to his rulership, because of his disobedience. Christ was sent into the world to regain what Adam lost. Christ did this by obeying the law in its entirety.

Will Christ have the same (Please turn to page 10)

The Will of God

By Arlen Marsh

REGARDLESS of one's personal attitude toward the political philosophy of the first third-term President in United States history, it must be conceded that Mr. Roosevelt spoke with a great deal of truth when, in a recent address regarding the Axis powers, he declared that "one cannot argue with an incendiary bomb."

The burgeoning of war in September, 1939, had given considerable impetus to the American movement for encouraging conscientious objections long before the President delivered his excoriation of the German-Italian-Japanese triumvirate. Some, perfectly honest in their beliefs, had endeavored to teach that no Christian should undertake even to salute a civil flag; others, less strict but no less honest, confined themselves to firm objections to any form of military service, whether it be defensive or offensive.

With an eye to just such situations as now exist, the General Conference of the Church of God, at its session of 1922, passed a resolution providing for the registration of those of its members who were sincerely conscientious in objecting to service with the armed forces of the United States or of any other nation. Blank forms were furnished for this registration, and a file of objectors was kept by the National Bible Institution so as to expedite the release of such objectors from possible draft in time of war. (At that period, a peace-time draft in the United States was hardly contemplated.)

But the official resolution made no effort to put the Church of God, in toto, on an anti-military footing. Too many members of the church were convinced that Christians should obey their civil governments even to the point of bearing arms in case of need; and, wholly aside from this quite obvious condition, a congregationally governed church could not undertake to determine by fiat what individual groups or individual members might believe and teach. So the resolution, by its own terms, protected only those who really were conscientious objectors, and left all others free to believe and teach and act as they saw fit.

By editorial invitation of The Restitution Herald, this article is now being prepared to present in the official organ of the Church of God, the views of those who,

This scholarly article by Brother Arlen Marsh, Los Angeles, California, advocating Christian loyalty to government, even to bearing arms, is presented as a sequel to Brother Huggins' article of last week advocating the views of conscientious objectors. These timely articles have been presented to help young men of the Church of God to better understand the military question. The "resolution" of which Brother Marsh speaks in his third paragraph is published in full on page 15.

Both the editor and business manager think it unwise to publish any rebuttals to these articles, at least for six months or a year. Consider well the testimony given.

with Roosevelt, believe that one cannot argue with an incendiary bomb—unless it be with an anti-aircraft gun and a fire brigade.

II

At the outset, it should be made clear that there is a distinct difference between the prerogatives of the state and those of the citizen. Many of the laws which God gave to Israel were directed at the state; many others, at the citizen. Few were directed at both. Circumcision, for example, could be applied only to the citizen; whereas the privilege of collecting taxes was restricted solely to the state.

So when it was divinely indicated—as it was, as early as Genesis 4—that men should not kill their fellow men, murder and personal vengeance alone were branded as evil in the sight of God, state executions and state functions were not concerned. For so slight a misdemeanor as fracturing some small portion of the intricate law of the Sabbath, the Israelite was summarily executed (Ex. 31:15). For adultery, for theft, for blasphemy, for other crimes too numerous to mention here, the strict wording of the God-given Mosaic law left no choice but prompt capital punishment.

God Himself did not perform miracles to see that these penalties of the law were carried out in accordance with His orders. Human hands cast stones and wielded the swords that put periods to the lives of those who had kidnaped, stolen, blasphemed, broken the anti-work regulations of the Sabbath. Human hands—despite the fact that God had expressly commanded that no man should put another man to death! Human hands—despite the fact that God had condemned Cain for murdering his brother! Yet there was no contradiction here; in the one case, individuals were forbidden, as individuals, to take life; in the other, the state, acting through government-empowered executioners, fulfilled the will of God.

So with war. The precept against murder still stands. Men still are forbidden to take other men's lives, unless they are empowered to do so by the state. In time of war, as in time of peace, the state is greater than the man; it is the master of life and death, specifically appointed to wreak vengeance upon evil-doers (Rom. 13:4), and deriving its authority from the Master of the universe (Dan.

4:32). Those who act as executioners—or, if one prefers, “soldiers”—for the state are no murderers in the sight of God, but properly assigned instruments to perform a necessary, if unpleasant, task.

It would, indeed, be odd if God were so contradictory as to command, first, that men should not take human life under any circumstances and, second, that men should not merely go to war but should exterminate every vestige of a population which was only potentially hostile. If the commandment, “Thou shalt not kill,” is to be correctly applied to all circumstances, regardless of governmental authority to perform executions, it inevitably follows that God is contradictory, regardless of the fact that the Bible expressly states that God can neither lie nor change (Titus 1:2; Mal. 3:6).

For God, on several occasions, sent Israel, to whom the Ten Commandments, including the one just quoted, had been especially addressed, into war for the primary purpose of annihilating entire peoples, men, women, and children—and, in some instances, even livestock. Because King Saul failed to observe the command of God to exterminate the Amalekites, his succession was forbidden the Israelitish throne, and the Davidic line came into power (1 Sam. 15). It hardly can be argued, without denying the basic truth of the Scriptures, that God was self-contradictory in demanding that a law against killing be violated; yet, unless this argument be made, there is no satisfactory explanation for the various Israelitish wars other than this: that the commandment, “Thou shalt not kill,” applies strictly to the individual, and not to the state; and that individuals empowered by the state to kill in the performance of their duty are not murderers, but divinely appointed to “execute wrath” on sinners (Rom. 13:1-7).

They who love types have frequently observed the similarity between Levitical inactivity during war and modern religion-inspired pacifism. Actually, however, the Levites aided in war, and on many occasions did all in their limited power to see that the battle went for Israel. Two priests held up the hands of Moses when, tiring, he let them drop and so turned the tide of battle against Israel (Ex. 17:8-13); priests carried the ark of the covenant to battle after battle (e.g., Josh. 6:2-5). In any event, it is more probable that the Levites were a type of the ministry and the whole of Israel a type of the church than that the Levites alone were a type of the present-day Christians.

III

As the Bible says with surprising clarity, the Christian is subject to the higher, or governmental, powers, which are appointed by God. Reference already has been made to Romans 13:1-7, which establishes this subjection of the Christian beyond any doubt. Reference also has been made to Daniel 4:32, which quotes God Himself as saying that He personally rules among the kingdoms of men, and sets over them whomsoever He chooses.

Now if—as has been shown—God ordered Israel, which He personally ruled, into battle regardless of His prior law that men should not take human life, it seems likely that He will, now and again, exercise the same privilege in the same way among nations in general. It has often been said, among students of religion, that the only important result of the first World War was to free Palestine from the Turks—a freedom which, in the light of prophecy, must take place in order to fulfill God’s plans. Christians pray, “Thy will be done,” and then do all in their power to see that God’s will—which, in some cases, can be accomplished only through the human instrumentality of war—be not fulfilled. That war is essentially evil is undoubtedly true; but that war sometimes accomplishes purposes—righteous purposes—which could be accomplished in no other way also is true. Had modern Christian pacifists been in Ancient Israel, they would have sworn allegiance and obedience to God—and refused to carry out His wishes.

“Recompense to no man evil for evil.” Paul, who left this observation in Romans 12, has been quoted times without number to support the contention that war is unchristian. Yet Paul was speaking of individual vengeance, of individual recompense. God, a millennium before the Pauline dictum was written, had told Israel that vengeance should be left to Him (Deut. 32:35). But God, during that entire millennium, had obliged Israel to administer capital punishment, to go to defensive war, and even to undertake the annihilation of possible enemies. The principle is the same today: individual vengeance is forbidden, but punishment meted out by the state—which must, of course, use human hands to accomplish its penalties—is given divine sanction. Inasmuch as God appoints men’s rulers, and inasmuch as Christians are bound to be obedient to civil governments, it appears an obligation upon us to assume our share of responsibility, when we are called upon to do so, in carrying out the judgments—whether by war or by judicial decision—of constituted authorities.

To be sure, as Jesus remarked, those who take the sword will perish by the sword (Matt. 26:52); but is this news? It is too obvious that men who go to war are in danger of being killed for anyone to deny safely the truth of the Christ’s curt saying. At the moment of His speech, He was protecting the ebullient Peter from immediate death—Peter had a work to do, and premature death would have been unfortunate for the future of Christendom as well as for Peter. Had Peter persisted in his mad effort to defend the Savior by his lonely sword, he would have met nothing more noble than a martyr’s grave; this, Jesus prevented by commanding him to cease attempting the impossible, and by telling him why it was impossible.

This interpretation of the Christ's words is given color by other events of New Testament times—events which have a remarkable correspondence with events of the Old Testament period. John the Baptist, approached by soldiers who wanted to know what to do to be saved, skipped any reference to forsaking their warriors' profession and declared instead, "Do violence to no man, neither accuse any falsely, and be content with your wages" (Luke 3:14). Other versions than the King James make it clear that the Baptist's reference to "violence" alluded, not to war, but to the habit of Roman soldiers of mistreating subject peoples in an effort to wrest more taxes from them, or in an effort to secure what modern racketeers call "protection money."

The first of all Gentile converts to Christianity was a soldier—Cornelius. Although he was divinely sent to Peter for special instruction regarding the Christ, he was baptized by the Apostle while he was still a Roman officer. There is no evidence to show, or even to hint, that Cornelius was asked to give up his soldiering as a result of his undertaking Christianity. Indeed, Cornelius apparently was among those in a Gentile company who, to the astonishment of Jews present, received miraculous gifts from God. Acts 10 is explicit about all this; and it is unreasonable to suppose that Peter would have neglected the opportunity to require resignation from the army on the part of Cornelius, had such resignation been a prerequisite to real Christianity. Somewhat the same circumstances surrounded the Roman officer who was described by Jesus as having more faith than anyone He had found in Israel (Matt. 8:5-13).

IV

Solomon, a great many years before child psychologists began to disrupt homes and give parents constant nightmares, settled on a principle which, like all the rest of the sage's wisdom, still holds good: "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it" (Prov. 22:6). He supplemented this axiom with another: "Chasten thy son while there is hope, and let not thy soul spare for his crying" (Prov. 19:18).

Actually, of course, both these saws were embodied in the more inclusive Golden Rule later laid down by Jesus Christ. Chastening is held by God Himself to be a requirement for correct training of children—for was not Solomon inspired by God when he wrote those words? In short, the law of love sometimes requires that the rod be given to the child in pretty severe measure, for the child's own good and for the good of the society in which the child must live. Paul declared that he whom "the Lord loveth he chasteneth" (Heb. 12:6); so even the proceedings of the Almighty are governed by the frequent use of that which, if it is spared, spoils the child.

Now God generally has chosen human beings to do His chastening for Him. In the case of Israel, He chose, in rapid succession, such militarists as Nebuchadnezzar, Belshazzar, Darius, and Cyrus to pour out His wrath upon the rebellious Hebrews. Wars are to be used in the present and future in precisely the same way (Matt. 24), and will be pointed against all nations as well as against Israel.

Hitler and Mussolini and the Japanese hegemony have established that there can be international outlaws even now, and international manias which require segregation as surely as any case of personal insanity. Secular pacifists would have us control these egomaniacs with diplomacy and ballots and education; Christian pacifists would have us do the job by waiting for a miracle from heaven or by an abiding faith in God.

But, as Mr. Roosevelt suggested in his recent speech, one cannot argue with an incendiary bomb. Stuka dive bombers and tanks that travel sixty miles an hour cannot be stopped with words. And God has—this was pointed out before—relied almost exclusively upon human agents to carry out His plans; He has intervened with miracles but rarely in the affairs of men. From a wholly humanitarian point of view, therefore, the democracies must maintain a military machine capable of crushing or at least checking the advances of the Jew-baiting, race-hating enemies of Christianity and liberty. Bullets must be answered with more bullets, planes with more planes, tanks with more tanks, men with more men. The chastening of outlaw nations cannot be done with words and hope.

It may be suggested that this is written from the viewpoint of democratic nations only. Suppose we were citizens of one of the outlaw governments, a government frankly out to get all it can get by force? The situation remains practically the same. At the time Paul wrote that rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil (Rom. 13:3), he was in prison, subject to the capricious whims of one of the most cruel emperors of all history—Nero Caesar. Christians were being burned as living torches to light Nero's garden parties. Paul himself was in constant danger of torture and death. And Cornelius was endowed with the Holy Ghost when he was an active officer in the army of iron Rome! The individual has no concern, in an absolutism, with the mistakes the government may make; he is as surely subject to the laws of that government as if it were a wholly Christian nation. Unless, of course, it demands of him that he worship another god than Jehovah (Dan. 6), and unless the government demands service contrary to positively expressed laws of Jehovah.

Here arises a problem tied in closely with the first: in a democracy, the citizen is the government; he cannot escape the fact even if he will; if he permits, through religious or other causes, his share of the government to lapse, he still is a part of the government, even though inactive. In an absolutism, he is not responsible for the government's mistakes; in a democracy, insofar as he can influence the majority opinion, he is. Joseph, Daniel, Cornelius, others famous in the Bible for being righteous men, served pagan governments as important rulers, and without condemnation from the God whom they revered. Have circumstances altered since Cornelius was baptized? Are we now to avoid taking our share in governmental enterprise on the grounds that we are not citizens of human nations, but of heaven? Are we to pray, as Paul required (1 Tim. 2:1-3), that those who rule over us do well, and then refuse to have our legal part in the selection of those rulers and their policies? Indeed, since in a democracy we are the government whether we will or no, it is not useless to pray for those in authority unless we who are in authority take some steps to see that Christian practices prevail? And if we take our rightful share in government, have we fulfilled our duty when we send others to do our fighting for us at those times when the nation is in peril?

V

"The weapons of our warfare are not carnal," according to 2 Corinthians 10:4. But precisely what is the warfare to which Paul alluded? Physical war, with guns and fists and bayonets? Spiritual and mental war, with opinions and ridicule and cynicism? The balance of the chapter from which this short, much-quoted excerpt is drawn seems to point rather to war with sin—a war which must be conducted, not with spears (not even with pruning-hooks), but with the mind and spirit. David confessed frequently that Jehovah was the God of his strength—but David did not permit this faith to interfere with his military establishment. He had a religious and a civil life; so have we. To escape this dual existence, we should have to escape from life entirely. We cannot serve sin and righteousness together (Matt. 6:24); but we cannot avoid serving God and civil governments—which, in reality, are a single master, inasmuch as obedience to civil law is obedience to God's law.

VI

Some have tried to settle the whole problem by straddling the fence of opinion and action by going out for noncombative military service. It is a poor solution at best. Building guns for other men to shoot, building planes for other men to fly, healing soldiers so they can go back to be shot once more, buying bonds to provide the guns and bullets and tanks and bombs and bandages—there is no essential difference between encouraging a man to murder and committing the murder oneself. And in the sight of the conscientious objector, war is murder. Even civil law holds the accessory to a crime guilty with the actual doer; God will do no less. Some men must make the guns and bullets; but the man who does the making is as guilty of the killing as the man who does the shooting. For, without the guns and bullets, how could the soldier do his shooting? Jesus said that whoever might cause a child to fall might better be drowned than face the judgment of God (Matt. 18:6); is it unlikely that a similar judgment will be meted out to those who cause adults to fall? And is it causing adults to fall, if one believes in evading combative military service, to encourage others to undertake such service, by providing them with the wherewithal to fight?

VII

These, then, are the condensed opinions of those who believe that it is impossible to argue with an incendiary bomb. In so limited a space, no comprehensive treatment of the multifarious facets involved in the question of military service could be given. Nor has it been possible to treat of many texts, generally quoted, which have been used by both sides of the controversy. In summation, it can only be stated that it is the desire of both conscientious objectors—who are really conscientious on religious grounds—and non-pacifists to do the will of God. Neither faction has the desire to violate the law, neither the desire to lead anyone astray. The question is one which must be settled individually—it cannot be satisfactorily settled by a blanket dictum of a General Conference or a local church, nor can it be settled by any minister or leader for those other than himself.

LET US PRAY

By Mrs. Floyd Mills

IN PSALM 55:17, we read: "Evening, and morning, and at noon, will I pray, and cry aloud: and he shall hear my voice." These were the words of David, one of the greatest men of the Old Testament times.

Many of us neglect prayer as much as any other part of our Christian duties. We read in Daniel 6:10, that Daniel was a man who offered prayer three times daily, though he knew that he might lose his life if the king discovered that he was praying to Jehovah. Our daily lives would run more smoothly if we would take time each morning before we arise to ask the Lord for guidance through the day. We might not then do or say those things which displease Him and which make life so miserable for ourselves and our loved ones.

Some of us also neglect to offer a few words of thanksgiving before we eat. We must do this, too, and we should teach our children to give thanks before eating. In all instances recorded in the Bible where Jesus ate. He first offered thanks to God. If we are to pattern our lives after Jesus, we must not forget to pray every day. Further, we should pray more at home, and not wait until Sunday to do it all in church.

Religious Education

By Barbara Fish

EACH day at one o'clock, five days a week for a whole semester, we students of the Bible Training School have joined Brother L. E. Conner to study Religious Education. I sat down last night and thought: Just what have I received from these four months of study? At first I could not think of very much that I had received from it. Then gradually this and that came to me, until I found I had a goodly list of things added to my knowledge.

When a child comes into the world it brings no knowledge with it, but it has an ability to learn. Of course, it has a few of the traits of its parents, but they do not show in the child for some time. If the child is taken from its parents when only a few days old, he will be entirely different than if he had been left with his parents. Why? Because the environment is slightly or a great deal different than it would have been had the child stayed with his parents. The traits of the parents that he has inherited may never show, because his new parents have done nothing to bring those traits to the front.

To develop a child into a Christian, one must begin slowly. When the child is very small, he will want to hear stories from the Bible. If the child begins to show he is getting tired, one should quit immediately and wait until the child again gains his interest. The child must be taught carefully at home. As the child grows older, the parents will want him to be popular. Children are never better than their parents; therefore, the parents must be careful how they conduct their lives. Moreover, they must study and learn to understand their children during early youth and adolescence. The methods change in how to solve the problems that arise. Each parent must study his children's problems, and learn how to take care of each problem.

The first few years of the child's life are the most important, for then he is thinking and asking about all he sees and hears. The child will hear certain ideas of God when he is playing. He will tell his father or mother about this, and the parents must be capable of adding to the idea or showing the child where his idea is wrong. All questions of children should be answered at once and answered truthfully. If the parent or teacher does not know the answer, he should tell the child, and later find an answer.

As a child comes into the adolescent period, he will gradually want to drop out of Sunday school. He will not want to take part in programs and other church activities, because he is self-conscious. This period is a very important time, for it is the most difficult time to keep the boy or girl interested. He begins to study, at school, different ideas of the religious subjects, ideas which will cause him to doubt former teachings. Then it is up to the parent to teach him the right idea.

During this period an adult friend is very valuable to the boy or girl, if the adult is a worthy person. The young person then will have someone to whom he may turn when he wishes to confide in someone. The father and mother are the favorable ones, if they will let the child feel that they are sincere and ready to help him in trouble and have fun with him when he feels good.

The average parents do not think of their responsibilities for the religious development of their children. They seem to think some miracle will come to their children and turn their characters into good Christian ones. Parents should learn that they must help to give their children a Christian education.

The teachers, too, should be those who understand children, for a child usually thinks his schoolteacher and Sunday school teacher are always right, and he will keep in mind what they say even more than what the parents may say.

The leaders in our churches should be trained, for they, too, have great problems. It is a fortunate church that has a trained leader for the superintendent and Sunday school activities. The preacher should work more with the young people of the church, rather than with the adults, for the young people are the ones who will soon comprise the church.

We also studied the meaning of the subconscious and the unconscious mind. Always before, I had believed that the subconscious mind was brought forth when one was dreaming and faintly recalled things that he had heard when awake. Also, I thought that the unconscious mind was when one had been hit too hard on the head in an accident, and just laid on a cot, and knew nothing at all. According to our author, however, the subconscious mind is one that, though I may be looking at one special object, I see other things besides. The unconscious mind is the experiences and ideas that are registered and laid up in one's mind.

Then, there were ideas on how to study, and principles about learning. Also, many personal experiences were brought up in class which added knowledge and better understanding of the life we probably have just begun.

THE GOD WE SERVE

Father, of whom are all things, and we in him" (1 Cor. 8:6). A recognition of the unity of God, that is, that there is but one God, is a necessary postulate to all logical reasoning concerning the origin and order of the universe. Aratus and Cleanthes, the Greek poets quoted by Paul in his address on Mars' Hill (Acts 17:28), uninspired though they were, had reached the conclusion at which the Apostle had arrived by a different route—not only that we are the offspring of God, but that God is a unit being and consequently supreme over all.

While the knowledge that God is one does not tell us what He is altogether, it does indicate one of the most important qualities that constitute the divine nature and character. The first of the utterances thundered forth from the trembling Mountain of the Law was, "Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord" (Deut. 6:4). Paul carried the affirmation of God's unity over into the New Testament with the positive declaration: "There is . . . one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all" (Eph. 4:4, 6).

If we are to understand God, who He is and what He is, we must not confuse Him with any other being, however majestic and worthy of our worship such an one may be, for God is unique; He stands alone, declaring that "before me there was no God formed, neither shall there be after me. . . . I am the first, and I am the last; and beside me there is no God" (Isa. 43:10; 44:6).

It is by this unity, this oneness of being, that the supremacy of God is assured. Without it, He would not be God. The ancients ascribed to their multiple deities powers differing both in kind and in degree. Each god was believed to be supreme and all-powerful in one or more of the qualities he possessed, but was subordinate to the other gods in other things. But the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, "the God of our fathers," is the one true and living God, originator, creator, and possessor of all the powers in heaven and in earth; supreme in all things, subordinate in none. Neither His authority or ability is limited in any way, nor is it shared with any being in the universe, except as God may will it to be for a given time. In the case of Jesus, to whom, after His resurrection, God gave "all power in heaven and in earth," the assignment was made for a limited time: until He shall have put all things under His feet. "And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all" (1 Cor. 15:28). For when God said that "all things are put under him, it is manifest that he (God) is excepted, which did put all things under him" (v. 27).

The Perfection of God

Because God is perfect in all things, He never makes mistakes. And because He never makes mistakes, He is altogether righteous, holy, faithful, and lovable. There can be no imperfections of purpose, character, or accomplishment with God. It is this very quality of perfection, so contrary to our own imperfect natures, that enables our heavenly Father, who cannot know pain, sorrow, or disappointment in Himself, to sympathize with us in our human weakness. Because His knowledge of our natures is perfect, He knows all about us; He understands us thoroughly. David realized this and said: "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him. For he knoweth our frame; he remembereth that we are dust" (Psalm 103:13, 14).

God not only knows our bodily weaknesses because He made us subject to such weaknesses, but He knows our emotional natures as well. James must have experienced much of the Lord's sympathy, for he wrote so understandingly of it. "Behold, we count them happy which endure. Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have seen the end of the Lord; that the Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy" (James 5:11).

It is God's unchangeable perfection, assured by His oneness of Being, that makes it possible for us to approach Him under all circumstances without anxiety. Why should we be afraid of God? His perfection forbids that He should do anything that is not for our good. Job correctly analyzed His character when he said: "Surely God will not do wickedly" (Job 34:12).

The thought of God's perfection need not frighten nor dismay us, for in it we find our most cogent reason for having confidence in Him. Were He less than perfect, we could not trust Him completely. But God's sight, His hearing, His understanding—all of His faculties of perception—are perfect, they are without limit. Consequently, we know that He can see our tears, hear our prayers, and understand exactly how we, as mortals, feel, and fully sympathize with us in all of our sorrows and disappointments.

God knows! And how glad we ought to be that He knows!

It was because He knew our needs in every way that He sent Jesus the Christ to provide a means by which we might escape the result of our own misdeeds and the misdeeds of our fathers and of our fathers' fathers! "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God" (Rom. 3:23), and "the wages of sin is death" (6:23). Nothing can change those facts. But the Lord, understanding the frailty and limitations of our natures, "laid on him the iniquity of us all" (Isa. 53:6).

This Is the God We Serve!

Such, then, is the God we worship and the God we serve! He is tender, just, loving, and infinitely kind. He is more than a great Creator, who remembers the weakness of our dust-formed bodies and is merciful! He is more than a mighty King, who rules the universe for our eternal good! He is more than a tender Father, who keenly realizes and sympathizes with our mortal pain and bitter disappointments! He is all this, but more, much more, than all this! For He is more than we can ever see with our natural eyes, or understand with our finite minds, or appreciate with our fleshly hearts! For God, our God, is love! He is love personified, love in action, love in process of accomplishing its desire! His purpose, His wish, His plan for us today, tomorrow, and for eternity, is grounded in love, divine love, supreme love, a love that only a God who is supreme in all things could have to show! And He wants us to love Him in return! He craves our confidence! He invites our faith! For He needs us now — today — to bring hope to the hopeless world by assuring it of His love and of the coming of a Kingdom of peace, prosperity, and brotherhood. And, then, God needs us for eternal service. He needs us to help Him carry out His age-spanning program of redemption, restitution, and re-creation, after Jesus comes!

So, why not confess our love for Him now? Why not acknowledge our confidence in His faithfulness, our appreciation of His Fatherhood, and seek in humbleness and obedience, henceforth, to do His will?

THE MESSIANIC COVENANT

dominion that Adam was to have had? Pilate asked Jesus, "Art thou a king then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world" (John 18:37).

In Daniel 7:13, 14, it is said, "I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed."

Where will this Kingdom and dominion be? Most people believe they are going to heaven to inherit their eternal Kingdom. It is the Kingdom of heaven, and Christ is in heaven, isn't He? But Christ said, "If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also" (John 14:3). Daniel 7:27 tells us very definitely where this Kingdom will be: "The kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."

What kind of a kingdom will it be? Will it be the same old world we have now under the whole heaven, with all its sickness, sorrow, and horrors of war? I know we are a very literal people, and sometimes people try to make light of us and make us look ridiculous. The Brush Creek, Ohio, brethren have sometimes been accused of believing that they would live in the same old house and plow with the same old gray mare as they do now. I guess it will not be quite like that, but I'll tell you, brethren, that we are going to be real people in the Kingdom of heaven, and that Kingdom will be under the whole heaven on an earth made new. Listen to Isaiah speaking for God: "For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered nor come into mind" (Isa. 65:17). Praise the blessed Father! Who would want to remember a world such as we have today with all its horrors of war and sickness and sorrow? Let us read farther: "But be ye glad and rejoice for ever in that which I create: for, behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy. And I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my people: and the voice of weeping shall be no more heard in her" (vv. 18, 19).

Of course, all this was spoken of Israel, but you may be sure that the Church of God will come in for its full share of all this glory, for we are to be co-heirs and co-rulers with Christ in this glorious Kingdom.

Is it worth while to struggle on amid all the discouragements with which we are beset? The world goes by with a smirk and a sneer when we try to teach men the gospel. So many professors are such miserable hypocrites. The world is going to the dogs, anyway, why not let it go? This country was founded on the principles of the Christian religion. Today, less than half of the people make any profession, at all. I heard this statement in a sermon over the radio: "Before the war Europe was nominally Christian, today the majority are atheists." Well, what is the use to continue the struggle? We are not getting anywhere. Besides, we can have so much fun in the world.

But, brethren, let us turn our faces toward the "Sun of righteousness," and the shadows will all be behind us. Do we love the father or mother, husband or wife, brother or sister, or the little hands that caressed our faces, and the little lips that were pressed to ours, but who are now sleeping in death? Is life worth living if we can't see them again? No, it is not. Then, let us do as Christ did, "who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God" (Heb. 12:2), or as Moses, who, "when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt: for he had respect unto the . . . reward" (Heb. 11:24-26).

When the Kingdom is set up, the following conditions will obtain: "I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away" (Rev. 21:3, 4).

Is it worth while to sacrifice a little, to suffer a little for Christ's sake? He is offering us everything that is worth while. No more parting, no more sorrow, no more pain, no more death!

My beloved brethren, what Christ has done for us is worth everything. Let us be always ready to pay the price.

Dear reader, are you ready for the Master's coming? If not, get ready now, for He is coming very soon.

A DATE ! ?

By Alfred Anthon

"That the blood of all the prophets, which was shed from the foundation of the world, may be required of this generation; from the blood of Abel unto the blood of Zacharias . . . verily I (Jesus) say unto you (Jews), It shall be required of this generation" (Luke 11:50, 51).

THIS prophetic threat (curse, punishment) was spoken in the first part of the "thirties," A.D., and was fulfilled in 70 A.D. Therefore, the word "generation" as used by Christ, at this time, meant about forty years.

"Now learn a parable of the fig tree . . . When ye shall see these things come to pass (the budding of the fig—return of Jews to Palestine), know that it (He) is nigh. . . Verily I (Jesus) say unto you, that this generation shall not pass, till all these things be done" (Mark 13:28-30).

Jesus said He did not know when He would be sent back from heaven. But, here in Mark 13:26-30, Christ said that He would be sent back before the end of the generation that would see the budding of the fig tree. Christ did not then know when the fig tree would bud. He knew how soon after it did bud that He would be sent back. If in Luke 11:50, 51, Christ's word, "generation," meant forty years, then why does not the same word mean the same thing in Mark 13:26-30?

We think the fig tree began to bud in 1917, when the Balfour Pact was signed. Forty years later would be 1957.

This is not date-setting. It is given to enthuse us that Christ's return is nearer than when we first believed.

BUILDING YOUR LIBRARY

Book Reviews

By Arlen Marsh

Popular though it is, Arnold's Commentary (Fleming H. Revell; $1.00) on the International Sunday School Lessons has always seemed to this somewhat prejudiced critic a little weak. The Truth Seekers' Sunday School Quarterly was founded on Arnold's, but your reviewer still thinks Arnold's is weak. Arnold's has a good deal to offer the teacher who has facilities for securing general background material outside a single book; but unless the teacher does have such facilities, Arnold's gives him little but the taste of suggested teaching methods. The suggested methods are good, but the material given by the Commentary for backing up those methods with interesting facts and questions is notable mainly by its absence. Nevertheless, "Building Your Library" can be wrong—and Arnold's is certainly the most popular of all the Sunday school lesson one-volume annual helps.

Snowden's Sunday School Lessons (Macmillan; $1.50), on the other hand, is less well known but more complete. It's a larger book, and it fills the extra space with extra comments, extra questions for class discussion, extra suggestions for teaching, extra background material. The blackboard outlines provided by Arnold's are not found in Snowden's—but just how many teachers do you know who ever use blackboard outlines, anyway?

If you have good eyesight and plenty of patience, you may like the best of the one-volume Bible commentaries: Jamieson, Fausset, and Brown, authors. It's orthodox in its viewpoint, naturally—there is no generally circulated Bible commentary that is not—but this is one of the trials which we heretics must bear. The triumvirate of authors has endeavored to condense critical comments on the whole Bible into four volumes—and the publishers (William B. Eerdmans; $4.95) have put all four volumes into one binding, making an easily handled but pretty hard to read book of the whole. A good concordance is more valuable than a commentary—but every teacher and student ought to have some kind of critical aid to study, even so. Jamieson's, Fausset's, and Brown's efforts meet the requirement fairly well.

Order all books listed in this column from the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Illinois, thereby building your library and at the same time helping to support the General Conference activities.

"Lord, teach us to pray" (Luke 11:1).

A Parable on Prayer

In many parables we are not told the meaning, but have to search for it ourselves. In this story we are told the reason for it, before we hear the story. It is "that men ought always to pray, and not to faint" (Luke 18:1).

There was in a city a judge who feared neither man nor God. There also was a poor widow in this city. She had no money to pay someone to aid her in getting her cry for help heard by the judge. So, for a while the judge did not heed her cries. Finally, he decided to help her, because she troubled him with her continual crying.

Now, our God is just. He looks upon our hearts. A poor man has the same chance as a rich one. He it is who is the very opposite of the unjust judge. We should not stop praying if our prayer is not answered the first time we pray. If we are "full of faith," we will pray all the more, for we know to whom we pray. We know He hears us and will answer us in His own time.

Sometimes we are tested. We pray for things God would like to give us—wisdom, perhaps—but He cannot give it to us because we fail to study His Word. We must be ready to receive the answer He has to our prayer. He waits for us to do our part, then He will do His.

The Publican

A publican was a taxgatherer. The Roman government collected taxes from the people.

The Roman Senate gave the work of taxgathering to the highest bidders. That wasn't a very sure way to tell the kind of men who obtained those jobs, was it? These men were usually Romans. They, in turn, let the work out in the different districts and localities. These latter publicans were often Jews. They were disliked by their fellow men, because they were dishonest and were working for the Roman government which the people disliked.

Two Prayers

The Pharisee, who was outwardly a good church member, went to pray. He stood and prayed with himself (Luke 18:11), "God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are . . . or even as this publican." "And the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner" (Luke 18:13).

Jesus told this parable to the ones who "trusted in themselves" and "despised others" (Luke 18:9). Following the story, Christ said, "I tell you, this man went down to his house justified rather than the other." He also tells us why: "For every one that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted" (Luke 18:14).

The publican could feel God's mercy, for he truly was sorry and repented. The Pharisee should have remembered that with all his "good works" he was still a sinner and stood in need of forgiveness and God's mercy.

The righteousness of God is made known upon all who believe, "for all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God; being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus" (Rom. 3:23, 24).

Time for Tasks

"It seems that everyone of us
Is in a great big hurry,
We haven't time for deeds of worth;
Just time to rush—and worry.

"Do we give so many hours
To nonsense and lament,
That when we reach the worth-while jobs,
We find our time's all spent?"

If You Are, You Will

The invention of the "klystron" wasn't just an accident or luck, it was the result of very thorough preparation. This little gadget, heralded as the greatest advance in the field of radio since 1906, will increase the safety of air travel manifold, and will be of great assistance in the defense of our country.

The natural laws behind the invention of the klystron have been in force ever since the world began, but two men who set out in life with a purpose and prepared themselves for their work ahead finally succeeded in harnessing the forces of nature governed by those laws. Sigurd Varian, a skilled air line pilot with a technical school training, saw the need for a new, powerful, and completely dependable radio transmitter. His brother, Russell, with a Master's Degree in physics, undertook the task of solving the theoretical problems involved. With the help of William V. Hansen, a professor of physics, the two brothers, after many months of ceaseless work finally succeeded in their quest. Their preparation will continue to pay ever-increasing dividends to the entire world in the years to come.

Christ did not begin His ministry until He was approximately thirty years of age, but at a very early age He was astounding the learned men of the Temple—as related in Luke 2:46, 47. He surely did not receive His wide knowledge of the Old Testament Scriptures merely by chance. Although little is known about the period in His life between the ages of twelve and thirty years, when the time came for Him to begin His work among men, He was prepared—prepared to withstand temptation, and prepared for the task of laying a foundation for His church.

Are you preparing yourself for a place in the Kingdom? In your church and in your local Berean Society there are many positions to fill and much work to be done. If your Berean meetings are to be interesting, and if your friends who have not yet heard of the gospel of Christ are to learn the truths in the Bible, someone is going to have to study in order to tell them. That is something each one of you can do. Your forefathers had the Bible alone, and had to dig the truth out as best they could. Today you have a great many books to assist you to understand the Scriptures. But you must go after the truth; you have to study these books, and you must take time to think about what you have read.

What, too, of the other duties in your church? Perhaps you cannot write, lead a study hour, or fill an office—now, but if you really want to, you can learn. If you will study the requirements of the work you would like to do, and will make every effort to prepare yourself for this work, your opportunity will come—if you have to make it for yourself. If you are prepared, you will succeed.

Of the World?

* * *

By Vivian Kirkpatrick

Someone once uttered a profound truth. It was, "Actions speak louder than words." We might utter another one—"Churches have too many members in proportion to the number of Christians." Jesus once spoke a parable of two sons. Father asked one to work in his vineyard. He answered, "I will not," but later he had a change of heart, repented, and went. The second son on being asked, said, "I go"—and did not. Actions speak loudest.

Talk to young people. Sure, they are Christians! "This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoureth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me."

"They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." But does this versè hold true of the present-day Christians? Do they know more about the things of the world or about the things of the Christ who gives them the only hope which they have?

Check up, and see for yourself where interest seems to be today. The average young person can name many more movie stars than he can Biblical characters, can name more movie or song titles than he can recite verses from the Bible. Young people can name you more modern novel titles than they can name you titles of Bible books. Which will do the most good when Christ makes His appearance?

Truly, in the age in which we live it behooves us to "about face," prove to God and the world that we may be living in the world, but that our thoughts are on higher things, that we are preparing ourselves for a far greater place than the one in which we live today, that we are in the world, but not of it, and have no communion with the world, continuing true to the trust we hold for God.

KOKOMO, INDIANA

We are glad to announce that another new member has been added to the Kokomo church. Mr. Alton Shaw was given the hand of fellowship on February 2.

Bro. Cecil Smead is with us the first and third Sundays each month. The attendance is very good. We will begin a two-weeks' meeting the first Sunday in March, the Lord willing, with Bro. Smead as our speaker. We hope that many may avail themselves of the opportunity to attend these services.

O. J. Parker.

BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL NEWS

The freshmen are receiving much help from Bro. L. E. Conner's class in Orthoepy. Every minister needs to know how to read correctly, how to give the correct pronunciation, emphasis, and inflection.

All the students are studying Archaeology from Bro. Conner. Our textbook is, "The Bible and Archaeology" by Kenyon. The book is not as interesting as we had hoped, although, as Bro. Conner says, "We may strike oil a little farther on." The findings of archaeologists that corroborate the Scriptures are what interest us.

Bro. Sydney E. Magaw teaches New Testament Interpretation. The classes are so interesting that the time passes swiftly. We are now studying in the Book of Romans.

We are studying Missions on Mondays and Tuesdays. Our textbook for this course is, "The Progress of World-wide Missions" by Glover, and Bro. Magaw is our instructor. More emphasis should be placed on missionary work. We, as a denomination, have not done our part in carrying the gospel to other lands—only one man, as far as I know, who might be called a foreign missionary. Jesus said, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature" (Mark 16:15). Let us, therefore, awake, arise, and go.

Religious Journalism is also taught by Bro. Magaw, on Wednesdays and Thursdays. We learn the importance of writing, how to write, and how to correct copy. There is much work in preparing articles for publication.

The Junior's are studying Cushman's "Business Administration of the Church." Bro. Conner presenting this subject in an interesting way. His experiences are very helpful. Our churches need better business executives; many ministers are not capable in such leadership.

Sr. Leila Mae Doeden teaches music every Friday. We are being taught choir directing, how to lead congregational singing, and voice culture.

Bros. Frank Laning, Leonard Robins, and William Fey of the Ripley, Ill., Church of God recently came with Bro. C. E. Lapp to visit our School. Francis Burnett and I especially enjoyed seeing these brethren from our home town. Bro. Robins gave an interesting talk about bees—he surely knows his "bees-ness."

The Summer School

Plans are being made to conduct a summer course of the Bible Training School, June 17 - July 25, provided twenty or more students enroll by June 1. The Board of Religious Education believes the Summer School should be self-supporting; therefore, it will be necessary for at least twenty students to attend. There will again be the best possible teaching talent, and the tuition complete for the six weeks will be only thirty dollars. Announcement of the teachers will be made within two or three weeks, but in the meantime we wish to hear from the students who are already planning to come. Address, The Summer Bible Training School, Oregon, Illinois.

Sydney E. Magaw, Chairman
 Board of Religious Education.

MINISTERS OF THE CHURCH OF GOD

This notice is to clarify any misunderstanding regarding the card identification certificates which have been issued the past two years to ministers of the denomination.

Each card is a Certificate of Membership, National Ministerial Association of the Church of God, and is issued only to ministers who are paid-up members of the Ministerial Association. Any minister of the Church of God may become a member of the Association upon payment of the regular annual dues of fifty cents. Immediately upon receipt of the dues payment, a Certificate of Membership will be sent to the member.

These certificates must be renewed annually, and will be issued upon receipt of the annual dues. Certificates issued between this date and August 1, 1941, will be void after that date.

Vivian Kirkpatrick, Secy.
 Ministerial Association.

DOING OUR DUTY

The Church of God has an opportunity of helping England in a much different way than is being generally considered today, but it is an opportunity, nonetheless, and in God's sight may well be our responsibility. As previously reported, certain men in England have requested that we send ten thousand tracts for distribution across the water. However, due to the war, we must both publish and pay for the shipment. The tracts are now ready, and we have recently heard from Britain that the men are alive, active in their tract-distributing work, and hoping to soon receive our shipment.

To date, we have received $20.00 toward the expense of this order, but we need about $120.00, that is, about $100.00 more. Will our missionary-minded brethren please quickly respond to this responsibility, that the tracts may soon be sent to England. The tracts will be messengers of life in a land where death constantly threatens. Send your offering today.

Sydney E. Magaw, Secretary.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

"If I can get my stiff fingers pliable enough to hold my pen, I shall supply copy sometime this month for The Herald. I know it adds to an editor's trouble in getting out a breezy paper to be short of copy, as it added to the Israelites' perplexity in Egypt to have to make bricks without straw."—R. A. Curtis, Dayton, Ohio.

Bro. and Sr. James A. Patrick, Orange Road, Ashland, Ohio, will celebrate their fortieth wedding anniversary, February 27.

"We plan to build a new church this year, if the Lord wills."—Mary Richardson, Hammond, La.

Bro. H. H. Hawkins and family, Cleveland, Ohio, and Bro. and Sr. George Loudenslager, Oregon, Ill., were recent visitors with Bro. and Sr. S. J. Lindsay, Tempe, Ariz.

Extra Heralds. Send us names and correct addresses of persons to whom you may wish to send this week's Herald. We have a good supply of extras which we shall gladly mail out for you at five cents each. Or, if five or more are mailed to one address, they may be purchased for three cents each; possibly your church can distribute twenty-five or fifty. Rouse up that slumbering missionary spirit!

Attention is called to the announcement by Bro. Vivian Kirkpatrick, secretary of the Ministerial Association, as ministers who may wish these Ministerial card certificates are to obtain them by addressing him, rather than writing the National Bible Institution.

Wanda Louise, weighing nine and one fourth pounds, arrived January 27, to brighten the home of Bro. and Sr. Laurel Macy, Troy, Ohio.

RESOLUTION

Passed by the General Conference of the Church of God August 17, 1922, and published with the minutes of said Conference in a supplement to The Restitution Herald September 12, 1922.

WHEREAS, There are many of the members of the Church of God who, as individuals, sincerely and earnestly believe that military service, like similar activity in private life, is, in principle, contrary to the principles of forgiveness and love as taught by Jesus, and later by His apostles, and is, therefore, unchristian; and,

Whereas, Many of said Church of God believe, as is reported to have been stated during the administration of ex-president Wilson, that "there is no non-combatant service," but that what is called non-combatant service is a necessary part and parcel of any and every military campaign; that the participant therein is a contributor to the main service, and, as such, is, in harmony with common law and practice of holding one who aids and abets another in the commission of unlawful deeds, a participant and an offender with the instigator and executor of the offense; and,

Whereas, The Government of the United States has from its beginning recognized the right of every person to exalt service unto God and His Son above the service to country and to flag (and this without in any manner manifesting disrespect to one's country) in that it has provided, by its Constitution, in Amendment 1, Article 1—

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof";—and, Article 1, Section 9, Paragraph 2.

"The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, shall not be suspended, unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it";— and, further, Article 6, Paragraph 2,

"This Constitution . . . shall be the supreme law of the land"; and,

Whereas, The Government has continuously sought to execute the spirit of these constitutionally recognized duties and provisions respecting all persons who furnish conclusive evidence that they, as avowed followers of Christ, are conscientiously opposed to military service; and,

Whereas, This Church of God does not profess a creed, other than the Bible, by or according to which it receives or controls its members, and therefore cannot declare, as a matter of denominational creed, as to military service of its membership; therefore,

Be It Resolved, That this General Conference of the Church of God, in Conference assembled at Oregon, Illinois, August 17, 1922—

(1) Urge each individual member of its number to at all times, in military and all other matters, continue true and faithful in the performance of Christian duty according to personal conviction as to what constitutes faithful and loyal service to God through His Son;

(2) Open a book of registration for the use of each and every one of its members, male and female, who may wish to register as one religiously and conscientiously opposed to military service, combatant, non-combatant, or both;

(3) Take steps to keep the government properly informed of those thus conscientiously opposed to military service;

(4) Use at all times its every good office with the Government in an effort to secure to each such registrant those exemptions from military service to which such persons are Constitutionally entitled;

(5) Cancel from the register the names of any and all persons who by habitual life prove lack of sincerity in their conscientious objection to individual military service; and,

(6) Be It Further Resolved, That nothing in this resolution shall be construed to constitute a cause for Christian fellowship with reference to such as do, or do not, register as personally opposed to military service, either in a combatant or non-combatant manner.

L. E. Conner . . . Business Manager
Orpha LeMasurier . . . Treasurer

Subscription Rate.—51 issues per annum, $2.00.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53,54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him. (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

— Tracts and Books —

"This gospel must first be published among all nations" (Mark 13:10).

The gospel of the Kingdom must be preached in all nations before Jesus will return from heaven. Every member of the Church of God can help to evangelize the world. Order a good supply of tracts; then send them to your friends. It costs nothing to slip a tract into a letter, and it may "save a soul from death."

The following tracts and books, most of them written by men prominent at some time in the Church of God, are for sale by the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Illinois. Send a self-addressed envelope or postage for tracts not priced. How many can you use?

A Minister and a Witness

By Harvey Krogh, Jr.

IT WAS the greatest work given to a man to perform, since our Savior's work of atonement. This man was not yet a Christian, but all that he needed was to be set in the right direction. He had zeal, he was faithful and steadfast, but before turning to Christ he was struck down—even as we are sometimes.

Saul, having authority to imprison followers of Jesus, was on his way to a great city when the bright light from heaven made him blind. Having been thrown to the earth and hearing a voice inquire, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" he answered, "Who art thou, Lord?" Then Jesus revealed Himself and His purpose: "I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, to make thee a minister and a witness both to these things which thou hast seen, and of those things in the which I will appear unto thee; delivering thee from the people, and from the Gentiles, unto whom now I send thee, to open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me" (Acts 26:16-18).

What a charge! We note, too, that before the main part of the command, Jesus assured deliverance. Jesus always assures His servants protection, and He also sees that their expenses are paid. He knows how to take care of His own.

The first thing that Paul was sent to do was "to open their eyes." Why? Were the Gentiles' eyes shut? Yes, and, O, how blind they were in those days! They were blinded by sin and the filth into which they had fallen. Their idols and their teachers of philosophy had closed their eyes, and they could not see God.

Paul was also sent "to turn them from darkness to light," for they were lost in the appalling ignorance of their time. They groped in superstitions. They needed the blessing of light. Paul was also able to turn them from "the power of Satan unto God."

What was the purpose of doing all of these blessed things for the Gentiles who were so miserably blind and unworthy? Jesus gave the answer: "That they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith." Unworthy as they were, Christ wanted them to be forgiven. He desired for them positions among such upright men as Peter, and James, and John the beloved disciple. Yes, Christ died for the ungodly. His sacrifice was also for you and me.

Paul went to important centers of the world and faithfully obeyed the Savior. When we look over the world today, we see the same need of Paul's day multiplied a thousand times. Today, there is blindness among the people, from the most ignorant to those who are supposed to be the most enlightened. Men do not believe that one of the world wars, and maybe the present one, will lead to the coming of the Great King, the Son of God, who will establish an unending Kingdom of peace. Men are blinded with pleasure. "As the days of Noe, were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be" (Matt. 24:37-39). We hear reports from some of the warring nations concerning their pleasure madness, and wonder if it would not be better for them if they were in sackcloth and ashes.

Men are blinded with the cares of this life. We are warned of this by the Savior, saying: "Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth" (Luke 21:34, 35).

God's Invisible Hand

Though "fingers of a man's hand" wrote upon the wall of Belshazzar's palace, Daniel interpreted a part of the writing as: "God hath numbered thy kingdom and finished it" (Dan. 5:26). Obviously, the invisible God, though "slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy" (Psalm 103:8), was moved for His name's sake to judge the Babylonian king; and, though uninvited, attended the drunken feast to prove that there is one Omnipotent who mingles in every game, and that he who forgets this silent Partner must surely lose.

Romans 8:28 assures that "all things work together for good to them that love God." This text challenges a Christian to believe implicitly in Providence. He who complains, either unwittingly confesses that he does not wholly love God, or that he has not discerned the blessings of God which are, indeed, often in disguise. Both death and life are institutions of God: "Thus saith the Lord; Behold, I set before you the way of life, and the way of death"; but death has no horror "to them that love God." The Hand that wrote and wrought havoc against Babylonian debauchery is the Hand which also closed the lion's mouths in protection of Daniel.

"Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him; and he shall bring it to pass" (Psalm 34:5). Said Solomon: "The fear of the wicked, it shall come upon him: but the desire of the righteous shall be granted" (Prov. 10:24). Paul testified: "God is able to make all grace abound toward you" (2 Cor. 9:8), "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me" (Phil. 4:13), and "My God shall supply all your need" (v. 19).

Ferdinand de Lesseps, an eminent French engineer, was once detained by quarantine in the Mediterranean. Not an idler, he used much of his waiting time in reading; and one book in particular intensely interested him. Had it not been for that delay which for the moment seemed so "unnecessary," seamen might to this day be sailing around the Cape of Good Hope instead of short-cutting through the Suez Canal, for it was while the Frenchman was seemingly hindered that he was inspired to plan the Canal.

Likewise, all true Christians are in some way blessed in every seeming trial, and we learn, eventually, that "all things work together for good." Said Jesus: "Men ought always to pray, and not to faint" (Luke 18:1). Not infrequently, prayer—rather than reading—is the border line between failure and success. First was the prayer in Gethsemane; then the victorious "It is finished"! The Apostle Paul "thanked God," "took courage," then "came to Rome" (Acts 28:15, 16).

Shortly after deciding to become a minister, we were traveling from Lester Prairie to Paynesville, Minnesota. En route, it was necessary to change trains in Minneapolis, which necessitated, too, going several blocks from one depot to another. Though taxicabs were available, we walked; consequently failing by two minutes to board the train we were so certain we wanted. Long hours slowly passed, as we impatiently waited for the next train. Then, there was announcement of the Annandale train wreck! Other hours slowly passed before there was any assurance that another train would have a clear road, but we were at last on our way. As we approached the wreckage of the preceding train, an invisible Hand wrote upon a boy's heart and soul—something about two minutes, impatience, Providence. . . . The train we missed had been derailed. Several cars were smashed to slivers. Bodies were still being recovered from the wreckage piled high. If memory is correct, there were about twenty dead. The following Sunday, we listened attentively to a funeral sermon preached by Brother James A. Patrick at Eden Valley, Minnesota. . . . Not that the accident occurred for us!—that would be preposterous. Rather, He who foresees knew the accident would occur, and by His grace saved "even me."

To explain why God permits train wrecks is not now our task, neither to explain why a boy was spared by being two minutes late; but "one thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see" that "all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

How writes the invisible Hand upon your heart and soul? Are you witness that "all things work together for good"? or must there appear writing on the wall?

The Purpose of God

By G. E. Marsh

TO DISCOVER purpose in the universe is to discover God, for there can be no purpose unless there is first a mind to conceive it and an intelligence to direct its accomplishment. From the tiniest grain of sand, washed by the ocean's waves, to the mightiest sun that revolves in space, all things that are, reveal a wise, beneficent, and harmonious purpose everywhere present. The finite mind may not hope to comprehend in its entirety a purpose so vast, so endless and immeasurable in its progression, as that which God has planned, but men may hope by diligent study to discover in a limited way their place in the cosmic scheme of the Eternal, if God wills; that is, if He desires that they shall comprehend it. And if there is anything that we know about God at all and about His desire for men, it is that He does want them to know the divine purpose of their being. There are many things about God that we do not and cannot know, at least in this life, but "whatsoever is to be known of God is plain . . . God himself has made it plain" (Rom. 1:19, Moffatt).

And His purpose for us is one of those things that He has made plain.

God's Purpose for Us!

God's purpose for us! What an inspiring thought that is! What an ennobling thought! The Creator and Ruler of the Universe has made us because He has a purpose in our being! He needs us, therefore, He created us! He requires our co-operation throughout eternity and for that reason has made us subject to eventual eternal life! We are not here by accident. We are the product of no mere whim of nature. We are creatures with a purpose, a divine purpose, and we have an important place in plans conceived by God before the worlds came into being!

David entertained such a lofty conception of man's place in the universe when he stood out under the stars and contrasted their magnitude with the littleness of man.

"When I behold Thy heavens, the work of Thy fingers,
The moon and the stars, which Thou hast established;
What is mortal man, that Thou art mindful of him,
And the son of man, that Thou dost interest Thyself in him!

And hast made him little less than divine,
And with glory and honor hast crowned him.
Thou madest him ruler over the works of Thy hands,
All things hast Thou put under his feet:
Sheep and oxen, all of them,
And also the beasts of the field,

The fowl of the heaven, and the fish of the sea,
Whatsoever passeth through the paths of the seas.
Jahve (Jehovah), our Lord,
How glorious is Thy name in all the earth!"
(Psalm 8:4-10, Delitzsch Version.)

Dominion, power, authority; co-rulership with God!
What a splendid destiny is ours!

When one comes to understand and fully appreciate his exalted place in the mighty purpose of God, like David, he stands in amazed astonishment. Why should God choose so frail an instrument for so great a task? But God, if He is God, is wise, though to us His ways of wisdom are "past finding out."

What is God's great purpose, in the accomplishment of which He contemplates the use of mortal men like us? That is the question! So far as our place in that purpose is concerned, it has already been defined by David in the language of his beautiful hymn: "Thou madest him (to be) ruler over the works of thy hands." This tells us only what our place is to be in the carrying out of God's purpose; it does not tell us what that purpose is.

Unfortunately, much of what God wants men to know about Himself and His desires for them, has been made obscure by those who are most interested in making it known. Friends of the truth often present God's message in language which the ordinary layman does not understand. That is, theological terms and archaic words not in common use are employed by well-intentioned Bible teachers and ministers which convey little meaning to the mind of the average person who is uninformed in such matters. If the truth of God is to be brought to the attention and comprehension of the masses it is designed to reach, it must be expressed in words familiar to the people addressed, not in the English of the King James Bible, which largely passed from common use two to three centuries ago.

The remarkable results that followed the preaching of the first Christian sermon on the Day of Pentecost may be attributed to a great extent to the language, or languages, in which it was given. People were present from all parts of the Roman world, and, after listening to the disciples, exclaimed in amazement: "Are not all these men who are speaking Galileans? Then how is it that each of us hears his own native tongue? . . . Visitors from Rome, Jews and proselytes, Cretans and Arabs—we all hear them tell in our native tongues the mighty deeds of God" (Acts 2:8-11, Goodspeed). (Please turn to page 10)

ETERNAL LIFE

By C. E. Randall

CONTINUING our study of essential doctrines of the Church of God, we consider several propositions concerning eternal life.

PROPOSITION 15: Eternal life is a gift from God, and, therefore, cannot be the natural possession of man. "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom. 6:23).

Samuel Minton, England, author of "The Glory of Christ," contrasts truth with popular orthodoxy in setting forth this declaration: "Scripture declares that 'the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.' The popular theory teaches that eternal life is the common possession of all men, and that the gift of God through Jesus Christ is the privilege of spending it in holiness and happiness."

As Bible students, we cannot subscribe to this fashionable teaching, that eternal life is the common possession of all men. I have heard Brother G. E. Marsh say on several occasions that the nominal church of today does not teach positive doctrines as being essential. This, we believe, is a true statement, but what better are we, if we do not teach our doctrines as essential to salvation? One of our chief objectives in preaching and teaching should be to show that eternal life is obtained only as a gift from God through Christ. In an early publication, the old Restitution, forerunner of the present Restitution Herald, was stated: "It is one of our chief objects in the establishment of this journal, to expose the mischievous presumption that man is immortal; and develop the Bible doctrine that he may be on certain well-defined conditions."

A question which should be considered at the outset is, What is eternal life? A prophetic statement in the Psalms gives a very simple answer to this question. The scripture concerns Christ. "He asked life of thee, and thou gavest it him, even length of days for ever and ever" (Psa. 21:4). It is this kind of life for which we must seek. It is this type of life which God gives to the faithful as a gift through Jesus Christ. This unending life is not the kind which man now possesses. Our present life is bounded by "threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labour and sorrow; for it is soon cut off" (Psalm 90:10). It should not be hard to discern between a life that is unending and one that falls short of reaching even the century mark. Our objective should be to set forth the life that is to come as a gift through Jesus Christ.

PROPOSITION 16: Eternal life belongs to the world to come. "Then Peter said, Lo, we have left all, and followed thee. And he (Jesus) said unto them, Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children, for the kingdom of God's sake, who shall not receive manifold more in this present time, and in the world to come life everlasting" (Luke 18:28-30).

All that one gets in this life for following the Lord is stated as "manifold more," whereas, in the world to come "life everlasting" becomes the chief blessing for faithfulness in this age. Nowhere does the Word promise us eternal life as our portion in this life. The promise of eternal life is given to us, but the fulfilling of the promise must await the world to come.

PROPOSITION 17: Eternal life is a matter of hope. "In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began" (Titus 1:2).

The truthful God has here decreed the present status of eternal life. He makes it a matter of "hope" and "promise." To do otherwise, according to His own words, would constitute a "lie." God knew that eternal life was not the natural possession of mortal man. There is a "faithful saying" in Titus 3:7 that reads: "That being justified by his grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life." In the following verse Paul would have us to "affirm constantly" this faithful saying. To be faithful to our calling, this we must do. According to this statement of inspiration, the nearest we can come to eternal life in this present time is to be "heirs." This proposition is concluded with a plain message from John: "This is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life" (1 John 2:25).

PROPOSITION 18: Eternal life must be obtained through Jesus Christ. "The thief cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly" (John 10:10).

This saying of Jesus very definitely makes the more abundant life as something more than two chickens in every pot, or two cars in every garage, or even, an ever-normal granary; it is a life that comes through Him as the Life-giver. Had Jesus not come into the world, this life would not have been brought to light. On the other hand, if man had always been in possession of immortality, which is popularly termed "an immortal soul," then we ask: What need was there for Christ to suffer, die, and rise again the third day, that He might bring life and immortality to light through the gospel?

PROPOSITION 19: Eternal life will be given by Jesus Christ at His appearing and Kingdom. "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory" (Col. 3:4).

To us, this makes the coming of Christ of paramount importance. Our hope, like Paul's, is bound up with His appearing. To all who accept Jesus Christ as the only Life-giver, the day of His appearing becomes a definite "that day," and with love we wait for the shout, the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God. (2 Tim. 4:7, 8; 1 Thess. 4:16, 17.)

PROPOSITION 20: This record of eternal life must be believed, otherwise, God is made to be a liar. "He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself: he that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son" (1 John 5:10).

There is a record concerning Jesus Christ. This record of the Son of God has to do with Him as the Life-giver. To believe this record makes one a witness of God; to disbelieve the record makes God a liar. The record is stated in the next verse. It reads, "And this is the record, that

Jesus Is Coming Again

---

By Lydia E. Miller

---

JESUS said, "Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also" (John 1:1-3).

As we consider the above text, we would ask, Where was Jesus when He was speaking this message to the disciples, and where will He be when He comes again? It is only in connection with His coming that we have promise of being with Him. A few verses preceding the above text, Jesus had said to His disciples: "Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me: and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go, ye cannot come; so now I say to you" (John 13:33). Next, Jesus gave them the new commandment of love and said, "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another" (v. 35).

Jesus Christ is represented by the "nobleman" who "went into a far country . . . and to return" (Luke 19:12). The "far country" represents heaven, to which Jesus went to "receive for himself a kingdom," but having received this right to rule, he is "to return." It was because some of the Jews "thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear," that Jesus spoke this parable which clearly shows that the Kingdom will not appear until He, the King, appears.

Let us study a little in the Book of Revelation where we shall notice several truths about Christ's coming. Speaking of the blessings God has promised the overcomers, John said, "I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away" (Rev. 21:1-4). These blessings will prevail after Jesus' return to earth to reign on the reestablished throne of David.

Dear readers, please read the last two chapters of the Bible, and consider the good things God has in store for them who love Him. Of particular interest to us, and especially as we consider Christ's promise to the disciples as recorded in John 14:1-3, is Revelation 22:12: "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be."

When Jesus comes again, may we hear Him say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord" (Matt. 25:21). Our Lord's promises are sure, so let us try to live worthy of His promised blessing.

What a gathering of the loved ones there will be when the blessed who are now sleeping in Jesus will arise from their dusty graves and from the sea! At the Savior's coming, He will bid all His sleeping children to arise and, together with the living saints, will change their mortal bodies into immortal bodies like His own. It is then that He will receive us unto Himself, that where He is, "there (we) may be also" (John 14:3).

The Miracle of the Word

By Norman J. Macleod

MOST church people have a more intimate knowledge about the Holy Bible than do members of the Church of God, though the latter excel in their knowledge of the Bible. So often the lack of knowledge of the way in which a particular group of books came to be bound into a single volume which we call the Holy Bible leads to many errors and ridiculous attitudes toward them. A knowledge of the Bible is more important, but information about the Bible is also important.

"Authorized" Versions

The story is told by a clerk in the Baptist Book Store in Los Angeles of the battle of the versions. The clerk suggested that a customer purchase a copy of Moffatt's translation. The irate customer replied that the Bible written by James, the brother of our Lord, was good enough for him. Thus has the King James Version become so firmly rooted in the minds of many people, but they seldom stop to contemplate the King James Version, and how it came to be. Many of them speak of it as THE Authorized Version. As a matter of fact, there are many authorized versions. The Tyndale and Coverdale Bibles were both authorized by the government of England. The Douay edition was authorized by the Council of Trent. The King James Bible received its prestige largely through the Puritans. If the King James Version is so infallible, then what do the people who do not speak English do for authoritative Word? !! And if we accept the idea of inspired translation, then we should be willing to accept Joseph Smith's so-called "inspired" translation of the Bible. Few people realize that the King James Version that we have now is quite different from the original King James translation. Gradual changes have been made by the editors of the various publishing companies, so that if you compared the present King James Versions with the original one you would find it quite different. Gradually, extreme archaisms have been changed into more modern form to accommodate the language of the Bible to more modern usage. How did the King James Version come into being?

The Hampton Court Conference

When Queen Elizabeth died, James VI of Scotland was invited to take the throne of England, as he was next in line. He had been brought up in Scotland under the tutelage of the non-conformists who were the foes of his mother, Mary Queen of Scots. Inwardly, though, he nursed a grudge against the non-conformists. As James came into England, the Puritans met him at Hampton Court to present their "demands" to the new monarch. Reforms which would return some power to parliament and grant more freedom of religion were advocated by these men. But of all the demands, only one was granted: the translation of the Bible into English under the influence of Puritanism. James told the Puritans that they would be forced to conform to the Anglican Church, or he would "harry them out of the realm," and that is what he did do. Thus arose the first American colonies of the English.

When the canon of the Scriptures was discussed, there were many and various arguments as to what books should be included. The books which we now call the "Apocrypha"—books of hidden meaning—were included in the new translation, but the Puritans did not like them. As a result, the King James Authorized Bible was soon found in two forms: with and without the Apocrypha. Today, the King James Bible is almost never found to include the Apocrypha. As a child, we always thought that it was almost sinful to read the Apocrypha! Certainly, though, no harm could come from reading such books as tell the history of the Maccabees. In fact, many strange and weird ideas about the prophecies of Daniel would be corrected if people would read the story of the Maccabean revolt.

Biblical Chronology

In the time of Cromwell lived a certain man who came to be known best for his studies in chronology. Archbishop Ussher spent most of his time delving into the mysteries of dates and genealogies. In his researches, he came upon the writings of Origen and Eusebius. These two men, in conjunction with the writings of Julius Africanus, developed a theory which has gained wide acceptance even among the members of the Church of God—strange as that may seem. The theory is that which was brought forward by Pastor Russell. They said that the day of man, the sixth day of creation, should be six thousand years, followed by the one-thousand year reign of Christ which was to be the seventh day of creation. Just why one day should be so much longer than the others nobody ventured to say. Eusebius lived about 500 A.D. He said that the second coming of Christ could not be more than five hundred years following his time, therefore, 1000 A.D. would be the date for the Second Advent. Figuring back six thousand years would place the date of creation at 5000 B.C., but Eusebius and Origen were mistaken—even as many other date setters. Archbishop Ussher, however, was not daunted by so minor a matter as that. He merely lopped off a one thousand years, and set the date of creation at 4000 B.C. Now, manifestly, such a process is rather arbitrary. If such a procedure was to be followed, then the other dates of the Bible had to be readjusted. Consequently, he had a difficult time to determine whether the Exodus took place in the time of Ramses II (shortly before the time of Solomon), or during the time of some other worthy of Egypt. Confusion unlimited and unbounded is the result of Archbishop Ussher's chronology. Notwithstanding, the Puritans of the time of King James, as well as many well-meaning people of the present day, accept his theories without question. Perhaps they do not go as far as he did when he said that Adam was created at 9:00 a.m., Friday, October 9, 4000 B.C. During the Eighteenth Century, the Anglo-Saxon people adopted the Gregorian Calendar, and so Adam, according to the dates at the top of the margins in the older King James Versions, was created in 4004 B.C. Why is this important?

Few church people now hold to the theory that the earth is flat, and all its accompanying ideas, yet the dates of ancient history are determined by a process which is more scientifically accurate than the laws of celestial mechanics upon which the Copernican Theory is based. So, in his study of ancient history, the ninth grader will be shown with great deal of scientific accuracy that the Solar Calendar was introduced into Egypt in the year 4241 B.C. According to Archbishop Ussher and his followers, that would be impossible. But when the student is made to understand that Archbishop Ussher's chronology is based entirely upon a theory which has no basis in fact, fancy, or Bible teachings, he is saved from doubting the authenticity of teachings which are contained in the Bible itself. If the King James translators were inspired, then we must accept many things such as Archbishop Ussher's fallacious chronologies.

Professor Goodspeed's Work

Professor Goodspeed is a member of a committee which is continually reading and retranslating the various books of the Bible. When he began working, he found that the Apocrypha had not been revised for some time. He took the task of revising them. He took the original language, which was Aramaic, along with the Greek text. As he was reading, he suddenly was aware of the fact that the English text bore only a slight resemblance to the original text. How had that come about? Simply because the men who translated the English text did not use the original language, but translated their text from the Latin Vulgate text. Thus, the English translation came from the Latin Vulgate, the Latin Vulgate from the Greek, and the Greek from the Aramaic. In such a series of translations from translations, the original thought had been so changed that it was scarcely recognizable. The value of the work carried on by such men as Goodspeed is that they have texts with which to compare their work which were not yet discovered in the days of King James of England. Why should the Bible student not have the advantage of all the newest scientific discoveries instead of fighting science, as many religionists do? Why not ally yourself with scientific research, instead of casting aside the learning of the learned as "foolishness with God"?

A MINISTER AND A WITNESS

service. Paul describes men of the last days as being, "lovers of their own selves," and "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God" (2 Tim. 3:2, 4). Blindness is similar to being in darkness, so men today need to be turned to the light. With all of man's knowledge, he is still in darkness and has not seen the "light of the world."

Men are ignorant of their Creator. Men are ignorant of their own miserableness. Men are ignorant of God's plan, His love, His Son, His purpose, and their opportunity of sharing in the blessings of God.

The people of today need to be turned "from the power of Satan unto God." The world is under that evil power. Jesus said, "The prince of this world cometh, and hath nothing in me" (John 14:30). Paul added, "If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost: in whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them" (2 Cor. 4:3, 4).

We believe the powers of evil will soon come to their fullness just before Christ's coming, and they will be known by their persecution of the righteous. Men do not realize the hidden forces that are at work in the governments of the world today. Oh, that we would turn many from "the power of Satan unto God" before it is too late!

Do you have the desire that others may have forgiveness of sins? Do you want others to have an inheritance with you? No more than we do toward gaining these things for others, some might think us selfish.

Are you doing your part to open men's eyes and turn them from darkness to light? Paul did his part and was confident at the close of his life that he would receive the reward, the crown of life. Will you have that confidence?

MANY of you will readily recognize the above picture as one taken of those attending the Indiana Conference of the Church of God several years ago at North Salem. You will probably recognize several people in the picture. Possibly you are one of the group. We hope that the picture brings many pleasant memories of former Indiana Conferences. Perhaps you are thinking, "My! what a crowd! A few old-timers will recall the even greater crowds that have been in attendance at Indiana Conferences a few years before this picture was taken. I have been told that an attendance of thousands was not unusual. This was at the outdoor meetings held south of Plymouth, Indiana. It may sound like a "tall story," but the source of information is reliable. Those must have been the "good old days." One cannot help wishing for a little of that old-time enthusiasm that inspired people to drive miles in slow horse-drawn vehicles to attend our Conference. How much more convenient it is for us to reach North Salem today!

We hope that all Indiana members and friends will have more than a passing interest in the accompanying picture. Is it too optimistic to believe that it will provoke an active interest in the coming Conference? We need more help, if we are to serve our churches well. For the last several years we have conducted a Bible School in connection with the Conference. The Bible School has been under the supervision of the State Berean Society. Classes are provided for children of all ages, and two classes each day are provided for adults. The Indiana Conference and Bible School begins on Wednesday and lasts for twelve days, which includes the last two Sundays of June. This year the dates are from June 18 to June 29, inclusive. Last year Brother James McLain was in charge of music. He was also one of the instructors for young peoples' classes, and was one of the speakers. Brother J. H. Anderson and Brother F. L. Austin taught classes and presented sermons at the church services held in connection with the School. At a meeting of the State Executive Board, by a unanimous vote, Brothers McLain, Anderson, and Austin were all invited to assist in the Bible School again this year.

The Indiana Conference and Bible School last year was very successful. The attendance was fair and the interest good. The general enthusiasm and the spirit of co-operation were excellent. Young people and adults alike co-operated splendidly to make the discipline and general attitude good. We believe in strict but reasonable rules and regulations, and intend to see that they are enforced. Parents who wish to send children to our School this summer may be sure that the greatest care will be taken to see that they are provided with the best of spiritual instruction and spiritual environment. We need your child and your child needs the spiritual experience. The members of the Church of God feel that they are not only servants of God, but also servants of men. We feel that we are serving best when we provide for the spiritual development of our youth. We are gradually improving living conditions at the dormitory in order to make your stay there more agreeable. Last year a pressure water system was installed with showers for both boys and girls. This also made possible a constant hot water supply for the kitchen. Further improvements are planned for this summer.

A few years ago the Conference Board hired Brother James McLain for part-time evangelistic work in the State. He has worked faithfully in this capacity until recently when he was called to the pastorate of the Pennellwood Church of God, Grand Rapids, Michigan. Last year the Conference voted to authorize the president to appoint a committee of two members of the Board to serve as an evangelistic committee. The committee, which consists of Brothers Willard Naylor and Floyd Stilson, has complete charge of the evangelistic program for our State. We feel that the evangelistic program has done a great deal of good, but regret that more promising fields have not been available. If anyone knows a promising field in Indiana for evangelistic work, he should get in touch with the committee.

Last year the Conference Board considered the advisability of establishing a scholarship fund for the purpose of sending some worthy young person to the Summer Bible Training School at Oregon, Illinois, each summer. This proposal was not discussed at the Conference, but a few interested members contributed to a fund already started by the Burr Oak and North Salem churches. This fund was used to send Lois Burch of the North Salem church to Oregon last summer. The scholarship idea is a worthy endeavor and should be considered at the meeting this summer. Perhaps we can make it possible for some Indiana youth to attend the regular nine-months' Bible Training School. This is one of the very commendable ways in which we may sow the seed that will produce an abundant harvest. A few other state conferences have taken action to pay the tuition fee for some student of the Training School.

Any discussion of the Indiana Conference and Bible School would not be complete without giving due praise to those who have labored faithfully and regularly in support of the Conference and Bible School. I wish I had the time and space to mention the names of the many faithful workers who have given willingly of their talents, time, and money throughout the years of our Conference history. Someone who has more information upon this phase of our Conference than I could write a very interesting article on the subject. I am personally indebted to those upon whom we lean so heavily each year. Brother Floyd Stilson served as president of the Conference for twenty-five years, and is still actively engaged on the Board. Brother J. H. Anderson has worked faithfully with us for seventeen years. Many others who teach classes, labor in the kitchen, or serve in other capacities are contributing to the success of the Conference work. We shall depend this year upon those same busy but willing workers.

The Need for Conferences

The church conference is a means by which united effort is accomplished. By the conference organization, each church is made a part of an organization that has the power and resources to accomplish greater results, than were each church to function only as an isolated unit. Many of our churches are geographically isolated; therefore, we have great need for state and national unity. We need to feel that we have an important duty to perform in an endeavor that reaches beyond our own small community. The church conference helps to broaden our spiritual vision, and encourages an unselfish interest in all church work. The aims of the church become more missionary in character, and we come to a greater realization of our duty toward society. It might be well to recall that the church was called out to be a separate people, but not an isolated people. We are to be a united people separated from the world of sin, but we must not isolate ourselves from sin. Instead we, as a church, need to realize our duty as a missionary force. This can best be done through efficient organization.

One of the most pleasant benefits of our several church or and President conferences is that of the associations and close friendships that are made. We always enjoy the experience of close Christian fellowship with those of like religious faith. The influence of such association is of lasting benefit. The Christian environment of a conference of the Church of God leaves us spiritually enriched.

THE PURPOSE OF GOD

"In our native tongues"—in that lay the secret of the disciples' success on that occasion.

God wants all men everywhere, of every race and social status,

"Rich man, poor man, beggar-man, thief, Doctor, lawyer, merchant, chief,"

(to drop into the doggerel of childhood), to hear in his own familiar language of His wonderful purpose for mankind and for the world. God not only wants them to hear, but He wants them to understand what they hear, which is quite a different thing. "There are probably a great many different languages in the world, and not one of them fails to convey a meaning. If, however, I do not happen to know the language," Paul reasons, "I shall be a foreigner to those who speak it, and they will be foreigners to me. . . . So with you; unless you use . . . intelligible words, how will what you are saying be understood?" (1 Cor. 14:9-11—20th Century N. T.)

God's Great Purpose Revealed

What, then, is the purpose of God in the simplest terms? It is tersely stated in the anthem of praise which the four worshiping beings addressed to "the Occupant of the Throne," as recorded in Farrar Fenton's Current English rendering of Revelation 4:11: "You, our Lord and our God, are worthy to receive the majesty, and the honor, and the might; for You have created all things; and for Your purpose they were and are created."

Although divine purpose in creation is clearly indicated here, the nature of that purpose remains more or less a mystery. Nevertheless, it is a mystery which we may be sure God does not intend shall long continue unrevealed to us.

The purpose of God is to make a garden; to sow a field; to plant a vineyard; and to reap a harvest of everlasting beauty and unending happiness upon this earth! It is His purpose to make every shining dewdrop, every tinkling brook, every ray of sunshine, reflect the splendor of His power and the grandeur of His might!

It is not, however, God's purpose or desire to enjoy these things alone! He would have other intelligent beings of His own creation, who, in themselves, shall exhibit those same marvelous qualities of perfection, beauty, and usefulness in which He takes delight, associated with Him in the development and enjoyment of them all. He would have them assist Him in carrying on the glorious work of the new creation—for such indeed it will be—under conditions in which success is assured, in a world where no divine or natural law will ever be broken—consequently, in a world where no disappointments occur, no sorrows come, no death enters!

The language of men lacks fluency, eloquence, power, and expression, to tell the whole wonderful story of the eternal purpose of God for mankind! Only when we actually experience it for ourselves will we be able to fully understand the supernal glory of it all. Paul realized the limitations of mortal comprehension were of "those whose faith is matured," and how much more restricted must be the understanding of men and women whose minds have not been already enlightened by the Sun of eternal truth!

"What we speak to those whose faith is matured is really wisdom, but it is not the wisdom of today nor the wisdom of the leaders of today—men whose downfall is at hand. No, the wisdom of which we speak, when we deal with secret truths, is divine; it is long-hidden wisdom, which God, before time began, decreed, that it might bring us glory. This wisdom is not known to any of the leaders of today. Had they known it, they would not have crucified our glorious Master. But the Scripture speaks of it as

"What no eye ever saw, what no ear ever heard,
What never entered the mind of man—
All that God prepared for those who love him."

Yet to us God has revealed it through his Spirit; for the Spirit fathoms everything, even the profoundest secrets of God" (1 Cor. 2:6-10, 20th Century N. T.).

Beautiful and alluring indeed are the descriptions the Spirit of Inspiration provides of the eternal purpose of God! Jehovah Himself speaks:

"I ignore the troubles of the past,
I shut mine eyes to them;
Lo, I create new heavens and a new earth!
The past shall be forgotten, and never come to mind;
Men shall rejoice for ever in what I now create;
Jerusalem I create to be a joy, her people a delight."

And by the same clear-visioned prophet of glory, God sums up His whole marvelous purpose in these words:

"The wolf shall couch then with the lamb,
The leopard's lair shall be the kid's;
The lion shall eat straw like any ox,
Wolf and lion shall graze side by side,
Herded by a little child.
The cow and the bear shall be friends,
And their young lie down together;

The infant shall play at the hole of the asp,
 With the baby's feet at the nest of a viper.
 None shall injure, none shall kill,
 Anywhere on my sacred hill;
 For the land shall be as full of the knowledge of the Eternal as the ocean-bed is full of water."
 (Isa. 65:16-18; 11:6-9, Moffatt.)

Such is the splendid purpose of our God. Wonder of wonders!—He invites, He urges, He pleads with mortal men like you and me to learn of His plans for us today, that we may be prepared to join with Him, to co-operate with Him, in the accomplishment of that purpose throughout all ages! Can anyone resist such an appeal?

"PREACH THE WORD"

THOUGH there is no reason to believe that Timothy preached unsound doctrine, Paul, wishing to make doubly sure that his junior partner preached only sound doctrine at all times, wrote: "I adjure you to preach the word; keep at it in season and out of season, refuting, checking, and exhorting men; never lose patience with them, and never give up your teaching; for the time will come when people decline to be taught sound doctrine, they will accumulate teachers to suit themselves and tickle their own fancies, they will give up listening to the Truth and turn to myths. Whatever happens, . . . discharge all your duties as a minister" (2 Tim. 4:1-5, Moffatt). Likewise, Jesus charged Peter: "Feed my lambs . . . Feed my sheep . . . Feed my sheep" (John 21:15-17).

ETERNAL LIFE

God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son." If I claim that I have eternal life within me, do I not, then, disbelieve the record that this eternal life is in the Son? In so believing, I would make God a liar, and as a person remarked recently, I, too, would be a liar. Every person that believes that he or she has an immortal soul within, and as such, has eternal life, makes God a liar. The time has come when we as a church should cease from pussy-footing on this important subject, and give to the people the plain truth as did our early church fathers. On this issue there cannot be any compromise. We must either believe the record God has given, or deny it and thereby make God a liar. Life only in Christ is the most important doctrine in our teaching, and should be the most emphasized in our teaching and preaching. To shrink from this duty because of possible offense to popular thought is beneath the honor and dignity of the Bible Church of God.

BUILDING YOUR LIBRARY

Book Reviews

By Arlen Marsh

Your morbid correspondent recently was offered a job at a good salary as sales promotion and advertising man with one of the largest distilleries in the United States. It made him think of Ada Rose Demerest's Educate for Total Abstinence (Standard Publishing Company; $1.00, cloth; 60 cents, paper), one of the best volumes for teachers on the temperance problem he has seen.

Mrs. Demerest designed her book for teachers of students from about nine or ten years of age on up through the Sunday school. Chapters take up various effects of alcohol on the human frame, character, and mentality, and provide some really excellent material for separate teaching or for use in supplementing the quarterly—and generally boring—International Sunday School Lesson on temperance. Thirteen temperance stories—not patterned much after the famous old Face on the Barroom Floor!—are included in the book, together with a unique feature: six temperance worship services which may easily be used among students of almost any thinking age.

Jesse Lyman Hurlbut has solved the perennial question: Why are church histories always so dull? Dr. Hurlbut has delivered himself of The Story of the Christian Church, a 254-page John C. Winston publication ($1.00). The Hurlbut style is perfectly delightful; it runs with the grace of a religious James Truslow Adams, and avoids the common mistake of church historical technique by segregating notes about Biblical texts and ancient authorities into marginal references—there are no distracting footnotes and no voluminous small-type quotations. Not much can be said for the blackboard outlines for teaching each chapter, but the review questions are excellent. For student, teacher, or casual reader, The Story of the Christian Church is recommended highly. Especially notable is the Hurlbut observation that sprinkling was not introduced until some centuries after the founding of the Christian church. The volume covers church history from 33 A.D. to 1933, and is accurate though not exhaustive.

(Note: Dr. Hurlbut's solution of the question, Why are church histories so dull? is easy. Others haven't had the Hurlbut ability to historify interestingly.)

Order all books listed in this column from the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Illinois, thereby building your library and at the same time helping to support the General Conference activities.

"Why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" (Luke 6:46.)

The Holy City

The city of Jerusalem is a very old city. In the days of Abraham, it was called by the last five letters of its present name, making it "Salem." It is also called the "City of David," "City of Zion," "City of God," and "Holy City."

It is built upon four hills. It is located thirty-two miles east of the Mediterranean Sea, and eighteen miles west of the Dead Sea. Jerusalem has suffered from war and strife more than any other city in the world; yet, its general outline has always been kept the same.

David and Solomon reigned there. There the Temple was built and destroyed.

Jerusalem has had many changes in government. At present, the English government protects it. When Jesus returns, He will sit on the "throne of his father David."

Jesus Wept Over It

As Jesus drew near to Jerusalem, He wept. The Israelites had refused to own Jesus as the Son of God. We have read how the church people, the Pharisees, treated Jesus. They laughed at Him.

Jesus came to the Israelites. The Gentiles had not been asked to accept Him. They were called "dogs." (Recall the story of the Rich Man and Lazarus, and the "dogs" who licked the poor man's sores.) Also, in Matthew 15: 24-27, Jesus said, "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel," when a Gentile woman asked Him to have mercy upon her sick daughter.

The mother did not leave Jesus, but fell at His feet worshipping Him, saying, "Lord, help me."

Jesus answered, "It is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it to dogs." He meant He had come to the Israelites, and what He had offered to them.

The woman of faith answered, "Truth, Lord: yet the dogs eat of the crumbs . . . from their masters' table."

Jesus, who never fails to be merciful, said, "O woman, great is thy faith: be it unto thee even as thou wilt"—and her daughter was well from that very hour.

When the Israelites refused to accept Jesus, Paul was sent to the Gentiles. A people are being chosen from the Gentiles, today, to be the bride of Christ.

"Hast Thou Faith?"

We may have this wonder-working, saving faith. "Hast thou faith? have it to thyself before God. Happy is he that condemneth not himself in that thing which he alloweth" (Rom. 14:22).

If we need faith—and who among us has all he would like?—we are told where to get it. Faith comes from hearing, "and hearing by the word of God" (Rom. 10:17). When we are unable to attend Sunday school and church services as often as we wish, we can read our Bibles every day. If the Word is hard to understand, pray for guidance. "All things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive" (Matt. 21:22). God is still calling for His people. He doesn't need any certain one of us, but we need Him. The faithful ones of old died without having received the eternal life promised. Faithful ones continue to die, and to await the time when Jesus will return. "These all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise: God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect" (Heb. 11:39, 40). Turn to Him today. Accept His forgiveness, be baptized, and live for Him and in Him that you may have eternal life.

It's a Good Formula

Come, gather round, fellow Bereans, and let's chat a bit. What have you been doing during the last few weeks? Some of you are in college. Probably no two of you are majoring in the same course, but you are all striving to get an education. Some of you are not fortunate enough to be able to go to college, but you are not going to let that stop you. Some of you are going to study correspondence courses, go to night school, and in various other ways supplement your education. You're going to learn, somehow. Others of you have finished your formal schooling and are now out on your own, earning your living and in every way are trying your best to "get ahead." Ahead where?

All of you want to be successful? Those of you who work hard enough will reach your goal and will get those things that you want. What is your goal, and what do you want? Now is an excellent time to make money. There is a lot of it "floating around." Billions are spent with utter abandon. Fun! A person can have more fun today than perhaps at any time in the nation's history. Science and invention have made it possible for us to travel far and see many things, so a person should never have to spend a dull moment. You want security. A little extra work and study on the side will prepare you for a good steady job that will support you well during good times and bad.

You are, however, going to be rather embarrassed when you start to gray about the temples and you begin to think about that "long home" to which everyone must go. You see, you've done a good job preparing yourself for security in this life, and you have gone through the years just about as you had planned. You knew how to make your business or profession pay. You kept constantly at your job, learned the latest methods, met the right people, kept up with the rest of the industry, and, whenever possible, you kept a couple of jumps ahead of it. You did a good job; you succeeded in your career.

A Disciple of Whom?

In all the rush and commotion, you find that you forgot just one thing—your religion. Remember the time you said that you wanted to be one of those chosen to be workers in Christ's Kingdom? You had heard several good sermons and had done a bit of studying of your own. It didn't take you long to figure out that the Bible really had the answer to several questions you had in your mind. You figured that you would cast your lot in with Jesus.

Now, if you were to be successful in your Christian career, it would seem only logical that you would apply the same principles to your Christian life that you would to your business or professional life, would it not?

It stands to reason that you cannot apply your time-tested formula for success to two separate efforts, simultaneously. There's the "rub." 'Tis prophesied what many people are going to do. They will take one thing at a time. Business first, and then after retirement from business they will concentrate on Christian work. Suppose your car should skid over an embankment, you should cross the street at the wrong moment, or Christ should come tomorrow—while you were concentrating on business!

Firmer Ground

The following report received from Lorna Macy, National Berean treasurer, is rather encouraging:

Balance on hand, January 1	$16.85
Receipts:
January 4—Hector, Minnesota	$ 4.00
January 5—Oregon, Illinois	2.75
January 9—Rockford, Illinois	8.60
January 10—Ripley, Illinois	6.25
January 27—Berean Echo	1.00
January 29—Blood River, La.	5.00
January 30—Minnesota State	11.80
	39.40
Balance on hand, January 31	$56.25

We hope that the remaining societies who may have neglected to send their share of dues will find an opportunity to do so shortly. Because of the nationwide scope of our effort, a great amount of work must be done by correspondence. Lessons and tracts must be put in printed form so that they may reach all who are eager to receive them. Keep up the good work of the past month, and we shall not run low on funds.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALENDAR OF EVANGELISM

June 18-29—Indiana Bible School and Conference at North Salem.
 July 29-August 10—General Conference at Oregon, Ill.
 July 29-August 10—Illinois Bible School and Conference at Oregon.
 August 17-24—Ohio State Conference at the Brush Creek Church of God, near Tipp City.

SUMMER SCHOOL INSTRUCTORS

We are pleased to announce that the instructors for the Summer Bible Training School have been engaged. They are Elders S. J. Lindsay of Tempe, Ariz., and Harry A. Sheets of Ellurn, Ill. Bro. Lindsay is really the father of the Bible school work at Oregon, Ill., and because of his combined knowledge of the Scriptures and ability to teach is one of the very best instructors that could be engaged to take charge of the Bible classes. Bro. Sheets, too, is one of our ministers well-read in the fundamentals of the Bible and has been an educator in public schools for several years. He will have charge of the more secular type of work, and has been chosen Dean of the Summer School.

For the School to open, however, it is necessary that at least twenty students enroll by June 1. The dates for the School are June 17 to July 25. Students planning to attend should enroll as soon as convenient by signing an enrollment coupon as appears on the opposite page. Sydney E. Magaw, Chairman Board of Religious Education.

SAINT CLOUD, MINNESOTA

We have had nightly meetings here since February 9. Bros. Walter Wiggins of Eden Valley, Thomas Savage of Waite Park, and John Denchfield of St. Cloud have been guest speakers the past week. The meetings will continue through next week, every night but Saturday.

Friday evening after church the young people entertained the congregation with a valentine party. It was well conducted, and among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ben Johnson and son Alden of Spicer, Minn.

We regret to report that Bro. John Mercer was called home by the death of a sister, last Tuesday. He will be back to take charge of the meetings this next week.

Mrs. John Savage, our music director, is organizing a ladies' chorus. The young people already have an active choir which is much appreciated.

Grace Skinner, Reporter.

WESTERN NEBRASKA WORK

We have Sunday school each Sunday morning at Moorefield, and preaching when the pastor is at home. We had the largest attendance Sunday, February 16, at Jeffery Queen that we have had for a long time. The interest there is good, and we have reason to hope for some fruit of our labors soon, maybe in the spring meeting to be held there.

There will be preaching services at Holbrook the first Sunday in March. The sermon topic for the eleven o'clock service will be, "The Mind of Christ," and the sermon topic for the afternoon service will be, "Hand-writing on the Wall."

Invite your neighbors to attend church. If they have no way, make room for them in your car.
 E. E. Giesler, Pastor.

BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL NEWS

The students elected the following as members of the Student Council for the second semester: Bros. Ellsworth Routson, Terrence Ferrell, and the writer. We had a meeting to decide about the penalties for the breaking of the dormitory rules, and to decide a date to take pictures of the class and the basketball team. We may have some of the pictures of the team tinted. The team will play a local high school team, February 25, after school.

The accompanying picture is of Bro. S. E. Magaw in action. He has been asking for pictures, and has sometimes surprised the subject of such. This picture was taken when he was off-guard. Ever since he has been shy of cameras in the classroom. He believes that words without action are void. Do you get his point?

We did. Natural pictures are better than poses. We hope that everyone will enjoy this demonstration of instruction with action.

Bro. Francis Burnett has spoken at the Church of God in Rockford, Ill., the last two Sundays. Bro. Ellsworth Routson preached at Dixon, Ill., February 16. Good reports have come from every place in which the students have spoken. The writer preached in Dixon, February 23.

The Ambassadors' Bible Class enjoyed a delightful time at the valentine party in the Charles Gesin home. Bro. John Mercer, pastor of the St. Cloud, Minn., church, was a visitor. The class met at the Students' Home, February 17, with Bro. Richard Smith as teacher. Srs. Elizabeth and Jean Ford and Florence Rice, from the Dixon church, enjoyed the class with us.

We have two students who received bumps on their heads, but not love bumps this time. The evening shadows that fall upon the veranda are not always unnoticed.

Bro. Terrence Ferrell, our roommate, awakened us the other night by talking in his sleep. . . . This is your chance, girls.

Bros. Ellsworth Routson, Richard Smith, and Emory Macy and family left last Friday for a short vacation to their home, Brush Creek, Ohio. Ellsworth led the singing for Richard and Emory, who preached at the Brush Creek church Sunday, February 23.

Alan McLain, Reporter.

DOING OUR DUTY

The Church of God has an opportunity of helping England in a much different way than is being generally considered today, but it is an opportunity, nonetheless, and in God's sight may well be our responsibility. As previously reported, certain men in England have requested that we send ten thousand tracts for distribution across the water. However, due to the war, we must both publish and pay for the shipment. The tracts are now ready, and we have recently heard from Britain that the men are alive, active in their tract-distributing work, and hoping to soon receive our shipment.

To date, we have received $20.00 toward the expense of this order, but we need about $120.00, that is, about $100.00 more. Will our missionary-minded brethren please quickly respond to this responsibility, that the tracts may soon be sent to England. The tracts will be messengers of life in a land where death constantly threatens. Send your offering today.

Sydney E. Magaw, Secretary.
 National Bible Institution

STAINLESS STEEL

Some of us took it upon ourselves to see that better knives, forks, and spoons will appear on the tables at the General Conference next summer. Although it has been mentioned on the Illinois Page on the back of The Restitution Herald as "silverware," it is really stainless steel, the untarnishing, everlasting, tasteless metal that can be kept immaculately clean. We have arranged to buy a good quality at wholesale price.

We have asked a few Sunday schools to help us buy the new table service, but would also appreciate individual contributions. Address Delos Andrew, Oregon, Ill.

Harvey Krogh, Jr.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

All Bills Paid: To date, all bills of the Bible Training School are paid, but Treasurer Orpha LeMasurier reports that there is no surplus. Having done so well thus far, let us not now allow the School to run a deficit. Support the School, and the School will support you.

"We are living in times when we should be consecrated, prayerful people, watching for and loving the Lord's appearing."—Mrs. May Moore, Bartley, Nebr.

• Gideon's wives blessed him with enough sons for fourteen basketball teams (Judges 8:30), and he had an extra one from his concubine (v. 31) for scorekeeper and cheerleader. Rahi Rahi

Now is the time to prepare your article for the Easter number of The Herald. We need it, want it, ask it, but you must write it. March 15 is the "dead line."

"There was an attendance of seventy-five members in our Sunday school yesterday (February 16)."—Mary Richardson, Hammond, La., Mt. 1.

The Bible Training School is thankful to the Brush Creek, Ohio, brethren for a splendid set of maps mounted in a cabinet. The maps are of Europe, Asia, Africa, and South America. The contribution for the maps was made some time ago, but we waited until maps reasonably up-to-date and of the quality wanted could be located.

DELTA, OHIO

We are standing on our feet to proclaim our faith and stand to the world. Last Monday night, February 17, we had an attendance of twenty students to our third Bible study class at my brother Glen's home. Despite the bitter cold and the driving snow, the faithful Howard Elton family from Toledo, Ohio, drove up to Delta—a distance of twenty-six miles—to study with us; and zealous Bro. Frank Dielman of Napoleon, Ohio, drove nineteen miles. His able and capable leadership is a great asset to us younger ones in the faith.

Amy Dunbar Frye.

EDEN VALLEY, MINNESOTA

On Sunday, February 16, the church gave us a very well-planned surprise. It was a very snowy morning, and we didn't expect many for church, as the roads are blocked with snow five to ten feet deep, but we had a very nice crowd. To our surprise, at the close of the morning service the congregation began singing "Happy Birthday." A trip to the basement revealed a long table spread with fine food which was enjoyed by all.

We received many tokens of love and happy wishes. Well do we remember our last birthday, 1940, when we were called to the bedside of our father, who died the following day. We have had many wonderful experiences this last year. What will another year bring? Maybe, the Kingdom of God! Watch and pray!

Thanks to all for the expressions of love.
Walter Wiggins, Pastor.

Were yellow curls, and large brown eyes,
My wonderful, beautiful, precious prize.

He laughed, he played, he sang with glee,
He truly was a joy to see.
Soon he grew up; 'twas like a day,
For boys, you see, are just that way.

I prayed that he would ere abide
Ever closely by my side.
But fate said, "Nol that cannot be";
Too soon, he went away from me.

And now, I work, I walk, I see,
I dream of days that used to be;
Of large brown eyes and yellow curls,
Of tiny toes, and teeth like pearls.

Fond memories stored within my heart!
From me, they never will depart.
I live again in days gone by—
Sweet dreams like these can never die.

MRS. DALE BREWER

Mrs. Lillian Mae Mercer Brewer of Good Hope, Ill., died February 11, at St. Mary's Hospital in Rochester, Minn. Death was due to pneumonia which set in after the operation. Mrs. Brewer was born October 14, 1906, in Vermont, Ill. She moved to Macomb in 1910, and was a member of the graduating class of 1925 of the Macomb High School. She was a faithful member of the Open Bible Church of God of Macomb. On December 5, 1931, she married Dale Brewer.

Besides her husband, she is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mercer of Macomb; five brothers, Robert Mercer, Jr., Richard, Joe, and Billy Mercer of Macomb, and John Mercer of St. Cloud, Minn.; two sisters, Mrs. Leo Wilson of Adair, and Gladys Mercer of Macomb.

Funeral services were held at the Dods-worth Chapel, February 13, at 1:30 p.m., and interment was at Vermont, Ill.

It will be a joyous time when the Lord Himself calls, and these sleeping ones are called forth to meet Him.

MINERVA CATHERINE SIMMONS

Minerva Catherine Simmons was born November 24, 1874, and fell asleep in Christ January 24, 1941, at her home near Magazine, Ark., in the county in which she was born.

She was married to J. G. Simmons, December 25, 1892. To this union were born nine children, of which only two remain living: one son, Lee, and a daughter, Ophelia, both of Magazine, Rt. 2. Also, two sisters, Mrs. Eliza Barnard of Coolidge, Ariz., and Mrs. Sallie Barnard of Seranton, Ark., and four grandchildren mourn her death.

Over twenty years ago, Sr. Simmons embraced the faith of the Church of God and was baptized into the all-saving name of Jesus Christ by Bro. Owen Jones. She continued a devoted servant of God, and her hope was in the return of Jesus and the resurrection from the dead. She was laid to rest in the Bee Mountain Cemetery, January 25, the Evans Funeral Home being in charge of the services.

Sleep on, Sister, and take your rest,
You will miss the future strife,
And when our blessed Savior comes,
He will give eternal life.

Subscription Rate.—51 issues per annum, $2.00.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him, (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

THE OHIO PAGE

By Harvey Krogh, Jr.

ON September 16, 1939, a group of delegates from the Cleveland, Lawrenceville, and Brush Creek churches met at the home of Brother and Sister James A. Patrick at Ashland. Then and there the present Ohio Conference had its beginning. Temporary officers were elected, and it was agreed that the Conference in 1940 would be held at the Lawrenceville church, July 7-14.

The Conference was held as planned, a constitution was adopted, officers were elected, and many enjoyed the classes and sermons and the fellowship that so enriches our life of service for the Master. It has since been decided that the Conference in 1941 will be, D.V., at the Brush Creek church about one and one half miles south of Nashville, between Tipp City and West Milton. The time is August 17-24.

Our Name

As a Conference we call ourselves, The Ohio Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus (of the Abrahamic Faith). In 1 Thessalonians 2:14, churches are mentioned as a group in the following words: "the churches of God which in Judaea are in Christ Jesus."

What Shall We Do?

Just look at our Conference Constitution, and we shall find out. "The object of this Conference shall be: (a) to unite the Churches of God in Ohio in closer fellowship." That work began last July. Some may glory in our comparatively small number, but it does us a world of good to get acquainted with more of our brethren and find there are more than just the few we already know. The more we fellowship with fellow servants of Christ, the more interest we will have in the work Jesus gave us.

"Closer fellowship" means unity. We have all heard the statement, "United we stand, divided we fall." We might change it just a little to suit us and say, "Divided we fall down on some of the work we could do if we were more firmly united." There are many things that we can do as a group that could not be done by an individual. Along with fellowship, is the exchange of thoughts. The sharing of knowledge is knowledge gained.

"(b) To strengthen their work." It is the Lord's will that the work of all of our churches be strengthened. But what is their work? Is it not first to preach the gospel that others may know God's Word and become members of the body of Christ? Then comes the continued work of the evangelist, pastor, and teacher, "for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ" (Eph. 4:12). By close co-operation, the work of the churches can be strengthened. We need strength in these days.

"(c) To aid the spiritual life of scattered believers." The entire first letter that Peter wrote was to those scattered abroad by the persecution. They needed the encouragement that would keep them faithful to the Lord. Isolated believers today need our help, for it is very difficult in these days of indifference to be a shining light, alone. If you know of any isolated ones in Ohio, please send their names and addresses to the secretary. Contact them, revive hope, renew faith.

"(d) To promote the establishment of new churches and centers of Christian work in the State." Not long ago, Brother Arlen Marsh gave us some good ideas on "It's the quality, not the quantity, that counts." Most of our churches have grown slowly and are firmly based on fundamental truths. Here, though, is another idea: Why not have more of these churches growing at a time? The field is large, and new generations are maturing every year. Sometimes an isolated family or a small Berean class can be the beginning of new churches. Let's sow more seed.

Our Officers:

President, James A. Patrick, Orange Rd., Ashland; vice president, H. H. Hawkins, 15864 Glynn Rd., Cleveland; secretary, Clark Ballentine, 1007 Pine St., Springfield; treasurer, June Macy, Troy, R.F.D. 3. Board members: one year, Edna Brewer, Oregon, Illinois; two years, Paul Overholser, Springfield, R.F.D. 2; three years, Charles Netts, 192 White City Trailer Park, St. Petersburg, Florida. Hereafter, one board member will be elected annually for a period of three years.

The Name of Our Page

We don't know what to call this page, so we are asking that you Ohioans send in the name that you think would be best for this page which we trust will appear from time to time. The first person who sends in the name which the Conference Board selects for the page will be given a year's subscription to The Restitution Herald. Send in a name today, and don't delay.

The Why of It

If you do not receive The Restitution Herald regularly, this issue was sent to you by the Ohio Conference as a part of its work to bring you and others into closer fellowship with us for the work we love to do for Jesus.

Faith Versus Fear

By Mabell E. Bell

"Be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest" (Josh. 1:9).

ARE you ever afraid? I am, sometimes, and I know that I need much help and encouragement in these evil times. Though our country is not actually at war, we are fearing that war may come, as we read of the awful devastation and suffering caused by modern warfare. It seems all of the calamities mentioned in prophecy are coming upon us: adultery, uncleanness, strife, drunkenness, heresies, hatred, and murder—all are common happenings. We are living in a time when parents rise up against the children, and children against the parents. It is almost impossible to read a newspaper without seeing an account of one member of a family having murdered one or more of the others.

Are we Christians going to be able to stand firm against all of this chaos, and not be swept under? Have we any reason to be afraid? Are we all certain we shall not be deceived by an anti-Christ? I doubt not that they will be presented to us in many subtle forms, for Jesus said: "Take heed that no man deceive you. For many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ." Perhaps you feel sure you will heed this warning, but remember Christ said, also, that these "shall deceive many."

We need not hide our fears of falling into temptation, for Jesus in His understanding and utter compassion for us said, "The spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak." We need each other in these evil times, we need to bind ourselves closer together, to give every help and encouragement to each other, and especially to our young people. Christ Himself felt this need when He asked His disciples to watch with Him in the Garden of Gethsemane. Although Jesus knew He would not fail to bow to the will of the Father, He feared the agony of the cross, saying, "Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me" (Luke 22:42). There are those who do not believe Jesus ever gave any evidence of human weakness, but it adds greatly to His meaning to me, as my Savior, that He was "in all points tempted like as we are," so that He is "touched with the feeling of our infirmities."

How do I know that I would stand firm in my faith if I were called upon to endure bodily suffering? Sometimes mental persecution is no easier to endure. If Peter, that wonderful man of God, three times denied his Lord, will I be strong enough to stand up for Christ when all about me there are people following an anti-Christ?

We need knowledge, we need to study, and to be taught concerning these things which are coming upon the earth, so we shall not be among those mentioned in Proverbs 1:27, 29, which says, "Fear cometh as desolation" because men "hated knowledge, and did not choose the fear of the Lord." Knowledge will be a safeguard to us, for we are told in Isaiah 33:6, "Wisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of thy times, and strength of salvation."

We need to realize that our trials are very short, compared to the cons of eternity. As to what eternal life in the ages to come really means, I have never been fully able to grasp. The magnitude of it is beyond knowledge, but Paul says, "I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." I know I should like to live on this earth when all fear of every kind is taken away—when only love and kindness, beauty and truth are known.

Then, let us hold tight to one another's hands, that not one of us may fall. Let us forget all petty differences of opinion, be patient one toward another, lending our strength. When we each realize (Please turn to page 10)

Pre-Easter Evangelism

As Easter nears, Christians more sincerely meditate the significance of Jesus—especially of His death and resurrection. The Easter season is a time, too, when all men, even doubters, consider to some extent the possibilities of Him who said: "I am the resurrection," "Every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life: and I will raise him up at the last day." The season, though commercialized, radiates a divine spirit that cannot be explained by bunnies and bonnets.

Easter is, therefore, an ideal time for churches to work most faithfully to convert souls to Christ and to develop and deepen the spirituality of men and women previously pledged to share the responsibilities of the cross. It would be wise and praiseworthy for every congregation of the Church of God to conduct a series of pre-Easter evangelistic meetings. The Lord will bless us more when we attempt more work for Him to bless. True, God made man from only dust, and Christ fed thousands with only five loaves and two fishes, but neither God nor Christ ever blessed nothing.

"Not Slothful in Business"

The Board of Religious Education is planning a Summer Bible Training School to be conducted June 17—July 25 for young men and women who are enough interested in the message and mission of Jesus to really study to become better qualified for public Christian service. The instructors, Elders S. J. Lindsay of Tempe, Arizona, and Harry A. Sheets of Elburn, Illinois, are already employed.

For the Summer School to be successful, however, there must be a goodly number of attendants. We need an enrollment of at least twenty students by June 1 for the School to open June 17. We are building on faith, but the young people of the Church of God must also build on faith. Youth, you are an important part of the Church. "Down to business, girls and boys"—learn to know the Gardener's joys!

As heretofore, the six-weeks' training will cost thirty dollars, plus a small charge for one or two textbooks. The cost is so "reasonable" as to be almost charitable, especially when it is considered that the thirty dollars pay for: board, room, good instruction, the privilege of association with other youths from various parts of the nation, and, without question, a most enjoyable time. He who in youth sows to the wind must in his senior years reap the whirlwind, but he who in his youth sows to the Spirit will reap life everlasting. May at least twenty of our young men and women quickly sense the opportunity of attending the Summer Bible Training School, and enroll by filling out the coupon which appears on page 15.

"Go Up, Thou Bald Head"

When "little children" mocked the Prophet Elisha, saying: "Go up, thou bald head; go up, thou bald head" (2 Kings 2:23), neither the Prophet nor God excused them with any such thought as, "Oh, well, they're only children, anyway, and the Prophet is only a man as human as anybody." Elisha "turned back, and looked on them, and cursed them in the name of the Lord" (v. 24). God, obviously in accord with Elisha's curse, sent "two she bears out of the wood, (which) tare forty and two children of them" (v. 24). The mockery of the "little children" betrayed a similar disrespect of the parents who should have better taught their children. When a child makes a "snoot" at a minister, the minister may be reasonably sure the child's parents will not soon ask for baptism.

Well does the Bible teach: "Thou shalt rise up before the hoary head, and honour the face of the old man" (Lev. 19:32); "The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness" (Prov. 16:31); "The beauty of old men is the grey head" (Prov. 20:29), and "Rebuke not an elder, but intreat him as a father" (1 Tim. 5:1).

Who today receives more criticism than a minister who may be a little past his best service? It should not be supposed that if Elisha were now living he would grin if mocked by children, nor should it be forgotten that "it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God" (Heb. 10:31). "She bears" may not come out of the woods, but "many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep" (1 Cor. 11:30). Honor the "Ancient of days."

Life That Now Is

By C. E. Randall

IN OUR last study, the subject of "Eternal Life" was analyzed. In this article, the life which Paul termed the "life that now is" (1 Tim. 4:8) will be considered. By contrasting the two: "the life that now is" and "that which is to come," we shall be able to discern a marked difference between them. It will be readily observed that the characteristics of each are entirely different than those of the other; that the descriptions of either one cannot be applied to the other.

PROPOSITION 21: Our present life is expressed in terms that indicate it as being of short duration.

(1) James defines our present life as being a vapor, saying: "What is your life? It is even a vapour, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away" (James 4:14). Several translations render the Greek word atmis as being a "mist." This is the root of our word "atmosphere." Man is like a mist or a cloud that appears for a short time, then disappears—vanishes away. There is no certainty in the time element of mists or clouds. They may continue for an extended time, or they may disappear as quickly as they came. Their existence is most uncertain. The life that now is, is just that—uncertain.

(2) Several Old Testament writers liken the "life that now is" to a "shadow." "We are strangers before thee, and sojourners, as were all our fathers: our days on the earth are as a shadow, and there is none abiding." (1 Chron. 29:15; Job 8:9; 14:2; Psalm 102:11.)

A shadow is not the substance, but a reflection or likeness of the substance. The "life that now is" is not genuine life. That which is really life is the "life to come," which will be length of days forever and ever. Life lived under sin and in sin is so circumscribed and shackled, that one can only speak of it as the "sufferings of this present time."

(3) The Psalmist compared his days to smoke, saying, "My days are consumed like smoke, and my bones are burned as an hearth" (Psalm 102:3). The brevity of our present existence, and the fleeting character of all who are born of woman, stand out in bold relief in this simple language. Smoke appears for a moment, then disappears—it is gone.

(4) A fourth characteristic of transient life is set forth by the Prophet Isaiah, as follows: "The voice said, Cry. And he said, What shall I cry? All flesh is grass, and all the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field: the grass withereth, the flower fadeth: because the spirit of the Lord bloweth upon it: surely the people is grass. The grass withereth, the flower fadeth: but the word of our God shall stand for ever" (40:6-8).

What could be more explicit of human frailty, and the temporary character of "the life that now is," than the flower of the field, or the grass that soon dies? Such expressions cannot be spoken of the life to come, which is a gift of God through Jesus Christ. Only mortality can be described by such short-lived and transitory things.

PROPOSITION 22: Our present life was conceived in sin and shaped in iniquity, and is therefore subject to all the ravages of sin.

In reviewing his birth, David related, "Behold, I was shapen in iniquity; and in sin did my mother conceive me" (Psalm 51:5). What was true of David is likewise true of us. Race, color, or class makes no difference. All are born under the blight of sin—all are under its condemnation as far as its evils affect this life. Experience proves the worth and truth of Job's words, "Man that is born of a woman is of few days, and full of trouble" (Job 14:1). All are born of woman, and without exception, all have their proportionate share of trouble throughout their days. Why? Sin is the answer—ever bestowing its wages upon fleshly controlled mankind. It may be vanity of vanities; nevertheless, "What hath man of all his labour, and of the vexation of his heart, wherein he hath laboured under the sun?" (Eccl. 2:22.) "If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable" (1 Cor. 15:19). Sickness and suffering, pestilence and plague, war and win against mankind. "We know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now" (Rom. 8:22). We are born into this world under the curse of sin, live "threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore" (Psalm 90:10), still, we must "go the way of all the earth," said this same man in a charge to his son Solomon (1 Kings 2:2). Paul defined the beginning and ending of "the life that now is" in the following words: "We brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out" (1 Tim. 6:7). The beginning is birth, the ending is death. This end is common to all. It is an appointment that none can escape (Heb. 9:27). Solomon termed it a warfare from which there is no discharge (Eccl. 8:8). In respect to death, man has no preeminence over other creatures (Eccl. 3:18-21).

In brief scope, the Bible view- (Please turn to page 10)

Haggai, The Temple Builder

By Francis Burnett

HAGGAI was born either shortly before or immediately after the Babylonian Captivity. Many students believe that Haggai was an old man when he wrote his book. He was, undoubtedly, older than Zechariah, his contemporary, because in such texts as Ezra 5:1 and 6:14, where both prophets are named, Haggai's name is first mentioned. His birth may have occurred during a feast, for "Haggai" means "festival of Jehovah."

The book was written in the year 520 B.C., which was sixteen years after the regathering of the house of Judah. Haggai was sure of his message, and was a prophet of great faith. The rebuilding of the Temple was the central theme of Haggai's preaching. His writings are not poetic in style, but are very plain and forceful. The book may be divided into four sermons or discourses.

The first sermon was preached on the first day of the sixth month of the second year, in the reign of Darius (Hag. 1:1), probably September 1, 520 B.C. In this sermon, Haggai rebuked the people for living in their own ceiled houses and neglecting the Lord's house.

The second sermon was delivered on the twenty-first day of the seventh month. Haggai gave encouragement to the people who desired to rebuild the Temple as it had been in the days of Solomon. He also told them that Jehovah would "shake all nations" and that "the desire of all nations" would come. (Hag. 2:7.)

The third sermon was presented on the twenty-fourth day of the ninth month. This was after the work on the Temple had been resumed. Haggai told the people that the neglect of building the Temple had tainted their lives; but he gave the people encouragement that by turning to the Lord and pushing forward the rebuilding of the Temple, Jehovah would again bless them. (Hag. 2:15-19.)

The fourth sermon was delivered the same day as the third sermon. In this sermon, Haggai prophesied the overthrow of the "throne of kingdoms." He also prophesied that Zerubbabel would take the throne. (Hag. 2:22, 23.)

Haggai reproached the people for not rebuilding the Lord's house, for they were living securely in their ceiled houses. We read in Haggai 1:2: "Thus speaketh the Lord of hosts, saying, This people say, The time is not come, the time that the Lord's house should be built." In our study, we learn that the rebuilding of the Temple had been neglected for sixteen years. When Cyrus, king of Persia, let the Israelites return to Palestine, it was that they might have their own land and rebuild the Temple. We read in Ezra 1:2, "Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, The Lord God of heaven hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth; and he hath charged me to build him an house at Jerusalem, which is in Judah." This proclamation was made during the first year of the reign of Cyrus, which was 536 B.C.

Francis Burnett

Therefore, we see that from the first year of Cyrus until the time of Haggai's writings, the people who had forgotten about the rebuilding of the Lord's house were spending their time in their own ceiled houses, as mentioned in Haggai 1:4: "Is it time for you, O ye, to dwell in your ceiled houses, and this house lie waste?" How many people today are spending their time at home and forgetting all about church or even about God!

One may travel into any city and see the construction of many new houses—but what of the churches? One finds many dilapidated churches, instead of new churches being built. In fact, some have fallen or have been made into garages or corncribs.

Of course, one may say Haggai's message does not apply to Christians today. Let us see. We read in Haggai 1:6, "Ye have sown much, and bring in little; ye eat, but ye have not enough; ye drink, but ye are not filled with drink; ye clothe you, but there is none warm; and he that earneth wages earneth wages to put into a bag with holes." In the foregoing verse we see that God's judgment was placed upon the people. There was drought and famine in the land. Again, in verse 9, we read: "Ye looked for much, and, lo, it came to little; and when ye brought it home, I did blow upon it. Why? saith the Lord of hosts. Because of mine house that is waste, and ye run every man unto his own house." People are today plagued with famines, droughts, and pestilences of all kinds. Yet, do we consider that these are judgments from God? How many people today are taking the money that belongs to the Lord, and are buying new cars or using it for things other than the gospel!

People are discouraged and think that God has forgotten them, but we read in Isaiah 59:1, 2: "Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear: but your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear." When we feel discouraged about our churches, we should not think that God has forsaken us. More probably, we have forsaken God and the work that He has placed before us. How many churches do we have that need help? There seems to be many. Yet, we have churches that could help the others—but are they? Nevertheless, we wonder why our churches do not grow. We wonder why more people do not read our church paper or help support our Bible Training School, but do we realize that in order for the Lord's work to grow we must forget about worldly gain and give our time and money unto the Lord?

We know that Cyrus gave the people of Israel money and material with which to rebuild the Temple (Ezra 1:7-11). Though Cyrus was not an Israelite, it seems that he sensed his duty toward the God of the Israelites who had called him to perform this work. The Israelites used this money and material for their own use. Likewise today, the people are using the money that belongs to the Lord to buy cars, build houses, and for everything except to push forward the Lord's work.

The year 1940 was one of the greatest years known for the construction of new homes, and in recent weeks, automobile manufacturing has increased to a maximum production, the highest since 1929. What are we to do about this? We read in 2 Corinthians 9:6,7, "This I say, He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly, and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully. Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver."

"Whom Say Ye That I Am?"

---

By R. M. Abbott

---

"I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." "All men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father. He that honoureth not the Son honoureth not the Father which hath sent him."

THESE verses (John 12:32 and 5:23) tell us that Christ is the drawing power in the plan of salvation; therefore, He is the center of attraction. "I . . . will draw all men unto me." Jesus said, "No man cometh unto the Father, but by me" (John 14:6).

We are privileged to know the Father only when we have first made the acquaintance of Christ, and we have seen the Father after we have seen the Son. Jesus said to His disciples: "If ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also: and from henceforth ye know him, and have seen him" (John 14:7). In verse 8, "Philip saith unto him, Lord, shew us the Father," and Jesus answered him, saying: "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father" (v. 9), "I am in the Father, and the Father in me . . . the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works" (v. 10). This helps us to understand 1 Timothy 3:16 where it speaks of Christ by saying, "God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory."

Not only did Jesus bear the name "Jesus," which was a common name among men of that time, but He bore the Father's name, as well. In John 5:43, Jesus said, "I am come in my Father's name, and ye receive me not: if another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive." The prospective parents of Jesus were instructed by the angel that they were to call His name Jesus, but "God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow . . . and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father" (Phil. 2:9-11)—not "at" the name "Jesus," but at the name "of" Jesus. Now, we want to know His name.

In Mark 1:11, Jesus is referred to as "my beloved Son," and in John 3:18 the importance of believing in the name of His Son is stressed when Jesus said, "He that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God."

In prophecy, the Son was to be called "Immanuel," which being interpreted is, "God with us," and again, "His name shall be called . . . The mighty God" (Isa. 9:6).

In Ephesians 1:20, 21, it tells that God has "set him at his own right hand . . . far above . . . every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come." Now, what is the name that God gave Him? We have our answer in Hebrews 1:8. It is God speaking: "Unto the Son he saith, Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever." Here we see that "God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name." God doesn't call Him by the name "Jesus," a common name, but by His own name "which is above every name."

A Stumbling Block Removed

By Rufus A. Curtis

"For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain" (Philippians 1:21).

TO STUMBLE is not always to trip in walking, though that is frequently its meaning. It may, according to Webster, be a productive cause of sliding "into crime or error." The need for the removal of stumbling blocks is not diminished by the rapid flight of time, but increased, because of abounding iniquity, and the love of many waxing cold (Isa. 57:14-17; Matt. 24:12, 13).

Paul, who wrote the text under consideration, was one of Jesus' disciples, "as it were appointed to death: for we are made a spectacle unto the world, and to angels, and to men" (1 Cor. 4:9). Paul was despised, having "no certain dwellingplace; and labour, working with our own hands: being reviled, we bless; being persecuted, we suffer it; being defamed, we intreat: we are made as the filth of the world, and are the offscouring of all things unto this day" (vv. 11-13). "This sect" was "reproached," and everywhere it was "spoken against" (1 Peter 4:14; Acts 28:22).

"Truth crushed to earth shall rise again;
The eternal years of God are hers;
But Error, wounded, writhes in pain,
And dies among his worshippers."—Bryant.

Those professed religionists who hold to the natural immortality of our race eulogize death as their friend and gatekeeper to all the beatitudes of the life "which is to come." Paul, who "was not a whit behind the very chiefest apostles" (2 Cor. 11:5), in his Epistle to the Romans, stated: "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned" (5:12). Such wording does not agree with the modern conception of death as joyfully exchanging "a hut for a palace," or a pleasant trip "going home," escorted by a convoy of angels bearing one away on their snow-white wings," to their "immortal home." Bible students, who "hear the word of the Lord" (Isa. 66:5), discriminate between assertion and proof; between rhetoric and logic. (See John 3:33; Rom. 3:4.) They appeal to the right Source for true "testimony" (Isa. 8:19, 20). Other sources are absolutely "vain" (Col. 2:6-8; 1 Thess. 5:21; John 5:39).

Death is not our friend, but an "enemy" (1 Cor. 15:26). Death is described to "him that knoweth not God," as "the king of terrors" (Job 18:14, 21; Psalm 73:17-19). Death does not, and cannot, furnish our passport into the Millennial City, whose walls are of jasper, whose gates are of pearl, and whose streets are of gold! (Psalm 2:6-8; Matt. 5:34, 35.) Instead of opening the gates into "the regeneration" or "the world to come," death will, to the unrepentant sinner, effectually lock them forever against an entrance into "the kingdom of God." (Mark 10:28-30; Matt. 19:27-29; 1 Cor. 6:9, 10; Luke 13:1-5.)

With the foregoing prefatory remarks, I wish now, in studying this controverted text: "To die is gain," to learn who was to be benefited. Paul was not thinking of "gain" to himself. That was the "strait" that he could not "choose." Paul desired to do that which would bring the most "gain," to his adorable Master. His expectation was that in nothing he would "be ashamed, but that with all boldness, as always, so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life, or by death" (Phil. 1:20).

There was a third expectation that entered the mind of this peerless logician who followed his "leader and commander" through "evil report and good report." (Isa. 55:4; 2 Cor. 6:3-10.) It was "far better" than the "great things he must suffer" for Jesus' "sake." (Acts 9:16; 20:22-25; Matt. 10:22; John 15:18-21.) It was "a desire to depart, and to be with Christ." Paul explained when this desirable event will take place for all true followers of Jesus. It will not be when they die and enter "the land of the enemy," but when Christ shall "appear the second time," for their final deliverance. (Jer. 31:16, 17; Heb. 9:28; 1 Thess. 2:19.) Paul made this statement in his letter to "the church of God" at Corinth: "Behold, I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory" (1 Cor. 15:51-55).

To the brethren at Colosse, Paul wrote: "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory" (Col. 3:4). "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is" (1 John 3:2). To the Philippian brethren, Paul wrote: "Our conversation is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself" (Phil. 3:20, 21). "A prudent man forseeth the evil, and hideth himself: but the simple pass on, and are punished." (Prov. 22:3; Isa. 26:20, 21; Matt. 25:46.)

I append Horatius Bonar's earnest entreaty to persons halting "between two opinions" (2 Kings 18:21).

"Time's sun is fast setting, its twilight is nigh,
Its evening is falling in clouds o'er the sky;
Its shadows are stretching in ominous gloom,
Its midnight approaches—the midnight of doom.
Then haste, sinner, haste, there is mercy for thee
And wrath is preparing—flee, lingerer, flee."

WARNING!

---

By Arlen Marsh

---

NOW that Easter and Children's and Mother's Day programs are being considered by many churches, it seems wise to issue once more the warning which has appeared at least twice in The Restitution Herald during the last ten years—a warning against violation of the copyright law of the United States. (Herald writers are equally concerned with program directors.)

It cannot be stated too bluntly and too firmly that no quotations of whatever length and for whatever purpose may be reproduced from a copyrighted work without the written permission of the owner of the copyright. This blanket rule covers not only books such as Inside Asia, but also hymns, programs, new translations of the Bible, outlines of the International Sunday School Lessons, and magazine articles. In fact, it includes anything that may be copyrighted.

For example: If The Restitution Herald were to carry a quotation of any length, from a sentence to a dozen or more paragraphs, from an article previously published in Reader's Digest or from a chapter in Hurlbut's Story of the Christian Church, without first having secured the written permission of the copyright owner, both The Herald and the author of the piece in which the quotation appeared would be liable to suit for heavy damages. Furthermore, each such quotation, even after written permission for its publication had been secured, would have to be accompanied by the notice: "This quotation is copyrighted by ———, and is used by permission."

Precisely this same regulation, although the fact is not generally understood, applies to recent translations of the Bible, from the American Standard Version (copyrighted by the Federal Council of Churches "to insure purity of text") to the still newer American Translation (copyrighted by the University of Chicago Press). Under the law, not one verse may be reproduced in any form whatsoever, from these copyrighted versions of the Scriptures, without the permission of the copyright owners. Such permission, for any reasonable quotation, is always forthcoming on request; but to avoid possible trouble and certain infraction of the law, that permission must be obtained.

Similar rules apply to the use of Children's Day, Mother's Day, Easter, and other programs. Verses and songs may not be copied from any copyrighted program by any process—not even on a blackboard! (An Ohio public school teacher was successfully prosecuted some years ago for copying a copyrighted verse from a special program leaflet on her classroom blackboard.) If you have followed the current disputes between Broadcast Music, Inc., and the American Society of Composers and Publishers, you will know by this time that not even three bars from a copyrighted melody may be copied, whether by pencil for your own use or on the mimeograph for the use of a number of students in your Sunday school class.

Program and music publishers are especially hard-boiled about this matter, and with good reason. A publisher cannot afford to spend thousands of dollars publishing a new program, only to have it sell meagerly while teachers hand out unauthorized copies of it to thousands of children and adults for practice purposes. No part of a copyrighted program, therefore, may be copied anywhere, anytime, for anyone—and you will find big warnings printed on most copyrighted program material to that effect. Fines for violation of the rule are heavy—and, in addition, so-called "punitive damages" usually can be secured by the owner of the copyright.

But the matter of fines should not be, for the Christian, the thing that restrains him from violation of copyrights. Copyright laws were passed simply to offer greater protection to property already protected by age-old common law: manuscripts, lectures, pictures, which had been

The Heart's Guest

By J. R. LeCrone

A TELEGRAM has arrived, and every member of the family has sprung into activity. The message announced that one whom we hold in great respect and love dearly would soon arrive to spend a few weeks with us. Because we desire so earnestly to please him, we are striving to have everything in the best of order when he arrives. Mother is cleaning the house from top to bottom, and Father is striving to so arrange his work that he will have time to visit when our guest arrives. The children, who have also been pressed into service, receive careful instructions as to how they are to conduct themselves in the presence of the visitor. When all is finally arranged, the entire family awaits his arrival with pleasant anticipation of good times to be shared.

This is, we think, an experience more or less common to all homes. The nature of the preparations will, of course, depend to a great extent upon the personality of the guest who is expected. They will be made with a consideration for his particular likes or dislikes. We do this because we are genuinely pleased with the prospect of enjoying his companionship and desire to make him want to stay with us as long as possible.

Would we be equally pleased if we were to receive word that Jesus expected shortly to arrive at our home for an indefinite stay? What changes would we feel it necessary to make before we were ready to welcome Him into our home? What doubts and questions would be raised in our minds? How should we treat Him? How does one go about entertaining a Savior? What changes will His presence require in our manner of living?

Shall we gather up all our cheap fiction and "naughty" picture magazines and place them in a convenient place, just in case Jesus should feel like reading? What about cigarettes? Are there plenty on hand with enough ash trays and matches at strategic points so that He need never be without His "smoke"? Shall we just leave the liquor where He can see it and help Himself, or shall we offer Him a "nightcap" in the evening and an "eye-opener" in the morning?

What shall we do for entertainment? Shall we take the Master to the movies, a burlesque show, a night club, or a tavern? Or, perhaps He would prefer to stay home and play "penny ante" while we listen to the radio programs that extol the virtues of this or that brand of beer or tobacco?

Suppose that our Christ just wants to visit—what shall we talk about? Shall we regale Him with the latest gossip about our neighbors and retell for His amusement that vulgar story that we picked up at the shop or office today? Do you suppose that He would be interested in hearing the lurid details of the scandal that we had in our church that time? Then, too, wouldn't it be a good opportunity for us to explain to Him that we never go to church any more because we never got anything out of it and nobody ever did anything for us? Others have been so heartless as to try to tell us that the fault was ours for never putting anything into the services and never helping others, but of course Jesus will be our guest and bound to appear sympathetic!

If we were to choose the above mentioned methods of entertaining Jesus, how long could we rightly expect Him to continue with us? How deeply impressed would He be with our love for Him and our respect for His likes and dislikes—His judgment and advice?

Of course, none of us would treat Jesus thus! On the contrary, we should go over our house most carefully and destroy every suggestion of evil. We should consign to the furnace all questionable literature, together with any pictures, games, or other devices about which we are in doubt. We certainly would be careful to remove any evidence that there had ever been any liquor or tobacco in our house!

We would carefully instruct the children concerning the proper way to conduct themselves in the presence of the Son of God. We should no longer regard their disobedience or disrespect as "cute." Our reaction at having Jesus witness this evidence of our failure to properly train them would be quite the reverse. We would be deeply chagrined.

As for ourselves, we would most carefully guard our speech, lest in an unguarded moment we utter some profane oath. Imagine our embarrassment if our Guest were actually to hear us take His name in vain! We would also get a firm hold on our temper, lest in a moment of uncontrolled passion we say or do something to insult our beloved Guest. It certainly would do nothing to increase His regard for us to have Him behold us at such a moment!

Now, about entertainment: We would surely brush up on our knowledge of the Bible, paying particular attention to that portion which deals with the life and mission of the Messiah. When we would sit down with Him to visit, we would be able to understand the allusions which He would in all probability make to the Scriptures. We would ask Him to enlighten us concerning the more difficult passages. We would call the attention of the Prophet of Nazareth to the news of the day, and ask Him to explain the news to us in the light of the utterances of the prophets, while we listened entranced to the voice of Authority concerning a question about which there has been so much speculation among men. We would invite Him to lead our family devotions, and we would insist that He take the liberty of pointing out shortcomings in our own Christian lives and suggesting means of improvement. We would ask His opinion and advice concerning our personal, social, and business problems, and, recognizing the superiority of an eternal viewpoint, would strive to follow His leading.

While He continued with us, we should try to anticipate His every need and supply His every want. We would make our home a center for Christian activities, and would permit none that Jesus would not approve. In short, we would do everything in our power to demonstrate our love for Him and respect for His authority.

All this would we do if Jesus were dwelling with us, but listen: "Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him" (John 14:23). This is not a promise of a visit sometime in the dim distant future, but of a fellowship that may be enjoyed from day to day, now! Jesus says that He and His Father will make Their abode with us today!

Paul explains the glories of this invisible Presence in Ephesians 3:16, 17: "That he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith." Jesus promises that, through the medium of His Holy Spirit, He will dwell in the hearts of the faithful. "Behold," He cries, "I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me" (Rev. 3:20).

Many make the mistake of trying to have their hearts fully cleansed before they will admit the Master. This they can never do. The cleansing of an evil heart requires the assistance of the Son of God. "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are" (1 Cor. 3:16, 17). What happens when the Master enters a temple that is being defiled is recorded for us in Mark 11:15: "They come to Jerusalem: and Jesus went into the temple, and began to cast out them that sold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the moneychangers, and the seats of them that sold doves; and would not suffer that any man should carry any vessel through the temple. And he taught, saying unto them,

Is it not written, My house shall be called of all nations the house of prayer? but ye have made it a den of thieves." We may be very sure that when Jesus is admitted to the sanctuary of our hearts, He will immediately commence the cleansing process.

There is a great temptation for men and women to attempt to confine their evils and vices to just one room of their hearts, locking the door and forbidding Jesus to enter. The whole heart for Jesus, one room for Satan—that, they feel ought to be a fair enough arrangement. Their explanation of it usually takes some such form as this: "I am willing to become a Christian and work with a church, but I have one little sinful pleasure that must be overlooked. After all, it is a comparatively small matter, and I feel sure that if I am true to the Lord in other respects, He will not regard this one reservation. It is about the only pleasure that I get out of life, so please do not ask me to give it up."

The Scriptures make it plain that so long as an individual clings to his "pleasures of the world" it is likely to remain "about the only pleasure that he gets out of life." It is a spiritual impossibility for him to enjoy the "lusts of the flesh" and the "peace that passeth understanding" at the same time. One life will not contain both. Christ and Satan cannot dwell in the same heart. "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? and what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people" (2 Cor. 6:14-16).

A. T. Pierson, in "Record of Christian Work," calls attention to the Law of Reserved Right, and illustrates it by saying that if he were to sell ten thousand acres of land and were to retain one acre in the middle of it, he would have a legal right to go over the nine thousand nine hundred ninety-nine acres to get to his own. Then Mr. Pierson offers the following thought-provoking comment: "One trouble with us is that we reserve a room in our hearts which belongs to Satan, and he knows it and uses his right of way."

If we sell or lease one room of our house, we must permit the owner or tenant, if need be, to pass through that portion of the house belonging to us in order to reach his own. How often have we beheld the spectacle of Satan trampling underfoot that portion of the heart belonging to Jesus, in order to reach that part belonging to him. How frequently are the best of intentions brought to nought by the presence of one little unevicted sin!

Saint and sinner, alike, are familiar with the plight of the alcohol addict who attempts to live the Christian life. The progress that it has taken him weeks to accomplish in Christian growth may all be lost in a few short hours when he yields to his "thirst." Satan has trampled that which was Christ's to get to his own.

Neither will we have to call upon our imaginations to picture the individual who occasionally permits a violent temper to destroy the results of much devoted labor in the vineyard of the Lord. There is one or more in every congregation who apparently has reserved the right to yield to his anger, saying and doing things that otherwise he would shun. Satan uses his right of way.

If your congregation lacks gossips who, for the sake of the pleasures of the moment, are willing to destroy the reputation, and consequently the effectiveness of your best Christian workers, you are extremely blessed. The pity of it all is that those who gossip are often "the cream of the crop" in other respects. Satan, however, destroys much good in getting his corner of their hearts—that corner labeled "gossip." Then, of course, we have all known cases in which the "love of money" has prevented wholehearted service. We have deplored the disintegrating effect of hatred on the hearts of Christians and have recalled John's assertion that "he that hateth his brother is a murderer." We have seen the results of one adulterous heart reflected on an entire congregation. But enough! Each individual is capable of adding many such results of a "reserved for sin" room in the hearts of men and women.

All this heartache and pain because Jesus was not given free rein of the entire heart! Were Jesus admitted, these "thieves" that steal away the "love, joy, peace" from the lives of people should be cast out. When given free access to all our hearts, the Word of God searches out these hidden "dens of iniquity" and exposes them to the purifying sunlight of truth. "The word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any twoedged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart" (Heb. 4:12).

What of the Guest in your heart? Do you treat Jesus when He is present in Spirit with as much respect as you would were He present in Person? He expects you to!

FAITH VERSUS FEAR

we have brothers and sisters watching with us, who stand ready to help us, we shall lose our fear of earthly threatenings. May we have only one fear: "Let us therefore fear, lest, a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it" (Heb. 4:1).

Let us pray that we may grow in wisdom and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, for "this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

LIFE THAT NOW IS

point of "the life that now is" has been presented. We have confined our study to Adamic life and its final end. Beyond this end (death) natural life does not go. If man is to live after death, he must be revived—brought to life—by resurrection. Present life has no power with which to combat death, nor has it any way of redeeming itself from death, once it has been overcome. Redemption from death must come from God through Jesus Christ. Our next lesson will concern the question of early origin: "If a man die, shall he live again?"

---

The virtuous woman, who is so wonderfully described in the last chapter of Proverbs, has as one of her virtues the law of kindness in her tongue. How often the unkind word is spoken in a rash moment, and no matter how hard we may try, that word can never be recalled. If every Christian could have that same law working to control his tongue, there would be fewer mortal wounds.

---

"WHOM SAY YE THAT I AM?"

Sons of earthly parents bear their father's name, and the "beloved Son" of God bears His Father's name, and He is the central attraction to draw all men to Himself: for "in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily" (Col. 2:9). In the light of Jesus being given "a name that is above every name," we can now understand 1 John 3:16, which reads: "Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us"; also Acts 20:28: "Feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood."

The Jews sought to kill Christ because He made Himself equal with God (John 5:18), but Jesus "thought it not robbery to be equal with God" (Phil. 2:6). (See Emphatic Diaglott translation—Editor.)

It is very important that we believe in His name: "There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12). Then, we are commanded to "honour the Son," and the question might be asked, "How much shall we honor the Son?" The answer is, "Even as they honour the Father"—not one iota less, for "he that honoureth not the Son honoureth not the Father which hath sent him," and surely to honor Him less than is commanded, is not to honor Him, but it would be denying Him instead. Jesus said:

"Whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 10:33). John 10:30: "I and my Father are one." Thus we see They are one in name, and with one aim.

A great danger in denying the Lord is spoken of in 2 Peter 2:1: "There were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction." "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood" (Acts 20:28).

What is His name? "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace" (Isa. 9:6).

How much shall men honor Christ? "All men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father."

sweated into existence by hard-working artisans. As a commercial writer, I know from personal experience that preparing material, handling interviews, undertaking research work, doing endless writing and arduous revising, require too much time, energy, and money for the author to want the product of his efforts to be used here and there without his permission or without his being paid for that use, either in satisfaction or in checks that don't bounce.

Commercial publishers and writers have a word for violation of copyright which is illuminating and accurate: "pirating." Using what a man or woman has slaved long hours—and perhaps spent much money—to produce, and using it without permission of the producer, is quite as much theft as picking someone's pocket. Religious papers quote back and forth freely, it is true; but religious papers are not printed to make money, and their writers are not trying to make a living from contributions to them. Some religious papers, however, are copyrighted (Moody's Monthly and Christian Century, for instance); and care must be taken to avoid quoting from these without the permission of the editors.

So when you undertake your choir or your children's program, don't copy a copyrighted program—not even one verse from it, or a single bar of music. If you do, you'll be not only violating the law—you'll be taking property that belongs to someone else!

Book Reviews

By Arlen Marsh

Of the two great unabridged concordances to the King James Version of the Bible, we are inclined to favor Strong's (Methodist Book Concern; $7.50) over Young's (Funk & Wagnalls; $7.50). Each of the two has its own peculiar advantages, and among Church of God readers Young's is probably more familiar, although why this should be is hard to say.

In any event, Strong's Exhaustive Concordance is exactly what its name implies: exhaustive. Literally, it covers every word in the King James Version, from such unusual items as "reeward" to common words such as "the" and "and." In addition, Strong's is more accurate than Young's, which carries a somewhat larger "erratum" section to take care of errors and omissions in the main body of the text. Young's does not carry all the words in the Bible; short conjunctions and articles are all omitted, as well as certain pronouns.

But Young's has a system of indexing unlike that of Strong's. Young's sets apart English words according to their Hebraic, Greek, or Aramaic derivation. If a single English word has come from two or more original words, Young's divides the references to the English word into as many groups as necessary, with subheadings to show which original language word goes with which references. Some like this feature (which gives Young's its name of Analytical Concordance) very much; but it seems to us that Strong's method of disregarding original languages in the indexing of references makes it easier to find in a hurry whatever text is needed.

Strong's provides a thorough cross-index to original language terms, so that in effect it accomplishes in a less annoying way what Young's "analytical" system accomplishes. Also, Strong's has thorough dictionaries of Aramaic, Greek, and Hebrew words used in the old-time Scriptures. As still another extra feature, Strong's unlike Young's, shows variations among the King James, English Revised, and American Standard Versions.

The prices quoted on both volumes are those listed for buckram-bound editions; other prices of $10.00, $15.00, $20.00, and even more are available if you like leather instead of cloth!

Jesus in the Temple

Jesus, teaching the people in the Temple, told them a parable of a vineyard. In Isaiah 5:1-7, we find out something of this vineyard. The soil was very good. It had all the stones removed from the land and a fence built around it. The lord of the vineyard had planted the very choicest vines. He had built a tower in the center, and put a press in it to press out the juice of the fruit of the vines.

The Parable of the Vineyard

This parable informs us that the lord of the vineyard, who planted it, let it to husbandmen, and went away into a "far country."

When the season to gather the fruit came, the lord of the vineyard sent a servant to collect his share. What did the husbandmen do? They beat him, and sent him away empty. A second servant was sent. He, too, was beaten, and scolded, and sent away empty. The third was treated worse than the others, for he was also wounded.

Now, the lord of the vineyard said, "What shall I do? I will send my beloved son: it may be they will reverence him when they see him" (Luke 20:13).

When the husbandmen saw the son, they whispered together, "This is the son, We will kill him and have everything for ourselves." This they did.

Jesus questioned the leaders: "What therefore shall the lord of the vineyard do unto them?" (Luke 20:15.) He knew the priests and scribes understood He was talking about them. Jesus quoted Psalm 118:22 to them: "The stone which the builders refused is become the head stone of the corner." These leaders had the Old Testament books; yet, they refused to recognize or accept Christ, the chief corner stone, when He came to them.

Israel, the Vineyard

We know that Israel is the vineyard, for in Isaiah 5:7 we read: "The vineyard of the Lord of hosts is the house of Israel." The servants are the prophets sent of God, and so cruelly treated. Jesus was the heir, for He said He was sent to "the lost sheep of the house of Israel" (Matt. 15:

24). He was killed. The privilege those people had was taken away from them. The ones who read their Bibles may accept Jesus and become part of the church, the bride of Christ. The place, once given to Israel, is now filled by the church. "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise" (Gal. 3:29), the "children of the promise" and "counted for the seed" (Rom. 9:8).

ECE Bible Study

Divide into two groups. Group one will say the books of the Bible and write them. Group two will only say them (they are too young to write them). Review for a test next week!

ECE Membership

Mrs. P. W. Anderson sends the name of her daughter, Mary Louise, who becomes our two hundred seventy-second member.

Favorite Bible Verses

The Twenty-third Psalm and the Lord's Prayer are the favorite verses of Mary Louise Anderson.

God's Supply of Good

"God's supply of good is large;
It's He who fills our needs.
It's God who is our thoughtful friend,
It's He the sparrow feeds.
It's God who gives us food and clothes,
And shelter from the cold;
He cares for people everywhere,
And loves both young and old."

What! No Copy?

Yes, Bereans, here it is Monday night again, and still no copy from any of you folks about the country. Two weeks have passed since we received the last "inspiration." With no more copy in reserve, the coming months present a rather gloomy outlook. You see, fellows and girls, the one who writes this little wailing note is just the editor of this page and not a columnist, reporter, or feature writer. All that he is supposed to do is read the copy you people send in, add a few commas, and trim it to the correct size to fit the space allotted. He doesn't mind writing an article now and then to help the cause along; in fact, he will even go so far as to write half of the page. Nevertheless, a little passing breeze whispers that if he is going to have to write all of it, you are not going to like it. (For proof, reread preceding sentences.)

How about helping yourself to better reading? Presidents of local societies, exercise a little of your authority. Appoint several of your members to write articles commenting on points brought forth in lessons you are studying. Have at least one person at each meeting write an article on, or resume of the lesson. Say, if you all got behind this idea and worked on it with the good old Christian spirit, it would mean that your editor would receive an average of twenty-five letters a week. Oh, joyful avalanche! Who will be first?

Organize a Gospel Unit

Frances Munshaw of Grand Rapids, Michigan, writes that Brother James McLain, Pennellwood's new pastor, has organized a gospel unit of young people. Every Sunday afternoon the group travels to Dutton, Michigan, where at one time there was a Church of God. Brother McLain gives a sermonette—the rest are still a little bashful—and the rest of the program consists of solos, duets, instrumental numbers, and choir anthems.

Brother McLain laid the foundation for a similar unit in Oregon, Illinois, a couple of years ago. The idea didn't catch on right at the time—too much timidity. However, after several months had passed, a group of young people in the Oregon church organized a gospel unit with Brother James Watkins, now in Eldorado, Illinois, as speaker. The unit conducted services in the Churches of God at Oregon and Dixon, also in a little country church west of Oregon. Later, Brother Magaw led the unit in services at the CCC camp, north of Oregon. Those who worked the hardest to make their work for the Lord a success enjoyed it the most, naturally.

What is the purpose of a gospel unit? Its purpose is to spread the gospel through the words of the speaker, with music, and by the association of the unit members with the people who are at least mildly interested in the Bible. The speaker brings a message directly from God's Word, the musician praises God with voice and instrument, and the rest perform other tasks that are essential.

Participation in a gospel unit is both a privilege and a duty. It is a privilege in that it gives the participant an opportunity to grow in knowledge of that which he is advocating for others, and it is a duty in that it provides an opportunity to hear the gospel of Christ for many who will listen, but who, for many reasons, have never gone to a regular church service.

Spread the Gospel

When your neighbor finds a new gadget, material, or process that makes life a little easier for him, you are grateful when he tells you of his discovery. You would feel a little less kindly toward him if you found out that he had found something really fine and had just neglected to tell you about it. How would you feel, if, during the period of instruction for all people after our Lord's return, you were to meet a number of people whom you had met, but had never made an effort to reach with the Word of God, if they were to say to you, "You knew of these wonderful things all the time. Why didn't you tell us?" What would you answer? You never heard of the Kingdom of God until someone told you. How many of you started attending your present church without first being invited by another? Are you going to help others to decide to attend church, or are you just going to let them get along as best they can?

By organizing a gospel unit and doing your share to support it (which covers considerable territory), you will be doing all you can to give the other fellow a chance to hear the gospel. You will be pleasantly surprised with the results. Try it, and you will soon find out what we mean.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALENDAR OF EVANGELISM

March 29, 30.—Illinois Quarterly Conference at Ripley.
 April 7-13.—Special meetings at Oregon, Ill.
 June 18-29—Indiana Bible School and Conference at North Salem.
 July 29-August 10—General Conference at Oregon, Ill.
 July 29-August 10—Illinois Bible School and Conference at Oregon.
 August 17-24—Ohio State Conference at the Brush Creek Church of God, near Tipp City.

SUMMER SCHOOL INSTRUCTORS

We are pleased to announce that the instructors for the Summer Bible Training School have been engaged. They are Elders S. J. Lindsay of Tempe, Ariz., and Harry A. Sheets of Elburn, Ill. Bro. Lindsay is really the father of the Bible school work at Oregon, Ill., and because of his combined knowledge of the Scriptures and ability to teach is one of the very best instructors that could be engaged to take charge of the Bible classes. Bro. Sheets, too, is one of our ministers well-read in the fundamentals of the Bible and has been an educator in public schools for several years. He will have charge of the more secular type of work, and has been chosen Dean of the Summer School.

For the School to open, however, it is necessary that at least twenty students enroll by June 1. The dates for the School are June 17 to July 25. Students planning to attend should enroll as soon as convenient by signing an enrollment coupon as appears on the opposite page. Sydney E. Magaw, Chairman
 Board of Religious Education.

PENNELWOOD CHURCH OF GOD

Grand Rapids, Michigan

A reception was held for our new pastor and wife, Bro. and Sr. James McLain, at their home at 46 Pennell Road, S.E., on the evening of February 5. The evening was spent in getting acquainted and games. Light refreshments were served and gifts were presented the host and hostess by the church and the young people.

Some of the young folks and the pastor have formed a gospel team and hold services in the church at Dutton each Sunday afternoon.

The Southlawn Park church kindly gave us the use of their baptistry on the afternoon of Sunday, February 23, at which time Bro. McLain assisted Frank Malone to put on the all-saving name of Jesus. After the evening service, the young people met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Townsend to bid him God-speed as he leaves on February 27 for a year's military training. They gave him a Bible to remind him always of his loving Savior and the friends at home.

A teachers' training class has been organized which meets each Tuesday evening following the devotional meeting. A half hour is spent in the rudiments of teaching and another half hour in the study of the lesson.

At this writing, Srs. Grace Abbott and Pauline Koon are confined to their beds by illness. May the grace of God soon restore them to health and strength again.

Mrs. L. F. Slocum, Secy.

OREGON, ILLINOIS

Elder James M. Watkins, pastor of the Churches of God of Eldorado and Marshall, Ill., will preach at 7:30 each evening of the week preceding Easter, and at both morning and evening services Easter Sunday. The dates are April 7-13. Bro. Watkins, formerly of Oregon, Ill., has progressed rapidly in the work of the ministry, and we await with joy the privilege of hearing him proclaim the Word of God.

May many attend and co-operate in these special meetings.

Sydney Magaw, Pastor.

SOUTH BEND, INDIANA

The Hope Chapel Sunday School held its monthly Sunday school night on February 25. Various programs are planned on these nights by our capable superintendent, Lottie Picklerl. This month's entertainment was a father and son banquet—forty-nine fathers and sons being treated to a delicious chicken dinner. Mrs. Lulu Stilson was general chairman, and the women of the church assisted her in the preparation.

Bro. Ernest Logan was toastmaster for the evening. Various greetings were made: Bro. Floyd Stilson representing the grandfather, Bro. Horace Pierce the father, and Forest Leighty the son. Responses were made by Bobby Pierce, Elwyn Stilson, and Bro. F. L. Austin. Similar affairs are planned monthly.

We are very proud of the progress in our Sunday school and church. Attendance has increased almost double. We have a great leader at the helm, everyone is co-operating to the fullest extent, and we know we are receiving God's greatest blessings.

Wilma F. Pierce, Secy.

BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL NEWS

Last week, Old Man Winter gave us an old-fashioned snowstorm. The "flu," like a creeping dragon, has confined many people to their beds. The following old adage is very good: "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Bros. L. E. Conner and Terry Ferrell, and Sr. Barbara Fish have been sick with the "flu."

Our Archaeology teacher recently said, "We are beginning to strike a little oil." We have been studying about the findings concerning the Hittites that agree with the Scriptural account.

Bro. Francis Burnett conducted the opening services at the Bible study last Wednesday evening, and the writer led the study, because our pastor was ill.

We did not have any of Bro. Conner's classes last Thursday and Friday because of his sickness. We had our music class Thursday, February 27, instead of Friday which is the usual time.

Bro. Celaine Randall preached in Dixon, Ill., last Sunday. Celaine has a natural ability as a speaker.

Bro. Francis Burnett and the writer enjoyed a visit at home over the week end.

The Ambassadors' Class, after the Bible study a week ago, enjoyed the birthday party of Miss Edith White. Three young ladies from the church at Dixon, Ill., were present.

The writer, starting next Friday, will lead a Bible study once a week for the brethren at Dixon.

Some of the students are planning to go to the Illinois Quarterly Conference to be held at Ripley, March 29, 30.

Sr. Vernolle Lawrence has been attending to her knitting, until it was hid from her. She hunted from cellar to attic. The knitting was soon found.

Alan McLain, Reporter.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

Better than fried chicken. Bro. W. S. Tomlinson, Chagrin Falls, Ohio, whose "Times of the Gentiles" will appear on the front cover of next week's Herald, inquires: "How would you like an article on 'The Budding Fig Tree,' to be written in the light of current information?"

Resting: "Haven't been able to get my nerve up enough to write again for The Herald; it's going so good I hate to spoil it."—J. W. Cooper, Ripley, Ill.

Editors' pastime: That that is is that that is not is not is not that it is. Properly punctuated, the sixteen-word puzzle becomes intelligible reading. Solved at first glance denotes genius; within three minutes, O.K.; ten minutes or longer, wasted time.

Bro. and Sr. H. S. Bell, 1707 Wood St., LaCrosse, Wis., are planning to go to Tucson, Ariz., sometime in April, to visit their sons who reside there.

"The work at Koszta is moving forward. . . I have a Bible class of twenty-five ladies."—Mrs. L. M. Kiger, Marengo, Iowa.

"We have been preaching every first and third Sunday in Kokomo, Ind., since December. There is a splendid growing congregation with a grand opportunity. In the two-weeks' revival in March, we plan to center the sermons on Christ's seven sayings on the cross—hoping thus to bring a deeper consciousness to the people of God's love and presence in our lives."—C. A. Smead, Blanchard, Mich.

"There is hope for a Saul, but it is doubtful if there is any for a Nero."—Harry A. Sheets, Elburn, Ill.

"The brethren at Arkansas City, Kans., are planning to furnish the church with new pews. Any brethren desiring to contribute toward this work may send their contributions to Bro. Vernon Chaplin, Treas., 914 N. Second St., Arkansas City, Kans."—Miss Florence Griffith.

SOUTHLAWN PARK CHURCH OF GOD
Grand Rapids, Michigan

The Parent-Teacher Class of the Sunday School, which last year sponsored some much-needed improvements on the church annex, is now bending every effort to the beautifying of the church. There is so much enthusiasm over this new project, that all departments are co-operating to accomplish it by Easter. At that time we shall reveal the nature of this improvement.

Southlawn friends of Sr. Eva H. M. Fletcher of Kalamazoo have been deeply concerned over her serious illness of the past several weeks. Always a loyal defender and supporter of the truth she holds so dear, Sr. Fletcher is loved by all our church family. Many prayers have arisen in her behalf, and we thank God for her recent improvement.

The Berean group of high-school-age young people, which meets every Sunday night at 6:30, is starting a series of studies on the Kingdom and the resurrection. There is much interest manifested in these lessons. The junior chorus from the Bereans adds inspiration to the Sunday evening church services.

Several new faces are being seen in the congregation. A cordial welcome to these new attendants!

As the hearts of our people warm to the approach of the day commemorating the resurrection of our Lord, we joyfully anticipate that Better Day when, with Him, we "shall live also."
Reporter.

FONTHILL, ONTARIO

Bro. and Sr. Melvin Haines of Hamilton are the proud parents of a daughter, born February 10. Congratulations!

Ruth Jones Attercliff had the misfortune to break her leg while tobogganing. She is content to let others do the sliding for awhile. Ruth was baptized last summer.

We trust brighter days are ahead for Sr. Margaret Gilbey of Stony Creek, who has been suffering from several ailments recently.

The night before Valentines Day, following the usual weekly choir rehearsal, the choir joined other members of the church and Sunday school in the church basement for a Valentines party. After a few games—musical and otherwise—the valentine box was opened, and all rejoiced at its contents. Some nice missives were found, but missiles were lacking. A very good lunch was served as a climax. The warmth of Christian fellowship is felt in these get-togethers.

Personally, we have been so pleased to hear from our esteemed Bros. Patrick, Marsh, and Siple. We hope they will soon visit us again by pen, when by person is not possible. The Restitution Herald is such a comfort in so many ways.

Our weekly study was held in Bro. and Sr. Beemer's home at St. Catharines last night, about twenty-five students being in attendance.

It is difficult in these days of stress and strain to arouse much interest in God's plan, but we must continue to try sincerely to find a listening ear, here and there.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him, (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

— Tracts and Books —

"This gospel must first be published among all nations" (Mark 13:10).

The gospel of the Kingdom must be preached in all nations before Jesus will return from heaven. Every member of the Church of God can help to evangelize the world. Order a good supply of tracts; then send them to your friends. It costs nothing to slip a tract into a letter, and it may "save a soul from death."

The following tracts and books, most of them written by men prominent at some time in the Church of God, are for sale by the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Illinois. Send a self-addressed envelope or postage for tracts not priced. How many can you use?

“Times of the Gentiles”

By W. S. Tomlinson

THESE were not meaningless words of the Saviour. They are recorded in Luke 21:24, saying: “Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.” Jesus uttered these words in reply to a question asked of Him by the disciples. They had been in the Temple, together. Upon coming out, the disciples spoke of how it was adorned with “goodly stones and gifts”; to which Jesus replied: “These things which ye behold, the days will come, in the which there shall not be left one stone upon another.” Their curiosity being aroused, the disciples wanted to know when it would occur. They were not only informed when the Temple would be destroyed, but how long Jerusalem would be “trodden down.” “When ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh” (v. 20). “Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled” (v. 24).

Is there any way whereby the length of Gentile times may be determined? There must be, otherwise there would be no purpose of informing us about the fact. If the treading down of Jerusalem is styled “Gentile times,” then Gentile times must have begun with the treading down of Jerusalem. Can this be proved? We believe it can be by several ways.

In Daniel 2, there is an account of a vision King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon had, because of his meditation upon what should come to pass hereafter; and through it the world’s history is made known to us from his time onward. It will be remembered that Nebuchadnezzar was the first Gentile ruler to make a complete subjection of the people of Israel. The Assyrian, about one hundred thirty-four years before, had overcome and carried away that part of Israel known as the ten tribes or kingdom of Israel; but with the fall of the kingdom of Judah, the monarchy ceased to exist, for the throne and dynasty were overturned and will so continue until He comes for whom it is reserved (Ezek. 21:27).

Also, in Daniel 7 is an account of a vision Daniel had. These visions are related, as will be seen by consulting the chart. Nebuchadnezzar saw an image of a man whose aspect was “terrible” (v. 31). The “head was of fine gold, his breast and his arms of silver, his belly and his thighs of brass, his legs of iron, his feet part of iron and part of clay.” He also saw a stone, which had been cut out of the mountain, smite the image upon its feet, causing it to fall and become broken into many pieces, and the stone “became a great mountain and filled the whole earth.”

In the vision of Daniel, as given in chapter 7, beasts instead of metals were used to represent the kingdoms. The first was like a lion, the second like a bear, the third like a leopard, and the fourth was described as dreadful and terrible, exceedingly strong, with great iron teeth (because no animal could fitly represent it). It is further stated that it had ten horns. (Please turn to page 9)

Lessons on the Kingdom of God

In Two Parts — Part One

By Lydia Pinckert

MORE Scripture is devoted to the theme of the Kingdom than to any other subject in the Bible. It was the burden of the message of John the Baptist, Christ, the apostles, and disciples. "These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not: but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give" (Matt. 10:5-8).

Correct preaching and teaching of the gospel must concern the Kingdom, for the gospel is the "gospel of the kingdom" which must be given to all the world. "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come" (Matt. 24:14).

The Kingdom was promised to the "little flock." "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom" (Luke 12:32).

Entrance into the Kingdom was promised to the faithful and diligent. "Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ" (2 Peter 1:10, 11).

It is for this promised Kingdom that Christians pray. "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven" (Matt. 6:10).

The Kingdom is the subject of the oath-bound covenant God made to Abraham. "Now the Lord had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will shew thee: and I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing: and I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed" (Gen. 12:1-3).

This Kingdom covenant is irrevocable. "God, willing more abundantly to shew unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath: that by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us:

which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and stedfast, and which entereth into that within the veil: whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus, made an high priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec" (Heb. 6:17-20).

This Kingdom covenant contains the following provisions:

- (1) That Abraham's name shall be great.
- (2) That a great nation should come from him.
- (3) God would bless him, and through him all families of the earth would be blessed.
- (4) To Abraham and his seed would the land of Palestine be given for an everlasting possession.
- (5) That his seed would be as the "dust of the earth."
- (6) That whoever blessed him and his seed would be blessed, and whoever cursed them would be cursed.
- (7) He should be the father of many nations.
- (8) Kings would come from him.
- (9) The covenant would be an "everlasting covenant."
- (10) The nations of the earth would be blessed through his seed.
- (11) His seed would possess the gates of their enemies.
- (12) This covenant was to be fulfilled through the offices and work of Christ.

The Kingdom was planned from the foundation of the world. Certain nations will enjoy an entrance into this Kingdom and the blessings which flow from it. "Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world" (Matt. 25:34). "The nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honour into it" (Rev. 21:24). "Yea, all kings shall fall down before him: all nations shall serve him. For he shall deliver the needy when he crieth; the poor also, and him that hath no helper" (Psalm 72:10, 11).

The church, which is to be with Christ in the rulership of the Kingdom, was likewise conceived in the mind of God from the very beginning. "According as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love" (Eph. 1:4). "We which have believed do enter into rest, as he said, As I have sworn in my wrath, if they shall enter into my rest: although the works were finished from the foundation of the

“My Redeemer Liveth”

By Grace Lent

“I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth” and that “in my flesh shall I see God” (Job 19:25, 26).

IF JOB, three thousand years ago, had that inspiration of a living Redeemer, how much more should we have that surety! We have the words of seers and prophets, the example of Jesus the Christ to inspire us, and the enlightenment of the sure Word of God to sustain our hope and faith.

Through all Job's sufferings, trials and tribulations, the well-meaning but mistaken advices of wife and friends, he still maintained his integrity and faith in God, and his absolute sureness of a living Redeemer who at some time would vindicate and save him.

How much more should we have that faith, being grounded on words that will never die! “God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life” (John 3:16).

We know that this Redeemer, the only begotten Son of God, is Jesus the Christ; that He was born a babe in Bethlehem over nineteen hundred years ago; began His ministry at thirty years of age—going up and down Judea and Galilee, teaching the doctrine of the Kingdom of God. He died on the cross as an atoning sacrifice for the sins of mankind.

This sacred doctrine of Christ's atoning sacrifice is the vital principle on which the Christian lives. Without this, Christianity has neither heart nor substance. Do we realize what this Jesus, who laid down His life on the cross, has done for us? He gave His life as our ransom, and in a very close and personal sense He is our very own Redeemer.

Do we realize that He is our Saviour—loving and tender? If we can humbly and heartily say it, and believe on His name, then assuredly in life and death and eternity we shall not want. “I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord” (Rom. 8:38, 39).

Try to picture Jesus to yourselves as of old. He lived, talked, and worked in Judea and Galilee. He had the tenderness of a woman, and at the same time the virile virtues of the manliest man. Though invincible to temptation, He always made the most generous allowance for those who failed and fell. Jesus lived near to God, but this only seemed to bring Him closer to man. He delighted in solitary communion and prayer with the Father, but He was also fond of mingling with His neighbors at their social meetings and festivities. He was keenly alive to the paramount importance of His mission.

He was “a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief.” Though all His followers deserted Him, under the belief that their confidence in Him had been misplaced, He persevered unto the end. He evaded no anguish or suffering, He shrank from no hardship or sacrifice in pursuance of his mission, that He might serve mankind in revealing a loving Father and reconciling man to God. His was a sad, beautiful, and sublime career. Think of Him as an elder brother, your close and dear relative who cares for you and loves you. Think of your Lord until you love Him and your love for Him has made you more like Him. Think of Him in that last stern and bitter hour, when His disciples abandoned Him; think of the terrible Roman scourging, the dark and shameful death on the cross of Calvary. Nevertheless, He reviled not His tormentors. His last thought was forgiveness, saying, “Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do.” He was led “as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth.”

Then came the glorious resurrection morn, when Christ arose the victor over death and the grave. A new era began for the sinful world, a new hope, a faith, that regenerated man may advance with Christ as Commander to the glorious future of the redeemed. “As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive” (1 Cor. 15:22).

Let us then fight onward to that glorious consummation. We are given great and precious promises, whereby we will be made fellow heirs and partakers of the divine nature in Jesus Christ. For all who follow the Redeemer, these promises are given: to be glorified with Him at His return, and to be ever with Him for the ages.

Then will come a “new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.” The Tabernacle of God will be with man, pain and sorrow and tears will be no more, and Death, the greatest enemy of all, will at last be conquered.

(1) The First Church—by Mrs. Ethel Mankin

In Mark 16:15, Jesus told His apostles to go "into all the world, and preach the gospel." About seventy years ago, a man from Indiana by the name of Baily, who was a firm believer in the promises made to Abraham, bought a farm near the present Blush church. This man wanted his neighbors to hear about his faith, so he sent for ministers to come to hold services in the homes. Some of the first ministers to preach here were: Brothers J. M. Stevenson, J. F. Waggoner, J. S. Hatch, John Foore, and W. H. Wilson. These services were attended by six or seven persons besides Mr. Baily's own family. Later, a few others came to listen. His neighbors scorned him and called him, "the old Soul Sleeper." As time went on, his children and their families embraced the faith, and others came to listen to the strange message; so they held services in the Piney School.

Every year they had a week's meeting. More members were added by faith and baptism. Because of the increase, they decided to build a church house—which is the Blush church of today. Mr. Baily's daughter, the late Mrs. P. G. Graham, remembered by a number of our people, was one of the faithful members of Blush church. Her sons and grandchildren are now leaders of the Blush and St. Louis churches. Mr. Baily's stepson, W. A. Cooper, remembered by many, was also one of the faithful workers in Blush church. His sons were instrumental in the securing of the church here in Fredericktown. We would like to mention a son, the late W. S. Cooper, as one of the leaders who helped establish our church here. The Grahams and Coopers and their families, all descendants of the Bails, are among our faithful workers—carrying on the teachings of the man who first brought this message of truth to Madison County.

(2) Other Churches—by Mrs. Rosa Thomas

You have just read of what we believe to be the first organized Church of God in Missouri. Now, we shall mention our other churches of Missouri.

In St. Louis we have a church. Some of the members were formerly of the Blush church who had obtained work there. The distance made it impossible for them to attend church at Blush. In 1937, these people organized a church. At the present time they do not have a church building or a full-time pastor, but hold services in a hall.

At Bosworth, we have another church, which was organized several years ago.

Within the last two years, there has been a church organized at Greely. We have no report of the work there, but feel they are doing good work as that part of Missouri is a good field for work.

In July, 1937, we bought a church at Fredericktown, which was formerly a Lutheran church. This church was dedicated by Brother S. J. Lindsay, August 12, 1938.

We have several groups of active members located at different places in the State of which we would like to mention: Lockwood, Doniphan, Poplar Bluff, Jerico Springs, and Springfield. These people have no church buildings, but we hope the time will soon come when they can have church buildings of their own.

Following are a few lines of encouragement which were clipped from The Restitution Herald:

"No matter how difficult our journey may be,
Over rough, stormy road or tempestuous sea
The command is, 'Go on.'

"There's no stopping now, or turning about,
For there rings in our ears our Captain's shout,
'Keep going on!'

"At last we shall reach the end of the way,
Though our number be few, our Saviour will say,
'Welcome home!'"

(3) The Progress of Our Church

A. Our Sunday School—by Zelda Cooper

Our Sunday school was organized in November, 1937. At the beginning of our Sunday school, we had only one class, the adult class, which had an average of ten to fifteen members in attendance. On some occasions, the Sunday school was dismissed to attend Sunday school and church at Blush church.

Our Sunday school has now been organized three years. Since that time, our attendance has doubled and almost tripled; we now have three classes instead of one. This shows our progress until this time. If we, as individuals, do our part in making our Sunday school a success, the Lord will bless us and our church will continue to grow. The first and most important thing is one's presence. One cannot do his part unless he is present. We read in Hebrews 10:25, "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together . . . but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching."

B. Worship Services—by Mrs. Mildred Cooper

After we bought our church, our only service was Sunday school. Later two of our home boys, each preached once a month. A short time later, Brother L. E. Conner began coming every three months for three or four nights of service. Then we felt the need of services more often than every three months, so we now have Brother C. E. Lapp for a series of services over the third Sunday of each month. We feel we are making good progress, considering that we have a small membership and a big debt on our church building. At present, we have paid our church debt down to one third the original amount, and we hope soon to have our church clear of debt. Then we shall be looking forward to having a full-time pastor. We all want to work and pray that our church may continue to grow. God has promised to help those who try to do their duties.

C. How We Help Missions—by Mrs. Sibyl Holshouser

We cannot all go as missionaries, but each one of us has a mission. We can help send others. We do help spread the gospel by having church once a month, as our contribution to our evangelist's salary helps to keep him in the field. Also, our Sunday school birthday offering is given to help evangelistic work. There are a number of things each of us can do that will be missionary. We can work in our own church and community as we are given opportunity.

D. How Our Services Have Won Others

—by Mrs. Virginia Cooper

Our monthly services have provided an opportunity for some to hear the gospel who could not have heard it otherwise. We have had thirteen new members added to our church.

(4) Other Organizations

A. Berean—by Mrs. Nina Thomas

According to Acts 17:10, 11, the people of Berea searched the Scriptures daily to learn whether or not their teachers were telling them the truth. Thus, we got our name and motto from them, and we try to do as they did—to learn the truth from the Scriptures by personal daily searching.

Berean was organized at Blush about twenty-five years ago (1915). There were only a few short intervals in all those years when the Saturday night Berean class was discontinued. In September, 1939, a group of us met to organize a Berean class in this church. Officers were elected, and we decided to use Book No. 3, "God's Kingdom," until we could get new books. Although most of us had studied this book before, we found it very interesting. We have all learned much from our Berean classes, and have progressed in Berean work as well as in Sunday school.

Church of God, Fredericktown, Missouri

Our monthly socials help us a great deal. At these informal meetings, we profit with many good ideas, and we discuss our problems more freely than we do in our regular Berean classes. Our aim is to continue to search the Scriptures daily, so that we can rightly divide the Word of Truth and prove that we merit the name Bereans.

B. Progress of the Bereans—by Mrs. Lillie Cooper

Our Wednesday night Bible class was discontinued because of poor attendance, but since the Berean organization was started our interests seem to have been renewed, and we have had good attendance. We are not only studying and learning, but our socials each month bring us together in closer fellowship.

Our Berean society has paid for several things for our church, such as the song books we are now using. The class sponsored a Christmas program here, and paid for the treat for the children. We have had good co-operation in our society, and we pray that God will continue to bless us.

(5) Women's Missionary Society

A. When Organized—by Mrs. Rose King

The Women's Missionary Society was organized in May, 1940, with seven members. We now have fifteen members and a growing interest.

B. Object of the Society—by Mrs. Ollie Cooper

When we organized our society, we saw the need of a women's organization. We hope to bring our women in closer fellowship, as well as to have something we can do in the line of missions. We hope, as a Society, to help our fellow sisters in any way we can, and to promote love and fellowship among us. We also hope to be ready to do something for others when the need arises. To do any work we may be able to do for others in the name of Christ is the aim of our Society.

C. The Progress—by Mrs. Margaret Cooper

After eight months, we feel we have been growing, and the women have shown good interest in their work. We have good attendance. We have one meeting with a program at the church each month. We also meet once a month in some member's home for working and a social time. These are both a great help to us. At present, we have made and sold one quilt for five dollars, and we hope to make some more. We have also done some canning for the Conference next year. May our women keep in close fellowship and continue in their work.

What Say the Scriptures About Clothing?

By Grace Skinner

SOMETIME ago I was asked what the Bible said about girls wearing slacks. Of course, as slacks, they are not mentioned, but the question set me wondering what, if anything, does the Bible teach about clothes?

After much searching of the Scriptures and the study of some contemporary histories of dress, manners, and customs, I have reached a conclusion. It satisfies me; I'll give you the steps that brought me to the conclusion I've made, and see what you will decide.

Before I present these facts and scriptures, I want to say: If you have any prejudices or beliefs on the subject, ask yourself one question—"Is my belief the result of personal research, or was it forced on me, so to speak, by others?" If it is the result of honest thinking and study on your part, it is your duty to hold fast unless you are proved in error. If, on the other hand, it is merely someone else's prejudice handed down to you, hold it loosely and examine it in the light of these facts and scriptures I now present for your consideration.

We find much about the apparel of both men and women in the Scriptures. In Genesis 3:21, we find that God made coats of skins to cover Adam and Eve that they might not be ashamed, after having eaten of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. From this we would gather that for enlightened people clothing is a necessity. Different materials came to be used. Fine linen was used for the robe David wore as a king performing a sacred rite (1 Chron. 15:27), and white linen symbolizes the righteousness of saints (Rev. 19:7, 8). Wool was being used in the time of the Prophet Ezekiel, for we find him rebuking the shepherds of Israel for making themselves comfortable with woolen clothing, while neglecting to care for the very sheep from which these luxuries came (Ezek. 34:3). Do you find any parallel situation in our day?

There were some strange laws regarding clothing. In Leviticus 19:19, the children of Israel were forbidden to wear garments of mixed linen and wool. Do you think this law should be understood literally? Read 2 Corinthians 6:14-18 for Paul's interpretation of it. In Deuteronomy 22:5, we read a scripture which is often quoted when people are discussing whether or not women should wear trousers or slacks. Now, in the first place, we should remember that we are no longer subject to the laws of the Old Covenant, for being in Christ we are under the New (Heb. 8:13). Suppose, however, we were subject to that law. Studying it carefully, we learn it was meant to make it possible to identify the sexes by their clothing, which would seem to indicate that clothing exchanged for the purpose of disguise, or to deceive, was displeasing to God. Very little of that is done, and certainly it does not apply to slacks or other garments made expressly for women. They are not "men's garments."

In Christ's time, the women of Nazareth wore trousers. They were loose and gathered at the ankles, and a coat similar to the present-day redingote was worn over them. We do not find any remarks concerning them in the Bible, so they must have been considered quite all right. We do find instances of the prophets scolding about the clothes worn by women (as in Ezek. 13:18), which at first thought seem to have been much like some that are being worn at present. However, looking into the matter more closely, we find that the "pillows in armholes" were really pads worn at the lower edge of the elbow sleeve, and signified the wearer was a fortune teller. So, it was the deed for which the clothing stood that was being condemned, rather than the style itself.

Let us look now into the New Testament. If Jesus thought that warning was needed regarding the type of clothing worn, do you think He would have neglected to give it? He did emphasize the fact that what is in the heart is the important thing (Matt. 15:11).

The apostles evidently were pes-

What May I Do?

"When you think, when you speak, when you read, when you write,
When you sing, when you walk, when you seek for delight;
To be kept from all wrong, when at home or abroad,
Live always as under the eye of the Lord.

"Whatever you think, never think what you feel
You would blush in the presence of God to reveal;
Whatever you say, in whisper or clear,
Say nothing you would not like Jesus to hear.

"Whatever you read, though the page may allure,
That His smile is upon you be perfectly sure;
If not, then dismay would be seen in your look,
If God should say unto you, 'Show me that book.'

"Whatever you write, in haste or with heed,
Write nothing you would not like Jesus to read;
Whatever you sing in the midst of your glees,
Sing nothing His listening ear could displease.

"Wherever you go, never go where you fear
That the great God should ask you, 'How earnest thou here?'
Turn away from each pleasure you'd shrink from pursuing,
If God should look down and say, 'What are you doing?'"

—Selected by Lyle Rankin.

tered with similar questions, for in 1 Peter 3:1-4 Peter tried to make women understand that they should not depend upon outward appearances, but on genuine goodness of heart. Notice, Peter did not tell them not to wear those things (else we would leave off apparel?), only not to use them as the means of proving their worth.

Paul stressed the same idea in 1 Timothy 2:9. It is "modest apparel" that should be worn. This does not necessarily mean poor clothing, but clothing that fulfills, according to the standards of our time, the admonition in 1 Thessalonians 5:22.

I would like to mention one other topic that, while it is not about clothing, usually comes up in a discussion of this kind. It is that of the use of cosmetics. Usually the story of Jezebel is cited as an illustration of the sinfulness of using such things. Now, I am not talking for or against the use of cosmetics, but against the misuse of this story as bearing on the subject. When Jezebel is quoted as the first woman recorded to paint her face (margin, "eyes"), and when mention is made to her terrible punishment, it is to give one to understand that the painting of her face was her sin. The fact is it was a custom for women to paint their eyes at that time. Consequently, when Jezebel did so, it made her appear as other respectable persons. Then she betrayed others and worshiped idols, which was her real sin. In Ezekiel 23:40, we find another instance of a woman who looked all right (having washed and painted), and then was very sinful. In both these cases, it seems to me these women were doing exactly what Peter warned against later, relying on their appearance of respectability to hold positions, while being corrupt in their hearts.

Therefore, my conclusion is that the Bible lays down no definite laws as to our manner of dressing, and when we judge others it should be by their fruits—their actions—not by appearance (James 2:1-4).

The great danger in our time, of using these outward signs to judge by, is that it breeds a feeling of righteousness, or superiority, in those who refrain from certain customs and may, therefore, lead them into the sin of thinking themselves better than another on the mere basis of "outward adorning."

MISSIONS OF OUR CHURCH

foreign countries, we see the need for foreign missionaries; these people's greatest need is surely a knowledge of Christ and His teachings. We read in Mark 16:15, 16: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel," and in Mark 13:10, we read: "The gospel must first be published among all nations."

We once sent a missionary to India, but he was killed.

We believe we have one in India at present, a native of that country. Our people do not support him in any way, but later we hope to learn something of his work and how many converts to our faith we have there. It is very interesting to know about people in other lands who believe as we do.

(7) Our Church Work—by Mrs. Agnes Cooper

Our work in the future is to pay off our church debt and have a full-time pastor. Our main aim is to try to win others to Christ, and doing this, we should try to be very careful how we conduct ourselves in all our daily life—whether in work or in recreation—and be an example for others. We are taught to be kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, and not to be hasty in our judgment of others, and try to keep ourselves unspotted from the world. In 1 John 2:15, we read: "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." We must always keep our light shining so others can see our works. Matthew 5:16 says, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works." Christians are the light of the world, so we do not want our lights hid, but if we are doers of the Word, and not hearers only, always keeping the great commandment in mind, "Love thy neighbour as thyself," always working in unity, we will win others to Christ.

"TIMES OF THE GENTILES"

It will be seen from the chart how the metal parts of the image correspond with the beasts which Daniel saw. In the interpretation of the visions, as given by the Prophet, the different metals and beasts represented successive kingdoms. History has verified the correctness of the interpretation. Accordingly, we are well advanced into the ten-toe time, possibly near—to use the other symbol—to the time when the ten horns "shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them" (Rev. 17:14).

Looking at the right side of the chart, we see two thousand five hundred twenty years marked off as the duration of Gentile times. The first thought that arises in the mind of one not familiar with the subject is, How are the two thousand five hundred twenty years determined? It is not so stated directly in the Scriptures, but there are many inferences which are almost equal to a positive statement. The reason for it being partially concealed may be that "it is the glory of God to conceal a thing: but the honour of kings (the future ones) is to search out a matter" (Prov. 25:2). The first clue is found in the title of this article, "Times of the Gentiles." "Times" is plural; therefore, it is more than one time.

Time is measured by years, and here we have the long period of two thousand five hundred twenty years. This is indicated by what is known as the "day-year theory." A day is used to represent a year, as in Ezekiel 4:4-6. Since the interpretation of these visions was given to a prophet of Israel, it seems natural to use Israel's time of measurement. Israel's year consisted of twelve months of thirty days, making a year of three hundred sixty days; and seven times three hundred sixty is two thousand five hundred twenty.

Another interesting suggestion as to the length of Gentile times is found in Leviticus 26. Let the interested reader note carefully verses 18, 21, 24, 28, and it will be seen that the Israelites, after being punished for their sins and still disobedient, are to be punished "yet" and "seven times more." More than what? More than what they received while under the reign of their kings. This chapter also informs concerning the scattering and subsequent restoration of Israel to his own land. Therefore, it seems evident the "yet seven times" more punishment began with the Israelites' banishment from the land, and will continue until their return. The rise of Nebuchadnezzar to power marked the beginning of this "seven times," for in the first year of his reign (see 2 Kings 24:1) he began the deportation of the people of the kingdom of Judah to Babylon. This continued until the twenty-third year of his reign.

Now, what does history teach in regard to the length of the "seven times"? From 606 B.C., the beginning of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, two thousand five hundred twenty years reach to the year 1914 A.D. This, on the chart, is designated as the "time of the end." Note carefully: the time of the end. The end has not been revealed, but the time of the end has been. Is there anything significant about the year 1914, which is used to indicate the beginning of the time of the end? There is, for in it the first World War began, and it resulted in the liberation of the land of Palestine from the Turk.

There are more interesting historical events in relation to this time of the end. In the year 597 B.C., as recorded in 2 Kings 24:10-16, Nebuchadnezzar came up to Jerusalem and besieged it, and carried away "all the mighty men . . . even ten thousand captives," and two thousand five hundred twenty years from this date reaches to 1923, when the British Mandate over Palestine came into force. Again, in the year 587 B.C. (2 Kings 25:1-9), he (Nebuchadnezzar) and all his army came against Jerusalem, and the city was broken up and destroyed by fire. Two thousand five hundred twenty years from this is 1933, the rise to power of the great persecutor of the Jews, Hitler; and because of his persecutions, thousands of Jews have returned to Palestine. In Jeremiah 52:30 is an account of the last visit of Nebuchadnezzar to Palestine, but only a small remnant of the Jews were carried away. This was in the year 581 B.C., and two thousand five hundred twenty years from that date is 1939, the year of the beginning of the Second World War. What will be the outcome? No one knows. However, in the Parable of the Fig Tree, we are informed as to what we may expect: "When they now shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves that summer is now nigh at hand. So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand. Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass away, till all be fulfilled" (Luke 21:30-32).

"This generation," the generation that sees the beginning of these signs, will also witness their fulfillment. It behooves the Church of God to set its house in order, and to be ready for the greatest revolution earth has ever known.

Still More Evidence

There are many more interesting details that could be brought out by the chart, but only a few can be briefly mentioned at this time.

On the left side, near the bottom of the drawing, is a line indicating the time of the French Revolution in the year 1793, and under it are the words, "Iron and Clay," which words denote the breaking up of the old order. The reason for associating them is, as one careful writer states, "The French Revolution is by common consent regarded as the commencement of a new era for the nations of Europe." At this time, apostate Christianity received its first severe punishment to be followed by a gradual decadence to the time of the end. Religious liberty became more firmly established, the circulation of God's Word greatly increased, and finally came the revival of preaching the message of the gospel of the Kingdom of God on earth.

Another remarkable thing about that date is that it nearly synchronizes with the two-thousand-five-hundred-twenty-year period from the punishment and fall of the kingdom of Israel which took place in the year 722 B.C. When the two-thousand-five-hundred-twenty-year period from the various dates given are fulfilled, favor in some manner must come to the people of God.

On the right side of the chart, we have Mohammedanism reaching from 622 to the time of the end. This is significant, for we must remember that the power represented by one leg and foot of the image has been treading down the people of God, and the other has been treading down the land promised to the saints of the Most High. It is natural, therefore, to expect the promised blessings to the people and the blessing of the land to be simultaneous. So it has been.

We have seen that the power that oppressed the people has been greatly restrained. What is now transpiring regarding the land? In the year 1917, Jerusalem passed out of the hands of the once mighty empire of Turkey. In 1924, the Sultan was deposed both as political leader and caliph (spiritual head of the church), and a new form of government was established. This, we believe, is the drying up of the great river Euphrates of Revelation 16:12.

Looking again at the picture of the image, we find that the time of the end has been reached through the two-thousand-five-hundred-twenty-year period of Gentile times, and through both the feet. It is now time to give heed to the admonition: "when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh" (Luke 21:28).

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

"When it is evening, ye say, It will be fair weather: for the sky is red. And in the morning, It will be foul weather to day: for the sky is red and lowring. O ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the signs of the times?" (Matt. 16:2, 3).

"There shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his (the Savior's) coming?" (2 Peter 3:3, 4).

"When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" (Luke 18:8).

"As it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man. They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and the flood came, and destroyed them all . . . even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed" (Luke 17:26-30).

"In the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, trucebreakers, . . . lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God" (2 Tim. 3:1-4).

LESSONS ON THE KINGDOM OF GOD

world" (Heb. 4:3). "Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world" (Acts 15:18).

The establishment of the Kingdom requires the pre-millennial personal advent of Christ. "Behold, the day of the Lord cometh, and thy spoil shall be divided in the midst of thee. For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle; and the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the women ravished; and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city. Then shall the Lord go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle" (Zech. 14:1-3).

The throne of the Kingdom is to be the restored Davidic throne, and the heir to the throne is Christ; hence, to occupy the throne, He must personally return. "Behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name JESUS. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David" (Luke 1:31, 32). "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely: and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS" (Jer. 23:5, 6).

This rule is earthly, and must, therefore, be personal, and cannot be spiritualized or made symbolic. The early church believed Christ's return must precede the setting up of the Kingdom.

The promised "restitution of all things" is a Kingdom work, and will not be fulfilled prior to the establishment of the Kingdom. "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:19-21).

THE WHEAT AND THE CHAFF

Daniel further prophesied: "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever" (v. 44).

We believe that we are now reaching very near to the time foretold by Daniel, that we are far down toward the end of the great image. Perhaps we are in the feet. We have heard it suggested that we might even be in the toes. The nations of the world are now in such a dreadful state of turmoil, that it seems to us to portray the end of Gentile times. Soon the chaff of human governments will be carried away, and the "stone" Kingdom of Christ will fill "the whole earth" (v. 35).

When Jesus was taken up into heaven, two men stood by in white apparel, "which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven" (Acts 1:11). "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory" (Col. 3:4). When Jesus comes, as He surely will soon, do you not want to be found with the "wheat," or are you satisfied to be only "chaff"?

Signboards

The country is full of signboards. They have a purpose. They tell everyone about something. There are two kinds. It is sometimes helpful to know which items so advertised are good and which to avoid as bad.

Did you know you may be a signboard? Or at least a "sign of the times"? We hear many sermons on the "Signs of the Times." Two signs are the Jews returning to Palestine and the "wars and rumours of wars."

Jesus gave us another sign. He used the term "men" which is a general term for women and children as well. "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves . . . disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection." (Read 2 Tim. 3:1-5.)

Now, no one needs to be a bad sign and advertise any of those evils mentioned above. We can be good signs and advertise the fact that Jesus rules our lives. We read in Proverbs 23:7 that as one thinks, "so is he." Some of the things we can tell abroad are: "Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land" (Ex. 20:12).

"Children, obey your parents in all things: for this is well pleasing unto the Lord" (Col. 3:20). Our golden text a few weeks ago was another: "Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you" (Eph. 4:32).

We are to be truthful and not remain angry long, as told in Ephesians 4:25, 26.

Think Awhile

What kind of a sign am I? (By our fruits we are known.) Think over the lesson just read. How can I improve myself? How long will it be before others know I am trying to be a good sign?

The Lord's Supper

Do you wonder about the small pieces of bread and the little glasses of fruit juice passed among those who are gathered in worship?

Our golden text says we keep it in memory of Jesus, who died for us. Someday He will eat with us, and drink again the fruit of the vine, in His Kingdom. The bread represents His body, broken for us. The fruit juice represents His blood, shed for our sins.

No one should partake of this Supper without first examining himself. If it is eaten unworthily, Paul says: "For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep. For if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged" (1 Cor. 11:30, 31).

Christians who have no opportunity to partake of these emblems must think of these words: "Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you" (John 6:53).

When one is baptized and is trying to follow Jesus through a life of faith, then one should partake of this Supper.

Boots and Saddles!

* * *

By Arlen Marsh, Los Angeles, Calif.

During the last five or six months, I have received at least two requests from local Berean societies not then affiliated with the National Berean Society as to why membership in the national organization is desirable.

Frankly, unless a local Berean group is unselfish, membership in the National Berean Society is not desirable. It demands too much in the way of financial support and other co-operation—and, on the surface, it returns too little to its supporting members.

However, when a local Berean group—or a local church—or an isolated Christian—or a local Sunday school—is imbued with the idea that the mission of the church worker is not to confine his religion within himself, but to carry it to others, then—and then only—the local group or the isolated member will find much that is of value in affiliation with a national or state organization.

The National Berean Society for years has represented a united effort to teach the gospel to young people in all parts of the United States. Churches have grown from Berean efforts—the church at Rockford, Illinois, is a notable example. Church members have come frequently from among Berean ranks. In 1923—long before the General Conference of the Church of God was in a position to consider sending out evangelists—the National Berean Society sponsored an evangelistic trip by C. E. Randall which moved through such normally neglected communities as Memphis, Tennessee, as well as through many regions already possessing Church of God organizations. Since that time, the Society has contributed heavily to evangelistic enterprises backed by the General Conference.

Almost since its beginning in 1913—eight years before any other permanent national organization was formed in the Church of God—the National Berean Society has done its best to reach, by correspondence, children, young people, and adults who are in need of religious instruction, Christian inspiration, Christian consolation—and who, all too often, have not been in touch with any local church. A now-strong Berean group at Piedmont, South Carolina, was established some years ago chiefly as a result of work by one of the members of the National Berean Society's Junior Social Correspondence Committee. More than three hundred children and adults (principally parents) have been taught Bible facts and doctrines through the Society's Junior Home Study Committee in a single year! Tracts have been distributed, subscriptions to The Restitution Herald have been given, on an international scale.

All this has been accomplished solely as a result of the financial and moral support given the National Berean Society by its members—local, state, and individual. In addition, the Society has been enabled to publish the only exhaustive lesson studies on all the essential Bible doctrines ever issued in convenient form by the Church of God. Local societies and state groups profit, themselves, by these lessons—one of the principal returns for an investment in affiliation with the national organization.

Selfishness has no place in the National Berean Society. Instead, its bugle call is "boots and saddles," its vision set on widening horizons, its purpose to fulfill in truth the ideal laid down by its constitution: "to stand for unity, truth and righteousness"—not in one section only, not even in one nation, but in all regions it can reach.

One Thing at a Time

A leading book-distribution organization urges its members to isolate themselves from any disturbances in order to gain more enjoyment and benefit in reading a book. The efficiency of the most brilliant businessman is lowered when he is forced to supervise many things simultaneously. The most notable successes down through the ages have come through concentration—men chose one course to pursue and they were not satisfied until they had reached their goal. They did not jump to another idea before they had exhausted all the possibilities for one plan. Rather, they centered every effort on the one thing that interested them most and stuck to it.

Have you chosen Christian service as your primary work? If you have, you cannot afford to divide your interests. You will just naturally forget to participate in many of the pleasures that formerly took up your time. You will choose work, study books, and take part in activities that will help you to become a better Christian worker.

NORTHWEST CONFERENCE

Oregon and Washington

The Northwest Quarterly Conference was held in Corvallis, Ore., January 31—February 2. Our president, Carl Barber, opened our Conference by a welcome address. Then, our first speaker was Bro. H. J. Prosser of Newport, Ore., who we were very glad to have with us again. Sickness had kept him from our midst for over a year.

Saturday morning, Bro. Alfred Anthon gave us a very interesting talk on Revelation 13 and 14, by illustrating or charting it on the blackboard. We were pleased to have with us Sr. Burk and daughter Hazel, Sr. Grace Hoganson and daughter Beth, of Tacoma, Wash.; Bro. Edd McIrvine and Sr. Prutzman of Felida, Wash.; Bro. and Sr. Baker and Sr. Minnie Rogers, our vice president, of Eugene Ore., and the Leo Behrends of Albany, Ore. Sr. Burk gave us a very interesting talk of her trip to Oregon, Ill., General Conference. Her report of the work was very interesting to us all, and especially to those who were not there. Srs. Hazel Burk and Beth Hoganson also gave us sermonettes, and they told us about the Bible Training School they had attended at Oregon, Ill., last summer.

In Sunday school, Bro. Anthon had Sr. Hazel teach the Bible class. We had an all-day meeting and basket dinner. In the afternoon, there was a Communion service, and a sermon at night brought our Conference to a close.

The Conference is to have Bro. H. J. Prosser at Corvallis the first Sunday in each month, and at Felida, Wash., the third Sunday of each month. How good it was to have been here! Flora E. Anthon, Conf. Secy.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Eugene Grant; Hanna Barber; Clara Ve-Nard (for another); S. J. Lindsay (for another); D. Hatten; George Huffman; William Gitchell; Forest Stilson; Willis McMurtrie; Russell Currens; Mrs. Lydia Chapman; Paul Uline; Jennie Townsend (for another); Francis Burnett (for another); Sunshine Class, Lawrenceville, Ohio (for another); J. E. Wilson (self & another); Mrs. John S. Taylor; W. W. Booth; Mrs. Frank Henry; Mrs. W. J. Fine; Mrs. Charles A. Harris; Mrs. Alice Linsenmeier; Mayme & Nancy Penrod; Leland Marsh; Carl E. Johnson; Lillian Gunning.

CALIFORNIA CONFERENCE

The Conference of the California Churches of God was held in Pomona, February 16, 1941. Approximately eighty-five people attended the all-day meeting. Sunday school began at 9:45 in the morning and preaching services at 11:00. Sr. E. C. Railsback spoke in the morning, her subject being, "The Purifying of Faith." The Communion service was conducted by Bro. Norman McLeod.

The day was rather rainy; consequently, the potluck lunch was eaten at the church. The business meeting was held at 2:00 p.m. Immediately following, sermonettes were presented by various young people of our group. Betty Hummel spoke on, "The Ten Plagues"; Arlen Marsh, "Memoirs in Preview (a Glorified Diary)"; Marie Meyers, "The Temple of God"; Jackie Rahn, "Christ's Glory"; Bro. Mook, "Faith and Relation to Works"; Robert Johns, "Christianity in Japan"; and Samuel Meyers, "Requirements God Makes for One to Be a Good Christian." We were very proud of our young people for being so willing to give these interesting talks.

At 6:30 p.m., Mrs. Dorothy Prickett told us of her unusual experiences in Manila and China. We learned how other races of people live in different parts of the world.

At 7:15, Bro. G. E. Marsh spoke on, "Straws in the Wind."

We were glad to greet several visitors from the East, those being Bro. and Sr. Hawkins and daughter Eunice of Cleveland, Ohio; Sr. T. J. Ellis from Iowa; and Bro. and Sr. Loudenslager from Oregon, Ill.

Charlotte Rahn, Conf. Secy.

LOUISIANA CHURCH NOTES

The various services at both churches continue to show good interest and attendance, and we anticipate even better attendance this spring and summer.

Miss Clara Barnum, of the Blood River church, recently underwent a major operation at a New Orleans hospital and at this writing is improving nicely.

Mrs. Gilbert Bottolf, after a long siege of sickness, is able to be up most of the time now, and plans to attend church services soon.

The Ladies' Aids of both churches are busily engaged in work and plans for the coming months, and we know many good things will be accomplished by these groups.

Harry Gockler, Pastor.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

On the first Sunday of February, we were able to boast of enjoying our picnic dinner outside in the sunshine, but not so on March 2. This section had been experiencing some very heavy rains, which kept many from attending this service as they had planned, and those who did attend must of necessity arrange the picnic in the Sunday school rooms. However, the day was one of rejoicing to the group of about sixty members who were permitted to be there.

Bro. G. E. Marsh's morning discourse on "Erasing the Past in Baptism" preceded the obedience of two splendid young people, who are each from the fourth generation of believers in the precious truths believed and taught by the Church of God of Abrahamic Faith. Our new members are Sr. Betty Luper of 3606 Virginia Ave., Lynwood, and Bro. David Rahn of 645 Towne Ave., Pomona. We have also added to our list the names of G. E., Grace, and Arlen Marsh, with letters from the Grand Rapids, Mich., church. The baptismal service was conducted in the afternoon, and was followed by the memorial of our Lord's suffering—the Communion ordinance.

We greatly appreciated the two vocal numbers during the day, by our visiting Srs. Hawkins of the Cleveland, Ohio, church, also a vocal solo by Sr. Charlotte Rahn.

At this meeting, our congregation was permitted to greet Bro. and Sr. George Loudenslager of the Oregon, Ill., church, since they have come to visit in this section. Another who is sojourning among us, whom we forgot to mention in our former report, is Sr. Mary Laning of the Ripley, Ill., congregation. We have enjoyed her presence with us for some time, and we shall miss all these good people when they return to their respective homes.

Emma C. Railsback.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

Welcome Home: The Oregon, Ill., church is glad to welcome Sr. Elizabeth Ordnung home after a year's visit in the West. In order to make her feel welcome and at home, she has assumed her former position as superintendent of the Sunday school Home Department.

"We much appreciate Bro. G. E. Randall's articles about the doctrines of the Church of God, also the timely articles on the military question."—Grace Skinner, Sauk Rapids, Minn.

Holy Spirit: "In any period of time when God sets apart a portion of His power with which to accomplish a certain task, that set-apart portion of power is properly called the Holy Spirit. Whether it is the power that creates an Adam, or that causes a donkey to talk to a Balaam, or that causes a Virgin Mary to become pregnant, or that resurrects a dead Jesus, or that heals a cripple in the Temple, or that directs the destiny of the nations—in all cases it is the power of God, it is His Holy Spirit!"—F. E. Siple, 140 Celia St., S.E., Grand Rapids, Mich.

BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL NEWS

Sr. Edna Brewer was recently at her home near Tipp City, Ohio, on business for a few days, during which time Bro. Emory Macy and family stayed at the Students' Home. Sr. Mildred Macy was our matron while Sr. Brewer was in Ohio. Her services were appreciated.

Bro. Francis Burnett and the writer preached for the brethren while in Ripley, Ill. The brethren were glad to see us again. We enjoyed our visit at home, hoping to return for the Illinois Quarterly Conference, March 29. We understand that a number of people from Oregon, Ill., are planning to attend.

In our class in "Missions," we are studying about the missionaries that through much suffering endured the shame and ridicule of the people to proclaim the "glad tidings of great joy." Christianity grew through the whole world because these men were willing to pay with their lives for the faith which they held so dear.

Our class in "Business Administration of the Church" is studying about the sexton of a church. The duties and his ability to cooperate with the minister have been discussed.

A week ago last Sunday, Bro. Orris Mills spoke for Bro. L. E. Conner at Rockford, Ill. The next three Sundays Bro. Francis Burnett will preach there. Bro. Conner preached at Dixon, Ill., last Sunday.

The writer enjoyed the fellowship meeting at the Dixon church last Thursday evening. The officers were elected for the Berean Bible Class that is to be held every Friday evening at 7:30. We are studying in Berean Book No. 1.

Today, March 5, the class in "Religious Journalism" finished correcting Sr. Barbara Fish's article about Jonah and the whale. The title of her story is, "The Big Fish Story." We corrected the article by Bro. Francis Burnett that was in the last edition.

Alan McLain, Reporter.

"To what could we anchor in these troublous times, if we knew not our God and His loving kindness?"—Clara L. VeNard, 736 W. Jefferson St., Macomb, Ill.

MRS. ORPHA SANFORD

Mrs. Orpha Sanford was born December 3, 1864, in Lee Center, Ill., and died February 26, 1941, at her home in Downers Grove, Ill. Before moving to Downers Grove, she had lived in Dixon, Batavia, Aurora, and Chicago.

She was married December 28, 1882, to Edward Anderson in Dixon. Mr. Anderson died in 1887. She was married to Fred Sanford on September 3, 1892, who also preceded her in death.

Early in life, Sr. Sanford became a member of the Church of God, and was a faithful and zealous worker, especially in relief work, until the time of her sickness and death. Her faith was strong; her hope was for the coming of the King.

Surviving are: a daughter, Mrs. Edna Beck, and a son, Charles Anderson, both of Downers Grove, and a brother, W. G. Hartshorn, of Rock Falls, Ill.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer, Friday, February 28, at the Church of God in Dixon. Sydney E. Magaw.

KROGH - PAULSON

Miss Dorothy Virginia Krogh, daughter of Harvey Krogh, Sr., of Blair, Nebr., and Mr. Roy Milton Paulson of Herman, Nebr., were united in marriage at 4:00 p.m., Sunday, February 23, in the Church of God at Blair. The writer, who is a brother of the bride, performed the single ring ceremony.

The bride was dressed in a blue dress with turban to match and wore a corsage of white roses and sweet peas. She was attended by Miss Ruth Paulson, sister of the groom, who wore dusty rose and a corsage of pink roses and white sweet peas. Mr. Edward Paulson, brother of the groom, served as best man.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by Miss Elizabeth Westerfield. Mrs. J. A. Westerfield, sister of the bride, sang, "I Love You Truly."

The church was decorated with ferns, palms, and flowers. The service was read by candlelight. Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride.

The couple left after the reception for a short wedding trip. They will reside west of Herman.

May the Lord richly bless these two young people.

Harvey Krogh, Jr.

OSLAND - APPLEBY

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Bro. and Sr. Harley Appleby in Arlington, Nebr., on the evening of February 22, when Beatrice Osland and Howard Appleby were united in marriage by the writer. The bride and groom were attended by the groom's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Appleby. Bro. Appleby has long been a member of the Blair Church of God. We pray God's richest blessing on these two who have started life's way together.

Subscription Rate.—51 issues per annum, $2.00.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him, (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

“Where Their Worm Dieth Not”

By Norman J. McLeod

“They shall . . . look upon the carcases of the men that have transgressed against me: for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched; and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh” (Isaiah 66:24).

THE eternity of punishment and the eternity of torment are two things often confused in the minds of Christians. Several passages tend to make that confusion greater, because the old idea of hell and eternal torment still lingers in the minds even of those who should know better. If we fully discard the idea of eternal torment, then these passages must needs be rethought.

“Then shall he say . . . unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels . . . and these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal” (Matt. 25:41, 46). Who are “the devil and his angels”? When are they to be cast into this “everlasting fire”? If we refer to verse 31 of the same chapter, we read concerning the time: “When the Son of man shall come in his glory.” What kind of a time is that? What are the “devil and his angels” doing? Opposing God as usual! “For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle. . . . Then shall the Lord go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle. And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives” (Zech. 14:2-4).

Passage after passage of Scripture tells of the great war which shall be raging at that time: Joel 3; Ezekiel 38 and 39; Isaiah 63; 66:15, 16; and Malachi 3 and 4. In 2 Peter 3, that time is referred to in the symbol of fire: “The heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men” (v. 7). Judgment means many things, but here it means “punishment.” “Perdition” is a word not much used now; it means “destruction.” We may, then, read 2 Peter 3:7: “reserved against the day of punishment and destruction of ungodly men.” This thought agrees with 2 Thessalonians 2:8, saying: “Then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming.”

Norman J. McLeod

How does the Lord destroy His enemies? How does the Lord fight? We know that when Joshua entered Palestine, the Lord slew more men with “hailstones than they whom the children of Israel slew with the sword” (Josh. 10:11). When Gideon went out to fight, the Lord sent confusion into the enemy camp. (Judges 7.) When Sennacherib came against Jerusalem, God fought with pestilence. (Isa. 36.) In the war which is to be fought for Jerusalem at the time of Christ’s coming, God is evidently going to use all these means: (1) Confusion—“every man’s sword shall be against his brother,” (2) Pestilence—“I will plead against him with pestilence,” (3) Warfare with other nations—“and with blood,” (4) By miraculous means—“I will rain upon him, and upon his bands, and upon all the many people that are with him, an overflowing rain, and great hailstones, fire, and brimstone” (Ezek. 38:21, 23).

Anybody who has been in a modern war will soon understand why war and fire are synonymous terms in prophecy. Mr. Knickerbocker, in telling of the first German raid on London in August, 1940, said that he could read by the light of the fire at night, eight miles away, when the London docks were set afire! When our army detachment moved up front in the St. Mihiel drive in 1918, the whole countryside was (Please turn to page 10)

The Summer Training School

Youth of the Church of God, it is your turn to move. Up! Up! What do you say? Do you wish another Summer Bible Training School, or not? The Board of Religious Education is planning and advertising a six-weeks' course to be offered June 17—July 25, but we must have the co-operation of our young people to make the plans fruitful. It is time now to enroll; let us hear from you, if you are planning to come.

Elder S. J. Lindsay will teach classes daily in "Christ in the Old Testament" and "The Old Testament in the New." Brother Lindsay is widely recognized as one of our very best Bible teachers. He comes all the way from Tempe, Arizona, which should be challenging to the youth of our church who may also live hundreds of miles away from Oregon, Illinois, where the School will be conducted. Elder Harry A. Sheets of Elburn, Illinois, has been chosen as the other instructor and as dean of the School. Brother Sheets will teach daily classes in "Christian Principles in Everyday Life" and "English and Public Speaking." He, too, is widely known as one of our leading educators and is sound in his interpretation of God's Word.

The cost per student will be the same as in former years—thirty dollars plus a small additional charge for one or two textbooks. The thirty dollars pays for the cost of instruction, board, and room. This cost is most reasonable, and young people who are really sincere in wishing to better serve the Lord should quickly respond to this opportunity of special training.

There is one further consideration that must not be forgotten. The Board of Religious Education has decided that the Summer Bible Training School must be self-supporting. Consequently, it is necessary for at least twenty students to enroll by June 1 for the School to open June 17. We are, therefore, asking that the young men and women who are planning to attend write immediately, so stating their plans. Use the enrollment coupon which appears on page 15 of this Herald, and, having signed it, address your letter to the Summer Bible Training School, Oregon, Illinois.

Archaeology Digs the Critic's Grave

Cunning critics once argued that Moses could not have written the first five books of the Bible, their supposition being that the art of writing was not developed in Moses' time. Today, however, the Bible student has good reason to believe that Moses could have written the Pentateuch—this not implying that any real Bible student ever doubted the Bible history, but being of interest to him to know that scientific findings are in support of his faith. Clay tablets bearing Babylonian cuneiform have been found which date several hundred years before Moses. The code of Hammurabi, for instance, was written sometime between 1955 and 1913 B.C., more than four centuries before the time of Moses. Mr. Critic, if Hammurabi knew the art of writing, by what logic do you say Moses could not have written?

In fact, many students now believe that the art of writing may have been developed before Abraham's day! The archaeologist's spade digs the critic's grave, and so silent does the critic become that we sometimes think he has jumped in.

Not more than a hundred years ago, critics questioned the Bible history relating to such cities as Babylon, Nineveh, and Lachish. The wiser-than-God critics doubted there ever having been such cities! Today, however, the spade has revealed the ruins of these ancient cities, and the critics have been forced to seek new tunes to whistle.

The Bible has through the centuries boldly spoken of the Hittites, a people otherwise forgotten. Critics winked at there ever having been any Hittites, though the Old Testament dared forty-seven times to speak of them. Today, archaeology has not only proved that there were Hittites, but that they developed an empire from Mesopotamia northward and westward to the region of the Aegean Sea. Wink, Mr. Critic, wink—"a naughty person . . . winketh with his eyes . . . therefore shall his calamity come suddenly" (Prov. 6:12-15).

So certainly does archaeology corroborate the Bible, that if the critic would kindly write upon the spade his list of supposed Bible errors, it would not require much digging to obliterate his every charge.

No Resurrection—No Life

By C. E. Randall

IN PREVIOUS studies, we have found from the written Word that the "life that now is" is of short duration, bounded by threescore years and ten; that the "life that is to come" is the gift of God through Jesus Christ. Man, according to the Scriptures, is dependent on God for future life, and this future life will come through the Life-giver, which is Christ. The study today recognizes the differences between these two types of life, making resurrection the only tie between those having given up this present life in death and their receiving life of any kind thereafter.

PROPOSITION 23. Resurrection is the only means whereby man can live following death.

Job asked a question which has been repeated millions of times since: "If a man die, shall he live again?" The emphasis is on "live again." The power to live again, following death, is not within the grasp of man. If man possessed such a power, he would exercise it before he ever came under the control of death. If man lives again following death, he must be made alive by some power above and beyond that which his own kind possesses. Job knew this, so in answering his own question, he said: "All the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come. Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee" (Job 14:14, 15).

This hope of living again through resurrection was so strong in Job's heart, he wanted it "lead in the rock for ever." With positive assurance he could say, "I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and . . . in my flesh shall I see God" (Job 19:23-27).

David embraced this same hope, and with great confidence looked forward to the time when he would awake from the sleep of death in the likeness of the Lord (Psalm 17:15). Dear reader, would you not, too, be satisfied to arise in resurrection splendor with the image of the heavenly, if time marches along and you go into death, the house appointed for all the living?

Isaiah blends his voice of hope with other inspired voices when in triumphant language he asserts, "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead" (Isa. 26:19). There will be no singing over the grave until it is conquered by resurrection. Those who arise in the morning of the resurrection will surely have a melody in their hearts, and a song on their lips. It will not be hard for them to "make a joyful noise unto the Lord."

PROPOSITION 24. To deny the resurrection is to err, to display an ignorance of the Scriptures, and to make void the power of God.

When Paul was at Athens, he preached "the resurrection of the dead." This was the foremost doctrine of all Paul's preaching, that through Jesus Christ the dead would live again by resurrection. When the Athenians heard about the "resurrection of the dead, some mocked: and others said, We will hear thee again of this matter" (Acts 17:32). It seems strange that people would deride such a beautiful and hopeful teaching; yet, from the time that this wonderful doctrine became a part of the gospel of the grace of God, people have mocked those teaching it, and belittled the importance of the message. A faith that has no particular need for the resurrection as a means of attaining unto eternal life, is of different kind than the "faith which was once delivered unto the saints."

When the Sadducees attempted to inveigle Christ with their questions concerning resurrection in the case of the woman who had married seven brothers, Jesus promptly charged them with erring. He said: "Ye do err, not knowing the scriptures, nor the power of God. For in the resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven" (Matt. 22: 29, 30). It is only known to the Lord how many folk have erred in the same manner since that time—erred through lack of knowledge of the Scripture concerning resurrection. The seven marriages were introduced as a smoke screen to cover up their main objective of discrediting resurrection, for they did not believe in the resurrection of the dead (Matt. 22:23).

Coming back to Paul at Athens, he was accused by the Stoics and Epicureans as being a "setter forth of strange gods: because he preached unto them Jesus, and the resurrection". (Acts 17:18). Why is it that so many people think of resurrection as teaching of strange gods? The ordinary teaching is, that as soon as a man dies he immediately goes to his reward or punishment. Accepting this teaching, what need is there of a resurrection? None! It becomes as useless as the teaching of strange gods.

When Paul was before Felix, the stated charge was "heresy." Why was he accused of heresy? Because of his teaching the "resurrection of" (Please turn to page 10)

God's Adulterous Wife

By Emory Macy

THE name Hosea, like the names of Joshua and Jesus which sprang from the same root word, signifies: "salvation, help, and deliverance." Hosea was a native of one of the ten tribes of Israel. In his writings, he spoke of Ephraim (Israel) some thirty-seven times; and by this we assume he was especially acquainted with the northern ten tribes. In all probability, he was acquainted with the soil as a farmer or one that understood the life of a yeoman, because he has spoken: "The call of Samaria shall be broken in pieces" (8:6), "They have sown the wind, and they shall reap the whirlwind: it hath no stalk (standing corn): the bud shall yield no meal" (8:7), "Ephraim is an heifer," and "Jacob shall break his clods."

Hosea had a quiet personality, but one that was outstanding. He was gentle, inclined to be moody, and full of domestic feeling. In all the world's literature, there is no record of love like that of Hosea. His devotion for his wife, Gomer, though she was an adulterous woman, proved his loyalty and his affection. There is no true love apart from pain or suffering. We are again reminded of this principle as we read Paul's assuring words in his letter to Timothy: "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him." Our love for our friends may be measured by the suffering and the sacrifices we do in behalf of them.

Hosea lived "in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam the son of Joash, king of Israel" (1:1). (750-725 B.C.)

The preaching of Hosea began in a time of great prosperity; at a time when the people regarded not God, nor His help and guidance. Israel was at the height of military strength, yet at the lowest state of debauchery, adultery, and sin. All classes of society became demoralized, priests turned bandit, and rejoiced in the sins of the people, because it increased their revenues. "The Lord hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land, because there is no truth, nor mercy nor knowledge of God in the land. By swearing, and lying, and killing, and stealing and committing adultery, they break out, and blood toucheth blood" (4:1, 2). Ephraim was flirting with other nations, going after their gods, and accepting counsel of them. "Ephraim also is like a silly dove without heart: they call to Egypt, they go to Assyria" (7:11). She paid tribute alternately to Assyria and Egypt, until she finally lost her independence to Assyria through neglect. There was no sin too vile for Ephraim. The corruption within her can well be compared to that of the days of Gibeah. (See Judges 19:16-30.)

Ephraim would not repent, but continued to offer petty sacrifices unto God, which He would not accept. We read that God wanted more than these, for, said He: "I desired mercy, and not sacrifice; and the knowledge of God more than burnt offerings" (6:6). The calves that were sacrificed upon the altar were not offered in the spirit of true worship. He desired the "calves" of their lips—true prayer and praise.

The account of Hosea and his wife is believed by most Bible students to be allegorical, because every commandment that God spoke unto him was accompanied by a definite reason that seemed to refer in some way to God's relationship with Israel.

Hosea was instructed from the Lord to take unto himself an adulterous woman, who would cause him much grief and disappointment; one who would pollute his name. Hosea was to learn of the love of God for His people, Israel, through his tribulation with his wife, Gomer. "Go, take unto thee a wife of whoredoms and children of whoredoms: for the land hath committed great whoredom, departing from the Lord" (1:2).

Hosea did as the Lord commanded. He took Gomer for his wife, and she bore him a son. "The Lord said unto him, Call his name Jezreel; for yet a little while, and I will avenge the blood of Jezreel upon the house of Jehu, and will cause to cease the kingdom of the house of Israel . . . I will break the bow of Israel in the valley of Jezreel" (1:4, 5). Jehu, king of Judah, destroyed all worshippers of Baal, with their temple and their gods. He put to death the seventy sons of Ahab, placed their heads in baskets, and sent them to Jezreel. He then proceeded to slay all of Ahab's kinsfolk and friends. (See 2 Kings 10.) This was the beginning of the cutting off of Israel (2 Kings 10:32). The final destruction was when the bow (military power) of Israel was broken by the Assyrians. Israel was carried away into captivity in 722 B.C. by the leadership of Sargon, perhaps from the ancient battlefield, the valley of Jezreel (Migiddo or Armageddon). (See 2 Kings 17.) This fertile valley was given to the tribe of Joseph. The Canaanites possessed the land many centuries before the Israelites entered, and caused much trouble afterward. In this valley, Joash died in battle against the army of the king of Egypt. Might this not be the very battlefield of which God has said, "I will also gather all nations, and will bring them down into the valley of Jehoshaphat, and will plead with them there for my people"? (Joel 3:2.)

Looking Ahead

By J. H. Fletcher, Jr.

"Redeeming the time, because the days are evil" (Ephesians 5:16).

THAT the year 1941 will yet bring many startling changes throughout the entire world seems evident. That these changes either directly or indirectly will affect everybody, whether they are expecting same or not, should not be a surprise when we look into the world situation as it exists today and consider the plans being prepared for tomorrow. Having a knowledge of these things, it is a matter of great concern to each one of us how we are shaping our lives and planning to meet the troubles ahead.

There seems to be many schools of thought among Bible students concerning this present conflict and its outcome. Some believe that the Roman Empire is going to be revived, that the Catholic church—with the pope at its head—will rule again. Others believe that Isaiah 11 is in process of fulfillment; others that Ezekiel 39 is about to be fulfilled, ending in the Battle of Armageddon; others that the Anglo-Saxon people—Great Britain and her company of nations in co-operation with the United States—will emerge victorious from this present struggle to establish a new order upon the earth under Christ as King.

Having lived during the World War of 1914—1918, and knowing the statements made during that time, which statements were similar to those being made during the present conflict, we are careful in our interpretations. "War to make the world safe for democracy" was once before the cry—war to end war, the Armageddon! We urge each reader to examine very carefully the evidence that is put forth to support the various theories, to see if they have support of God's Word, or are just the theories of men. From our study and understanding of God's Word, the Roman Empire will never be revived. The Catholic Church, with the pope as its head, has had its day. We believe that Isaiah 11 and Ezekiel 38 and the Battle of Armageddon will not likely take place until after the rapture—the coming of Christ for His church. This is very important: are we looking for the fulfillment of the foregoing events, or are we looking for Christ's coming with clouds?

That Christ will not come for His church during a world conflict is very apparent; that He will come during a time of peace and prosperity when nobody will be expecting Him is certain. Of the times and seasons we are not left in ignorance (1 Thess. 5:1-10), only "the day and the hour" we do not know.

Noah knew the rain was close when the ark was finished; that it was closer when the animals entered; that it was very close when his family entered; and he knew that it was "at hand" when God closed the door. The very day and hour it would start to rain he did not know. Noah, having done his part, knew that God would fulfill His Word at the proper time, and God did not disappoint him. The ones disappointed were those who believed in man's plans. Likewise, God has given us signposts to guide us down the stream of time.

Let us not make the same mistakes that the Israelites made. When Christ came to them as a babe and Saviour, instead of a king as they expected, they overlooked their King, and have suffered much and missed many blessings. All this was because they erred, not knowing the Scriptures and the time of their visitation. The same will be our lot, if we are overcharged with the affairs of this life instead of applying our lives and efforts, like Noah, to God's task. Let us heed Christ's words: "Watch . . . and pray always that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man."

What we believe will naturally affect our plans and efforts for the year 1941. To avoid many disappointments, let us study God's Word, believe what He has written, and like Noah perform faithfully the task God has mapped out for us.

We have the assurance that in due time "we shall reap, if we faint not." What a difference it will make, when the trumpet sounds, in what class we are! Only the faithful ones in Christ will hear and respond. So, our pledge for 1941 should be to make our "calling and election sure."

When Noah entered the ark and God shut the door, it was too late for worldly people to decide. Likewise, when the trumpet call goes forth, it will then be too late to decide. What a difference it made in Noah's day whether men were in the ark or on the outside! What a difference it will make whether you and I are among the company ascending or among the company left behind! There will be only two companies, and to you—and you alone—lies the decision as to what company you will belong. Ever remember that "at such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." So, in looking ahead, make that decision today.

The Law of Righteousness

In Two Parts—Part One

By H. J. Prosser

THE word "law" means a rule of action or conduct. All righteous rules must come, in the first place, from God, for He is the only source of real goodness. Jesus said, "Why callest thou me good? none is good save one, that is, God" (Luke 18:19). Thus, even Christ laid no claim to goodness.

Every law that God has given to man has been perfect. David said, "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul: the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple. The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart: the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes" (Psalm 19:7, 8). Paul said: "The law is holy, and the commandment holy, and just, and good" (Rom. 7:12). In 1 Timothy 1:8, we read: "We know the law is good, if a man use it lawfully."

God's laws, however, have not all been eternal, nor have they been proclaimed to all men of all ages. He has pronounced many laws because of the peculiar conditions and requirements of His people. As soon as these conditions and requirements became extinct, the law concerning them became a dead letter. This is proved by the fact that many laws given to the Jews ceased to be proclaimed after Christ began His teaching. We may search in vain in Christ's teachings and in those of the apostles for one hint that the Jewish laws concerning sacrifices, feast days, Sabbath days, and circumcision are the present will of God to men. Paul explained the setting aside of these laws. He said in Colossians 2:16, 17: "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holyday, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath days: which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ."

A tree casts a shadow, but the shadow is a very dim picture of the tree, and reflects only an imperfect outline of its form. The Jews were following a shadow which reflected Christ in various sacrifices, in the Sabbath, in circumcision, and the shadow fully explained to Jesus what the Messiah should do when He came. Thus, through Christ the Jews' salvation was to be wrought. They had learned by heart the prophetic utterances of their prophets, concerning Him. "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee: he is just, and having salvation, lowly, and riding upon an ass" (Zech. 9:9).

Jeremiah said of Christ: "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth" (23:5). Thus, the salvation of the Jews was assured as ours is assured, but with this difference: with us, Christ is a reality—He has lived our life and died our death; with them He was only a shadow dimly seen in the ritual given to them by Moses. God gave the Israelites these laws, and required obedience to them, so their Messiah might be constantly kept in their minds, and that they might live to have faith in Him. It would be impossible for those laws to teach us as they did the Jews, for the substance which cast the shadow has been reached. We can learn of the Saviour from the Saviour Himself, having no further need of the shadow.

It is wrong to select any one of God's laws, and to teach men that God requires obedience to it, unless Christ first teaches men to obey it. Christ, personally and through His apostles, taught men of this age the full and perfect will of God concerning us. He says in John 15:15: "Henceforth I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his Lord doeth: but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you." Paul expressed the same thought, saying: "I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God" (Acts 20:27). We learn from these statements that our Saviour and the apostles did not leave unsaid one law to which God requires obedience from Christians. They spoke all that is needful for us to obey. Therefore, when we use the term "God's Law" in connection with the laws of the gospel age, we have no right to include under that term any other laws than those taught us by Christ and His apostles.

Let us not be sidetracked by any other teaching. The Bible presents to our minds two kinds of righteousness—that of God and that of man. Paul says in Romans 1:16, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation"; also, "therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith" (v. 17).

The righteousness of God is not a natural possession of man. Paul makes it plain that it is something to be acquired. "I know that in me (that is, in my flesh,) dwelleth no good thing" (Rom. 7:18). Again, in Romans 3:10, Paul quotes David, saying, "There is none righteous, no, not one." Note: While God places His law as the standard of righteousness, He nowhere tells us that doing the works of the law will change our natures to a condition like His own. Galatians 3:21, 22, will help us here: "Is the law then against the promises of God? God forbid: for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law. But the scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe."

Let Paul tell how he obtained God's righteousness. We find this in Philippians 3:8, 9: "Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ, and be found in him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith." Two conditions of righteousness are mentioned in these verses. One he calls "mine own" which is of the law, and the other is through the faith of Christ and is of God. Let us keep these ideas separated.

In Christ's day, the scribes and Pharisees were "sticklers" for the law, yet Christ said of them to His disciples: "I say unto you, That except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 5:20). With all their knowledge of the law and its strict keeping, with all their years of refraining from committing murder because the law said, "Thou shalt not kill," they failed to root out hate—the cause of murder—from their natures. John 15:25 says: "They hated me (Christ) without a cause," and they killed Him. Romans 10:3 reads: "They being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God."

To acquire God's righteousness means salvation in the fullest sense of that word. It means possession of a righteous mind and character. Though God gives no instructions in His laws as to how to obtain the righteousness which the law describes, He does not leave us in the dark as to how we may obtain the righteousness without the law. "Now the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets; even the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe: for there is no difference: for all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God" (Rom. 3:21-23).

THREE LAWS

By Emma C. Railsback

---

THREE laws are mentioned in Romans 8:1-3. First, Paul is speaking of those who are in Christ. "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death" (v. 2). The "law . . . of life in Christ" is none other than faith in and obedience to the required three steps of hearing, believing, and obeying the gospel of the Kingdom of God, which constitutes the beginning or begetting of the new life. In verse 1, he is making clear that all who come into relationship with God in this manner are reckoned as not being under the condemnation of the law of sin and death. In chapter 5:12, we read: "Wherefore, as by one man (Adam) sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." This is what Paul chooses to call the "law of sin and death" in Romans 8:2. Also, in chapter 7:17-21, he is explaining how hard it is to overcome this law, even after coming under the law of life in Christ.

Now, in Romans 8:3, he takes the third law into consideration. "What the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh" is the part that we shall consider.

This is God's law given through Moses. It could not liberate him from the "law of sin and death." Why? Because of the weakness of the flesh. Fallen man could not keep a perfect law. (The law was holy, and just, and good, 7:12.) That law could point out to him his helplessness. It could serve as his schoolmaster to teach him his need of a Savior—his utter inability of saving himself from the "law of sin and death." This is why Paul asks the question, "Wherefore then serveth the law (Mosaic)?" (See Gal. 3:19.) Paul proceeds to make it clear that the Mosaic law could not give life, but that God sent His Son and brought in the law of life in Christ Jesus.

If I were to draw a line representing the period of duration of the law of sin and death, it would reach from Eden to the second coming of Christ, but the duration of the Mosaic law was from Sinai to Calvary. "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." "What the (Mosaic) law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh."

Lessons on the Kingdom of God

In Two Parts—Part Two

By Lydia Pinckert

THE work of restitution in the Kingdom will include:

(1) Satan will be bound and evil subdued. "I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand, and he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil, and Satan, and bound him a thousand years, and cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled: and after that he must be loosed a little season" (Rev. 20:1-3).

(2) The "prince of this world" will give way to the "Prince of Peace." Hereafter I will not talk much with you: for the prince of this world cometh, and hath nothing in me" (John 14:30). "Now is the judgment of this world: now shall the prince of this world be cast out" (John 12:31).

(3) The dominion given Adam, but forfeited by sin, will be restored by the second man, the last Adam. "Since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming. Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule and all authority and power, for he must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. For he hath put all things under his feet. But when he saith all things are put under him, it is manifest that he is excepted, which did put all things under him. And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all" (1 Cor. 15:21-28).

"If by one man's offence death reigned by one; much more they which receive abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ. Therefore as by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life. For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous" (Rom. 5:17-19).

(4) Israel, being associated with the Kingdom, must, therefore, be restored to national life in the land of Palestine. "The children of Israel shall abide many days without a king, and without a prince, and without a sacrifice, and without an image, and without an ephod, and without teraphim: afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek the Lord their God, and David their king; and shall fear the Lord and his goodness in the latter days" (Hosca 3:4, 5).

(5) War will cease, and peace prevail throughout the whole world. "The word that Isaiah the son of Amoz saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem. And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it. And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more" (Isa. 2:1-4).

(6) Righteous judgments will be in the earth, with the saints participating in the dominion over the earth. "Give the king thy judgments, O God, and thy righteousness unto the king's son. He shall judge the people with righteousness, and thy poor with judgment. The mountains shall bring peace to the people, and the little hills, by righteousness. He shall judge the poor of the people, he shall save the children of the needy, and shall break in pieces the oppressor" (Psalm 72:1-4).

(7) Truth will be made available to all the inhabitants. "They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea" (Isa. 11:9).

(8) Israel, being restored to his own land, will seek forgiveness through the High Priest, though sitting on His throne. "I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and of supplications: and they shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn" (Zech. 12:10).

(9) The restoration of Israel as the Kingdom of God will make Israel chief of the nations, and Israel will be a kingdom of priests. "To appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, to give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness; that they might be called trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord, that he might be glorified. And they shall build the old wastes, they shall raise up the former desolations, and they shall repair the waste cities, the desolations of many generations. And strangers shall stand and feed your flocks, and the sons of the alien shall be your plowmen and your vinedressers. But ye shall be named the Priests of the Lord: men shall call you the Ministers of our God: ye shall eat the riches of the Gentiles, and in their glory shall ye boast yourselves" (Isa. 61:3-6).

(10) Jerusalem will become the center of worship, and all peoples of the earth shall go up to Jerusalem, yearly, to offer sacrifices of praise and thanksgiving. "Many nations shall come, and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem" (Micah 4:2).

(11) The law will go forth from Jerusalem, and the overcomers will administer it among the nations. "He that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers: even as I received of my Father" (Rev. 2:26, 27).

(12) Israel will be recognized by the Gentile nations, and they will both fear and reverence Israel. "Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will lift up mine hand to the Gentiles, and set up my standard to the people: and they shall bring thy sons in their arms, and thy daughters shall be carried upon their shoulders. And kings shall be thy nursing fathers, and their queens thy nursing mothers: they shall bow down to thee with their face toward the earth, and lick up the dust of thy feet; and thou shalt know that I am the Lord: for they shall not be ashamed that wait for me" (Isa. 49:22, 23).

The establishment of the Kingdom will be preceded by an apostasy among believers. "The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables" (2 Tim. 4:3, 4).

The Antichrist will appear and set up his rule previous to the Kingdom, and will be destroyed by the revelation of Jesus Christ. "Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, shewing himself that he is God. Remember ye not, that, when I was yet with you, I told you these things: and now ye know what withholdeth that he might be revealed in his time. For the mystery of iniquity doth already work: only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way. And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming: even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders" (2 Thess. 2:3-9).

The Kingdom will be preceded by a terrible time of trouble. "There shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory. And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh" (Luke 21:25-28).

The saints will be resurrected and translated before this trouble reaches its climax, therefore, escaping it. "Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man" (Luke 21:36). "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead. Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast" (Isa. 26:19, 20).

"But of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness. Therefore let us not sleep, as do others; but let us watch and be sober. For they that sleep sleep in the night; and they that be drunken are drunken in the night. But let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love; and for an helmet, the hope of salvation. For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Thess. 5:1-9).

on fire!! "A fire devoureth before them; and behind them a flame burneth: the land is as the garden of Eden before them, and behind them a desolate wilderness; yea, and nothing shall escape them" (Joel 2:3). Is this not the fire into which those "goat nations" (Matt. 25:41, 46) shall be cast? Is this not the "fire against the day of punishment and destruction of ungodly men"? (2 Peter 3:7.)

The time of turmoil just before the coming of Jesus is most forcefully told: "The day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up" (2 Peter 3:10). If that were literal, there would be little left! But if it were literal, then verse 12 would not make good sense: "Looking for and hastening unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat." The Revised Version reads: "Looking for and earnestly desiring." Only a fool would earnestly desire the coming of a day when the heavens and earth would be so hot they would melt. But a brave Christian, who sees the glorious day of Christ's Kingdom beyond, can long to see the day when even the most righteous governments of men shall pass away with great confusion! Be sure, though, you are a brave Christian, for terrible times are coming. Personally, we believe, those times are almost upon us!

is revealed, not with the law as a medium, but with Christ as a medium or agent. The law and the prophets, acting as a witness in court, gave their testimony as to God's righteousness. (To be concluded)

NO RESURRECTION—NO LIFE!

the dead" (Acts 24:14, 15, 21). It was not only because he preached the resurrection through Jesus Christ that they accused him, though this was an important factor. Like Agrippa, they thought it an incredible thing that God should raise the dead. Nominally, they believed in the resurrection, at heart they doubted the possibility of it (Acts 26:8). Legions of professed followers of Christ acknowledge the teaching of resurrection, but at heart they doubt it, and in conversation they say it is "incredible."

At our last May Meeting at Fonthill, Ontario, our guest speaker was Elder James McLain. One evening he preached an unusually convincing and powerful sermon on resurrection. At the close of his service, two ladies, both active in the work of another prominent religious group, came to him and asked him how it would be possible for God to raise people who had long since been dead, who had returned to dust and perhaps been moved with surrounding dust to many different localities. These are typical cases. They are professing believers of the resurrection, but at the same time in their hearts rests Satan's most subtle weapon, "incredible."

Peter and John encountered a different type of resistance to the doctrine of resurrection from the Sadducees. They were grieved because they taught the resurrection through Jesus Christ—"being grieved that they taught the people, and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead" (Acts 4:2). Various translations render the word "grieved" as being "annoyed, exasperated, angry." Putting it in our vernacular, "they got mad." Human nature hasn't changed much. If ministers today put the same emphasis and attach equal importance to this doctrine as did the apostles, they will experience the same reactions. In our next study we shall continue this subject.

GOD'S ADULTEROUS WIFE

Hosea called his second-born, a daughter, "Loruhamah: for I will no more have mercy upon the house of Israel; but I will utterly take them away" (1:6). According to archaeology, a cylinder written by Sennacherib in 702 B.C. has been found telling of his conquest over the kings of Babylon, Kassites, Medes, and Elamites. After defeating the Egyptians, he proceeded to invade the territory of Judah, proudly saying: "I drew nigh to Ekron, I slew the governors and princes, I hung upon poles round about the city their dead bodies . . . I brought their king Padi forth from Jerusalem, and I established him upon the throne of dominion over them, and I laid tribute upon him. Then I besieged Hezekiah . . . I captured forty-six of his strong cities and fortresses and innumerable small cities . . . I brought out therefrom 200,150 people . . . horses and mules and asses and camels and oxen and innumerable sheep I counted as spoil. Himself (Hezekiah) like a caged bird I shut up within Jerusalem . . . I added to their former yearly tribute . . . which they paid unto me. He (Hezekiah) dispatched after me his messenger to my royal city Nineveh to pay tribute . . . with thirty talents of gold, eight hundred talents of silver, precious stones, eye paint, ivory couches and thrones, hides and tusks . . . a heavy treasure, together with his daughters and the women of his palace." Such is the Assyrian description of 2 Kings 18:13-36, of which God said, "I will have no mercy on Israel. I will utterly take her away."

The cylinder presents only the first part of the reign of Sennacherib. It is not difficult to account for Sennacherib's tame acceptance of the repulse of his officers and the raising of the siege of Jerusalem. God said, "I will have mercy upon the house of Judah, and will save them by the Lord their God, and will not save them by bow, nor by sword, nor by battle, by horses, nor by horsemen" (Hosea 1:7). When Sennacherib marched against Jerusalem, God fought for Judah. "It came to pass that night, that the angel of the Lord went out, and smote in the camp of the Assyrians an hundred fourscore and five thousand: and when they arose early in the morning, behold, they were all dead corpses. So Sennacherib, king of Assyria departed, and went and returned, and dwelt at Nineveh" (2 Kings 19:35, 36).

Hosea called his second son "Loammi: for ye are not my people, and I will not be your God" (1:9). Because of Israel's conduct, she had forfeited her rights of the name and advantages of a wife. She could no longer be called "God's chosen nation"; she had asked for a divorce, because of her whoredom. God granted a divorce to Israel, putting her out from His help and guidance. God knows His wife, and is patiently waiting for her to say, "I will go and return to my first husband; for then was it better with me than now" (2:7). Thus, Hosea prophesied: "The children of Israel shall abide many days without a king, and without a prince . . . afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek the Lord their God" (3:4, 5). When Israel remembers her first love, and through repentance desires to return unto God, He will again accept her—giving back her former possessions: the land of promise to dwell in, and David to be her king. "I will give her her vineyards from thence, and the valley of Achor (trouble) for a door of hope" (2:15).

In every life in which there is repentance and trust in God, the valley of trouble becomes the door of hope. There is much joy in the restoration of a home. "Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together, and appoint themselves one head" (1:11). "David my servant shall be king over them; and they all shall have one shepherd" (Ezek. 37:24).

"The number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered; and it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people, there it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God" (Hosea 1:10).

Book Reviews

Although we would hardly agree with the publishers' claims that the J. B. Rotherham translation of the Bible (Standard Publishing Company) is "the most perfect rendering of the original Scriptures to be found in print," we do concede that for the student who enjoys his technicalities the Rotherham version has its points.

Like the Emphatic Diaglott, Rotherham's depends upon obscure symbolisms and queer punctuation to point out the essential and exact meaning of the Greek, Hebrew, and Aramaic. Copious footnotes add a good deal to the value of the translation. According to the publishers, the system of paragraph indentation and symbolism is easily learned; but from the depths of our own abysmal ignorance, we have found it somewhat difficult to understand precisely why all these Rotherham oddities were necessary. But then, we have found it hard to comprehend the necessity for Wilson's method of capitalization and punctuation in the Diaglott.

Four editions—all cloth-bound—are available: the complete Rotherham Bible in one volume, $6.50; the Old Testament in three equal volumes, $2.25 per volume; the Old Testament in one volume, 5.50; the New Testament in one volume, $2.25.

* * * *

All commentaries have their values, and Maclaren's Expositions of Holy Scripture (William B. Eerdmans; $15.00) is no exception. The seventeen volumes in the set cover the entire Bible with fair thoroughness. Formerly, the set sold for approximately $50.00; but exhaustion of the original editions and the existence of so many second-hand religious book stores have combined to cut the new-edition price.

Maclaren was a Scot preacher. His commentary is purely expository—which means that it avoids the technicalities of such word studies as Vincent's, and at the same time provides an abundance of ideas for lessons, sermons, and articles. The commentary is, of course, orthodox; but it atones for this by representing the Bible as having been divinely inspired. All in all, we'd say the 15,000 pages are well worth the comparatively low price.

A Prayer of Thanks

(Dedicated to the "oldsters" of the "youngsters" of the ECE Club.)

"I wrote in words a thankful sort of prayer,
 And on completion, read each sentence o'er.
 Each line was full, and everything was there
 Which I, in my small world, was thankful for.
 But I could offer no such prayer as this!
 I tossed my composition in the fire;
 Such gratitude was selfish and remiss. . . .
 Just thanks for some fulfillment of desire.
 And though this heartfelt prayer which now I pray
 May lack the eloquence I had before,
 'Tis this: 'I thank Thee, thank Thee, Lord, today,
 For all that Thou hast given me, but more
 That Thou hast made me so remorseful be,
 Till now I pray for all humanity!'" —Selected by Mrs. R. A. Robinson.

Fruits and Works

We know how Jesus was treated long ago. He was beaten, scoffed at, and died for us. How much He did for us! Today, He is mistreated by some people, too. He accepts our thanks and daily efforts to do His will. Above all, though, He wants us never to lose faith in Him. "By grace are ye saved through faith" in Him.

No, we are not saved by works. Christian works are called fruits. We obey the laws of Christ and God because we want to do Their will. The obeying of the law in itself will not save anyone. The "laws" are "rules." The teacher has rules for school. Knowing those rules will not make you a good girl or boy. If you obey those rules only because you "have to—or else!"—you most certainly are a naughty person in your heart. However, if you like your teacher and want to do what will please teacher—if you want to do right—then you will be good in your heart. Yes, even though you do something teacher doesn't like, because you didn't do it on purpose! Rules are given to guide and help you to do the good you wish to do.

The law is called the "schoolmaster" to bring us to Jesus. Many good rules are in the laws. The Ten Commandments are some of the good rules we find. However, we must keep these rules in our hearts as well as outwardly. Now, read the paragraph above again. Use "Saviour" in the places where "teacher" appears.

The good that Christians do is called "fruit of the Spirit." We read: "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law" (Gal. 5:22, 23).

Let Me Stand and Cheer

"Dear Lord, in the battle that goes on through life,
 I ask but a field that is fair,
 A chance that is equal with all in the strife,
 A courage to strive and to dare:
 And if I should win, let it be by the code,
 With my faith and my honor held high;
 And if I should lose, let me stand by the road,
 And cheer as the winners go by."—Selected.

Only Three More Months!

Yes, Bereans, there are only three more months until you will again be offered one of the greatest opportunities ever presented to the young people of the Church of God. Elsewhere in this Herald you will probably find more information concerning the Summer Bible Training School, but we are taking this opportunity to wholeheartedly endorse this three-year-old movement of the Church of God. Church work, as a whole, presents many problems. Some of them baffle even the older hands who have worked in the various churches for many years. How large, then, must these problems loom to the younger, inexperienced members of our congregations—those who would like to organize or reorganize their friends into an active, hard-working group, but who, because they don't know just how to go about it, never quite get started!

We know that there are many of you young people all over the country who would like to do more for the church than you are doing at present. You don't have the knowledge of the Bible you need, and you don't seem to know the proper methods to use to keep things rolling along. If you only had a book or—say, why don't you plan on attending the Summer Training School? Sure, it will take six weeks of your life—eight if you stay for the two weeks' General Conference. Those will be the best six or eight weeks of any year that you have ever spent. Just ask anyone who has attended the previous sessions.

The food is good, the basement of the church where classes are held is cool in the hottest weather, and if you like to sing, the Oregon Church of God choir will welcome you. We know where you can get a couple of rowboats if you care to row on Rock River in your spare time, but somehow your instructors will manage to give you just enough bookwork to keep you quite busy.

You'll Study—and You'll Like It!

Why don't you plan now to attend? Make a list of those things which you would like to learn. Find out definitely what your problems are, and bring these problems to the Summer Training School. Your instructors are fully qualified to help you find a solution. Then, after you have learned how to learn more about the Bible and how to organize work in a church, if you will remain for the Conference sessions, you will be able to increase your knowledge by becoming familiar at first hand with problems that face our church—problems that it seems nobody can answer right now. Then you will return home with the foundation necessary to support you in your effort to help others find the answers, and perhaps you will be the one who will lead the others out. Somebody will do it. Someone who is prepared.

WAITING: About fifteen local Berean societies have not reported to the secretary. Please do so with haste.

No Matter What Happens

By Thelma Richardson, Hammond, La.

In each of our lives there come sorrows and disappointments. We cannot always have the world run our way—we must surrender to God's will. No matter what happens in life, we can find happiness through Christ if only we seek it. The attitude we take toward life has a great deal to do with our most deciding actions and thoughts. Many times we allow disappointment to ruin the happiness that we could have had, had we maintained a positive, hopeful, pleasant attitude. When we feel all out of sorts, the best remedy is to do something for somebody—make somebody happy! Instead of feeling sorry for ourselves and giving way to annoyance and anger, we can do something really beneficial. Tolerance of self and others will do more good. Kindness and thoughtfulness of others truly express one of Christ's striking characteristics.

Sometimes idle gossip will make us feel "low." That is one thing we should always shun. Christ wants us to please Him, and not the world. Worrying over the things we have done, the things we are doing, and the things we are afraid we will do, will surely make a person unhappy. A very vital part of the Christian's life lies in the fact that we substitute faith for doubt, and love for hate.

The sooner we learn to make the best of things, no matter what happens, the happier we will be. We can be really happy in Christian service because our faith is builded on a sure foundation. May we better learn to live the Christ-life and sow seeds of happiness over all the world.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALENDAR OF EVANGELISM

March 29, 30.—Illinois Quarterly Conference at Ripley.
 April 7-13.—Special meetings at Oregon, Ill.
 April 14-27.—Special meetings at Burr Oak, Ind.
 June 18-29.—Indiana Bible School and Conference at North Salem.
 July 29-August 10.—General Conference at Oregon, Ill.
 July 29-August 10.—Illinois Bible School and Conference at Oregon.
 August 17-24.—Ohio State Conference at the Brush Creek Church of God, near Tipp City.

TRUTH SEEKERS' QUARTERLY

Have you ordered your Truth Seekers' Quarterlies for the second quarter of 1941? The price is 17 cents each, or 15 cents each if three or more are ordered sent to one address. It would be encouraging to receive orders from Sunday schools not yet using our Quarterly. Sample copies will be sent free to any Sunday school officer or teacher.

FORTIETH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Readers of The Restitution Herald no doubt noticed in an issue of a few weeks ago that we were to have a fortieth wedding anniversary on February 27. That day and the things that accompanied it will always stand out in our memories as one of the bright spots in our lives.

Owing to the notice in The Herald and our daughter's activities, we received one hundred sixteen cards and fifteen letters. Many of the cards had short notes on them. If all my Sunday school class had known of it, we would have received forty or fifty more.

On the evening of February 27, Bro. Stadden and his daughter, Sr. Alice Lindstrom, and her two sons, came and took supper with us and spent the evening. This was a very pleasant occasion, as the Staddens have always been very fine to us since we came to this part of the world.

On the following Sunday, our children gave us a dinner at the home of our daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Williams, Wellington, Ohio. Besides our three sons and daughter and "in-laws," Mr. Alvin Leidigh was present, without whom no family gathering of ours would be complete.

I think you realize that it would be impossible for us to reply to all of you personally for your contribution in cards and letters to the pleasure of the occasion, so we are taking this method of saying, "Thank you, and may the God of peace keep you faithful till He sends His Son to establish His glorious Kingdom."

In order to say "Thank you" to those who are not subscribers to The Herald, we are sending a copy to each of them. We will also send them a copy of the Easter Herald.

We hope that some, if not all of them, will become subscribers. All new subscribers receive the paper for $1.50 per year.

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Patrick.

YOUR ATTENTION, PLEASE

Because we have not received several letters containing currency, mailed to our address, we urge all our contributors, including those in Canada, to send their money by check or money order. Orpha LeMasurier, Treasurer.

TIME TO ENROLL

Students who are planning to attend the Summer Bible Training School should enroll as soon as possible. Teachers are employed, and other plans are being made to conduct the six-weeks' course from June 17 to July 25, but we must have an enrollment of at least twenty students by June 1 in order to open the School June 17.

See the editorial and Berean pages for further information about the School; then, if you are interested in attending, sign the enrollment coupon on the opposite page and send it to the Summer Bible Training School, Oregon, Illinois. Sydney E. Magaw.

ILLINOIS SPRING DOLLAR DAY

March 20 has been selected as our Spring Dollar Day for the Illinois State evangelistic work. Help us keep this work going forward. A great deal has been accomplished in the past and we can see much more work and opportunities on the horizon.

Delos Andrew, Treasurer.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

"We had a very enjoyable time on our recent trip to Nebraska. We preached twice at Blair, led a Bible lesson at Macomb, and preached at Ripley one evening."—Harvey U. Krogh, Jr., Tipp City, Ohio.

Sr. Ben Carpenter, Oregon, Ill., is visiting in the Pacific Coast States. At present, she is at the home of her brother, Charles Andrew, a bridge designer and engineer who lives in Seattle.

A thought for the week: "After the government takes our money to further the war, our hearts will burn within us when we think how much the gospel could have been preached by the proper use of that money."—Harvey U. Krogh, Jr.

Elder J. M. Morgan, Bristow, Okla., writes that he is ready to do evangelistic work, to go any place for protracted meetings or for funeral services, if his expenses are paid.

Next week's Herald will feature the Bible Training School, which is progressing well—except that receipts are dangerously modest.

Kangaroos? "Life keeps jumping out here."—Alfred Anthon, Corvallis, Ore.

Bro. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Ave., Cleveland, Ohio, has prepared a paper entitled, "The Bride, the Lamb's Wife," a copy of which he will gladly send to young men of the Church of God who are of military age.

"I plan to hold two weeks of meetings at Burr Oak, Ind., April 14-27. Bro. M. W. Lyon will speak at Southlawn on April 27."—F. E. Siple, 140 Celia St., S.E., Grand Rapids, Mich.

Elder Harry Sheets, Elburn, Ill., visited in Oregon, Ill., Saturday, March 8. He is planning enthusiastically for his work in the Summer Bible Training School, which he will serve as both instructor and dean.

Bro. and Sr. L. E. Conner visited the Burr Oak, Ind., church, Sunday, March 16, Bro. Conner preaching at both morning and evening services.

Bro. Emory Macy and family, having visited in Oregon, Ill., for several weeks, during which time Bro. Macy attended the Bible Training School, have recently returned to their home near Troy, Ohio. We hope Bro. Macy and his family can return next fall, as we know he wishes to further study for the ministry.

CHRIST SHOWS HIMSELF ALIVE

By Harry A. Sheets

(Selections from the coming Truth Seekers' Sunday School Quarterly.)

We must not ignore the fact of Jesus' death. He was dead physically and legally. He was dead for full three days and three nights.

Physical death ends one's thoughts, love, knowledge, hatred, envy, praise—in fact, all life's activities cease. (See Eek. 3:18-20; 9:4-6; Psalm 146:1-4; 115:17.) Jesus had to accept full death to conquer it completely.

Jesus accepted full legal death. Jewish law required three days to elapse to constitute legal death. Three days precluded all doubt that death had taken place, and shut out all suggestion that it might have been a trance, or a mere case of resuscitation. Herodotus tells us that embalment did not take place until three days had elapsed. Legally, the Jews did not recognize the identification of a body after three days. It is evident that Jesus was dead long enough to be adjudged legally dead, but was resurrected within the time of legal identification.

Jewish enemies never ignored the fact of his death. They acknowledged His resurrection by trying to discredit it. Roman soldiers were bribed into saying they went to sleep on guard. This was punishable by death, but no Roman soldier was executed. The leaders knew too well that life had returned to Him.

The followers of Jesus turned from the Cross and began to scatter, their dreams shattered. Peter said, "I go a fishing." Now commenced the work of reassembling the scattered sheep. The two women were the first to see the risen Savior. Peter was next. Others followed, and later He was seen of more than five hundred brethren at one time. The effect was tremendous. Strength appeared where doubt and disappointment had held sway. The disciples were now willing to proclaim Jesus as the Messiah, whereas a few days prior, they were timid and fearful. Peter, who had cursed and openly denied Jesus, healed in His name in the Temple and openly defied the wrath of the priests when commanded to desist.

The skeptic will today ask how we know Jesus was raised from the dead. The answer lies in the changed attitude of His followers. People just do not sacrifice everything which mortals deem desirable, and face persecution and death without strong convictions. Human beings aren't that way.

Men may consider resurrection unscientific, but it would be equally unscientific to declare the changed attitude of Peter and Paul due to a plot to deceive the people. Resurrection must be accepted as fact.—H. A. S.

GOLDEN TEXT

By F. A. Stilson

"I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore" (Rev. 1:18).

This verse joins the preceding verse and begins with Jesus saying, "Do not fear! I am the First and the Last and the Living One.—And I became dead;—and lo! living am I unto the ages of ages, and have the keys of death and of hades."—Rotherham. Death has reigned from Adam to the present time, and the question may readily be asked, Are we in the land of the living or the land of the dying?

BOSWORTH, MISSOURI

On February 28, Bro. C. E. Lapp arrived in our small town to conduct services, which he certainly did with the greatest of ability. We like this young minister so much. Due to bad weather, we did not have a meeting February 1. Many living at a distance were unable to attend, due to road conditions.

We hope, the Lord willing, we may continue to have services the first Sunday of each month. We also try to have Sunday school each Sunday. Any member passing close would receive a hearty welcome to join us in any of our services. Mrs. Ray Pancoast.

BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL NEWS

Last week we received from six to eight inches of snow. The melting snow made the streets sloppy. Since spring is so near, we know that these wintry blasts will not last. The terrible conditions in the world are comparable to the wintry blasts that shall soon melt—earth's troubles will disappear at the coming of our Saviour. Spring is like the conditions that will prevail when Christ appears. On the Resurrection Day the dead in Christ shall blossom into beauty: "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him" (1 Cor. 2:9).

A week ago, March 5, we were glad to have Sr. Winifred Reynolds and her brother Almond from Blanchard, Mich., visit the Students' Home.

Bro. Richard Smith preached last Sunday at Dixon, Ill., and Bro. Francis Burnett preached at Rockford, Ill.

Bro. Harry Sheets, who is to be dean of the Summer Bible Training School visited the Students' Home March 8. We also enjoyed having some of the brethren from the church at Macomb, Ill., visit our School, March 6 and 7. Srs. Lillian Gunning and Gladys Mercer, and Bro. Walter Croxton came with Bro. C. E. Lapp and family. They visited classes both days that they were here. Bro. Lapp gave the class an interesting talk. His subject material was about our attitude and conduct, our duty, and other problems that will confront us in the future.

The Ambassadors' Bible Class has been studying "Baptism." We are now studying "Israel and His Restoration."

We have received pictures of our class, also of the basketball team, and are well pleased with them. C. Alan McLain, Reporter.

Subscription Rate.—51 issues per annum, $2.00.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53, 54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him, (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

We Go a Fishing

March 1 marked the halfway point in the labors of the State for the year, so we consider it our obligation to those who have so faithfully made our labors possible to offer a brief summary of our work on the east side of the State. Last year we were concerned of necessity principally with the organizing of churches and church efforts at Eldorado and Marshall. Regularly functioning church boards and a complete organization of church officers bear testimony of the splendid response to these efforts.

In the first portion of this year, we directed our interest to the same end in the Sunday schools. Better organization methods have been adopted, systemized records and educational methods are being put into practice as rapidly as possible. Last year's teachers training class at Eldorado has enabled us to complete our staff this year with a regular and assistant teacher for each class. At the present time, the desire of the Marshall brethren for teachers' training is being met with a special class being held each preaching Sunday from 2:30 to 4:30. Classes are also held at both churches for a preview of Sunday school lessons before presentation. Many loose ends yet need to be tied in order that the greatest effect will be derived from these efforts, but all are determined to do the tying as rapidly as possible. We are sure these items will continue to develop themselves as we continue to other ventures. So, beginning March 1, we plan to go a fishing.

It was Christ who said, "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men." Thus, perhaps after all the final outcome of all our efforts rests upon our united ability as plain old-fashioned anglers. As far as I can see, there was nothing said about only fishing so long as every piece of bait produced results. He seemed to mean to keep on fishing, although you did nothing more than lose your bait. After all, the waters are deep and there are plenty of prospects and always the possibility that the next may be the first of a school. So, we go a fishing.

Good fishing takes a great deal of preparation, and preparation takes time, but we are getting under way with about twenty-five special projects and individual efforts toward this end.

Both churches have established regular tract distributors. These individuals are devoting themselves to a spread of the gospel through the detailed use of tracts. Already, four thousand tracts of the interest-awakener variety have been prepared for distribution, with another three thousand in preparation to be ready when needed. A new issue will be issued and extensively distributed every two weeks, and will in turn be supplemented by the more detailed National Bible Institution and Berean tracts as interest is shown. With membership co-operation in passing these tracts along, our estimates are in excess of five hundred readers per issue.

"When the Church Builds Evangelism, Evangelism Will Build the Church."

In addition to these, the Marshall efforts also include a local church paper carrying news, gospel tidbits, and editorial suggestions to a reading circulation of a possible two hundred fifty.

Supplementing these efforts are also Restitution Herald representatives at both churches. These are devoting themselves to the increasing of the reading of The Herald. Special copies are to be bought and placed in any home where it is felt they will be received with interest. If interest is continued after a few trial copies, steps will be taken to inaugurate a subscription in the home, so the family may have a regular opportunity of continuing to consider our views.

It is hoped that through the combined efforts of the foregoing workers in excess of one thousand individuals may read some bit of our doctrine at least once every two weeks. In this way we hope to eliminate some of the misunderstanding that is abroad regarding our views. Such bits will range from simple thought-provoking tracts to awaken interest to those covering details of our doctrine.

This, however, is merely the groundwork for new attendance directors who have assumed the task of welding this interest into regular attendance. From there on, we have designed over two dozen special efforts combined to keep this interest and attendance alive, ranging from prospective societies to simple visiting efforts. It takes time to get such extensive efforts moving, but truly now, we go a fishing.

THE BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL 1940—1941

We are pleased to present a picture of the Bible Training School, and to further feature this forward-moving and missionary work by publishing several articles written by students. With God's continued blessing, for which we pray, the Bible Training School will soon pay dividends into the Church of God.

“Top of Pisgah . . . Unto the Utmost Sea”

“Moses went up from the plains of Moab unto the mountain of Nebo, to the top of Pisgah, that is over against Jericho. And the Lord shewed him all the land of Gilead, unto Dan, and all Naphtali, and the land of Ephraim, and Manasseh, and all the land of Judah, unto the utmost sea” (Deut. 34:1, 2). Pisgah’s lofty summit is across the River Jordan from Jericho and far enough to the southeast to be also east of the Dead Sea. Thus, when “the Lord shewed him” a panoramic view of the Promised Land, Moses, looking westward, saw first the Dead Sea, then across other but lower mountains than his own vantage point “unto the utmost sea”—westward to the Mediterranean! Commentaries notwithstanding, James Moffatt plainly translated the text with these words: “Moses went up to mount Nebo, the headland of Pisgah; east of Jericho; there the Eternal showed him all the land . . . as far as the Mediterranean.”

What is distance, anyway? In the Mount of Transfiguration, Peter, James, and John saw farther than fifty or sixty miles: they saw nineteen hundred years, plus, into the future, for they were divinely blessed to be “eyewitnesses” of Christ’s “majesty” or Kingship. (2 Peter 1: 16-18.) In reference, then, to Moses’ view “unto the utmost sea,” let it be further considered that “the Eternal showed him all the land . . . as far as the Mediterranean” (Moffatt), and that “his eye was not dim, nor his natural force abated” (Deut. 34:7).

Though Moses was not then permitted to enter the Promised Land (who enters into reward when it is time to die?), it is not to be supposed that God “shewed him all the land” only to tease or torment him. Rather, this last experience—like the martyr Stephen’s vision of Christ—was somewhat of a pledge of divine approval. Abraham, too, had died having “none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on” (Acts 7:5), but both Abraham and Moses knew that God would someday give them an eternal inheritance in that Promised Land.

Thank God for Pisgah’s horizon! Thank God for mountaintop inspiration! Thank God for Moses who at one hundred twenty years of age, and at the threshold of death, was enough interested in the plan and promises of God to climb the highest mountain to see his eventual and eternal home, the Promised Land!

Climb, Though the Rocks Be Rugged

Step by step, the climber scales a rugged mountain. At last, almost exhausted by his effort, he stands triumphantly aloft the highest crag—a surer winner than one who slays and hides his enemy in the sand. The climber’s joy is not in looking down the mountain side as if to recall the hazards of the steep ascent, nor does he especially joy in his physical success of having climbed where others feared to venture. Rather, he drinks deeply of heaven’s limitless blue—cool, pure, and invigorating as the refreshing water of a gushing spring. He feasts his eyes upon the inexplicable beauties that the timid and shiftless never see. He sees creation bathed and beautified by all the spectrum of the golden sun, God’s floodlight that no covetous fingers can meter. He forgets time, and thinks about eternity. He measures not by foot or pound, but, seeing the ocean fade into its boundless horizon, meditating, too, about the Architect who planned and made the varied mountain peaks to his right and left and painted them with many brushes, he measures more nearly by the scale of Him who holds “the waters in the hollow of his hand,” who “meted out the heaven with a span,” who “comprehended the dust of the earth in a measure,” who “weighed the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance” (Isa. 40:12).

Babel’s Tower to heaven will never be completed, but he who patiently and faithfully surmounts the rugged and testing mountain that God has builded and placed in his path will at its top become overwhelmed with the limitless power and mystical presence of the Creator.

Climb, student, climb! Climb, though the rocks be rugged; there is victory and vision from Pisgah’s lofty height! There you will see the Promised Land—even “from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth” (Psalm 72:8). “Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel, who only doeth wondrous things. And blessed be his glorious name for ever” (vv. 18, 19).

"The Feet of Them That Preach"

By Francis Burnett

WHAT does it mean to preach? According to Webster's Dictionary, the word "preach" means to deliver tidings or a sermon. We believe the Scripture teaches that "gospel" and "tidings"—"glad tidings," as called by Paul in Acts 13:32—have the same meaning. "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved" (Rom. 10:9). We notice that Paul was writing to the brethren in Rome. The word "thou" used in the preceding verse did not mean only a certain person, but anyone who would confess. In Romans 10:11, we read: "Whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed." One person is no better than another. "There is no difference between the Jew and the Greek: for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him" (Rom. 10:12). We think we are justified in saying that the word "thou" in Romans 10:9 means anyone, for we read in verse 13, "Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved." It seems that there will be no distinction between individuals. "There is no respect of persons with God" (2:11).

In Romans 10:14, 15, several questions are asked for our consideration. We read: "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!" Let us consider first the question, "How shall they hear without a preacher?" We believe that the gospel will be preached as a witness in every nation, but how do we expect the people to hear if they do not have a leader!

As a denomination, we believe that we have the true doctrine—gospel. How many men do we have that are pastors, leaders, or evangelists? We have very few, in comparison with the number that we should have to teach the people of the United States—let alone every nation. We teach that everyone should believe in God. Paul said, "How shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard?" (Rom. 10:14.)

The express purpose of the Bible Training School is to train young men and women, that they may be able to go out to teach and preach. Perhaps some may say that the Bible Training School students are not experienced enough to preach. Of course, we are inexperienced, and we know it! Nevertheless, we are preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ the same as do our experienced ministers or even as did Paul, Peter, and John.

There are many peculiar laws in our country. Some of them are recorded in law books, others are merely handed down from generation to generation. For example, it is a law in a certain state for a schoolteacher to have a year's experience in teaching before he can get a position. How can one receive that year's experience, unless he is hired by some school board? The same principle applies to student ministers. We shall never be experienced preachers unless we are given opportunity to preach. However, such remarks as this confront us, student ministers: "You are not capable of preaching to us the doctrine we need," or "You cannot solve the problems at our church; we need an older man."

Our elder ministers are trying to persuade our brethren to call students, but some of our brethren seem to be "puffed up," thinking that they are too good to listen to young men. We read in 1 Corinthians 4:17, 18: "For this cause have I sent unto you Timotheus, who is my beloved son, and faithful in the Lord, who shall bring you into remembrance of my ways which be in Christ, as I teach every where in every church. Now some are puffed up, as though I would not come to you." At this time Timothy was a student traveling with Paul. Paul sent Timothy that he might teach of the "ways that be in Christ" which Paul had earlier taught them. Nevertheless, some of the people were "puffed up" because Paul was not coming. In 1 Corinthians 4:19, we read that Paul told them that he would come to them "not (to know) the speech of them which are puffed up, but the power."

We read in 1 Timothy 4:12, 13: "Let no man despise thy youth; but be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity. Till I come, give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine." The preceding verses can be applied in two ways. Any young man that goes out to preach should be an example of the belief—the faith for which he stands. However, if people will not have him, or if they tell him (he may hear it through other people) that he is not good enough, how can he prove his worth?

In our denomination, we have too much strife and division. The same conditions were true in the Corinthian church. We read in 1 Corinthians 1:12-14, "Now this I say, that every one of you saith, I am of Paul; and I of Apollos; and I of Cephas; and I of Christ. Is Christ divided? was Paul crucified for (Please turn to page 11)

Prediction of Doom by Amos

By Celaine Randall

HISTORY records that Amos was a native of Judea and came from Tekoa, about six miles south of Bethlehem. He was a dresser of sycamore trees and a shepherd who was called by the Spirit of God to be a prophet, although he was not trained in any of the prophetic schools. (See Amos 7:14, 15.) Amos is considered to have been one of the most forceful preachers of repentance and judgment of all the prophets in the Old Testament. His name means "burden" or "burden bearer." After studying his life and character, one could readily observe that his name was appropriate. He was a man of granite make, rigid, fearless, and self-contained, who possessed a powerful well-knit mind. He was a vigorous yeoman who developed into a religious reformer.

The title of his prophecies gives us an inkling as to the probable time in which he prophesied. We read in Amos 1:1: "In the days of Uzziah king of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam the son of Joash king of Israel, two years before the earthquake"; which seems to indicate that he prophesied about 787—760 B.C., the exact date being unknown. This period was considered the golden age of North Israel. The nation as a whole was in prosperity. Feasting and banqueting took the place of religious endeavor. Corruption of justice was a common sin. Might became right. Love of luxury prevailed. Religion lost all its vitality, and morals were completely ignored. The idolatrous worship of calves was prevalent.

Amos was untutored, yet there was nothing crude, unfinished, or unrefined about his style. He is considered the author of the purest and most classical Hebrew found in the entire Old Testament. His style is grave, piercing, and rhetorical. Being an inhabitant of the country, he naturally alluded to many objects of nature and agricultural occupations.

The essence of the message found in the Book of Amos is the doom of Israel. He prophesied of a judgment that was coming. The causes for such a judgment were wealth, luxury, and the corruption that existed in the nation. His message can be divided into four principal divisions: 1) He denounced the sins of the nations bordering Israel and Judah; 2) He described the state of the two kingdoms, Israel and Judah—especially Israel; 3) He related his visit to Bethel and prophesied of the coming punishment of Israel; and 4) He looked forward to the time when the Messiah's Kingdom would be established, His people forgiven, and rewarded with God's blessings for all eternity.

There is a message for each individual in the writings of Amos, if we study them. The whole Book of Amos could apply today as easily as it did back in the time it was written. Many times we perceive the mistakes in other people, but fail to correct the even more prominent mistakes that we ourselves make: Christ Himself perceived such a situation among the people, and warned them of this in His sermon on the plain as recorded in Luke 6:41, 42, where we read: "Why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but perceivest not the beam that is in thine own eye? Either how canst thou say to thy brother, Brother, let me pull out the mote that is in thine eye, when thou thyself beholdest not the beam that is in thine own eye? Thou hypocrite, cast out first the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to pull out the mote that is in thy brother's eye." When Amos prophesied, he had to show the people the mistakes and the sins of the neighboring people and nations before they could see their own errors. Let us take the beam out of our own eye, and heal it before we criticize others having a smaller mote.

In Matthew 24:37, we read: "As the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." In the days of Noe people were living riotously, not realizing the danger that was coming, until they saw the Flood. This condition also prevailed in the time of Amos. The people were living unrighteously, not conscious of the danger and judgment that were coming. Could we not say, then, "As the days of Amos were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be"? As we said before, the nation of Israel was in prosperity, and it seemed to the people that Amos was a fanatic. Nevertheless, the prophecy of Amos was fulfilled; Israel met his doom. This description of conditions could just as readily apply today, as in the time of Amos. In Noah's time, the result of men's sin was destruction and death by the Flood. In the time of Amos, doom was prophesied for disobedience, so there also is going to be a judgment for the sin that is in the world today. Such conditions can exist for a time, but punishment will then come. "Unto them that are contentious, and do not obey the truth, but obey unrighteousness, indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish, upon every soul of man that doeth evil, of the Jew first, and also of the Gentile" (Rom. 2:8, 9).

In Revelation 22:12, we read: "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." This will come to pass when God raises "up the tabernacle of David that is fallen" (Amos 9:11). Then "the plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed; and the mountain shall drop sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt" (v. 13).

For that time we pray earnestly, and may we heed that present warning of Amos, the "prophet of justice." Let us forsake our evil ways and turn to the Lord, for there is only one way that leads to life everlasting, and that way is through Christ Jesus our Saviour.

"Behold the Fig Tree, and All the Trees"

By Richard Smith

---

CHRIST used the fig tree to typify the Jewish nation. What, though, is the meaning of "all the trees"? The fig tree, the nation of Jews, has already started to bud. The Jews are returning to their land, and it is becoming "like the garden of Eden" (Ezek. 36:35). Then, what of the other "trees"?

Inasmuch as the fig tree refers to a nation, why should not the "trees" refer to nations? Ezekiel 38 refers to nations which will come down against the Lord's people in the land of Palestine. If, as many believe, we are in the last times, the stage is certainly being set for the day of the battle before Jerusalem. In the light of current events, we can see the struggle moving ever southeastward in the general direction of Palestine. In fact, Great Britain is now preparing to battle for the land of Palestine, modern Iraq, and Syria. It is known that the ambitions of the Totalitarian Powers demand vast resources which are available in the Bible lands. However, through our anxiety to hasten the coming of the Lord, we are prone to place too much emphasis on current events, though they are important. Paul, speaking the sure Word of God, said that in the last days perilous times shall come (2 Tim. 3:1). There is little doubt that we are living in those days of peril.

Paul also said, "That day shall not come, except there come a falling away first." That day has come when we see the "falling away." Only a few things must yet be fulfilled.

There is this to consider: never has the world been in such an uproar. Men have never been so fearful of the future as they are at the present time. Never has human life been regarded so valueless. In the minds of many men is this one purpose: conquer all, regardless of cost in lives and material. Hitler recently stated that he was willing to sacrifice four million men to conquer the British Isles alone. For what? Not to gain a prosperous country, for in conquering Britain the land would be utterly devastated. His object can be only that of personal glory.

If these are to be the conditions of the world when the enemy is to come against Palestine, then I would say the end is at hand. However, it will be when the Israelites "dwell safely," that the power of sin will come down against "the land of unwallled villages"—walls typifying defenses. (See Ezek. 38.) When these men come down to take a spoil, other peoples (nations) shall question them about it. Then a terrible time will come upon the land of Israel. Tribulation shall come upon all the earth. (See Luke 21.) The Lord shall destroy this wicked one with the brightness of His coming. (2 Thess. 2:8.) It seems that this coming of Christ will be with His saints, for according to Luke 17, only the faithful will know that the Lord has come until He reveals Himself to men with His saints. Isaiah 26:19, 20 indicates that the faithful will not go through the tribulation period.

This tribulation will be a testing period for those who were not accounted worthy of the first call of the saints. This one of sin shall be given power to make war for forty-two months. (Rev. 13:5-17.) It seems that he shall rule the world until Christ stands upon Mount Zion. (Rev. 14:1.) In connection with this, Zechariah wrote: "Then shall the Lord go forth, and fight against those nations . . . and his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives." They (the Jews) will then look upon Him "whom they have pierced" (Zech. 12:10), and they shall mourn for Him when He says that the wounds He has are "those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends" (13:6). Truly angels foretold Christ's return, saying, "This same Jesus . . . shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven" (Acts 1:11).

The fig tree (the Jewish nation) and all the trees (various nations) are budding. Summer is nigh! The King is coming to claim the throne (Luke 1:32) which He was not permitted to claim at His first advent.

World conditions can easily change the situation to meet the Bible qualification of "peace and safety." Therefore, we cannot "rest at the oars" lest we be carried away by the desires of this world and lose the "crown of righteousness which the Lord . . . shall give . . . to all those who love his appearing."

The Book of Joel

By Ellsworth Routson

OF JOEL'S personal history there is nothing known, except that he was the son of Pethuel. The meaning of Pethuel is "punished of God." Joel's name in Hebrew is Yo-el, which signifies, "Jehovah is God." By this we understand that Joel most likely had godly parents. It seems he was a native of Judea, perhaps a Jerusalem citizen, as in his writings he mentioned: Zion, the children of Zion, Judea, Jerusalem, and the children of Judea and Jerusalem. Joel was a poet and a man of prayer, and he might have been a priest. From his prophecies, we conclude he was a seer and a prophet in the strictest sense. It is considered that Joel was either one of the earliest or latest of the prophets. It is generally considered that he prophesied about 800 or 770 B.C.

The Book of Joel has only three chapters, consisting of seventy-three verses in all. The Book may be divided into two main divisions. The first division includes the first thirty-seven verses (1:1—2:17). It tells about the plague of locusts which was to be accompanied by drought. The first division closes with an earnest plea for repentance of the people. The second division starts with the second chapter, verse 18, and continues to the end of the Book. The first half of Joel's book begins with gloom and closes with light, and the second half opens with judgment and closes with victory.

We shall now consider the first division.

The Plague of Locusts

Palestine is occasionally invaded by locusts. These plagues leave the land in a destroyed condition, as to trees, vineyards, and all field produce. So thorough was the destruction that neither man nor beast had food, nor was there food for offering in the Temple. Both man and beast had to suffer.

The locusts covered the ground in great hordes, and as they came to a vineyard, olive orchard, or any other vegetation, they stripped the trees of fruit, leaves, and bark—leaving the white skeletons of the once flourishing trees. It is said they devoured babies left by their mothers in the shade. By the time the babies' screams were heard and their parents reached them, they were partially destroyed. The Romans called the hordes of locusts "the burners of the land," and they were well named. We can picture the vast hordes of locusts as they swept across the land. They were as a fire lashing at everything in its way, causing great destruction as it proceeds driven by a strong wind. Such were the locusts as they covered the ground—a massive army destroying all in its way, stopping for nothing, going up over walls and houses or whatever might be in its way, and devouring as it went. They turn neither right nor left, but go into open doors and windows, causing great destruction. It seems that God was their leader and that they followed, not faltering at any obstacle. When in flight, they moved like great clouds. Oh! what mourning and sorrow had come upon the land!

Then, Joel preached repentance unto the people, admonishing them to turn wholeheartedly with weeping, fasting, and mourning unto the Lord. He called for an assembly of the people to fast and mourn, that the Lord would spare them. In Joel 1:2, we read, "The vine is dried up, and the fig tree languisheth; the pomegranate tree, the palm tree also, and the apple tree, even all the trees of the field, are withered: because joy is withered away from the sons of men." Their joy was all taken away, they were deprived of food, and they were left in sorrow. Perhaps now they could understand that God is the Creator and Giver of all. Also, we read in Joel 1:18-20, that the "cattle are perplexed, because they have no pasture." It says, "The beasts groan . . . the flocks of sheep are made desolate" and "the beasts of the field cry also unto thee: for the rivers of waters are dried up, and the fire hath devoured the pastures of the wilderness." Throughout the first seventeen verses of the second chapter, it describes the locusts as a great army overcoming all. Can we conceive what a terrible plague it was?

In the second division, God answered the prayers of His people, and the plague was far removed from them. The trees and vines were again to bear fruit. The vats of wine would again overflow and the "floors shall be full of wheat." "Ye shall eat in plenty, and be satisfied, and praise the name of the Lord your God, that hath dealt wondrously with you: and my people shall never be ashamed. And ye shall know that I am in the midst of Israel, and that I am the Lord your God, and none else: and my people shall never be ashamed" (2:26, 27).

Afterward, God will pour out His "Spirit upon all flesh." "The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and the terrible day of the Lord." Gentiles will "prepare war, wake up the mighty men." Joel 3:10 reads: "Beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruninghooks into spears: let the weak say, I am strong," and "let the heathen be wakened, and come up to the valley of Jehoshaphat: for there will I sit to judge the heathen round about" (3:12).

Man will try to fight against God's people; but, when He puts His hand forth in battle, all shall be turned back in defeat. God will avenge the wicked, and protect and shield His people from harm. All the heathen shall know that He is God. In the last two verses of Joel we read: "Judah shall dwell for ever, and Jerusalem from generation to generation. For I will cleanse their blood that I have not cleansed: for the Lord dwelleth in Zion."

INSPIRED WORD

By Orris Mills

"The prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." . . . . .

QUITE frequently we hear cynical remarks about the Bible being a book of fairy tales, or one having been written by a group of fanatical preachers. But by so criticizing, these individuals merely confirm their ignorance. The Bible did not appear in a complete volume, suddenly, as a novel might appear on the newsstand. Rather, it is the result of various writers, rarely contemporaries. A group of men did not gather around a mahogany table and say, "Let's write a Bible." No! The Bible as we have it today has required many writers, scribes, compilers, and translators throughout many centuries.

According to the chronology of Ussher, the first contributor to the Bible was Job, who lived even before Abraham was called out of the land of the Chaldeans and given the promise of an eternal inheritance. Job cried out almost 1600 B.C., saying: "Oh that my words were now written! oh that they were printed in a book! that they were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock for ever! for I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth." Job was fervently, sincerely hoping that his words would be preserved, that his posterity and all people might profit by his faith, patience, and obedience, that they might through his hope be influenced and strengthened in faith and in the belief that there is a resurrection.

Isaiah, one of the major prophets, was directed by the Spirit of God to prophesy to many generations. As God's spokesman, Isaiah challenged all other gods to protect the people, to prophesy, and to give life such as Jehovah had done. (See Isa. 41.) He prophesied of freedom for the Israelitish nation from Babylonian bondage. Almost one hundred years before their deliverance God had called the deliverer by name. (Read Isa. 45:1-4.)

The very fact that the Bible has survived, and has been accessible when all other historical writings were lost, is convincing proof that it is the truth and the Word of God. Christ said, "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall not pass away." Although several attempts have been made to destroy God's Word, it is still extant. We note especially its stanchness during the period of severe persecution under Diocletian in the closing years of the third century A.D., when an attempt was made to destroy by burning all Bibles then in existence. Although there were comparatively few Bibles at that time, and then not in complete form but in epistle or letter, it has withstood and today it is a "best seller"—second to none. The Word has continued to perpetuate the truth and give comfort to all who read it, (Please turn to page 10)

EQUALITY OF MEN

By Verneille Lawrence

ODDLY enough, God's Word seems to provide not only for the Church of God, but for everyone, from the most high to the most humble. "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16). "Then Peter opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons" (Acts 10:34). "Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved" (Rom. 10:13), but how are the people of the world to know that they may and should call upon the name of the Lord unless we, who have the truth, are to tell them? You see, we do have a responsibility towards our brother. It seems that, after all, we are our brother's keeper, for all men exist in and for each other, and they are bound to each other by an intricate network of mutual obligation.

We believe that the Bible teaches democracy, and democracy means complete equality of opportunity. How is everyone to have an equal chance to fit himself for citizenship in God's heavenly Kingdom, unless we proclaim the gospel?

Only those who pass the test of both faith and works will be eligible to rule. Do not works include going into all the world to preach the gospel? We justify ourselves by saying that we are to be a people set apart. Christ went among the Pharisees and sinners. Who are we to be so set apart that we cannot associate with those who do not have the gospel, the true gospel as we know it?

Please allow a quotation from Plato. "The just man is the man in just the right place, doing his best, and giving in full equivalent of all that he receives." Surely we have received bountiful blessings in both faith and truth, yet the Church of God has not even made a fairly decent attempt at giving in full equivalent of the blessings that we have received from God's hand.

The Prophet Malachi

By Terry Ferrell

THE name of Malachi, the last of the Old Testament prophets, is very significant to Bible students. The word "Malachi" means "my messenger" which can be compared to that of Haggai, which is "messenger of Jehovah" (Hag. 1:13). It is believed by some critics that "Malachi" is not a proper name, but merely a title, as it appears no other place in the Old Testament other than the book bearing his name. Some scholars assign the book to Ezra the scribe; others, Zerubbabel; and still others, Nehemiah. Regardless of whoever wrote the book, the fact remains that the author was inspired of God and his message is authentic.

As the book contains no evidence as to the date of its composition, the period to which it can be assigned is a much debated question. Ussher placed the time of the writing as 397 B.C.; however, many dates have been established independently of his chronology. Malachi was doubtless a contemporary of Ezra and Nehemiah, for the subject of his message is comparable in content to that of Nehemiah. The Temple had been rebuilt, and the priests had been performing the Temple service for many years. In fact, they had become lax and degenerate, and the whole Jewish nation had become generally demoralized and corrupt. Malachi had a great task before him, which would be the complete reform of the Jews.

The style in which Malachi's message is presented is worthy of consideration. His book is not poetical, but plain and oratorical. He used an argumentative form of language to emphasize and further explain his thoughts. He would make an accusation, then as though someone had questioned his statement, he would proceed to prove his statement. This form appears eight times throughout his book. (See Mal. 1:2, 6, 7; 2:14, 17; 3:7, 8, 13.) Malachi dispensed with the formality and patience of the old prophets, and pleaded and argued with the people. He brought before their eyes the many evil practices of their day. Malachi can be fairly considered as the most argumentative of the Old Testament prophets.

Malachi's message may be divided into the following seven parts: God's continuing love for Israel, denunciation of the neglectful priests, rebuke on the people for their idolatry and divorce, coming judgment, the people's sins—neglecting tithes, and so forth, an address to the doubters of the prophet's age, and an exhortation to keep the law of Moses. We shall enlarge on each of these seven subjects.

The people had become discouraged and disheartened because the optimistic predictions of Haggai and Zechariah concerning the Messianic Kingdom had not been fulfilled. The prophet used the illustration showing the contrast of the conditions of Edom and Israel to show that God still loved Israel. Edom had been permanently driven from its mountain strongholds, while Israel had been returned from the Exile after a comparatively short time. (See Mal. 1:2-5.)

The priests had not been conducting the Temple service as commanded of God. Instead of offering the best of the flock, they had been sacrificing the sick, the lame, and the blind. God had not accepted their offerings, and even said that it would be better to shut the doors of the Temple than to have a fire kindled on His altar in vain. God had cursed them because they offered polluted bread to Him. The priests had caused many to stumble, and, therefore, were made contemptible and base before all people. They, through their unfaithfulness, had corrupted the Levitical covenant relationship with God. (See Mal. 1:6—2:9.)

Malachi rebuked the people for their idolatry and divorce. He used figurative language in speaking of their divergence from their religion. He spoke of the true religion as being the wife of one's youth. The people had turned from the religion of their youth and had begun to worship foreign gods. They had divorced their Jewish wives and had taken heathen women in marriage. God was very angry with the Jews for putting away their wives, because God said that "he hateth putting away." Malachi urged the people to repent and turn to the Lord. (See Mal. 2:10-16.)

The people had begun murmuring against the Lord and questioning if there was a God of justice. Malachi announced the Day of Judgment as a great and terrible day for those who do not live righteously. He told of the coming of the Day of the Lord, at which time He will be as a refiner's fire and fullers' soap, and will purify the sons of Levi, so they will offer lawful sacrifices unto Jehovah. All sorcerers, adulterers, false swearers, and oppressors shall be witnessed against. God told the sons of Jacob that they would not be utterly consumed, but only through God's unchangeableness. (See Mal. 2:17; 3:6.)

The Prophet further condemned the people for straying from God's commandments. They had neglected their tithes and offerings, and, therefore, were robbing God of His just dues. God told them that if they would only pay their tithes and fill the storehouses, He would pour out a blessing upon them, and they would again have His favor. Locusts would no longer destroy their crops, and their vines would not cast their fruit before time. They would become "a delightful land." (See Mal. 3:7-12.)

The people thought it unprofitable to serve God, because the wicked were uplifted, and they that tempted God were permitted to go unpunished. They had spoken against God and had not kept His charge. There were some, however, that feared God, and God heard them, and a "book of remembrance" was written before God. The righteous will be God's people at the time of judgment. The proud and the wicked shall be burned as stubble, and not even a root or a branch shall survive. To those, however, that fear the name of Jehovah shall "the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings," and they shall be fat as a calf of the stall, but the wicked shall be trodden down. (See Mal. 3:13-4:3.)

Malachi closed his message with an appeal to keep the law of Moses, and with the promise of the coming of Elijah the prophet, before the great and terrible day of the Lord. (See Mal. 4:4-6.)

Because Malachi is the last book in the Old Testament, it provides an introduction for the New Testament, and prepares the way for the advent of the Lord as recorded in the Gospels. Though the Book of Malachi is small, the value of the message contained in it should not be slighted.

The "Big Fish" Story

By Barbara Fish

---

EVERYONE of us at sometime or another has heard or told a "big fish" story. We many times make the story bigger than the event really is. The next time you tell a "fish story," remember that in the Bible you can read a "big fish" story, too, but it is not any bigger than the occurrence itself—the Bible is the inspired Word of God, and God's Word is truth.

Jonah was the son of Amittai who prophesied to Jeroboam in 2 Kings 14:25. This is the only place in the Old Testament that Jonah's name is mentioned except in the Book of Jonah. Jonah lived in Galilee, about four miles north of Nazareth. When God asked him to go to Nineveh, he did not wish to go. So, finding a ship going to Tarshish, he set sail. Nineveh was almost straight east of Antioch and Seleucia, and it was on the east side of the Tigris River, while Tarshish was in the southern part of Spain.

Jonah, thinking he would soon be away from the presence of the Lord, went down into the ship and fell asleep. The Lord sent a great wind into the sea and the ship tossed and rocked, but Jonah continued sleeping. The sailors prayed to their gods, for they thought one of them had offended his god—still the wind raged. The captain came to Jonah (Jonah 1:6), and told him to pray to his God. How was Jonah to pray to his God when he was fleeing from the presence of his God?

The sailors, thinking one of them had made his god angry, cast lots (Jonah 1:7). The lot fell upon Jonah. Then the sailors questioned him to find the reason for the high wind. They asked him why he was fleeing from the presence of the Lord (1:10). Jonah told them to throw him overboard as a human sacrifice, but the sailors were unwilling until they had prayed to Jonah's God. They then "cast him (Jonah) forth into the sea: and the sea ceased from her raging" (1:15). Now, the Lord had prepared a great fish to swallow Jonah, and he was in the belly of the fish three days and nights (1:17). While in the belly of the fish, Jonah prayed to God. "The Lord spake unto the fish, and it vomited out Jonah upon the dry land" (2:10). According to Arab tradition, Jonah was vomited out on dry land at Alexandretta, north of Antioch on the coast of Syria.

Again Jonah was told to "go unto Nineveh." This time he obeyed. He entered the city and preached to the people, saying: "Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown" (3:4). These are the only words of prophecy that he spoke. The people of Nineveh immediately repented. Jonah was displeased because the Lord had not carried out His plans to bring Nineveh to destruction, but God saw that the people had turned "from their evil way."

Jonah went out of the city only far enough to see what would happen to Nineveh. It was very hot, and God prepared a gourd to protect him from the heat of the sun. Then Jonah was pleased, but when God caused the gourd to die, Jonah was angry again. God said to him, "Thou hast had pity on the gourd, for the which thou hast not laboured, neither madest it to grow; which came up in a night, and perished in a night: and should I not spare Nineveh?" (4:10, 11.)

No other story in the whole Bible is ridiculed as much as that of Jonah and the whale. It is said that a whale could not swallow a man, for whales have very small throats. Let us, though, present a few facts that will prove that it is possible.

White sharks and sperm whales have been captured which could have swallowed horses. There is now on exhibition in the Smithsonian Institute at Washington, D. C., a whale which measures forty-five feet in length and weighed, when captured, thirty thousand pounds. At the time it was captured, a black fish weighing about fifteen hundred pounds was found in its stomach. This whale was caught off the coast of Florida in 1912.

Too, you may ask, How could Jonah have lived three days in the belly of the fish? Here are some facts about that: In 1758, a sailor fell overboard in the Mediterranean Sea, and was swallowed by a shark. The shark was hit by a cannon ball, and the sailor set free. An Indian, also, was swallowed by a shark, and was still alive when the shark was captured, though he died soon after. We really do not need any facts to prove God's Word, for He is capable of doing anything. Nor does it matter whether or not Jonah died while in the belly of the fish, for it was a miracle of God to have him on earth alive once more—surely God could have brought him back to life.

Authorities cannot agree as to whether the Book is historical, allegorical, or mythical, but most of them believe as we do, that it is historical. We believe God is great enough to cause such an event to happen. It would require a wild imagination to make up such a story.

Christ once told the Pharisees and scribes, "As Jonas

F A I T H

By George Walters

THE Apostle Paul said, "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen" (Heb. 11:1). This verse corresponds well with Hebrews 3:14, saying, "We are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence stedfast unto the end."

Faith and hope go together, and those things that comprise the objects of our hope are also the objects of our faith. God will perform all that He has promised to us in Christ. Thus, believers in the exercise of faith are filled with "joy unspeakable and full of glory." Christ dwells in us if we are truly faithful, and our souls are filled with the fullness of God as far as our present measure will permit.

In the Apostle Paul's definition of faith, his expression "the evidence of things not seen" means that faith demonstrates to the eye the reality of those things that cannot be otherwise discerned. The eye of the physical body cannot understand those things which are revealed through faith to the Christian.

"AS WE FORGIVE"

By Robert Hardesty

WHEN Jesus taught His disciples in His Sermon on the Mount, He gave to them a model prayer. He did not say that it should be repeated word for word, but He said, "After this manner therefore pray ye." Almost every professing Christian has committed this short prayer to memory; and, whenever he repeats it, he does so with little, if any, thought of the meaning of the words he speaks. The words have been memorized in their order, and are spoken mechanically.

Everyone knows what a dangerous risk it is to attach his signature to a document he has not read. It is an even greater risk to repeat the Lord's Prayer without thinking of the words spoken.

Jesus taught us to pray, "Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors." Do these words not ask for conditional forgiveness? If one has been hurt or wronged by another, and has not forgiven him, when he speaks this part of the prayer he is, in effect, asking God to withhold forgiveness from him. Is he not thus pronouncing condemnation upon himself? He might as well say, "Do not forgive me, for I have not forgiven my brother."

The two verses immediately following the Lord's Prayer further emphasize the importance of forgiveness on man's part, positively stating: "If ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." Also, earlier in His sermon, Jesus said: "If thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath ought against thee; leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift" (Matt. 5:23, 24).

In the Parable of the Unmerciful Servant (Matt. 18: 23-35), Jesus said that the servant who forgave not his fellow servant was delivered to the tormentors, and "likewise shall my heavenly Father do also unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not every one his brother their trespasses."

Thus, we see that it is essential that we forgive others before we can expect forgiveness of God.

INSPIRED WORD

thus fulfilling the prophecy of Christ, "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall not pass away."

When it seems that the Bible is being brought into disrepute, God furnishes additional proof that will substantiate His written Word. Surely God must have been influential in preserving records which are now being uncovered by archaeologists that tell the "story" which previously was believed to have been recorded only in the Bible. God must have been instrumental in preventing the weathering and erosion of these writings so that today men are able to decipher, translate, and read them to prove that the nations of which He speaks were truly once in existence.

Yes, we believe "holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost" when they wrote the Scriptures. We also believe that through study of the Word and obedience to it we can obtain eternal life, that it is profitable for all things—in building character, personality, and in instructing us how to live successfully and harmoniously with our fellow men.

"THE FEET OF THEM THAT PREACH"

you? or were ye baptized in the name of Paul? I thank God that I baptized none of you, but Crispus and Gaius." Too many of the people of our denomination think more of the man than they do of the words that he preaches. Some will say that if they cannot have Brother So and So, they will not help with the church work. No matter how good any man is, he cannot save you or me. Paul asked, "Is Christ divided?" Do not all of our preachers tell of Christ and preach the gospel? Are not all our ministers striving to do their best to preach the gospel of the Kingdom? Let us give these thoughts serious consideration.

Our denomination—the one that believes our teachings are most correct—does not have even one missionary. Yet, we believe that the gospel is to be preached for a witness in every nation before Christ returns. Who is going to do it? Help support the Bible Training School and encourage others to come. There is much work to be done for Christ.

THE "BIG FISH" STORY

was three days and three nights in the whale's belly; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth" (Matt. 12:40). Possibly Christ meant, when saying this, that Jonah had died, arose, and then preached with success. Jesus, too, must die and rise again before the world would accept His teachings.

How many of us are like Jonah? We disobey, and try to escape from God's sight. When we are in great distress, we call on God to help us, promising to do better in the future. When God answers, we remember our promise a few short weeks, then we begin to complain. It is my prayer that this may help the one reading and the one writing this article, that we may have enough faith to know that God's way is best.

BUILDING YOUR LIBRARY

Book Reviews

By Arlen Marsh

For seven years, Clarence Budington Kelland wrote unsuccessfully. Then, in a single mail, he sold three short stories and a serial to the Saturday Evening Post! That was twenty-five years ago. Since, he has become famous as the most prolific general magazine writer in the United States—and as the most popular.

For what reason he did so has not been made clear—but Mr. Kelland some years ago slipped on the thorny road of freelance writing—abandoned his usual diamond-hard and jitterbuggy style, and produced a truly delightful story of the days of Jesus Christ: Thirty Pieces of Silver (Harper & Brothers; 75 cents), based on the betrayal of the Master by Judas Iscariot.

Judas is held by Mr. Kelland to be what he may very well have been—a dupe of his own faith in Jesus. Anxious to supplement the ebbing treasury of the apostles, Judas made a deal with the priests—the while he was convinced that Jesus never could be taken because of His miraculous powers. The Iscariot's intentions, thus, as Mr. Kelland tells them, were not to sell the Christ to crucifixion, but to improve the apostolic finances by double-crossing Caiaphas.

Few more moving tales of Jesus' day have been written than Thirty Pieces of Silver. Judas' reactions, his iron-clad faith in Jesus' omniscience and omnipotence, his awful dismay over the actual arrest and trial of his Lord, are painted with a vividness which Mr. Kelland has not often equalled in his more popular stories. Whether you agree with the picture of Judas' character or not, Thirty Pieces of Silver deserves a place on your list of "must" reading quite as much as van Dyke's famous Story of the Other Wise Man.

Reader's Digest (subscriptions to which may be ordered through the National Bible Institution at $3.00 a year or $5.00 for two years) has carried, during recent months, some really remarkable articles on religion. Dr. Alexis Carrel's study of prayer (March, 1941) should be emblazoned in large letters on the walls of every Christian home. And Roger William Riis' story of why he is "For the Churches" (January, 1941) is no less valuable.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY MADGE SAVAGE

"Behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you" (Luke 24:49).

"Peace Be Unto You"

An old custom, an Oriental one, in the days of Jesus was to kiss a friend when greeting him. That was why Judas betrayed Jesus with a kiss. Paul closes his letter to the Corinthians by saying, "All the brethren greet you. Greet ye one another with an holy kiss" (1 Cor. 16:20). Among Christians the greeting was, "God be with you," or as Jesus said, "Peace be unto you." Peter said, "Greet ye one another with a kiss of charity. Peace be with you all that are in Christ Jesus" (1 Peter 5:14).

To have Jesus again in their midst brought peace to them—after they really knew it was He. At first they were afraid, thinking they had seen a spirit or something not real.

Jesus soon convinced them that He was real. They could touch Him, see the nail scars in His hands and feet, and He ate with them (Luke 24:39-43).

Everything Made Clear

Jesus then reviewed His teachings with them. He told again of His life and the things spoken of Him in the Old Testament. They had not understood, but now He "opened their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures."

Today, we, too, must have God open our understanding if we would learn His way. We are to study, as Paul told Timothy: "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Tim. 2:15).

"Ye Are Witnesses"

Jesus told His loved ones that day that "repentance and remission of sins" should be preached in His name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. As Matthew said it, it is perhaps easier understood: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world" (28:19, 20).

We are the witnesses today of Jesus, just as were His disciples then. They were given "power from on high" for their work. We can be "quickened by the Spirit" and "filled" so that we can do His will. In Psalm 119:50, we read: "Thy word hath quickened me."

In John 3:34, we find that God gave the Spirit to Jesus without measure. However, we read that He is able to do much, much more than "we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us." Also, "The just shall live by his faith" (Hab. 2:4). May we have faith and power to do God's will.

ECE Correspondence

Our friend, Dorothy Frazier, sent a very interesting letter, telling of the ECE activities of the club organized in Cleveland, Ohio. Among other things she said, "The ECE Club is doing just fine. We meet every Friday night from seven to eight o'clock. We have some very good workers.

"Our younger group is making scrapbooks for ill children in the hospitals. We have nine books started.

"The older group has one half hour of Bible lesson each week. Richard Parish is their teacher. That is the news from the east side group.

"The west side group have Richard for their teacher, too. They meet every Thursday night."

Isn't that fine news? Sister Frazier named some of their good workers.

Who?

"Who is on the Lord's side? Who will serve the King?
Who will be His helpers other lives to bring?
Who will leave the world's side? Who will face the foe?
Who is on the Lord's side? Who for Him will go?
By Thy call of mercy, by Thy grace divine,
We are on the Lord's side, Saviour, we are Thine."

—Selected.

Just for Fun

A graph in yesterday's edition of a large metropolitan newspaper was captioned, "One Billion Dollars for Fun," and showed the amounts of money spent for entertainment in each of the states in 1940. It would be interesting to learn the total contributions for church work in that same period. It would probably fall a bit short of the billion dollar figure!

Just think what the churches could do with a billion dollars! They could embark upon a program of religious education that would surprise even the most energetic atheist. Millions of people who have not yet heard the truth would be able to gain a knowledge of the Bible that would exceed that of some of our regular church members. However, the churches did not get the money. They received what was left after the bills were paid and the people had their fun. "Traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God" is the way Timothy described it.

Have you ever watched a couple of boys wrestling at the edge of a swimming pool or at the edge of the bank at the old swimming hole? If you have, perhaps you recall your feeling of concern as they came closer and closer to the edge of the water. They were so engrossed in their tussle that they did not realize the close proximity of the water. Then, perhaps, you remember how you became tense momentarily as you saw them finally topple over the brink. You might become a little tense right now as you look about you and see the world going merrily on its way; for it is beginning to look very much as though the whole works will topple over the brink into the destruction foretold in Philippians 3:19.

We might just read the verses immediately preceding and following 2 Timothy 3:4. These verses describe other conditions in our world to a "T." So what? So let us take next week end for example. If we work until Saturday noon, that will give us thirty-six hours until we have to return to work. How many of those thirty-six hours will be spent in Christian worship, study, and fellowship? What's the ratio of the time we spend for pleasure and for Christ? Time is as important as money. A dollar cannot say, "The Kingdom of God is coming," although it can help someone else to say it.

Juggle a Bit

Why don't you go out and do a little campaigning on your own for Christianity? If we put our dollar into the cause, we have made it possible for someone else to spread the gospel, but if we jump in and help also, we ought to be able to do just about twice as much good. However, where are we going to find the time? We suppose, though, that you spend your time the same way that other people spend theirs. First, we do those things that are essential to keep us alive. We earn our living. Then we use a little time to prepare ourselves to earn a still better living, or to become more familiar with God's plan for men and the coming Kingdom. The rest of our time is spent in doing the things we like to do just for the fun of it. The problem comes in spending the "preparation" and "pleasure" time. It's possible, by careful planning, to prepare ourselves for Christian service and get real pleasure out of it. Of course, when we have completed the initial period of preparation, and enter actively into Christian work, the pleasure we will have from then on cannot be compared with any of the "common" pleasures. We will be way out ahead. We might have a little trouble now and then even in Christian work, but did we ever have a horse throw us while we were having a fine time riding on a sunny afternoon?

From far back in the room comes the question, "Well, how does one know when he has spent the time he should in Christian work?" If we have found that we are not suited to the job of spending our entire time in church work, and must work in the world for our livelihood, it would appear that about the only measure we can use will be whether we are "juggling our church work to suit our business" or whether we are "juggling our business to suit our church work."

By the way, how is your juggling coming along? Are you keeping in mind the words of Christ, "For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also"?

Pins

It has been suggested that perhaps it would be advantageous for the Bereans to purchase pins to be issued to members when they have fulfilled certain qualifications. What are your opinions?

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALENDAR OF EVANGELISM

March 29, 30.—Illinois Quarterly Conference at Ripley.
 April 7-13.—Special meetings at Oregon, Ill.
 April 14-27.—Special meetings at Burr Oak, Ind.
 June 18-29.—Indiana Bible School and Conference at North Salem.
 July 29-August 10.—General Conference at Oregon, Ill.
 August 17-24.—Ohio State Conference at the Brush Creek Church of God, near Tipp City.

ENROLL NOW

Students planning to attend the Summer Bible Training School should enroll now, or as soon as possible. It is definitely planned to conduct another Summer School, but we must have at least twenty students enrolled by June 1. The School will be conducted June 17—July 25, if twenty students are enrolled.

Brothers S. J. Lindsay, Tempe, Ariz., and Harry A. Sheets, Elburn, Ill., will be the instructors. They are talented and experienced. Both are zealous to enter into the work, and are anxiously waiting to hear the encouraging news that a goodly number of our young men and young women are planning to attend the Summer School.

We hope that students will come from the North, the South, the East, and the West. We have facilities for fifty students, if that many should come. Why should there not be fifty? Why do we do anything halfheartedly for the Lord? With apologies to our senior Bro. Lindsay, we are constrained to say that in a relatively few more years some of our young people will wish that they had better used their opportunities to study the Scripture: with one so well read in the Bible and so adept in imparting help to others.

Bro. Harry Sheets, the other instructor, and Dean of the Summer School, has had a number of years experience teaching public school, and he is one of our ministers known to be sound in his Bible interpretation. He has recently visited in Oregon, Ill., to make definite plans for his part of the work in the School, and we can assure all that the Dean's part of the game will be well played. . . . Who else wishes to enter the game? Use the enrollment coupon on opposite page.

Sydney E. Magaw.

SUNDAY SCHOOL EXHIBIT

At the last General Conference a request was made by a number of the brethren that a Sunday School Exhibit be held in conjunction with our annual meeting at Oregon, Ill., this summer. Such an exhibit was held several years ago, but was discontinued.

In order to have a successful and worthwhile exhibit, work must be started soon. To start it going, I have appointed Sr. Ruby Railton of Rockford, Ill., as chairman of the Exhibit Committee. Other members who have consented to serve on the committee are: Srs. Verna Thayer, Rockford, Ill.; Clarence Lapp, Macomb, Ill.; Harvey Krogh, Tipp City, Ohio.

Sometime in the near future the Sunday school workers throughout the country will be hearing from Sr. Railton and other members of the committee, asking for materials for the exhibit. Please co-operate to make the exhibit a success.

L. T. Hanson, Chairman Sunday School Committee.

RIPLEY, ILLINOIS

Bro. J. M. Watkins of Eldorado, Ill., will conduct a series of meetings previous to the Quarterly Conference. These meetings will begin Monday night, March 24. His sermons will be about the Kingdom of God—past and future.
 Mrs. Helen Lewis, Secy.

MINNESOTA CONFERENCE

Another year—another annual June Conference is scheduled for the Church of God in Minnesota, June 11-15 (both dates inclusive). This year our Conference will again be held at Eden Valley, our vacation center of the State. Further announcements in greater detail will appear as time proceeds, but we wish to establish and emphasize this important fact right now: the services of Bro. L. E. Conner, our General Conference president, have been assured for this great Conference.

May all within our Conference, and we trust many from other states, begin now to set aside other engagements and plan to attend the biggest event of our Conference year, our annual Minnesota June Conference.

John Denchfield.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

Three more of our young people have taken the steps that have inducted them into the new life in Christ Jesus. On March 9, Sr. Alma Carlson, 435 N. Ave. 51, made the good confession and was baptized by Bro. G. E. Marsh; and on the 15th, Bro. Roy Juden, Jr., and his sister Elaine, 1305 N. Mulberry St., Compton, were also assisted by Bro. Marsh in this important step.

As the signs thicken, indicating that the coming of the Bridegroom is near, we pray more earnestly that all of our dear ones may lay hold of the great salvation and be worthy of immortality when that day dawns.

Emma C. Railsback, Secy.

DIXON, ILLINOIS

Every Friday night at the Church of God in Dixon we now have Berean Bible classes, and would like to have anyone from Oregon or other cities visit us. The time of the services is from 7:30 to 8:30, and the teacher is Bro. Alan McLain, a student of the Bible Training School.
 Leona Blaga, Secy.

Gleanings From the Field

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

"Two of our faithful workers—though somewhat isolated from the local body—have been seriously ill for some time. Bro. C. E. Hatch of Santa Ana has been cared for in the home of his son Will Hatch, Santa Anita Blvd., Arcadia; also Sr. Janet Reid is in a Rest Home, 305 Rosemont Ave., Pasadena. Write to them."—Mrs. E. C. Railsback, 1020 S. Burlington Ave., Los Angeles, Calif.

Bro. Emory Macy, who attended the Bible Training School most of the winter, prepared an excellent article for this special students' issue, but, due to column shortage, we are saving it until next week.

Bro. M. W. Lyon, pastor of Golden Rule Church of God, Cleveland, Ohio, and his sister, Sr. Jeanne Lyon of Grand Rapids, Mich., are planning a motor trip to their former home at Citronelle, Ala.

"Two of our young people have been planning to attend the Summer Bible Training School ever since they were at the General Conference last summer."—Vivian Kirkpatrick, Blanchard, Mich.

"If a person has pneumonia a long time, does it become oldmonia?"—I. B. Better.

"We expect soon to be back in Pearl City, Ill."—Charles T. Lindsay, Milford, Kans.

Iris Hall, Alto, Mich., plans to attend the Summer Bible Training School. . . . Let us hear from others planning to come. An enrollment coupon appears on page 15 of each Herald.

Wisdom speaks neither too soon nor too late, and sometimes speaks not at all.

A thought for the week: "The scientists believe there is life on other planets because, they say, it would be a waste of creation otherwise. I believe the opposite, that is, our wonderful God is lavish in His creation if for no other reason than to show man His exceeding greatness."—Harvey U. Krogh, Jr., Tipp City, Ohio.

"Bro. C. E. Randall's recent articles on first principles are so systematically arranged and presented in so scholarly a manner that they should receive the most widespread appreciation of our brotherhood."—G. E. Marsh, 230 W. 103 St., Los Angeles, Calif.

"It certainly gives Sr. Netts and me a great pleasure to see the way the Sunday schools are responding to the little Golden-Rule-Home banks we are sending out."—C. L. Netts, 192 White City Trailer Park, St. Petersburg, Fla.

"We are having good meetings. March 30, we shall have a potluck dinner at the church and, of course, our meeting before dinner. We are expecting people from a distance."—Mrs. Charles W. Howe, 1036 Newton St., Waterloo, Iowa.

"Four came forward for baptism last Sunday."—F. E. Siple, 140 Celia St., S.E., Grand Rapids, Mich.

Bro. C. E. Hatch, Arcadia, Calif., sincerely appreciated the remembrances of the Los Angeles brethren when he was sick. The letter from Bro. and Sr. Scott Elton was especially encouraging.

This students' number of The Herald suggests what could happen some week if the editor should get the epizootic or the tie douloureux.

HECTOR, MINNESOTA

On Sunday, March 9, 1941, a very fine representation of the Minnesota State Conference of the Church of God assembled at the home of Roy and Ellsworth Johnson near Hector, for an all-day Conference meeting which proved to be a spiritual feast indeed. Because this was the first of a series of such conferences, and the roads being in very poor condition, we felt that attendance was exceptionally good, as Minneapolis, Hutchinson, Spicer, Bird Island, Litchfield, Eden Valley, Waite Park, and St. Cloud were represented.

Four services were held during the day. Sunday school was conducted by Bro. Tom Savage, and morning worship service by Bro. John Mercer. An afternoon session was conducted by the writer, and Bro. Walter Wiggins conducted an early evening service. The undivided attention during services and conversation between services made it quite evident that all were being provided with much helpful inspiration.

Plenty of food was provided by both hosts and visitors, so that spiritually and physically we all came to realize the truth of Jesus' statement, "Blessed are they who hunger and thirst," for we were filled!

We now look forward to our next gathering, the time and place of which will be announced as soon as determined. Several invitations are on hand, but we welcome more. If you would like to entertain such a gathering, just send your invitation together with any suggestions you may have to our secretary, Mrs. Alvin Bennett, Paynesville, Minn. John Denehfield.

MACOMB, ILLINOIS

On Sunday afternoon, March 9, Mrs. Frances Kimble, 328 S. College St., was baptized into the all-saving name of Jesus. The baptism took place at Glenwood Park, with Elder C. E. Lapp officiating. We welcome her into our little band of workers, and pray that the Lord's richest blessing may rest upon her as she sets forth in His service.

We were fortunate in having Bro. Orris Mills preach for us on March 16. Other visitors from Oregon, Ill., were Ruth Gesin and Verneille Lawrence. Gladys Mercer, Secy.

BAPTISM AT TEMPE, ARIZONA

Preceding our regular Thursday evening Bible study on March 20, it was our pleasure to induct Sister Lynda H. Miller into the name of Christ. The meeting had been called early to attend to this extra work and a goodly number were present at the services. Lynda has been a regular attendant at the class for some time and when she became convinced of her duty she was not slow to act. We are all rejoicing because we have great faith in her and her way of doing.

Our midweek Bible study class is the prize meeting of the week. Many who do not belong to the church are regular attendants and are as interested as any of our own. Great satisfaction is expressed by all. S. J. Lindsay.

HERALD RECEIPTS

BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL NEWS

The bright sunny days of spring are here to welcome us to new activities. The fresh spring air puts vitality into us, giving us ambitions for greater conquests.

Last Monday evening, March 24, some young people of the Ambassadors' Bible class enjoyed a skating party at Dixon, Ill.

Bro. Ellsworth Routson preached at Dixon, Ill., last Sunday. Bro. Francis Burnett will be speaking for the brethren at Rockford, Ill., the second, third, and fourth Sundays of each month until the General Conference of 1941. Bro. L. E. Conner will preach the first Sunday of each month.

George Walters, who is a new student, spent his first week in our School, March 17-20. George's home is in Dixon, Ill. We now have twelve students. We miss Bro. Emory Macy and his family, and hope they can return next fall.

We hope to see you at the Quarterly Conference to be held in Ripley, Ill. Ripley is a good community, "Believe it or not."

We enjoyed having Mrs. Christina Walters, who is George's mother; Mr. Milton Becker from Dixon, Ill.; and a former classmate, Muriel Randall, Oregon, Ill., visit our Students' Home. Sr. Muriel Randall visited our classes last Friday, March 21.

The students were privileged to hear a lecture on archaeology at Oregon Community High School, Friday, March 21.

The Restitution Herald is the official organ of the General Conference of the Church of God. It is published by the National Bible Institution at Oregon, Illinois.

L. E. Conner . . . Business Manager
Orpha LeMasurier . . . Treasurer

Subscription Rate.—51 issues per annum, $2.00.

The Restitution Herald advocates: the near return of Christ (Acts 1:11), and life only through Him (Col. 3:3); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28); the immortalization of those in Christ (1 Cor. 15:53,54); the destruction of the wicked (Rev. 21:8); the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ (Luke 1:32), the church to be joint-heirs with Him, (Rom. 8:17), and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations (Isa. 60:13); the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3:21). It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

Necessity of Unity

By C. Alan McLain

WHERE unity is, there is power. Hitler has been victorious because he has unity in every division of his army. His unity, however, is not of love, but of fear. Those under his authority tremble.

A football or baseball team that does not have co-operation cannot expect to win. Jealousy, selfishness, and vain arguments cause strife; this defeats success in any endeavor. Every man in his position, doing his duty with the best of his ability, helps to make the team victorious. One man can cause the team to lose the game, if he will not co-operate. Such a one should not be on any team. Jesus said, "Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation" (Matt. 12:25).

If there ever was a time that Christians should be united in the spirit of love for Christ to proclaim His message of good tidings, it is now—to this sinful and adulterous generation. When (it seems) all forces of evil have come forth to test the faith of the followers of Christ, "unity" should be our motto.

Traveling through the country, we have observed dilapidated church buildings. Because there was a lack of co-operation, these churches went out of business. Will not some of those members have to give an account of their stewardship? Every member has some talents, whether they be few or many, and every talent is needed to make the church a unit. "He gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ: till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ: that we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive" (Eph. 4:11-15).

Those who make good evangelists do not always make good pastors, neither do pastors always make good evangelists. There are those who make good superintendents of Sunday schools, but not good preachers. One who is fitted in music may not be able to give a five-minute talk. There is a position for everyone, and let everyone in his position do his best for the cause of Christ. We may not be able to sing like Lawrence Tibbett or Bing Crosby, but we can pass out song books and usher. Those who have money should use it for publishing glad tidings of the Kingdom of God, for many have not heard—others are dying and have no hope. Every member should work in harmony with the church as a whole.

The human body is comparable to the body of Christ. Christ is the head of the body (Col. 1:18). "As the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: so also is Christ. For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit. For the body is not one member, but many. If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body: is it therefore not of the body? And if the ear shall say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body? If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the smelling?" (1 Cor. 12:12-17). Because we cannot be an elder, we will not serve! Is this co-operation? Or, because we cannot play the piano at the services, we will not help at all! Is this harmony or unity of the spirit of Christ? "All the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this; Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. But if you bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another" (Gal. 5:14, 15). Love makes unity, and is stronger than fear. Where the love of Christ prevails there is unity. This is the reason the Apostolic church grew by "leaps and bounds." (See Acts 2:46.) Does not Christ, the Head of the body, have power over you? If the eyes are in danger, or become hurt, does not the hand protect them? So should the members of the church help protect the person who has been evil spoken of and offended, instead of condemning him. Let us bear one another's burdens. We are to lift up the fallen.

Jesus prayed thus to God, "That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me" (John 17:21). A well-organized church led by the Spirit of God is powerful, bringing many to Christ.

Followers of Christ, let us strive for the unity of faith, for the knowledge of the Son of God, and to a perfect man in Christ Jesus. Let us cast off vain murmurings, babblings, arguments that gender strife and division, and put on the spirit of Christ that will lead us to eternal life. Our love for Christ is proved by the testing of our faith. Let us work in unity, that much may be accomplished for Christ. "United, we stand; divided, we fall."

Acres of Tombstones!

By C. E. Lapp

WHILE driving through different towns and cities, we often have been made to wonder why there is so much activity among the people. Everyone seems to be "busy as a bee." Many beautiful homes, churches, and public buildings of every sort have been erected, and every one of these is a kind of monument to those who are alive and are seeking to provide for the comfort and well-being of their families.

The picture usually changes as we drive through the outer edges of these cities. In the larger places there are literally acres of tombstones! These stones have been erected in memory of the dead. Some of the stones are large, and some are small, but all are for the same purpose. They are erected as memorials of those who are dead, and the size and cost of each stone usually speaks of the esteem for the loved ones who sleep in the earth.

After seeing such a sight, this question often comes to our mind: "Who gets the benefit?" We are certain that the dead know nothing about the beautiful markers; therefore, we must conclude that they are for the living to see. Several years ago we walked through one of the large memorial parks in California, and, while doing so, noticed the markers. A small bronze plate imbedded in concrete marked the head of each grave. Each bore the same information—the name, date of birth, and date of death.

Another, time, and in a different place, we stood in front of a tombstone that cost one thousand dollars. It gave the same information as had the bronze plate—the name, date of birth, and date of death. The sad part of these costly stones is that very little benefit is derived in comparison to the vast amount of money invested. If all the marble and granite that is used for this purpose was to be used in building homes or other buildings, there would be much more benefit derived from this present generation as well as those to come.

Brethren of the Church of God: At the present time we are face to face with one of the greatest opportunities to advance that has been ours for some time. The Bible Training School has been re-established with the idea of making it a permanent part of our National Church Program. Already the results have exceeded our fondest hopes, but we have reason to believe the Bible Training School will continue to grow until it has developed into a powerful institution for Christian instruction. Someday, if the Lord tarries, we will have a school where the young people of the Church of God may go to receive thorough training for Christian service.

First, however, we need men and women who wish to erect a memorial for the sake of the living. Nothing can be done to help the dead, but to erect a school building with adequate dormitory and classroom space and facilities for our growing Bible Training School will be a memorial, the effects of which even eternity itself would not erase. The Bible Training School is now paying forty dollars rent per month, to house the present class, and this does not take care of all who are attending. In one year alone, four hundred and eighty dollars is used, and in two years almost one thousand dollars.

We feel certain there are people in our church who would be glad to help create such a school by giving from five hundred to one thousand dollars, or more, as a memorial to some loved one. Or, if you have a will, why not make a generous portion of it for this worthy work?

Our Lord is coming! We are commanded to occupy until He comes. Let us erect a memorial for the living to glorify Him who died for us. To do so will make it possible for many to be trained in the ministry of the gospel.

The "More Excellent Way"

May this reminiscence about a grandfather and a grandmother, but particularly about Grandmother, encourage Christians who may feel untalented to serve the Lord. By saving, each week, a few pennies from her sales of eggs carried to town or sales of butter from her old-fashioned churn, she was able to offer financial help to a grandson when he decided to study for the ministry. Though Grandmother died soon thereafter, her sweet intent and encouragement are in the background of many sermons.

Grandmother was not rich, and she probably never heard of a wife's "allowance." She lived in a log house. She gave birth to twelve children, one dying in infancy. Her clock upon the mantel was not to tell when her day's work was done, but when various duties were to begin. As we recall her, however, she was optimistic and seldom spoke of being tired. Grandfather had a small farm of only forty acres, so there were not many, if any, luxuries in the home where eleven children besides the two parents ate three times daily. Breakfast, dinner (not "lunch") and supper for thirteen mouths—thirty-nine meals per day! Everybody had enough to eat; there must be a God.

Doubtless, there were times when Grandmother hardly knew how to set the table—a table too long to be placed in a modern we-have-no-children kitchen. Nevertheless, at each mealtime she would start: always in the center of the table was the sugar bowl, the salt and pepper sentinels co-operating nearby; then she would place upon the table a saucer of her homemade butter and a plate stacked high with home-baked bread. Usually, too, there was a dish of honey, for Grandpa kept bees. Then from the stove (neither gas nor electric) she would fetch steaming hot meat and potatoes, hominy, too, or good ripe sauerkraut. Maybe there would be applesauce or pumpkin pie, and sometimes each person would get a glass of good cold milk. (Grandmother had a big refrigerator under her kitchen.) Around the table would be placed thirteen plates, with a knife, fork, and spoon at each plate. Thirteen chairs in their places! Then, all the family being gathered 'round, Grandfather would ask the blessing. (Boys and girls, that means Grandfather prayed. Tell your father about it.)

Many times visitors came. It was commonly understood that a part of any visit at the John Kirkpatrick home was to eat at Grandmother's table. In those days, there was nothing more thought of a visitor staying for a meal or two than for a friend today to ask for a cup of water. Frequently the "company" would stay all night. . . . Faith, you are yet in the earth; Hope, you still stay the shipwrecked soul; but Charity, Charity, Charity—"greatest of these"—where have you fled and secretly hidden away?

Talent? The world is talent cold. Talent spars at one another's throats. Yes, there are God-given talents, too; so "covet earnestly the best gifts: and yet shew I unto you a MORE EXCELLENT WAY"—gentle and unfeigned love.

Let us suppose Grandmother had complained about having so little means with which to succeed in so sacred a responsibility, and had failed in her motherly duties. Or, what if Grandfather had been a quitter, a yellow quitter, merely because all his neighbors had bigger farms than his—enabling them to more easily, but not more surely, pay their bills and appear to be "somebodies" in the world?

Grandma's little, though, was not despised or wasted; it was multiplied by honest prayer. The hungry were not turned away from her door. Her parlor, covered with only a rag carpet, welcomed and blessed more strangers than the palace of a worldly lord. Well did Solomon say: "Better is little with the fear of the Lord than great treasure and trouble therewith" (Prov. 15:16).

Discouraged Christian, what great deed would you do for God? Does a dictator's power convert sinners to the Lord? Is an orator's tongue sooner answered in prayer? Did Jesus choose the mighty? Rather, let every anxious soul to serve spread life-giving manna upon his table. Let the chairs be drawn up. Let prayers be said. Let strangers be invited in to dine. Then God will "sate the soul of (His) priests with fatness" (Jer. 31:14). Moreover, having finished your course in this "more excellent way," your children's children will be inspired in their generation to become teachers and preachers for God. Christian, what will your grandson say? Surely, he will reminisce.

“An Unction From the Holy One”

By Emory Macy

“Ye have an unction from the Holy One, and ye know all things” (1 John 2:20).

EVERY priest that ministered in the service of the Lord was anointed. Moses was commanded to make an “oil of holy ointment,” which he used to anoint the furniture in the tabernacle and the priests with their official garments upon them. The priests had to be sanctified and given authority before they were allowed any part in the services of the tabernacle. Whatsoever was anointed with the “holy oil” immediately became holy. If anyone made or used the oil compound for any other purpose, he or she would be “cut off”; it must be used only in the services of God.

Our high priest, Jesus Christ, did not receive His authority from man. He was not of the lineage of Levi, the priestly tribe. Under the law, priests continually made sacrifices for their own sins. This was required before they were permitted to intercede for the people. Jesus, however, was anointed by the very Spirit of God to mediate for the sins of man.

Moses gave Eleazer, the son of his brother Aaron, the authority to be high priest after the death of his father. Death necessitated the replacement of priests. Christ, however, became our high priest after the order of Melchisedec who had become the king of Salem and high priest by appointment of God, and not through his descendants. God likewise ordained Christ to be high priest “of a better testament.” Christ’s priesthood need never be replaced, “seeing he ever liveth to make intercession” (Heb. 7:25).

To further show that Christ’s authority was directly from God, we read: “After six days Jesus taketh Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into an high mountain apart, and was transfigured before them” (Matt. 17:1, 2). The apostles heard the Voice out of the cloud, saying, “This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him” (Matt. 17:5). This was the first time the apostles fully realized the authority of Christ. Mary, His mother, also sensed this, and proved her thought when she told the servants at the feast, “Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it” (John 2:5).

As Jesus and His disciples journeyed to Caesarea, He asked of them, “Whom do men say that I the Son of man am? And they said, Some say that thou art John the Baptist: some, Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets. He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God” (Matt. 16:13-16). The title “Christ” means “anointed.” So, wherever the name “Jesus Christ” appears, we may read, “Jesus the Anointed.” Thus, Peter really said, “Thou art the anointed Son of the living God.”

That sinners, by conversion, may become sons of His Majesty is truly a demonstration of the love of God toward the world. God cared for the Israelites as if they were infants while they were in the wilderness. He fed them the wholesome food, manna, and their clothes did not wear out. God desired them to worship Him, and Him only. He gave them laws, which they should have obeyed as their schoolmaster, to educate them to look for the Christ. “When the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons” (Gal. 4:4, 5).

We, too, are infants in the eyes of God, and have no right to address Him as “Our Father,” until we have received the authority (the anointing) to be called His sons. “As many as received him, to them gave he power (privilege) to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name” (John 1:12).

God desires all who seek to become His sons to “repent, and be baptized.” Peter said, “Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost” (Acts 2:38). Baptism is the only way whereby we can “put on Christ,” and baptism is the only means authorizing us to be “heirs with Christ.”

The Greek word chrío is the word that corresponds with the Hebrew word mashach which means to “anoint” or to “smear on” as was the anointing of the high priest. These words, however, fail to present the true meaning of the Christian’s anointing. The Greek word chrisma also means “anointing,” and though it appears only three times in the New Testament, it is the word that really designates the extent to which the Christian is baptized and authorized by the Spirit of God. John said, “Ye have an unction (an anointing) from the Holy One, and ye know all things” (1 John 2:20). The Christian’s anointing is not one of chrío, “rubbing on” of oil, but it is chrisma, the “rubbing in” or “saturation.” The Christian should become saturated with the Word of God to the extent that he will be able to (Please turn to page 10)

Restoration of Judah and Israel

By W. G. Moffet

BECAUSE King Solomon failed to keep the commandments, God became displeased with him (1 Kings 10 and 11). The Lord said that He would give ten tribes to Jeroboam, Solomon's servant, but for David's sake, he would not utterly destroy the kingdom. Solomon, consequently, was angry and sought to kill Jeroboam. Jeroboam then fled to Egypt, and at Solomon's death Rehoboam ascended to the throne. When Rehoboam was in Shechem to be inaugurated the Israelites petitioned him, saying, "Thy father made our yoke grievous: now therefore make thou the grievous service of thy father, and his heavy yoke which he put upon us, lighter, and we will serve thee" (1 Kings 12:4). Rehoboam replied, "Depart yet for three days, then come again to me," and the people departed. Rehoboam then consulted with the old men who had been counselors to Solomon. He said, "How do ye advise that I may answer this people?" They counseled him, saying: "If thou wilt be a servant unto this people this day, and wilt serve them, and answer them, and speak good words to them, then they will be thy servants for ever" (v. 7).

We read, however, that Rehoboam "forsook the counsel of the old men, which they had given him, and consulted with the young men that were grown up with him, and which stood before him: and he said unto them, What counsel give ye that we may answer this people, who have spoken to me, saying, Make the yoke which thy father did put upon us lighter? And the young men that were grown up with him spake unto him, saying, Thus shalt thou speak unto this people . . . My little finger shall be thicker than my father's loins. And now whereas my father did lade you with a heavy yoke, I will add to your yoke: my father hath chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions" (vv. 8-11).

So Rehoboam took the advice of the young men. When the people returned to him the third day—as agreed—he told them that whereas his father chastised them with whips, he would chastise them with scorpions. Then the ten tribes rebelled, and chose Jeroboam whom they had brought back from Egypt. The two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, however, were steadfast to the house of David (1 Kings 12:20, 21).

The ten tribes, having Jeroboam for their king, established their capital in the city of Samaria, and continued until the sixth year of the reign of Hezekiah (722 B.C.), when they were taken captive by the Assyrians under Shalmaneser (2 Kings 18:9, 10). The kingdom of Judah (Judah and Benjamin) continued until the end of Zedekiah's reign (606 B.C.), and was captured by Nebuchadnezzar's army (2 Kings 25).
